Scottish Provident Institution.

ESTABLISHED

Head Office: 6, ST. ANDREW SQUARE, EDINBURGH.

THE PREMIUMS are so moderate that, at usual ages for Assurance, £1200 or thereby may generally be secured from the first for the yearly payment which would elsewhere assure (with profits) £1000 only—the difference being equivalent to an immediate and certain Bonus of 20 per cent.

Examples of Premiums for £100 at Death—with Profits.

Age next Birthday	25	30*	35†	40	45	50
During Life ..	£1 17 5	£2 2 4	£2 8 6	£2 16 6	£3 8 2	£4 3 2
25 Payments ..	2 9 8	2 13 11	2 19 3	3 5 11	3 15 11	4 8 8
15 Payments ..	3 7 5	3 13 2	3 19 11	4 7 11	4 18 6	5 11 2

* A Person aged 30 next birthday may secure £1000 at death by a yearly payment, during life, of £21 3s. 4d. Or he may secure £1000 by 25 payments of £26 19s. 2d., being thus free of payment before age 55.

† At age 35 next birthday the Premium ceasing before age 60 is, for £1000, £29 12s. 6d., being about the same as many offices require during life. To Professional Men and others whose income depends on health, the limited payment system is recommended.

THE WHOLE SURPLUS goes to the Policy-holders, on a system at once safe and equitable—no share being given to those by whose early death there is a loss to the common fund.

The Surplus at the latest Investigation was £1,581,000.

Over 60 per cent. of the Members who died during the last Septennium were entitled to Bonuses which, notwithstanding that the Premiums do not as a rule exceed the non-profit rates of other Offices, were, on the average, equal to an addition of over 50 per cent. to the Original Assurances.

ACCUMULATED FUNDS EXCEED £13,500,000.

Endowment Assurances, with profits—Special Class.

PREFACE.

A GLANCE back over the main events of 1906, as recorded in the present ANNUAL, shows what an extraordinarily full and interesting year it has been, at home and abroad. It has seen a new Constitution set up, and, with varying results, at work in Russia, Persia, and Montenegro; while even China has begun to think of a departure, to some extent, from her ancient ways of government. The coming of Constitutionalism to the great nation of the north has been, and still is, a disturbing process, and the end is not yet, nor can any one surely foresee it. Nearer home, the separation of Church and State has been accomplished in France, and Catholic Spain is growing restive at the power exercised by the religious orders. France elected a new President in perfect quiet and order, and came through the controversy with Germany about Morocco with undiminished prestige. In Austria-Hungary the Magyar Coalition came to terms with the Emperor-King, and Universal Suffrage made great headway. Across the Atlantic, the strenuous President of the United States, helped to a considerable extent by the revelations as to the methods of certain Insurance Companies and of some of the Chicago packing-houses, prosecuted a vigorous campaign against the great Trusts, whose activities he accuses of threatening the public weal.

At home the year has seen the advent to power of a Liberal Government, and its acquisition in Parliament, after the General Election in January, of the largest majority recorded since the election of 1832. It has seen the rise, for the first time, of a Labour Party in Parliament, and the commencement of a new phase in the movement to secure the Parliamentary Suffrage for women. We have also had a fierce fight over the Education Bill, and a beginning of the arduous task of Army reorganisation, together with many difficult problems of Imperial and Colonial administration demanding solution. Two noteworthy reports have been presented by Royal Commissions—on Ecclesiastical Discipline, and War Stores in South Africa.

In other departments there has been much to record, including the nearest approach yet made to the North Pole and a serious effort to solve the problem of aerial navigation. There have been notable earthquakes in California, Chile, and other parts of the world, and a violent eruption of Vesuvius. All these matters will be found dealt with in the 1907 ANNUAL, with a large number of new foreign biographies, and all the old features which have commended the book to so many readers in the past. The Index at the beginning of the book should be consulted by all who use it. Thanks must be again tendered to the officials and others, without whose cordial co-operation the book could not be brought up to date, and to all who by suggestion and criticism have aided, and it is hoped will still aid, in its improvement.

OCCURRENCES DURING PRINTING.

Aërial Navigation.—Mr. Leslie Bucknell left Wandsworth in his balloon at 3.30 p.m. on Nov. 27th, 1906, and arrived at Nevy, near the Lake of Geneva, at 7.30 a.m. on Nov. 28th—a notable voyage. In addition to the Daily Mail prize there were offered £2000 by the Adams Manufacturing Company, who own the British rights in the Antoinette engine, for the winner of the Daily Mail £10,000 prize, provided his aeroplane is made entirely in the British Empire; £500 from the editor of the Autocar for the maker of the petrol engine driving the aeroplane that wins the Daily Mail prize, providing the engine is made by a British motor-car manufacturer; £1000 by the proprietors of the Daily Graphic and the Graphic for the first aeroplane who, with one or more passengers, flies between two given points not less than a mile apart; £1000 by Lord Montagu of Beaulieu, the editor of the Car, being £5 a mile for the longest distance covered in any one flight in the Daily Mail contest. A trophy worth £525 is offered for perpetual competition, for the longest distance covered in any one year from Jan. 1st to Dec. 31st.

Agriculture.—The report of the Agricultural Committee of the Tariff Commission, with the evidence, was published Nov. 23rd, 1906 (P. S. King & Son, 1s. report; 2s. 6d. report and evidence). It recommended a change in the fiscal policy of the country as absolutely necessary "for removing the disabilities under which British agriculturists suffer"; "but if this change is to be permanently effective it must be combined with measures dealing with transport, the enlargement of the powers of the Board of Agriculture and local taxation. We are also of opinion that the position of the industry generally would be improved if means could be found to create further facilities for land purchase in the United Kingdom."

Army, British. It is proposed by the effective training of selected officers to qualify them for the higher appointments on the Administrative Staff of the Army, and for the charge of the Departmental Services. In order to be adequately advised on all matters connected with the special training and education which these officers should undergo, the Secretary of State for War (Nov. 17th, 1906) appointed a Consultative Committee composed as follows: Sir Hugh Bell, Bart.; Brigadier-Gen. F. T. Clayton, C.B.; Sir F. Harrison, General Manager L. & N.W. Railway; Major-General H. D. Hutchinson, C.S.I.; Major-General H. S. G. Miles, C.V.O., C.B.; Sir Felix Schuster, Bart.; Sir Edward Ward, K.C.B.; Mr. Sidney Webb, LL.B.; and Mr. H. J. Mackinder, M.A., Director of the London School of Economics.

Austria-Hungary.—The Emperor personally intervened to express his desire that the Upper House should not modify or delay the Universal Suffrage Bill for Austria which was about to come before it (Nov. 25th).

Brazil.—The Senate adopted the Bill creating a conversion fund and fixing the rate of exchange at 15d. per milreis (Nov. 26th, 1906).

British Empire.—A new Ministry was formed in Natal (Nov. 28th, 1906), constituted as follows: Premier and Minister of Native Affairs, Mr. Moor.—Railways, Mr. Hitchins.—Colonial Treasurer, Mr. Brunner.—Justice, Mr. Carter.—Colonial Secretary, Mr. Gubbins.—Agriculture, Mr. Deane. The Smythe Ministry, which resigned on Nov. 22nd, alleged that it had not an adequate majority.

India.—Revenue, 1905-6 (revised estimate), £84,830,000; expenditure, 1905-6 (revised estimate), £83,074,000; imports, 1905-6, £95,830,000; exports, 1905-6, £118,196,000; debt, 1906, £84,058,000 in India, £146,457,000 in England.

New Zealand.—Dr. Findlay was appointed Attorney-General and Colonial Secretary in place of the late Hon. A. Pitt (Nov. 23rd), and the Premier took the portfolio of Defence.

Canada.—Hon. C. S. Hyman, Minister of Public Works, resigned Nov. 22nd, 1906.

China.—Drastic regulations for the control of the growth and use of opium were issued (Nov. 21st, 1906). Cultivation of the poppy and use of the drug are to cease in 10 years, cultivation being reduced by one-tenth yearly. All opium users, the amounts they consume, shops, amounts of sales, etc., are to be registered, and no one henceforward is allowed to begin the use of opium. Officials, teachers, soldiers and sailors were ordered to abandon the habit within three months. Those who at the end of 10 years still retain the habit are to be banished. Finally, the Wai-wu-pu was ordered to negotiate with the British Minister for the cessation of the import of opium within 10 years.

France.—The Chamber and Senate voted an increase in the salaries paid to Deputies and Senators, raising the sum from £360 to £600 (Nov. 22nd), and the Chamber confirmed the vote (30th).

Home Office.—Under-Sec. of State (p. 200): read "Sir Mackenzie D. Chalmers."

Income Tax.—The Select Committee (see p. 207) issued their report (Nov. 30th, 1906). Their conclusions were:—

1. Graduation of the income tax by an extension of the existing system of abatements is practicable. But it could not be applied to all incomes from the highest to the lowest with satisfactory results. The limits of prudent extension would be reached when a large increase in the rate of tax to be collected at the source was necessitated, and the total amount which was collected in excess of what was ultimately retained became so large as to cause serious inconvenience to trade and commerce and to individual taxpayers. Those limits would not be exceeded by raising the amount of income on which an abatement would be allowed to £1000 or even more.

2. Graduation by a super-tax is practicable. If it be desired to levy a much higher rate of tax upon large incomes (say of £5000, and upwards) than has hitherto been charged, a super-tax based on personal declaration would be a practicable method.

3. Abandonment of the system of "collection at the source," and adoption of the principle of direct personal assessment of the whole of each person's income would be inexpedient.

4. Differentiation between earned and unearned incomes is practicable, especially if it be limited to earned incomes not exceeding £3000 a year, and effect be given to it by charging a lower rate of tax upon them.

5. A compulsory personal declaration from each individual of total net income in respect of which tax is payable is expedient and would do much to prevent the evasion and avoidance of income tax which at present prevail.

Mercantile Marine.—A Royal Commission was appointed (Nov. 26th, 1906), to inquire into the operation of shipping "rings" or conferences generally, and more especially into the system of deferred rebates, and to report whether such operations have caused or are likely to cause injury to British or colonial trade, and, if so, what remedial action, if any, should be taken by legislation or otherwise. The Commissioners are:—The Right Hon. Arthur Cohen, K.C. (chairman), Sir David Barbour, K.C.M.G., K.C.S.I., Mr. John Barry, Sir Alfred Bateman, K.C.M.G., Sir Hugh Bell, Mr. Henry Birch-enough, C.M.G., Capt. R. Muirhead Collins, C.M.G., Prof. Edward Carter Gonner, Sir Francis J. S. Hopwood, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., etc., Lord Inverclyde, Earl of Jersey, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., etc., the Hon. Charles Napier Lawrence, Sir William T. Lewis, Sir John Macdonell, C.B., Mr. Fred. Maddison, M.P., Mr. William Henry Mitchell, Mr. Owen Cosby Philipps, M.P., the Hon. William Pember Reeves, Mr. Oswald Sanderson, Mr. Austin Taylor, M.P., Mr. John Torrance.

Secretary, Mr. James A. Webster, Board of Trade.

Nobel Prizes.—The Physics Prize (1906) was awarded to Professor J. J. Thomson, Trin. Coll., Camb.

Obituary:

Reed, Sir E. J., former Chief Constructor for the Navy and M.P. for Cardiff, died Nov. 30th, aged 76.

Persia.—The Deputies unanimously resolved to authorise the foundation, without foreign support, of a national banking company with a share capital of 8 to 15 million tomans (£3,000,000 to £5,625,000), on condition that the State revenue should be paid into the bank. In return, the bank should bind itself to pay the State expenditure, to discharge the State debts, and to advance money to the Government at 7 per cent. interest (Nov. 29th, 1906).

Parliament.—Huddersfield Bye-Election, Polling Nov. 28th, 1906. Result:

A. J. Sherwell (L.)	5762
T. Russell Williams (Lab.)	5422
J. Foster Fraser (C.)	4844

Religious Bodies.—The see of Argyll and the Isles in the Episcopal Church in Scotland (see p. 472) was filled (Nov. 29th, 1906) by the appointment of the Very Rev. Kenneth Mackenzie, Provost of St. Paul's, Dundee, as Bishop.

Session.—Town Tenants (Ireland) Bill read a third time (Nov. 30th) by 201 votes to 28.

ABYSSINIA.

Abyssinia is a country of North Africa, and occupies a highland region S.W. of the Red Sea. The country is made up of a number of states, the chief of which are Tigre in the north, Amhara in the west and centre, and Shoa in the south. After the defeat and suicide of King Theodore, in '68, Prince Kassa of Tigre assumed the chief power as Johannes II. To him, in '89, succeeded Menelik II., King of Shoa, who was born in '42, and is Hon. G.C.B. and G.C.M.G. He has no direct heir. By a treaty concluded in '97, the frontiers of the British Somaliland Protectorate were delimited, the caravan route between Zaila and Harar was declared open to the commerce of both nations, and most-favoured-nation treatment was granted to Great Britain and her colonies. An agreement delimiting the boundary between Abyssinia and the British Soudan was signed May 15th, 1902. The Emperor agreed to allow the construction of a railway through Abyssinian territory from the Soudan to Uganda.

On July 6th, 1906, an agreement between Great Britain, France, and Italy, as to their interests in Abyssinia was concluded. It provided for the maintenance of the status quo and of the open door. The Emperor had not approved it by Nov. 19th.

The system of government is monarchical, and each large province is under a Ras or feudal chief, the more important of whom form a Council of State, while under them are the governors of districts and the chiefs of villages. Each Ras has a standing force as garrison and at call in case of war, and a considerable number of retainers not embodied. The forces united are estimated at 100,000 men. The central control is weak, and there is no organised division into the three arms, as in Europe; but the forces are readily grouped, the mounted men forming an irregular cavalry. The guns include about 50 modern and 30 old ones. The unembodied retainers, who may be likened to a militia, number about 140,000 men.

The religion is a form of the Armenian and Coptic Christian Church, called Monophysite. People a mixed race: Semitic or Arabic type most prevalent; colour yellow-brown to black. There are Mohammedans, and the Jewish Falashas, who number about 250,000, and are the principal agriculturists and manufacturers. Abyssinian trade passes principally through the port of Jibutl in French Somaliland; and in part through Massowah, in Erythrea, Zaila, in British Somaliland, and Gambela on the Soudan frontier. Manufactures limited to coarse cotton and woollen cloths, leather, pottery, and some iron, steel, and other metal articles. Exports: ivory, gold dust, musk, coffee, and some other productions.

Area, 150,000 sq. m.; population, 3,500,000.

The capital is Adis Abeba, pop. about 30,000; and Harar, in Eastern Abyssinia, has about 40,000 inhabitants.

A railway has been built from Jibutl, on the Red Sea, to the Abyssinian border near Harar, under the direct surveillance and control of the French Government. The continuation of the line from Diré Daoua to Adis Abeba was commenced in Dec. 1905.

British Minister and Consul-General (at Adis Abeba), Lieut.-Col. Sir J. L. Harrington, K.C.V.O., C.B. Vice-Consuls, H. B. Johnstone, at Adis Abeba; J. Gerolimato, C.M.G., at Harar.

Academies, The International Association of, was established in 1899 on the initiative of the Royal Society, and now represents 20 academies and learned societies of Europe and America. The delegates of the constituent bodies meet in general assembly once in every 3 years. The first meeting was held in Paris in 1901, the second in London in May 1904, and the next meeting is to be held at Vienna in 1907. The International Catalogue of Scientific Literature is one of the projects which the Association is concerning itself with; others are a complete edition of the works of Leibnitz and an Encyclopædia of Islam. In England the Royal Society represents the Science section and the British Academy the Letters section of the Association.

Academy, British, for the Promotion of Historical, Philosophical, and Philological Studies. The Academy is the outcome of a meeting of representative scholars at the British Museum in 1901, when, after careful deliberation, a petition to His Majesty in Council was drawn up and presented, praying for the grant of a charter of incorporation, which appeared in the Gazette (Jan. 14th, 1902). The Royal Society approved and supported the petition, and on August 8th it was acceded to, and a Royal Charter was granted. The Academy aims at the promotion of the study of moral and political sciences, including history, philosophy, law, politics and economics, archaeology, and philology. The maximum number of ordinary Fellows is fixed at 100. At present there are 94, distributed under four main sectional Committees: (1) History and Archaeology—chairman Sir E. Maunde Thompson, K.C.B.; (2) Philology—chairman The Very Rev. J. Armitage Robinson, D.D.; (3) Philosophy—chairman Professor James Ward; (4) Jurisprudence and Economics—chairman, Sir W. R. Anson, Bart., M.P. President: Lord Reay, G.C.S.I. Secretary, Prof. I. Gollancz. Temporary Address: Society of Antiquaries, Burlington House, London, W.

Academy, The French (Académie Française), was founded in 1635 by Cardinal Richelieu, and is the first of the five academies constituting the "Institut de France," the other four being l'Académie des Inscriptions et Belles Lettres, l'Académie des Sciences, l'Académie des Beaux Arts, and l'Académie des Sciences Morales et Politiques. The Academy consists of forty members, and meets at the Palais de l'Institut every Thursday from 3 to 5 p.m. An annual meeting is held in November. Each of the members receives 1500fr. a year, and the Secretary 6000 fr. Six members who are appointed as a Dictionary Commission also receive 1000fr. a year each. Twenty-one "prix littéraires" and forty "prix de vertu" are awarded by the Academy. The Secretary is M. Gaston Boissier.

Accountants and Auditors, Society of. Incorporated in 1885. President, Wm. Geo. Rayner, London. Secretary, James Martin, 4, King Street, Cheapside, London, E.C.

Accountants (Chartered) in England and Wales, Institute of. Incorporated by royal charter May 11th, 1880. Except in the case of persons who were in service as public accountants' clerks before March 21st, '82, who may qualify by passing an examination, candidates for membership must serve under articles and pass examinations. President, W. Barclay Peat, F.C.A., 11, Ironmonger Lane, London, E.C.; Secretary, Hon. George Colville; Solicitors, Messrs. Markby, Stewart & Co., 57, Coleman Street, E.C. Hall and Offices, Moor-gate Place, E.C.

Actors' Association, 10, King Street, W.C. Sec., Charles Cruikshanks.

Acts of Parliament. The public Acts passed during the 1906 Session are enumerated at the commencement of Part II. of the article on SESSION, and particulars are given of the more important of them in alphabetical order in that article. Messrs. Wyman & Sons, Ltd., Fetter Lane, are the sole agents for England and Wales, by direct contract with H.M. Stationery Office. The agent for Ireland is Mr. E. Ponsonby, 116, Grafton Street, Dublin; and the agents for Scotland are Messrs. Oliver & Boyd, Edinburgh.

Actuaries, Faculty of, in Scotland. Constituted 1856, incorporated 1868. President, Archibald Hewat; Sec., John Edgar. Hall and Library, 24, George Street, Edinburgh.

Actuaries, Institute of, Staple Inn Hall, Holborn, W.C. President, F. Bertrand Wyatt; Hon. Secs., J. E. Faulkes, B.A., S. G. Warner.

Adler, Hermann, M.A., Ph.D., Hon. LL.D. St. Andrews, Chief Rabbi, is son of the late Chief Rabbi, and was b. in Hanover, 1839. Ed. at University Coll., Lond., B.A. Lond. '59, Ph.D. Leipsic '61. Principal of the Jews' College in '63, and Minister of the Jewish Synagogue at Bayswater in '64; author of contributions to the principal Reviews and of several works of a controversial and homiletic character, including a reply to Dr. Colenso's "Criticism of the Pentateuch," and "Sermons on Passages in the Bible on which Christian Theologians base their Faith." He was elected Chief Rabbi of the United Congregations of the British Empire in May '91. He is President of Jews' College and a Life Governor of University College. Address: 22, Finsbury Square, E.C.; 6, Craven Hill, W.; Athenæum Club.

Aerenthal Alois Leopold Baptist Lexa, Baron von, Austro-Hungarian Minister for Foreign Affairs, was b. in 1854. His family is of German origin, but has long been settled in Bohemia. He was ed. at Prague and Bonn Universities, and as a boy learned both Czech and German. He entered the diplomatic service in '77, and served in Paris and St. Petersburg; became secretary to Count Kalnoky in the Foreign Office '83, Councillor of Legation at St. Petersburg '88, Minister to Roumania '95, Ambassador to Russia '99. In October 1906 he was appointed to succeed Count Goluchowski. He has always been on cordial terms with the Czech leaders, and he married a daughter of the Hungarian statesman Count Julius Szechenyi. Count Kalnoky appointed him his literary executor.

AERIAL NAVIGATION.

There are two systems of aerial navigation. The first is ballooning, and involves the use of a gas-inflated bag of any shape. The car may be fitted with a motor and propellers, but the apparatus is none the less a balloon. The heavier-than-air system implies abandonment of the gas-filled bag, and reliance upon purely mechanical means to attain flight. Machines heavier than air are of various descriptions, the three principal categories being aeroplanes, orthoptera, and helicopters.

Ballooning (in ordinary spherical balloons without motors) has suddenly developed as a fashionable sport. Ballooning clubs have been founded in most countries, and pleasure trips and races are organised. The most important contest is that for the Coupe Internationale des Aéronautes, founded by Mr. James Gordon Bennett for competition by the aeronauts of the world. The first race was organised by the Aéro-Club de France at Paris on Sept. 30th, 1906, and the start was witnessed by great crowds. Sixteen balloons entered, representing seven nations. Seven crossed the Channel and came to earth in England, the prize being won by Lieut. Frank P. Lahm (America), who landed at Robin Hood Bay, to the north of Scarborough. Signor Alfredo Vonwiller (Italy) was second, and Hon. C. S. Rolls (Great Britain) third.

The world's record for distance belongs to Comte Henry de La Vaulx, who, on Oct. 9th, 1900, travelled from Paris to Russia, a distance of more than 1200 miles, in 35½ hours. An aeronaut escaping from besieged Paris in 1870 covered a distance of nearly 1000 miles into Norway, and this was accomplished in only 15 hours. The longest journey starting from England was in 1836, when Messrs. Green, Holland, and Monk Mason crossed over to Nassau—500 miles, in 8 hours.

In the matter of balloons fitted with motors, the greatest progress has been made in France. On Oct. 19th, 1901, M. Santos-Dumont won the Deutsch prize by taking his airship from Saint Cloud, outside Paris, to the Eiffel Tower and back in 20½ min. Since then M. Santos-Dumont has built a number of airships; but his success has been surpassed by Messrs. Lebaudy, whose airship, designed by M. Juchmès, travelled in 1905 from Moissan, near Mantes, to Toul in three stages, and when at Toul carried out evolutions over the forts and batteries in a remarkable manner. Messrs. Lebaudy presented their craft to the nation, and the Ministry of War subsequently ordered three others. One is to be used as a "training-ship," and the others are to be stationed on the Franco-German frontier.

Aeronautical Progress in 1906.

In America the leading organisation is the Aero Club of America. Mr. Walter Wellman organised an airship expedition to the North Pole under the auspices of the Chicago Record Herald. The balloon was built at Paris and taken to Spitzbergen, where a station was established and tests were made. Eventually the attempt was adjourned for a year. The brothers Orville and Wilbur Wright, of Dayton, Ohio, claim to have flown with an aeroplane of their invention. They have been working for several years, but observe great secrecy. They say that they have made 160 flights in three years, including one of 38 kilometres in 38 secs. Lincoln Beachy, in an airship, circled round the Washington Capitol (June). Prof. Graham Bell invented a "wireless" aeroplane, the motors of which are driven from earth. Successful trials were reported from Brantford, Ontario, in August. Mr. John P. Holland, of submarine fame, and many other inventors also design flying machines.

In Austria, Lieutenant von Korwin in June attempted to travel from England to Austria in a spherical balloon. He crossed the Channel, and landed near Dieppe.

In Belgium M. Adhémar de la Hault (Treasurer Aero-Club de Belgique) and Captain Marga invented pilot balloons, the place of descent of which can be determined in advance. Together with a third member of the same club, they also invented an airship. Belgium has many well-known pilots. Léon Gheude, aged 30, has nearly 20 ascents to his credit. There are military aerostatic stations at Antwerp, Namur, and Liège.

In France, which holds the first position in the world of ballooning, the Aero-Club in May appealed for funds, declaring that "the definite discovery of aerial navigation by means of machines heavier than air is imminent." Comte Henry de La Vaulx travelled from Paris to Eisfeld, near Coburg, and from Paris to Bielefeld—both trips in August; in July his airship made evolutions over Longchamps race-course for more than seven hours. M. Henri Deutsch (de la Meurthe) constructed an airship on a novel design. M. Santos-Dumont made experiments with a flying machine, and in August succeeded in rising a little distance from the ground; in October he travelled a distance of 60 metres, and won the Archdeacon prize; in November he travelled 220 metres, and won the Archdeacon-Deutsch prize. The Vuia machine, tested in October, also rose some little distance. Interesting experiments have been made by Capt. Ferber and M. Archdeacon, who applied propellers to motor-cycles and small motor-cars. From a census made by the military authorities, it appears that France in time of war could depend on 80 balloons and 100 trained pilots. The death of M. Albert Tissandier, brother of the late Gaston Tissandier, was announced.

In Germany ballooning has made great progress under the impulse of the Deutscher Luftschiffer Verband, an association of 9 clubs, with 2743 members. The Berlin Ballooning Club celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary in October. The Emperor takes a keen interest in ballooning from the military point of view, and has appointed a commission to inquire into the question. Major von Parseval has made many experiments with airships of his invention, but hitherto he has had many accidents and small success. Until October Count Zeppelin had no better success. He carried out many trials on the Lake of Constance, with repeated mishaps. He declared that he would abandon his schemes; but in October his airship made a successful trip in the presence of the King and Queen of Wurtemberg. In April Dr. Kurt Wegener and his brother Alfred remained in the air for 52 hours, using an ordinary spherical balloon.

In Great Britain the Aero Club of the United Kingdom is making rapid progress. Its week-end trips have proved very popular. The record voyage of the year was made by the Hon. Mrs. Harbord, Mr. Frank H. Butler, and Mr. Griffith Brewer, who went from Battersea Gas Works to Bridlington (Yorks) by night in September. In February Mr. Frank H. Butler, Mrs. Griffith Brewer, and Mr. Percival Spencer travelled from Wandsworth to Samer, near Boulogne. Mrs. Brewer was the first woman to cross the Channel. Several races and competitions were held at Ranelagh and elsewhere. Among airship inventors is Colonel Templer, who has been succeeded by Colonel J. E. Capper as superintendent of the balloon factory at Aldershot. On Nov. 17th the Daily Mail offered a prize of £10,000 to the first person who should fly on an aeroplane from London to Manchester, and accepted the suggestion of M. Santos-Dumont that competitors should be allowed to descend twice in order to take in supplies of petrol.

In Italy the Milan Aeronautical Society is very active. Many ascents were made from the aerostatic section of the international exhibition. In June the Regina Elena was lost in the Adriatic. Captain Nazari and Signor Minolletti were drowned, the third passenger, Signor Uselli, being rescued. Conte Almerico da Schio is one of the leading airship inventors.

In Monaco, under the patronage of the Prince of Monaco, M. Léger has constructed a flying machine, on which great hopes are set.

In Spain King Alfonso has given a great impetus to ballooning. An important contest was held during the royal marriage festivities. Many officers belong to the Real Aero Club de España. In January Señor J. F. Duro won the Coupe des Pyrénées by crossing that range from Pau to Guadix, Grenada. In April he remained 15 hours in the air in an unsuccessful attempt to cross the Mediterranean. Señor Duro died from typhoid in August.

In Switzerland the Aero Club has 162 members, including 5 ladies. During the year military experiments were carried out with the balloon Mars.

AFGHANISTAN.

Afghanistan is an inland country of Asia, forming the north-eastern portion of the great Iran plateau. Its breadth is about 500, and its length, from the Herat boundary to the Khaibar, about 600 miles. Its area is about 216,000 sq. m. It is bounded on the E. by the tribes on the N.W. frontier of India under British control; on the S. by Baluchistan; on the W. by Persia; on the N. by the Russian Central Asian States. Kabul is the capital. There is no Afghan nation; the population (4,000,000) consists of discordant tribesmen, constantly in revolt, and only kept in subjection by frequent military expeditions from Kabul. The chief tribes are the Ghilzais in the province of Kabul, the Duranis between Herat and Kandahar, the Amiahs and Hazaras in the Paropamisus mountains, north of the Duranis, and the Uzbeks and Tajiks. The four principal provinces are Kabul, Turkestan, Herat, and Kandahar. Most of the tribesmen are Suni Mahometans.

The present Ameer is Habibullah Khan, G.C.M.G., eldest son of the late Abdurrahman Khan. He was born in 1872, succeeded on Oct. 1st, 1901, and was formally enthroned in March 1902. His eldest son is Inayatulla, b. '88. The Ameer has a subsidy of 18 lakhs (£120,000) per annum from the Indian Government. By the treaty of 1893, confirmed in 1905, the Ameer accepts the advice of the British Government in regard to his relations with foreign powers, and is guaranteed against unprovoked aggression on his dominions.

A standing army is maintained, and the Commander-in-Chief is the Ameer's brother, Sirdar Nasrullah Khan, appointed in 1903. Service is obligatory, but rests lightly upon the population, about one man in eight being called upon to serve. The army comprises about 27,000 infantry, 7,000 cavalry, and a strong force of artillery, apart from the irregulars, who number some 25,000 mounted men and a smaller force of infantry, capable of being increased on a war footing to 80,000 horse and 60,000 foot. The firearms are various, but include many modern rifles, and the same applies to the guns. At Kabul there are factories where guns are forged and rifles made, and all sorts of manufactures are carried on. Silks, felts and carpets are manufactured. Exports: assafoetida, madder, fruits, furs, shawls, and chintz. The exports to India are estimated at about £400,000 a year, and the imports £500,000 a year. Of late years Russian trade competition has been severe.

Agent to the Governor-General of India at Cabul, Malik Khuda Bakhsh.

AFRICA.

The present condition of affairs and the latest details that have come to hand about the various parts of this vast continent will be found dealt with under their proper alphabetical headings throughout the book. (See Index.)

It is estimated that the total area of Africa is 11,500,000 square miles, in round numbers, and the following is a rough approximation of the area secured by each Power:—

Great Britain	2,713,910 sq. miles.
France (including Madagascar)	3,804,974 "
Germany	933,380 "
Italy	188,500 "
Portugal	790,124 "
Spain	169,150 "
Turkey (Tripoli and Benghazi)	398,900 "
Egypt and Anglo-Egyptian Soudan	1,010,000 "
Congo Free State	900,000 "
Liberia	52,000 "
Morocco	219,000 "
Abyssinia	320,000 "

Board of Agriculture and Fisheries.

The Board of Agriculture for Great Britain was established in '80, and consists of the Lord President of the Council, His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, the First Commissioner of the Treasury, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, and the Secretary for Scotland, with such other persons as His Majesty may from time to time think fit to appoint during his pleasure. The President of the Board receives a salary of £2000 per annum. The powers and duties of the Privy Council under the Diseases of Animals Acts; of the Land Commissioners for England under the Tithe Acts, the Copyhold Act, the Inclosure Acts, the Metropolitan Commons Acts, the Drainage and Improvement of Land Acts, or under any other Act; and of the Commissioners of Works under the Survey Act '70, were transferred to the Board by the Act of '89; and, by the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries Act of 1903, the duties of the Fisheries Department of the Board of Trade were transferred to the Board of Agriculture, the designation of which was at the same time altered. The expression "agriculture" is defined to include "horticulture." The business of the Board is transacted in four divisions.

1. The Animals Division is charged with the suppression of certain contagious diseases, including rabies, among animals in Great Britain; and with the regulation of the importation, into Great Britain, of animals, including dogs.

2. The Intelligence Division is charged with the correspondence and inquiries relating to insect attacks, experiments, and general farming subjects; conducts business in connection with the Sale of Food and Drugs and similar Acts; inspects, reports, and advises upon Agricultural Education in England and Wales; issues leaflets; and edits the monthly Journal of the Board.

3. The Land Division prepares the annual Agricultural and Produce Returns, collects the average prices of British corn under the Corn Returns Act '82, and is concerned with the regulation and inclosure of commons, transactions under the Universities and College Estates Acts, sales of glebe land, reappportionment and redemption of tithe rent-charge, enfranchisement of copyhold land, and the sanctioning of charges on land for works of improvement.

4. The Fisheries Division is charged with powers and duties under the Sea Fisheries Regulation Act, the Salmon and Freshwater Fisheries Acts, and certain Acts relating to Shell Fisheries. See statistics given under SEA FISHERIES.

Under the Fertilisers and Feeding Stuffs Act, '93, the Board has appointed a chief agricultural analyst, and made regulations regarding the analysis of fertilisers and feeding-stuffs by district analysts.

Further powers have been conferred on the Board by the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1900, the Dogs Act, and the Fertilisers and Feeding Stuffs Act.

President, Rt. Hon. Earl Carrington, G.C.M.G.
Permanent Secretary, Sir T. H. Elliott, K.C.B.
Offices, 4, Whitehall Place, 3, St. James's Square, and 3, Delahay Street, S.W.

Department of Agriculture, Ireland.

The authority which controls and promotes agriculture in Ireland is the Department of Agriculture and Technical Institution, created in '90, which has done a most important work in the country. Vice-President, Rt. Hon. Sir Horace Plunkett, K.C.V.O. Sec., T. P. Gill, Esq. Office, Upper Merrion Street, Dublin.

I. AGRICULTURAL STATISTICS.

Persons engaged in Agriculture.

In the General Report on the 1901 Census of England and Wales, issued in 1904, the following comparison was made as to the number of persons engaged in Agriculture in the United Kingdom, as enumerated at the last three censuses:—

	1881	1891	1901
Farmers, Graziers Do. Sons or other relatives re- turned as assist- ing in the work on the Farm ..	633,787	597,878	577,177
Agricultural La- bourers, Farm Servants ..	280,964	297,099	320,976
Gardeners, Nur- serymen, Seeds- men, Florists ..	1,192,725	1,072,059	869,728
Others — Shep- herds, Farm Bailliffs, etc. ..	168,846	199,014	239,689
	86,009	83,706	102,242
	2,362,331	2,249,756	2,109,812

Agricultural Labourers' Wages.

Although time payments in cash form the main part of agricultural labourers' earnings, the method of remuneration varies very much in different parts of the United Kingdom. Where the system of long engagements prevails, extra cash payments for piecework, hay and corn harvest, overtime, etc., are few, if any, while allowances in kind, such as board and lodging for unmarried men, and free cottages, potatoes, fuel, etc., for married men, are frequent. On the other hand, where the engagements are shorter and the rates of time wages are lower, as in the arable districts of the Eastern, Southern, and South-Western counties of England, more piecework is done, and extra payments in cash at hay and corn harvests and for overtime can be earned, while men in charge of animals frequently receive lamb money, journey money, free cottages, and other allowances in kind.

The following were the final averages obtained for the earnings in 1902 of ordinary agricultural labourers in England, and for the classes of labourers most nearly corresponding to them in other parts of the United Kingdom, according to a report made in 1905 by Mr. Wilson Fox, of the Labour Department of the Board of Trade:—

Country.	Ordinary Agricultural Labourers.				All classes of *Agricultural Labourers.
	1902.	1898.	Increase in 1902 over 1898.
			Amount.	per cent.
	s. d.	s. d.	s. d.		s. d.
England	17 5	16 9	0 8	4'0	18 3
Wales	17 7	16 6	1 1	6'6	17 3
Scotland	19 5	18 2	1 3	6'9	19 3
Ireland	10 9	10 2	0 7	5'7	10 11

* Including ordinary labourers and also men specially engaged in the charge of animals—shepherds, cattlemen, and horsekeepers.

The highest average weekly earnings in England were in Durham, 22s. 2d.; in Wales, Glamorgan, 21s. 3d.; in Scotland, Renfrew and Lanark, 22s. 2d.; in Ireland, Down, 13s.

The lowest average weekly earnings were—in England, Oxford, 14s. 6d.; Wales, Cardigan, 15s. 8d.; Scotland, Shetland, Orkney, and Caithness, 13s. 7d.; Ireland, Mayo, 8s. 9d.

Returns as to the rates of weekly cash wages paid on 69 farms in England and Wales showed that the average increase from 1850 to 1903 in the rates of weekly cash wages amounted to 57 per cent., and on 10 farms in Ireland to 81·6 per cent.

In Mr. Wilson Fox's report a table was given showing the average weekly value of the food consumed by a farm labourer, his wife, and four children, including, of course, articles purchased and those produced at home, the values being in all cases based on retail shop prices. The figures, therefore, do not necessarily represent the actual sum a farm labourer expends on food out of his wages, since by the sale or consumption of his home-grown produce he may increase his income or reduce his actual expenditure on food. The figures merely represent the value of food consumed, not the cash expenditure on food. They are as follows:—

England . . .	13	6½	per week
Scotland . . .	15	2½	„ „
Ireland . . .	10	5½	„ „

Rents vary between 1s. and 2s. a week.

Agricultural and other Land.

The general distribution of the surface of the United Kingdom in the year 1905 may be shown as under:—

	Total Land and Water Area.	Woods and Plantations.*	Mountain and Heath Land used for Grazing.	Permanent Pasture.	Arable Land.
	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.
England . . . .	32,552,000	1,716,000	2,366,000	13,760,000	10,851,000

* For more detailed particulars see article on FORESTRY.

The surface which remains unaccounted for in the above table is about 18 per cent. of the whole, and includes not only water, wastes, land incapable of profitable cultivation, and the minor holdings of 1 acre or less which are not the subject of annual returns, but also the land required for residential, commercial, and industrial purposes.

The following table compares the total cultivated land (including arable and pasture) and the total arable land for the period 1871-5 with the similar totals for the year 1905, so far as Great Britain is concerned:—

Cultivated Land—Great Britain.

	England. Million Acres.	Wales. Million Acres.	Scotland. Million Acres.	Great Britain. Million Acres
1871-5	23·91	2·65	4·56	31·12

Arable Land.

Number and Size of Holdings.

Details for England, Wales, Scotland, and Ireland of holdings above 1 acre for 1905 are given in the following table:—

	No. of Holdings, 1905.	Acres under Crops and Grass.	Average Size.
			1905.	1895.
England	372,144	24,611,126	66·1	65·3

Ireland . . .	62,126	363,541	480,564	19,572

* 50—200 acres.

Concerning allotments of 1 acre and under in Great Britain, these numbered in 1895 579,133; those of less than 1 acre were 541,990, and of 1 acre 37,143.

In Ireland there were, in 1905, 78,001 holdings not exceeding 1 acre.

Small Holdings.

A Committee was in May 1905 appointed to inquire into the administration and working of the Small Holdings Act 1882, to examine the various arrangements made by landowners in recent years for the provision of smaller agricultural holdings; and to report as to the conditions under which such holdings are most likely to be attended with success, and as to the measures which may most advantageously be taken, either by legislation, co-operative association, or otherwise, to secure the increase of their number. Chairman, Earl of Onslow; Secretary, Mr. T. H. Sutton, of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries.

The Allotments and Small Holdings Association was founded in '85 to assist rural labourers to obtain small allotments of land and to maintain their rights to the charities bequeathed for their benefit in past years. The President is Sir Walter Foster, M.P., and the Secretary Mr. C. D. Sturge. Office, 116, Vivian Road, Harborne, Birmingham.

See Session as to Crown Lands Act, 1906, under which Lord Carrington said, in Aug. 1906, that an endeavour would be made to meet the growing and urgent demands by the labouring classes for means by which they could get access to the land.

Diseases of Animals.

Until 1893 the local authorities of the country controlled the powers exercisable under the Diseases of Animals Acts with regard to Swine Fever, but at the end of that year the Board of Agriculture assumed control. The number of outbreaks of swine fever, which was 3045 in 1895, has sunk continuously since.

The number of cases of rabies rapidly diminished from 771 in 1895 to nil in 1903.

It was in 1899 that the last outbreak of pleuro-pneumonia occurred, and it seems to have been banished from the country. Foot and mouth disease also appears to have been eradicated, there having been no cases since 1902.

On the other hand the number of outbreaks of anthrax and glanders seems to be steadily increasing.

The following were the outbreaks reported in 1905:—

For the first 9 months of 1906 the outbreaks recorded in Great Britain were:—

Great Britain.

Swine Fever . . . . .	848
Epizootic Abortion . . . . .	—

There were no cases of pleuro-pneumonia, foot and mouth disease, or rabies recorded.

A Departmental Committee was appointed in April 1905 to inquire, by means of experimental investigation and otherwise, into the pathology and etiology of epizootic abortion, and to consider whether any and, if so, what preventive and remedial measures may with advantage be adopted with respect to that disease. Chairman, Prof. John MacFadyen, M.R.C.V.S., M.B., B.Sc., Principal Royal Veterinary College; Secretary, Mr. J. R. Jackson, M.R.C.V.S., of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries.

II. CO-OPERATION IN AGRICULTURE.

The Agricultural Organisation Society was established in April 1901, through the amalgamation of the British Agricultural Organisation Society with the National Agricultural Union. A considerable number of country districts are vigorously taking the matter up. The Agricultural Organisation Society maintains a staff of organisers, and (a) advises with regard to the preliminary steps to be taken in the formation of a society; (b) supplies model rules giving societies a legal constitution without trouble or expense; (c) gives information concerning the working of other societies, with the object of mutual help and experience; (d) is in a position to negotiate with firms in a manner impossible for a local society; (e) institutes systematic methods of administration in order to secure good management.

The number and nature of Societies affiliated to the Agricultural Organisation Society to Sept. 20th, 1906, was as follows:—

Societies for the Supply of Requirements and Sale of Produce . . . . .	97
Dairy, Bottled Milk, and Cheesemaking . . . . .	15

President, Mr. R. A. Yerburgh; Chairman of Committee, Hon. T. A. Brassey; Secretary, Mr. J. Nugent Harris. Offices, Dacre House, Dacre Street, Westminster. (Telegraphic Address: "Natalizio, London"); Telephone No. 494, Victoria.)

The reports of the Irish Agricultural Organisation Society, Ltd., indicate that the agricultural co-operative movement in that country is growing steadily. There were at the end of 1905, 718 societies, including:—

269 Dairies,

130 Agricultural Societies,

200 Agricultural Banks,

25 Poultry Societies,

54 Home Industry Societies,

4 Flax Societies,

21 Bee-keepers' Societies,

3 Federations, and 12 Miscellaneous Societies, 65 of which were formed during the year.

The membership of the societies on Jan. 1st, 1905, was about 76,534. Artificial manure can now be bought at prices which vary from 25 to 40 per cent. lower than those that ruled before the idea of joint purchase had been taken up. Co-operative societies in Ireland are now placed on equal terms with ordinary traders. The Society is working hand-in-hand with the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction for Ireland. See, R. A. Anderson. Office, 22, Lincoln Place, Dublin.

See also Agricultural Credit Societies on p. 33.

III. AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION, SOCIETIES, ETC.

There are several large institutions in Great Britain where a full course of agricultural education, with knowledge of the allied sciences, can be obtained. The following are classed as agricultural colleges: viz.—

Royal Agricultural College, Cirencester.

College of Agriculture, Downton, Salisbury.

University College, Reading.

University of Cambridge Department of Agriculture.

University of Leeds.

South-Eastern Agricultural College, Wye, near Ashford.

Armstrong College, Newcastle-upon-Tyne: Agriculture and Rural Economy.

University College of Wales, Aberystwyth.

University College, Bangor.

Aspataria Agricultural College, Cumberland.

Tamworth Agricultural College and Training Farm.

Brewood Grammar School, Staffordshire.

Uckfield Agricultural and Horticultural College and Training Farm, Sussex.

West of Scotland Agricultural College, 6, Blythwood Square, Glasgow.

Dauntsey Agricultural School, West Lavington, Devizes.

Aberdeen and N. Scotland College of Agriculture, Aberdeen, which confers the degree of Doctor of Science in Agriculture—D.Sc. (Agr.).

In recent years a good deal of work has been done by women in horticulture, and three Hostels are open—at Reading, Swanley, and Lady Warwick's.

Royal Agricultural Society of England.

This, the premier agricultural society of the United Kingdom, was founded by Royal Charter on March 26th, 1840. It has two sides to its work:

(1) The practical, the chief feature of which is its annual shows, at which the best pedigree animals, as well as the newest inventions in agricultural implements and labour-saving appliances, are exhibited; (2) The scientific, for which purpose it maintains a complete chemical laboratory for the analysis of feeding-stuffs, manures, soils, etc., and retains the services of Chemical, Botanical, Zoological, and Veterinary experts in order that its members may have at low rates the best scientific advice obtainable. It controls, moreover, an Experimental Farm and "Pot Culture" station at Woburn, where elaborate investigations into crops, soils, feeding stuffs, and other matters connected with agriculture, are carried on. Its Journal contains articles by leading authorities on the most important agricultural questions of the day. The Society has, in conjunction with the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland, instituted annual examinations for the award of National Diplomas in the science and practice of Agriculture and of Dairying. It seeks in many other ways to foster the study of agriculture, including the publication of insect and other "Diagrams," a Text-book on agriculture (now in its thirty-fifth thousand), Pamphlets, and lantern slides. The governing body of the Society consists of a President (elected annually), 12 trustees, 12 vice-presidents, and 54 members of council, one-third of whom go out of office each year. The members number about 12,000, including nearly all the chief landowners, practical farmers and stock breeders of the country. Membership of the Society entitles to the use of a large and well-stocked library of standard books on agricultural subjects, and a reading-room. The Society's consulting chemist is Dr. J. Augustus Voelcker, M.A., F.I.C.; the consulting botanist is Mr. W. Carruthers, F.R.S.; and the zoologist is Mr. Cecil Warburton, M.A., of the Zoological Laboratory, Cambridge, all of whom members may consult on payment of a small fee. A new showyard, intended to be the Society's permanent showyard, was opened at Park Royal in 1903, but after three years' experience it was sold, and the Society reverted to the old method of movable shows, that in 1906 being held at Derby. It was attended by 119,143 people paying at the gates (as compared with 23,913 at Park Royal in 1905), besides those who paid by tickets purchased previously. The sixty-eighth annual show of live stock, implements, and farm produce will be held at Lincoln, commencing June 21th, 1907. See, Mr. Thomas McRow, 16, Bedford Square, W.C.

Royal Veterinary College.

The College was founded in 1791, and incorporated by Royal Charter 1875. It is administered by Governors and a General Purposes Committee. Subscribers pay £2 2s. per annum, or £21 for a life subscription. The College itself is under the supervision of a Principal, or Dean, assisted by a number of Professors. Students' fees are £22 6s. for the first and £21 15s. 6d. for the second and subsequent years. Principal and Dean, Prof. McFadyen, M.B., B.Sc., M.R.C.V.S. See, Mr. R. A. N. Powys. College, Great College Street, Camden Town, N.W.

Rothamsted Experimental Station.

The Rothamsted Experimental Station owes its existence to the late Sir John Bennet Lawes, who, as Mr. Lawes, came into possession of the ancestral estate of Rothamsted in 1834, and almost immediately began experiments on vegetation, at first in pots and then on the fields of the Home Farm. The foundation of the Experimental Station is ascribed to the year '43, for then many of the fields now under experiment took their present form; in that year also Lawes obtained the assistance of Dr. (afterwards Sir J. H.) Gilbert, and thus began the long partnership in investigation which only terminated at his death in 1900. In '43 no agricultural experiments were in being, except those conducted by Boussingault on his own farm at Bechelbronn, in Alsace, which, however, never developed into a public institution. Rothamsted is thus the oldest station for agricultural experiments in the world.

At Rothamsted field experiments have been carried out on a large scale to ascertain the manurial requirements of the various farm crops, and the yield under various conditions. The distinguishing feature has been continuity of plan. Each particular plot has always carried from year to year the same crop, and has received similar treatment and manuring; the accidental errors due to variations of soil and season, which are inherent in all field experiments, are thus eliminated, and the effect of the treatment stands out clearly. From such results over a series of years the influence of different types of season can be ascertained; and in the course of time the secondary effects of the treatment on the composition and behaviour of the soil also become apparent: exhaustion of the soil in particular directions manifests itself by degrees. The effect of the manures used on the gross yield of the crops may be regarded as settled by the experiments; indeed, the results are nowadays incorporated into the current tradition of the practical farmer; but the effects produced upon the soil and upon the quality of the crop are still matters which urgently require investigation.

While field experiments with farm crops have always been the main subject for investigation at Rothamsted, many other cognate matters have been dealt with. During many years feeding experiments were conducted with cattle, sheep and pigs, in the course of which analyses were made of the whole bodies of these animals in various stages of fatness. These experiments still form the basis of our knowledge of the composition of the animal body. Other experiments have dealt with the nature and amount of food required by the fattening animal, and with the relation of food to work and the source of fat in the body: all of these have assisted in laying the foundations of the theory of animal nutrition. More directly practical inquiries have dealt with the value of malt as food, with the utilisation of sewage and the feeding value of sewage-grown grass, and on the making and feeding value of ensilage.

The Lawes Testimonial Laboratory was the outcome of a public subscription among the agriculturists of England in '54. In 1906 the "James Mason" Laboratory for agricultural bacteriology was added, being the gift of Mr. J. F. Mason, M.P.

In '99 the papers in which the results of the Rothamsted work were embodied were collected, forming three 4to and seven 8vo vols., sets of which were distributed by Sir John Lawes to the chief Libraries, Colleges of Agriculture, and Experiment Stations in the world. A more general summary of the work done is contained in the "Book of the Rothamsted Experiments" (J. Murray, 1905, 10s. 6d. net). "The Guide" to the Rothamsted Experiments shows the current conditions of cropping and yield.

In '93 Sir John Lawes created the Lawes Agricultural Trust, endowing it with stock to the value of £100,000, the Laboratory and the lease of the land on which the experimental plots are situated. He entrusted the management to a Committee composed of four members nominated by the Royal Society, two by the Royal Agricultural Society, one each by the Chemical and Linnæan Societies, and the owner of Rothamsted.

Committee of Management: Sir J. Evans, K.C.B., F.R.S. (Chairman), H. Müller, LL.D., F.R.S. (Treasurer), H. E. Armstrong, LL.D., F.R.S., H. T. Brown, LL.D., F.R.S., W. Caruthers, F.R.S., Sir M. Foster, K.C.B., D.C.L., F.R.S., Sir C. Lawes-Wittewronge, Bart., Sir J. H. Thorold, Bart., J. A. Voelcker, M.A., Ph.D., and H. Rix, B.A. (Secretary).

Director: A. D. Hall, M.A.

Chemist: N. H. J. Miller, Ph.D.

Other Societies.

The Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland. Secretary, Jas. Macdonald, F.R.S.E., 3, George IV. Bridge, Edinburgh.

The Royal Dublin Society, founded in 1731 for the advancement of agriculture and other branches of industry and of science and art. Shows are held in April, August, and December, at the Society's premises, Ball's Bridge, Dublin. Hon. Secs., J. Joly, F.R.S.; J. L. Riall, D.L. Registrar and Chemical Analyst, R. J. Moss, F.I.C. Agricultural Supt., R. Bruce, Leinster House, Dublin.

The local Chambers of Agriculture (89 in number) in England and Wales are affiliated to the Central and Associated Chamber of Agriculture (Secretary, A. H. H. Matthews, Broad Sanctuary Chambers, Westminster, S.W.), and concern themselves principally in influencing legislation in the interests of the farmers.

Scotland has its own Chamber. Secretary, Isaac Connell, S.S.C., 10, North St. David Street, Edinburgh.

The Smithfield Club (Incorporated), formed in 1798, has also to be credited with excellent services in encouraging the breeding and proper fattening of live stock and exhibiting agricultural produce and implements. Secretary, E. J. Powell, 12, Hanover Square, W.

The British Dairy Farmers' Association. Secretary, W. C. Young, 12, Hanover Square, W.

The Bath and West and Southern Counties Society, for the encouragement of agriculture, arts, manufactures, and commerce. Secretary, T. F. Plowman, 3, Pierrepont Street, Bath.

The Farmers' Club. Membership 950. Secretary, H. Trustram Eve, 2, Whitehall Court, London, S.W.

The Royal Counties Agricultural Society. Secretary, Franklin Simmons, Basingstoke.

The Welsh National Agricultural Society. Secretary, Lewis T. L. Pryse, Cambrian Chambers, Aberystwyth.

Great attention is now being paid to instruction in Dairying, which may be specially studied at The British Dairy Institute at Reading.

The Midland Agricultural and Dairy College, Kingston Fields, Derby.

The Dairy Institute, Worleston, Nantwich.

The Dairy School, Kilmarnock, N.B.

The Royal Agricultural Benevolent Institution grants pensions to farmers and their wives and daughters who have become reduced in circumstances. Secretary, C. B. Shaw, 26, Charles Street, St. James's, London, S.W.

Breed Societies.

There is a permanent Royal Commission on Horse Breeding, of which the Master of the Horse, the Earl of Sefton, is ex-officio President. Sec., J. Herbert Taylor. Office, 12, Hanover Square, London, W.

Other Breed Societies concerned with horses are:—

Shire Horse Society, 12, Hanover Square, W.
Clydesdale Horse Society, 93, Hope Street, Glasgow.

Hackney Horse Society, 12, Hanover Sq., W.
Hunters' Improvement Society, 12, Hanover Square, W.

Polo and Riding Pony Society, 12, Hanover Square, W.

Cleveland Bay Horse Society, Norton Carr, Nunthorpe R.S.O., Yorkshire.

Yorkshire Coach Horse Society, The Grange, Appleton Roebuck, Bolton Percy R.S.O., Yorks.

For Cattle the chief societies are:—

Shorthorn Society, 12, Hanover Square, W.
Hereford Herd-Book Society, 20, East Street Hereford.

Devon Cattle Breeders' Society, Wiveliscombe, Somerset.

Sussex Herd-Book Society, 12, Hanover Square, W.

English Jersey Cattle Society, 7, Princes Street, Hanover Square, W.

Galloway Cattle Society, Monswald Manse, Ruthwell R.S.O., N.B.

Ayrshire Cattle Herd-Book Society, 58, Alloway Street, Ayr.

Highland Cattle Society, 15, High Street, Inverness.

Jersey Herd-Book Society, St. Helier, Jersey.

English Guernsey Society, 12, Hanover Square, W.

Kerry and Dexter Herd-Book Society, Leinster House, Dublin.

Red Polled Society, Mercury Office, Norwich.

For Sheep the leading societies are:—

National Sheep Breeders, Mowbray House, Norfolk Street, Strand, W.C.

Oxford Down Breeders, 11, Queen Street, Oxford.

Southdown, 12, Hanover Square, W.

Hampshire Down, 49, Canal, Salisbury.

Wensleydale, Carperby, Aysgarth.

Leicester, Elms Villa, Great Driffeld, Yorkshire.

For Poultry there are:

National Poultry Organisation Society, Sec. E. Brown, F.L.S., 12, Hanover Square, W.

Poultry Club, Sec. T. Threlford, 42, Earlsam Grove, Forest Gate, London, E.

For Fruit there is the National Fruit Growers' Federation, Sec. A. T. Matthews, 28, Eaton Rise, Ealing, London, W.

There are three associations devoted to the interests of Pig Breeders:

National Pig Breeders' Association, Ruddington, Nottingham.

British Berkshire Society.

Large Black Pig Society, 64, Oxford Street, Ipswich.

The British Goat Society (Allerton House, Kingston-on-Thames) issues a Herd-Book for that description of stock.

Albert Medal, The, was instituted in 1866 and extended in '67 and '77, for the purpose of rewarding acts of heroism performed by civilians at sea or on land. The first class are awarded a decoration consisting of a gold oval-shaped badge bearing the words on a garter "For Gallantry in Saving Life at Sea," or "on Land," as the case may be. Members of the second class, whose acts of bravery, though meritorious, have not been so striking, receive a bronze badge with the same inscription.

ALCOHOLIC LIQUORS, CONSUMPTION AND COST OF.

During a number of years the late Mr. William Hoyle contributed to the Times an annual letter setting forth the national consumption and cost of intoxicating liquors in the preceding year. Since his death in '85 these annual letters have been continued by Dr. Dawson Burns.

The latest year for which official data are available (1905) showed an expenditure of £164,167,941. Since '99, when the expenditure was £185,927,227, there has been a steady annual decline as follows:—

Decrease in 1900 . . . .	£ 1,045,031
" " 1901 . . . .	3,142,953
" " 1902 . . . .	2,238,426
" " 1903 . . . .	5,054,546
" " 1904 . . . .	5,458,106
" " 1905 . . . .	4,810,224

Total decrease in 6 years £21,759,286

The population, on the other hand, has increased since 1899 by 2,659,834.

Analysing the Drink Bill for 1905, the total expenditure is made up as follows:—

British and Foreign Spirits . . . .	52,164,940
Beer (Malt Liquor) . . . .	99,751,962
Wine . . . .	10,751,039
British Wines, Cider, etc. . . .	1,500,000

£164,167,941

This gives an average of £3 15s. 11½d. per head of the entire population (43,219,783). As the aggregate expenditure is made up of that of the three kingdoms, a further analysis shows that the expenditure in England was £136,388,481 (£3 19s. 10d. per head); in Scotland, £14,438,988 (£3 1s. 9d.); and in Ireland, £13,340,472 (£3 0s. 10d.).

Applying the analysis to the liquors, it is seen to be as follows:—

	Spirits.	Beer.	Wine.	Other Liquors
	Gallons.	Barrels.	Gallons.	1000 Galls.
England	27,801,613	29,670,987	10,153,759	14,000
Scotland	7,356,299	1,188,929	1,194,560	500
Ireland .	4,211,854	2,390,738	597,280	500
United Kingdom	39,369,766	33,250,654	11,945,599	15,000

The intoxicating element in all alcoholic liquors is alcohol, and the total consumption of alcohol in 1905 was 84,833,784 gallons, or about 2 gallons per head.

An estimate has been made of the distribution of the £164,167,941 as follows: For Materials, £19,700,153; for Liquor Revenue Fees, etc., paid to H.M. Government, £37,758,626; for Wholesale and Retail Trade, including breweries, etc., £106,709,162.

In the United States the consumption of alcoholic liquors, total and per head, in 1905, was as follows:—

	Total consumption.	Per head.
	Gallons.	Gallons.
Distilled Spirits .	120,870,278	1'45
Wines . . . . .	35,371,717	'43
Malt Liquors . .	1,538,150,770	18'50

The National Advocate of New York in Mar. 1906 estimated the amount paid for liquor by consumers in the United States in 1905 at £280,000,000.

The Drink Bill for 1905 in New Zealand was £3,120,705; in Victoria £3,091,673.

Ancient Buildings, Society for the Protection of, 20, Buckingham Street, W.C. Sec., Thackeray Turner, F.S.A.

Andorra. A republic under the joint suzerainty of France and the Spanish Bishop of Urgel. Area, 175 sq. m.; pop. 6000.

Anunzio, Gabriele d', the pseudonym of the Italian poet Gaetano Rapagnetto, was b. 1864 on a boat in the Adriatic, educated in a college at Prato, near Florence, and studied in Rome. He was elected, in '98, a deputy in the Italian Parliament. His first volume of verse, "Primavera," appeared in '79, and was followed by "In Memoriam," '80; "Canto Novo," '82; "Intermezzo di Reine," '83. His "Odi Novelli" reached their 9th edition in '99. Of his numerous novels, the first, "Terra Vergine," appeared in '82; "Il Piacere" obtained ten editions between '89 and '98. He then turned to the drama, with "Un Sogno d'un Mattino di Primavera," "Giaconda," "Francesca da Rimini" produced by Signora Duse at the Adelphi in 1903, and "Più che l'Amore" produced at Rome Nov. 1906.

Anti-Cigarette League, The International, founded March 1901. Has over 63,000 members, pledged to abstain from purchasing or using tobacco in any form until they are 21. Chairman, Major-Gen. R. S. S. Baden-Powell; Founder and Hon. Sec., Rev. Frank Johnson, 57 and 59, Ludgate Hill, London.

Antiquaries of London, Society of, Burlington House, W. Assist. Secretary, W. H. St. John Hope, M.A.

Apothecaries, Society of, Water Lane, Blackfriars. Clerk, A. M. Upton; Sec. to Examiners, Frank Haydon, L.R.C.P.

Apponyi, Count Albert, Hungarian statesman, was educated at a Jesuit college, and entered political life as a member of the extreme Clerical Conservative party, who regarded the 1867 Compact as far too national. Gradually his views developed till he formed and led the Nationalist party. He was in 1902 President of the Hungarian Chamber, having been elected to that post by the Liberal party, which he then supported. Even at that date he leaned to the Independent party, and lent all his influence to support their demand for a more national organisation of the Hungarian army. In 1903 he resigned the Presidency of the Chamber, and gradually became one of the leaders of the Opposition, taking a most prominent part against Count Tisza's proposals for dealing with obstruction. In January 1904 he and his Nationalist followers formally joined the Independent party, repudiating dualism and declaring for a personal union of the two kingdoms. He took office in the Wekerle Coalition Ministry in 1906 as Minister of Public Worship and Education, and visited England during the summer. He is an accomplished linguist and a great orator. See AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

ARABIA.

Arabia is a large peninsula in S.W. Asia having an area of about 1,000,000 sq. miles, and a population of about 12,000,000. The provinces of Hedjaz and Yemen, contained in it, are under Turkish rule. See TURKEY.

Outside these provinces the country is practically divided between the Bedouin tribes, the chief of which, the great Shammar tribe, has its centre at Hail, with a permanent population of about 10,000; and the fanatical Wahabite tribes of the oases, whose gathering-place and centre is at Riadh. Under Mohammed Ibn Rashid, the sheikh of the Shammar tribe, the Wahabite tribes were brought under the Bedouin control from Hail as a centre. Ibn Rashid died in '97, and his nephew Abdul Aziz Ibn Rashid succeeded him and was supported by the Turks. He it was who advanced against Koweyt, a town of about 25,000 inhabitants, on the Persian Gulf, which has been spoken of as the terminus of the proposed German railway from Constantinople through Baghdad; and this led early in 1901 to a raid by Sheikh M'Baruk of Koweyt into Jebel Shammar, which ended in a severe defeat. However, in the course of subsequent fighting this was avenged, and the Wahabite chief, Abdul Aziz Ibn Saoud, with whom Sheikh M'Baruk allied himself, installed himself at Riadh as Ameer of Nejd, and Ibn Rashid was driven back to Hail. On April 12th, 1906, Ibn Rashid was surprised near Kassim, and killed, with many of the notables of Hail, in a night attack made by Ibn Saoud. Turkey has claimed that Koweyt comes under her administration, but this Great Britain has refused to allow, and in Aug. 1901 British ships supported M'Baruk in resisting Turkish pretensions. British influence in Arabia is exercised in the case of Oman (q.v.) through the Sultan of Muscat. The chief exports are sheep and goat skins, mother-of-pearl, and gum, but all in very small quantities.

British Consul at Jiddah, J. F. Jones.

Archæological Association, The British, Hon. Secs., George Patrick, A.R.I.B.A., and J. G. N. Clift. Offices, 32, Sackville Street, W.

Architects, Royal Institute of British. Founded in 1834, for the general advancement of architecture and for promoting and facilitating the acquirement of the knowledge of the various arts and sciences connected therewith. It was incorporated by royal charter in '37, and obtained a new charter in '87. Secretary, Mr. W. J. Locke. Offices, 9, Conduit Street, Hanover Square, W.

Architects, The Society of. Founded in 1884 and incorporated in '93; advocates the statutory examination and registration of all persons entering the profession of architecture; has over 700 members. Its examinations are held in April and October. Office of Secretary: Staple Inn Buildings, Holborn, W.C.

Architectural Association, The (London). Provides facilities for the study of architecture. Instruction is given by day and evening schools, the latter preparing for the intermediate and final examinations of the R.I.B.A. The Royal Architectural Museum is the property of the Association, and is accommodated in the same building. Membership, 1700; entrance fee, £2 2s.; annual subscription, £1 1s. Sec., D. G. Driver. Office, 18, Tufton Street, Westminster.

ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

The Argentine Republic is a group of 14 provinces and 10 territories, with an extensive seaboard on the east coast of South America. The boundary between the Republic and Chili, which had been the cause of much friction, was submitted to the arbitration of King Edward VII., whose award was published on Nov. 20th, 1902 (see ed. 1903 for details). A general treaty of arbitration was also concluded between the two countries on Aug. 12th, 1902.

The constitution of 1853, modified in '62 and '98, closely resembles that of the United States. It vests the executive power in the hands of a President, who is also Commander-in-chief of the troops, elected by representatives of the provinces for six years, not being re-eligible; and the legislative authority in that of a Senate of 30 members, two chosen by the capital and two by the legislature of each province, and a House of Deputies of 120 members elected for four years by the people, one-third of the Senate retiring every three years and one-half of the House retiring every two years. The Session lasts from May 1st to Sept. 30th. The President has a salary of about £6000 per annum, and the Vice-President about £3000. Senators and Deputies are paid about £1000 a year.

Army and Navy.

The Army is sanctioned by an annual vote, as in Great Britain. The standing force and reserve consist of 120,000 men (18 battalions of infantry, 10 regiments of cavalry, 8 of artillery, and 4 battalions of engineers). Outside these are the national and territorial guard, which have little training. Compulsory military service was adopted in 1901, and it is believed that 500,000 men could be mobilised in case of war. Service in the active army is for 2 years, but a large proportion of men serve for a much shorter period. They are in the reserve up to 20, the national guard up to 36, and the territorial guard up to 41.

The Navy is administered by a Ministry of Marine. Of the personnel 2000 are conscripts, called up annually and serving for two years, the remainder are volunteers: There are 321 executive officers and 158 engineer officers on the active list, and from 5000 to 6000 men. The executive officers are divided as follows: 1 vice-admiral, 2 rear-admirals, 3 commodores, 11 captains, 42 commanders, 30 lieutenants, 91 sub-lieutenants, 81 midshipmen, and 60 cadets. The strength in ships built on Oct. 31st was:

Battleships, 3; Armoured cruisers, 4; Protected cruisers, 5; torpedo-boat destroyers, 4; torpedo boats, 22; submarine, 1. The principal dockyards are San Fernando, Puerto Belgrano, and Buenos Ayres. In 1906 the Government asked for £6,500,000 to be expended over five years, and a Commission was sent to Europe, under Rear-Admiral Garcia, to report on the subject. It was proposed to spend £5,900,000 on the purchase of 3 large armoured vessels, 9 torpedo-boat destroyers, and 21 torpedo boats; the balance to be spent on submarine mines, floating batteries, river gunboats, and transports.

Industries, Statistics, etc.

The provinces elect their own governors and legislatures, and have complete control over their internal affairs. The State religion is Roman Catholic, but all others are tolerated. Education is free, secular and compulsory between 6 and 14. There are 560,000 scholars in the Government and private schools. The climate of the country is temperate and healthy. The rich mineral resources are beginning to be developed. Farming and stock breeding are, however, the chief industries of the country, and they are extending rapidly. The cultivation of cotton has been seriously undertaken in the semi-tropical districts of the Chaco, and in Misiones. The chief exports are wool, cattle and sheep, frozen meat, hides, butter, and grain. There are several Jewish agricultural colonies, promoted by the Jewish Colonisation Association. Length of railways, 12,000 miles, connecting the capital with the principal cities of the Republic. Telegraphs, 30,000 miles, connecting all the Republic.

Area, 1,135,840 sq. miles; pop. (1905), 5,410,205, the great majority of Spanish origin and of other European countries. Capital of the republic, Buenos Ayres, with 1,015,000 inhabitants. Other large towns are Rosario, pop. 140,000; Cordoba, 60,000; and Tucuman, 55,000. Capital of the province of Buenos Ayres, La Plata, pop. 85,000. Revenue, 1905, £17,180,000; expenditure, £19,025,000. Foreign debt, 1906, £71,833,580; internal debt, £11,068,500, of which £3,308,500 was in gold and £7,760,000 in paper. Imports, 1905, £41,030,884; exports, £64,568,765. The United Kingdom has the largest individual share both of imports and of exports. There is said to be more than £300,000,000 of British capital invested in Argentina.

Arisugawa, H.I.H. Prince Takehito, is descended from one of the four imperial families of Japan, which was founded by Prince Yoshihito, son of the Emperor Go Yozai, who reigned 1587-1611. Prince Takehito, who was b. in 1852, was adopted as his son and heir by his elder brother, Prince Taruhito, and was heir presumptive to the Japanese throne until the birth of the present Crown Prince in 1870. His early training was received in the British Navy, which he entered as a midshipman in '79, and in which he served till he gained the rank of lieutenant. During the Chino-Japanese War he commanded a cruiser with the rank of post-captain. He was afterwards appointed Admiral Superintendent of Yokosuka, and devoted himself to the work of organising the fleet. Prince and Princess Arisugawa represented the Emperor at the marriage of the German Crown Prince, in 1905, and afterwards visited England, staying at York House as the King's guests. The Order of hon. G.C.B. (military division) was conferred upon him during his visit.

Armagh, The Most Rev. William Alexander, Archbishop of, D.D., D.C.L. Oxon., LL.D. Dublin. He is the son of the Rev. R. Alexander, Prebendary of Aghadoe, and was born April 13th, 1824. Ed. at Tonbridge School, and Exeter and Brasenose Colleges, Oxford. Having been curate and rector of several parishes in Ireland, and Dean of Emly, he was in '67 appointed Bp. of Derry and Raphoe, and in '96 Archbp. of Armagh and Primate of the Protestant Episcopal Church of Ireland. There is a Roman Catholic Archbp. of Armagh (see Index). Dr. Alexander has published a number of theological works, and "The Finding of the Book and other Poems." He is the only living prelate in Ireland appointed by the Crown. He married Cecil Frances Humphreys, well known as "C. F. A.," the popular hymn-writer. The Palace, Armagh.

ARMS, COLLEGE AND OFFICES OF.

College of Arms or Herald's College.

In 1483 the Royal Offices of Arms were, by a charter of Richard III., erected into a Corporation and given a house by the river—near where the College of Arms now stands—as their headquarters. In a charter dated in 1555 Queen Mary confirmed their powers and privileges, and this Queen also gave them for their office Derby House, the old town house of the Earls of Derby. This was destroyed in the Great Fire of London, and the present building was erected on its site, Sir Christopher Wren being the architect. The Corporation consists of three Kings of Arms (Garter, Clarenceux, and Norroy), six Heralds (Chester, Lancaster, Somerset, Richmond, Windsor, and York), and four Pursuivants (Bluemantle, Rouge Dragon, Portcullis, and Rouge Croix). The general duties of the members are to attend the Sovereign on all full State occasions; to publish certain royal proclamations, and to marshal certain royal solemnities, such as coronations, funerals, etc.; to arrange for changes of name and Arms by Royal Licence, Grants of Arms and of Supporters, by Warrant of the Earl Marshal (the Duke of Norfolk); to prepare and record the pedigrees of the nobility and gentry; and it is the duty of the Heralds and Pursuivants to attend in the Public Office of the College, between the hours of 10 and 4, one of each rank in monthly rotation. All the members are nominated by the Earl Marshal, holding their offices by Patent under the Great Seal.

Earl Marshal: His Grace the Duke of Norfolk, K.G., G.C.V.O.

Kings of Arms.

Garter Principal King of Arms: Sir Alfred Scott-Gatty, C.V.O., F.S.A.

Clarenceux King of Arms: George E. Cokayne, Esq., M.A., F.S.A.

Norroy King of Arms: William H. Weldon, Esq., C.V.O., F.S.A.

Heralds.

Chester: Henry Murray Lane, Esq.

Lancaster: Edward Bellasis, Esq.

Somerset: H. F. Burke, Esq., C.V.O., F.S.A.

Richmond: Charles H. Athill, Esq., F.S.A.

Windsor: W. A. Lindsay, Esq., K.C., M.A., F.S.A.

York: G. Ambrose Lee, Esq.

Pursuivants.

Rouge Dragon: Everard Green, Esq., F.S.A.

Portcullis: T. M. Joseph-Watkin, Esq., B.A., F.S.A.

Rouge Croix: A. W. Stewart Cochrane, Esq.

Bluemantle: G. W. Wollaston, Esq., M.V.O.

Registrar: H. F. Burke, Esq.

Treasurer: W. H. Weldon, Esq.

Public Office (for all inquiries): College of Arms, Queen Victoria Street, London, E.C.

Lyon Office, Scotland.

The Court of the Lord Lyon is the department regulating the bearing of coats of arms in Scotland. Differing from the College of Arms in England, it is a Government Office, and all the fees exigible by it are paid over to His Majesty's Treasury. The establishment consists of Lyon King of Arms, three Heralds (Albany, Rothesay, and Ross), three Pursuivants (Carrick, March, and Unicorn), a Lyon Clerk, a Procurator-Fiscal, a Herald Painter, and a Macer. The office of Lyon King of Arms is a very ancient one. The fees payable for a grant of arms amount to about £44, and for a "matriculation" of arms already recorded to about £16. There is also an official register of pedigrees, and there are some fine early armorial manuscripts in the library of the Office, which contains an extensive collection of works in heraldry and family history. The Lyon has jurisdiction over all persons of Scottish descent. The Lyon Office is at present regulated under the provisions of an Act of Parliament passed in '67. It has of late years been celebrated for the artistic excellence of the emblazonments of the arms issued by it, which have had considerable influence on the recent revival of heraldic art.

Lyon King of Arms: Sir James Balfour Paul, F.S.A. Scot.

Lyon Clerk: F. J. Grant, W.S.

Office: H.M. Register House, Edinburgh.

Office of Arms, Ireland.

In Ireland, Ulster King of Arms has the sole heraldic jurisdiction, and has the same duties in Ireland as the Earl Marshal has in England. Like the Lyon Office, however, it is a Government Department. Ulster is ex-officio Knight Attendant on the Order of St. Patrick and executive officer of this Order. He furnishes each year to the House of Lords "Ulster's Roll" of the Peers of Ireland. The title of Ulster King of Arms was created in 1552; but the office itself, under the designation of "Ireland King of Arms," had its origin in 1382. The office of "Athlone Pursuivant of Arms" was created in 1552. The other Heraldic Offices are those of Dublin and Cork Heralds, created in 1783. Valuable Heraldic and Genealogical MSS. are housed in a fireproof strong room.

Ulster King of Arms: Sir Arthur E. Vicars. K.C.V.O., who succeeded the late Sir Bernard Burke, C.B., in January 1893. Knighted '96. C.V.O. 1901; K.C.V.O. 1903.
Office: Dublin Castle.

ARMY, THE BRITISH IMPERIAL.

I. ADMINISTRATION: Committee of Imperial Defence; Army Council; Inspector-General of the Forces.

II. ARMY ORGANISATION: 1906 Reorganisation Scheme; District Commands; Regular Army; Army Reserve; Militia; Imperial Yeomanry; Volunteers.

III. EFFECTIVES AND DISTRIBUTION: Establishments and Strength, Whole Army; Regimental Strength, Regular Army; Recruiting; Distribution of the Regular Army; Strength of Army Reserve, Militia, Imperial Yeomanry, and Volunteers.

IV. MAINTENANCE: Estimated Expenditure, etc.; Normal Expenditure, 1895-6—1905-6.

V. TERMS OF SERVICE.

VI. THE INDIAN ARMY.

VII. SPECIAL ARMY MATTERS: The General Staff; War Stores Commission; the Colonies and Imperial Defence.

I. Administration.

The Committee of Imperial Defence.

The Army is administered and controlled, under the authority and responsibility of the Cabinet, through the Secretary of State for War, who is President of the Army Council; but the Committee of Imperial Defence, being the advisory body upon whose recommendations the military, as well as the naval, policy of the country is theoretically and practically based in its broad lines, some account of that Committee is a necessary preliminary to an account of army administration.

This important feature of the organisation arose from the reconstitution of the old Defence Committee of the Cabinet as an institution to consider all questions of Imperial Defence from the point of view of the Navy, the Military Forces, India, and the Colonies; to obtain and collate information from the various departments of the State; to prepare any documents required by the Prime Minister; to furnish such advice as might be required; and to keep adequate records for the use of the Cabinet of the day and its successors. The Committee is purely advisory, and has no executive functions whatever. The machinery provided for the work is the Secretariat or "permanent nucleus" of the Committee. The Secretary is appointed for five years, with a normal salary of £1500; but Sir George Clarke, the first holder of the office, receives £2000. He has as his colleagues two Assistant Secretaries, nominated respectively by the Admiralty and the War Office, and appointed for three years, with salaries at the rate of £500 per annum. The original proposal was upon a more extensive scale, but it was explained that the present organisation was regarded as a beginning. The great advantage of the arrangement is that it enables a vote to be taken in the House each year after a discussion of matters relating to Imperial Defence as a whole. This was never possible in the discussion of Army and Navy votes separately.

The Prime Minister is Chairman of the Committee of Imperial Defence, and the members are the heads of the naval, military, and political services of the State, and when questions arise affecting particular colonies, departments or measures, special authorities may be called in. The present Secretary of State for War and his predecessor have both taken counsel with the Committee before presenting their Army schemes.

The Army Council.

The new Board created under this name by a patent dated Feb. 6th, 1904, consists of the Secretary of State, described as its "President," four military members, and two civil members. It was created in accordance with the recommendation of the War Office (Reconstitution) Committee, which consisted of Viscount Esher as chairman, Admiral Sir John Fisher, and Colonel Sir George Sydenham Clarke, as embodied in its Report published in three parts—Jan. 11th, Feb. 26th, and March 9th, 1904. The members of the Council act in a dual capacity: (a) as colleagues of the Secretary of State at the Council table; (b) as superintendents of the several branches into which the business of the War Office is divided.

The Military Members are, under the patent, the organising and administrative heads of the War Office, each responsible with the Secretary of State for the work of the War Office, and each for the efficient working of the branches under his individual control. Their several duties are indicated below. The law officers of the Crown endeavoured to provide for the single responsibility of the War Minister, while leaving unimpaired that of the members of the Council; and by an Order in Council dated Aug. 10th, 1904, the duties of the members of the Army Council were defined, a disparity being set up between the new Order and the Patent, owing to the Secretary of State being made responsible for "all the business of the Army Council." The first Military Member (Chief of the General Staff), the second Military Member (Adjutant-General), the third Military Member (Quartermaster-General), and the fourth Military Member (Master-General of the Ordnance) are under the terms of this Order "responsible to the Secretary of State for the administration of so much of the business relating to the organisation, disposition, personnel, armament, and maintenance of the Army as shall be assigned to them or each of them from time to time by the Secretary of State." The Finance Member is responsible for the Finance of the Army and for other business that may be committed to him, and in the same way the Civil Member is responsible for the non-effective votes and for any other business assigned to him. It is generally understood that the provisions of the Patent have been overridden by this Order in practice, and that the responsibility of the Military Members has been impaired.

The Secretary of State (Mr. R. B. Haldane, K.C., M.P.) is responsible to the Crown and Parliament as indicated above, and has general direction and supervision of all War Office business.

The Chief of the General Staff (General the Hon. Sir N. G. Lyttelton, K.C.B.), First Military Member, deals with the military defence of the Empire, the collection of intelligence, the training of the forces, their use in war, war organisation, the education of officers, the selection and administration of the General Staff, and telegraphs, signalling and associated matters. The duties are discharged under his authority by the Director of Military Operations (Major-Gen. J. M. Grierson, R.A.), the Director of Staff Duties (Major-Gen. H. D. Hutchinson), and the Director of Military Training (Major-Gen. D. Haig, C.V.O.).

The Adjutant-General (Lieut.-Gen. C. W. H. Douglas, C.B.), Second Military Member, is concerned with the raising and organising of the military forces, the maintenance of the Army abroad, the distribution of units, regulations for placing units on a war footing, personal questions, medical and sanitary matters, discipline, ceremonial matters, administrative arrangements connected with training, and the selection and administration of the Departmental Staff. The heads of the branches are the Director of Recruiting and Organisation (Major-Gen. H. G. Miles), the Director of Personal Services (Brig.-Gen. G. F. Browne, C.B.), the Director-General of Army Medical Services (Surgeon-Gen. Sir A. Keogh, K.C.B.), and the Director of Auxiliary Forces (Major-Gen. W. H. Mackinnon).

The Quartermaster-General (Lieut.-Gen. Sir W. G. Nicholson, K.C.B.), Third Military Member, deals with organising and training the Transport, Remount, and Supply Services; the settling of reserves of food, clothing, equipment, etc., to be held in depots, garrisons, and mobilisation stores, and the scales on which articles are to be supplied to the troops; the holding and issuing of military stores; the administration of departmental services, and the selection of officers for employment in them. The heads of the branches are the Director of Transport and Remounts (Major-Gen. F. W. Benson), under whom is the Director-General of Army Veterinary Services (Major-Gen. H. Thomson), the Director of Movements and Quarterings (Brig.-Gen. G. F. Gorrington), the Director of Supplies (Brig.-Gen. F. T. Clayton), and the Director of Equipment and Ordnance Stores (Major-Gen. F. E. Mulcahy).

The Master-General of the Ordnance (Major-Gen. Sir J. W. Murray, K.C.B.), Fourth Military Member, is concerned with armament, including mines and lights; coast defences; reserves of arms of all kinds and ammunition; patterns; provisions and inspection of guns, small-arms, ammunition, etc.; the direction and financial control of manufacturing departments except clothing; inventions; construction and maintenance of fortifications; stores, buildings, and ranges; the personnel of manufacturing and inspection staffs; technical questions affecting artillery and engineer services; contracts for guns, ammunition, and stores. The principal officers in the department are the Director of Artillery (Brig.-Gen. C. F. Hadden) and the Director of Fortifications and Works (Brig.-Gen. R. M. Ruck).

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, being the Civil Member of the Army Council (the Earl of Portsmouth), has special duties, including supervision of large barrack and hospital construction, and has under him the Director of Barrack Construction (Mr. H. B. Measures, F.R.I.B.A.) and the Chaplain-General (Right Rev. Bishop J. Taylor Smith, D.D.).

The Financial Secretary and Finance Member of the Council (Mr. T. R. Buchanan, M.P.) is the Financial Secretary, made a colleague of the Military Members, and has as his executive officer the Director of Army Finance (Sir G. D. A. Fleetwood Wilson, Assistant Under-Secretary of State). By Order in Council, August 10th, 1904, the Director acts as deputy and assistant to the Finance Member of the Council, as accounting officer of Army votes, accounts, and funds, being thus charged with the allowance and payment of all moneys for Army services, with accounting for and auditing expenditure and preparing annual accounts, and generally with the duty of audit and with advising the administrative officers at the War Office, and in command on all questions of Army expenditure. The reorganisation of the Finance Department has involved very great changes, and for the financial service of the Army in the field and in peace, an entirely new department has been created by amalgamating the old Military Pay Department with some of the Civil Headquarters Finance branches. A standing Army Finance Committee to watch expenditure has also been constituted.

The Secretary of the Army Council and of the War Office (Col. Sir Edward Ward, K.C.B., Permanent Under-Secretary of State) is the former Assistant Under-Secretary of State, and the work of his department is conducted through several branches. He is charged with the interior economy of the War Office and the preparation of all official communications of the Army Council. The Naval Adviser to the Army Council is Capt. R. P. F. Puffer, R.N., and the Judge-Advocate-General is Mr. T. Milvain, K.C.

The Inspector-General of the Forces.

The necessary corollary of the changes introduced into the administrative system was the disappearance of the Commander-in-Chief and the creation of a new office—that of Inspector-General of the Forces. The Army Council administers but does not command the Army, the executive command being vested in generals outside the War Office, and the Inspector-General has the duty of inspecting every branch of military work. The Duke of Connaught was appointed to this high and important position, and his duties were defined by Order in Council on August 10th, '04. They are as follows: "Under the orders and directions of the Army Council, to review generally and report to the Army Council on the practical results of the policy of that Council, and for that purpose to inspect and report upon the training and efficiency of all troops under the control of the Home Government, on the suitability of their armament and equipment, on the condition of fortifications and defences, and generally on the readiness and fitness of the Army for war." Inspectors (5) of Cavalry, Horse and Field Artillery, Garrison Artillery, Royal Engineers, and Equipment and Stores, have been appointed to act under the Inspector-General. The Inspector-General is also President of the Selection Board, which consists of the generals holding the military commands at home, and is concerned with the selection and promotion of officers above the rank of captain.

II. Army Organisation.

The 1906 Reorganisation Scheme.

A full synopsis of the scheme of Army Reorganisation proposed by the late Government was given in the 1905 ANNUAL, and more briefly last year. Here it may suffice to say that it was proposed to divide the Regular Army into two parts—viz., a General Service Army to serve abroad and at home, the men enlisting for nine years with the colours followed by three in the Reserve, and a Home Service Army to serve at home in peace, and abroad, if necessary, in time of important war, the men enlisting for two years with the colours and ten years in the Reserve.

This scheme was never brought into complete operation, and when the present Government came into power an entirely new scheme of Army Reorganisation was proposed, and is now being carried into execution. It was foreshadowed by Mr. Haldane in a speech in the House of Commons, March 8th, 1906, further developed on July 12th, and more fully explained in a Memorandum dated July 30th. It is based upon the principle that increased efficiency is compatible with greater economy, and that wastage is caused by the Army having grown up "haphazard" with no definite purpose or function. Economy is to be sought in part by employing men who give only a part of their time in peace to military training, and yet are willing to take a definite engagement to serve overseas on mobilisation, in work which is of a civilian nature, as in manning ammunition columns, certain transport, railway, supply, clerical, medical and veterinary services, and much work done by artificers—e.g. shoeing-smiths, wheelwrights, etc. This is described as the "Militia Principle," and is the great novelty in the new scheme. The object is to increase the total number of persons capable of rendering effective military service by substituting in many cases men serving on a militia basis for men giving exclusive time to the Regular Army. It is, therefore, assumed that certain reductions are right, and that the result will be "the increase of the efficiency for fighting purposes of the British Army by 50 per cent." The limit of possible reductions is to be determined by the number of troops requiring drafts which we maintain abroad; and the establishment which has been sanctioned by the Army Council (based, it is understood, largely upon financial considerations) enables certain units to be disbanded.

The Reductions in progress or to be made are: Two battalions of Guards and 8 Line battalions, leaving abroad 78 battalions and at home 68 battalions. It is anticipated that these changes will result in an immediate saving of £1,000,000 and an ultimate saving of £2,500,000. The disappearing battalions are: 3rd Scots Guards (which has given up its colours), 3rd Coldstream Guards (serving in the meantime in Egypt), 3rd and 4th Northumberland Fusiliers, 3rd and 4th Royal Warwickshire Regt., 3rd and 4th Lancashire Fusiliers, 3rd and 4th Manchester Regt. The total reduction is to be 20,000 men, of whom about 9000 are to be obtained by reducing the 10 battalions named, and 2000 by abolishing Regular Garrison Artillerymen, while 3850 are Field Artillerymen, and the remainder are obtained by abolishing the Wei-hai-Wei Regiment, and by reducing Royal Engineer and Army Service Corps establishments. The West Indies Regt. is also to be reduced to two battalions and a depot.

An "Expeditionary Force" is to be constituted, composed of 6 "big" infantry divisions (each of 3 brigades) and 4 cavalry brigades, with a total strength of 5546 officers and 154,000 men—50,000 serving with the colours, and 70,000 being Reservists, and 30,000 men on a Militia basis. The numbers, by arms, required to constitute this force are as follows:—

	Officers.	Other Ranks.
General Officers, Staff, and Special Appointments.	265	—
Cavalry . . . . .	490	11,132
Artillery . . . . .	693	28,752
Engineers . . . . .	268	7,287
Infantry . . . . .	2,236	77,183
Army Service Corps . . . . .	344	19,093
Royal Army Medical Corps . . . . .	1,061	8,408
Army Veterinary Corps . . . . .	117	632
Army Ordnance Corps . . . . .	72	1,537
Total . . . . .	5,546	154,074

The exact number of these to be on a non-regular basis is given as follows, the Cavalry being 6 Imperial Yeomany regiments to act as divisional cavalry, and the other forces being Reservists, men on a militia basis and civilians "to be specially engaged on mobilisation": Cavalry, 3240; Artillery, 10,337; Engineers, 2425; Army Service Corps, 10,775; Royal Army Medical Corps, 3098; Army Veterinary Corps, 541; Army Ordnance Corps, 441; total, 30,857.

The war wastage for six months is estimated at 56,285, and there not being enough Regulars and Reservists, men on a non-regular basis would be required to make up the number.

The Artillery.—No field batteries are to be abolished, but reductions are to be made as indicated above. Sixty-three batteries are to be mobilised as the proper complement of the expeditionary force. Thirty-six batteries are to be used for training Militia, 18 being 4-gun batteries, and 18 2 gun batteries. The ammunition columns of the expeditionary force will be made up mainly on a non-regular basis. The immediate economy is estimated at £300,000.

The Militia are to be organised into a first reserve—to supply supports for the expeditionary force during an overseas campaign. The number of battalions may be reduced, two or three weak battalions being amalgamated to form one strong battalion. It is intended that the Militia shall serve under its own officers, either in companies or battalions, and that a measure shall be introduced to make the force available for foreign service.

Yeomanry and Volunteers.—These forces are to be looked to for expansion of the regular forces and for home defence. The administration of all purely local territorial forces will be vested in county associations, with the lords-lieutenant as chairmen. Parliament, through the Army Council, will hand over to each association a sum of money annually to be used for the organisation, administration, and maintenance of the county forces. The associations will have nothing to do with the command and training of the local forces. These duties will remain with the general officers commanding. Apart from financial control, the duties of the county associations are: To assist in furnishing facilities for training; to promote rifle clubs, cadet corps, and other semi-military bodies that may be affiliated to the local forces; to assist recruiting for the regular Army; to help those who have served their country abroad to obtain employment when they have left the colours; generally, to look after the Army interests in their districts, develop local interest in the military forces, and create machinery for dealing systematically with the patriotic efforts of the nation to help the Army in time of war.

In May 1906 a Committee was appointed, with Viscount Esher as chairman and Lord Lucas as secretary, to consider the question of how best to give effect to the principles governing the organisation of the Auxiliary Forces into a Territorial Army as described in Mr. Haldane's speech on March 8th, 1906.

District Commands.

Under the system introduced by Mr. Arnold-Forster, the British Army was organised in Commands, under a special Army Order of Jan. 6th, 1905, modified by Army Order 150, Aug. '05. The United Kingdom includes seven commands:—

- I. Aldershot Army Corps: Lieut.-Gen. Sir J. D. P. French, K.C.B.
- II. Southern Command: Lieut.-Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton.
- III. Eastern Command: Gen. Lord Methuen, G.C.B.
- IV. Irish Command: Gen. Lord Grenfell, G.C.B.
- V. Scottish: Lieut.-Gen. E. P. Leach.
- VI. Northern, Lieut.-Gen. Sir H. M. L. Rundle.
- VII. Western, Major-Gen. Sir F. Howard.

London forms an independent district apart from the commands (Major-Gen. Hon. Sir F. W. Stopford, K.C.M.G., C.B.).

In each command there is a General Officer commanding in chief responsible for training, efficiency, discipline, and administration, and he is assisted by officers of the general staff. An officer styled Major-General (or Brigadier) in charge of administration is entrusted with the administrative services, and exercises delegated authority in these matters, but is authorised, for certain purposes, to correspond with the War Office direct.

The training is arranged as follows: (a) Field troops (Regular Army) by divisional and brigade commanders; (b) Coast Defence troops by specially appointed officers known as commanders of coast defences; (c) grouped regimental districts by group commanders; (d) Auxiliary Forces, under special arrangements. Particular dispositions were made pending the completion of the reorganisation.

The duties of a General Officer commanding in chief have to do mainly with the work which is classified as preparation for war; and special instructions have been issued for officers commanding the London district, and commanding divisions, brigades, coast defences, grouped regimental districts, etc.

The major-general or brigadier in charge of administration does not correspond direct with the War Office on questions of policy or principle, but is responsible to the Army Council that money voted is properly expended.

The chief accountant, who is an official of the department of the Financial Member of the Army Council, is responsible for general supervision, examination and audit, upon which he reports to the War Office monthly. He exercises a financial review, and is directly responsible in all matters of account, payment and receipt to the Director of Finance. If the brigadier should require him to make a payment, pass a charge, or accept a credit which he thinks not authorised, he can compel reference to the Army Council.

An important feature of the new arrangement of local commands is the grouping of regimental districts as recommended by the Esher Committee, each group being under a colonel. The new organisation does not supersede that of the regimental districts, of which there are 69, but groups them for recruiting and command purposes. The regimental district is theoretically the recruiting-ground of a territorial regiment, with which are linked, as junior battalions, the militia and volunteer corps within the area; and the reserve men are pensioners of their respective territorial regiments. The Royal Artillery, through 9 recruiting areas, and the Royal Engineers, through the Commanding Royal Engineer in each district, have a territorial organisation; but this is not the case with the Cavalry, which has special recruiters or staff officers located in various districts.

Regular Army.

The following is the organisation of the Regular Army according to the units of each arm of the Service upon the estimates of 1906-7, deducting the 2 battalions of Foot Guards and the 8 battalions of Line Infantry now being or to be disbanded. It should be remembered that of the 99 Field Batteries to be maintained at home, 18 will be upon a 4-gun establishment and 18 others on a 2-gun establishment. The companies of Garrison Artillery and Army Service Corps are to be greatly reduced in number, but the precise facts are not known. The strength is given below. (III.)

Household Cavalry . . .	Regiments	3
Cavalry of the Line . . .	do.	28
Horse Artillery . . .	Batteries	30
Field Artillery . . .	do.	157
Mountain Artillery . . .	do.	8
Garrison Artillery . . .	Companies	109
Royal Engineers . . .	do.	80
Foot Guards . . .	Battalions	8
Infantry of the Line . . .	do.	144
Army Service Corps . . .	Companies	86
R.A. Medical Corps . . .	do.	22
Army Ordnance Corps . . .	do.	20

In addition to these are Colonial Corps in Egypt, Jamaica, Bermuda, Malta, West Africa, Mauritius, Ceylon, Hong Kong, the Straits Settlements, etc.; being Artillery, 18 companies; Engineers, 2 companies; Infantry, 10 battalions.

Army Reserve.

The Army Reserve is a vital element in Army organisation, the Reserve men being liable by the terms of their agreement to general service with the arms in which they were enrolled with the colours. The war in South Africa, and the general mobilisation of the force, showed that it could be relied upon. Reservists, who have served their period with the colours, and who are of the best soldiering age, and available for service if required, are an excellent set of men. The Reserve men are pensioners of the respective territorial regiments, and look to the officer commanding the district as their commanding officer. The establishment on the estimates of 1906-7 is 122,000. The Reserve comprises Sections A, B, and D, the B or ordinary Reserve section being the most important, comprising all who have enlisted for short service and have discharged their active duties. Entrance to D section has been closed in 1906, and it is presumably intended to disappear.

A further Reserve force is the Reserve Division of Militia, to be embodied with the Militia upon mobilisation.

Militia.

The Militia is a force of very old standing, the purpose of which is to provide a body of trained men, available in case of need or of imminent national danger, to supplement, support, or relieve the regular army at home and on the Mediterranean stations. Under the new Army scheme the Militia is to be made a direct support for the Regular Army in any part of the world, and its garrison branch is to be converted and made available to man the ammunition columns of the Royal Field Artillery. There are in all 124 Infantry battalions attached to the Line regiments, 32 corps of Garrison Artillery, 3 Field Batteries (being the Lancashire Field Artillery Brigade), 2 fortress corps of Engineers, and 7 divisions of Submarine Miners. The Infantry battalions are to be reduced in number, the Garrison corps are to be converted, and the Submarine Miners are to disappear. The Malta regiment, some colonial corps, and 8 Channel Islands regiments are in addition. A very large number of Militia recruits are every year transferred to the line—12,103 in the year ending Sept. 30th, 1905—and the force is a channel through which many commissions are annually gained in the regular Army.

The Militia recruit is enlisted for six years, and may re-engage if under 45 years of age for a further period of four years. Recruits are liable, at any time after enlistment, to be assembled for preliminary drill for such period, not exceeding six months, as may be directed from time to time by the Secretary of State for War. Brigades and regiments are called out annually for 27 days' training, which may be extended to 56 days if deemed expedient.

The Auxiliary Forces Commission made recommendations for increasing the efficiency of the Militia by passing the recruit through six months' training in his first year, not less than six weeks in the three subsequent years, and a fortnight in each of the last four years, the total period being increased to eight years. It was also proposed to organise brigades and divisions, with permanent commander and a limited staff. The training of the Spectator "Experimental Company" at Hounslow under Col. Alsager Pollock has shown what can be accomplished in six months; and during the winter 1906-7 a trial is being made in the training for six months of the recruits of 20 selected Militia battalions.

The Militia Force is not at present in a satisfactory state. Recruiting has fallen off, owing to the raising of the standard, and uncertainty as to the future of the force. There is great variety in the numbers and qualities of the units, and the condition of some units of infantry is very grave.

The New Militia Reserve, formed as a "Reserve Division of the Militia," by Royal Warrant (Feb. 4th, 1903), under the Militia and Yeomanry Act, 1892, had attained an enrolled strength of 7657 on Oct. 1st, 1905, mainly owing to the enlistment of men of the disbanded Royal Garrison Regiment. The arrangements for musketry training are to be increased. Men of the Reserve Division are liable to serve with the Militia whenever that force is embodied by proclamation.

Imperial Yeomanry.

The old Yeomanry Cavalry was reorganised by Army Order of April 17th, 1901, which provided that it should, in future, be entitled the "Imperial Yeomanry," that the brigade organisation should be abolished, and that the force be organised in regiments of four squadrons, with a regimental staff and a machine-gun section. The Order included rules as to efficiency, drills, and pay. During the period of training, and under conditions laid down, the daily pay, including ration allowance, varies from 5s. 6d. in the case of a private to 9s. 6d. in the case of a regimental sergeant-major, with 1s. additional when a non-commissioned officer acts as quartermaster. The number of regiments so far constituted is 56. It was decided, under Mr. Brodrick's Army scheme, to provide the Yeomanry with rifles, to give them extra pay as indicated above, with horse allowance of £5, and to raise the force to 35,000 as Imperial Yeomanry, intended to furnish mounted troops for home defence, while Colonial Yeomanry were to be affiliated for Imperial services. There is a school for instruction for officers of Imperial Yeomanry. Under Mr. Haldane's Army scheme 6 Yeomanry Regiments, numbering 3240 of all ranks, are to act as divisional cavalry with the Expeditionary Force, and the employment of more Yeomanry in the same way is under consideration. There has been some falling off in enlistment, and the strength on Oct. 1st, 1905, was 23,537, as compared with 25,502 on the corresponding date in the previous year.

The Volunteers.

Volunteer corps are raised under the Volunteer Act 1863 (26 & 27 Vict., c. 65). They are subject to the provisions of that Act and any Acts amending it, and likewise to all regulations made with regard to volunteer corps. The Volunteer (Military Service) Act of '96 provides that whenever an order for the embodiment of the Militia is in force, any member of a Volunteer corps may offer himself for actual military service, and if the services of such numbers of any corps are sufficient to enable them to be separately organised are accepted, then those members may be called out either as a corps or as part of a corps. Under the Volunteer Act 1900 new regulations were made as follows:—I. A member of a Volunteer corps may contract to come out for actual military service in Great Britain whenever summoned, and to serve for a period not exceeding one month in the absence of a Royal Proclamation calling out the Volunteers generally. II. A member of a Volunteer corps may contract to proceed upon active service to any part of the world in a unit or company formed of Volunteers, on special conditions as defined by the terms of his contract.

The future of the Volunteers is uncertain. The Royal Commission on the Auxiliary Forces showed the measures necessary to secure the desired efficiency. The system to be adopted for the reorganisation of the Volunteer Forces under the new Army scheme, so far as it has been outlined, is given above (II); and in Mr. Haldane's Memorandum dated July 30th, 1906, he said that the Volunteer Forces should have for their definite function the support and expansion of the Regular Army. "Support should take the form of an organisation which will enable the expeditionary force to leave these shores, certain that the naval fortresses and the points on the coast-line which require garrisons would be adequately manned from Volunteer forces, and, further, that sufficient forces drawn from the Volunteers would be available to repel raids. But to enable them to fulfil such functions, the Volunteers must be more completely and more scientifically organised for war than they are at present, and the General Staff, keeping the objects of support and expansion in view, are now preparing a scheme for giving the Volunteer Force a real war organisation." The estimates for 1906-7 provide for the staff necessary for brigading the whole of the Volunteer Infantry under Brigadiers responsible for training and inspection.

III. Effectives and Distribution.

Establishment and Strength of the Army, Army Reserve, Militia, Imperial Yeomanry, and Volunteers, including Permanent Staff.

Regimental Strength of Regular Army by Arms.

Household Cavalry	1,360
Cavalry of the Line	19,149
Royal Horse Artillery and Royal Field Artillery	30,550
Royal Garrison Artillery	24,174
Royal Engineers	10,718
Foot Guards	8,053
Infantry of the Line	150,955
Colonial Corps and Indian Infantry borrowed for garrison and expeditionary purposes	11,753
Army Service Corps	6,944
Royal Army Medical Corps	5,049
Army Ordnance Corps	2,423
Army Pay Corps	856
Army Veterinary Corps	149

These figures, which are the latest available, are from the General Annual Report on the Army 1906, and refer to the strength on Oct. 1st in the previous year. In nearly every case they show a diminution, and the new scheme will reduce them very greatly.

Recruiting.

It appears from the Annual Report of Recruiting that in the year ending Sept. 30th, 1905, 35,963 recruits joined, of whom 20,316 entered for 9 years, and 10,240 for 3 years with the colours, the remainder of the period of 12 years being passed in the Reserve. In the previous year the number enlisted was 42,624, there being a reduction of 6661 in 1905. The enlistments included 2380 for the Line Cavalry, 22,243 for the Line Infantry, and 6243 for the Artillery, the remainder being for the Household troops and departmental corps.

Distribution of the Regular Army, all ranks.

Guernsey and Alderney	793

In the Colonies, Egypt, China, and Crete 64,142

(These figures have been reduced, and are further being modified by the bringing home of battalions ordered to be disbanded.)

In commands in the East Indies—

Northern	20,538
Western	21,146
Eastern	22,105
Secunderabad	8,737
Burma	4,436
Royal Artillery Staff unposted, etc.	1,099
Total	78,061

General Total at Home and Abroad 272,133

The Strength of the Army Reserve

from '98 to 1905 has been as follows:—'98, 82,063; '99, 78,839; 1900, 24,130; 1901, 5251; 1902, 2398; Jan. 1st, 1903, 32,865; Oct. 1st, 1903, 66,471; 1904, 74,940; 1905, 94,770. Of this number 79,390 belonged to Sects. A and B, and 15,380 to Sect. D. Owing to special causes, and chiefly the great influx of men enlisted on the 3 years' term of service, the Reserve has become inflated, and approaches the high establishment estimated for it (122,000), but the disbanding of battalions and reduction of special establishments under the new scheme will reduce the reserve-making power, and the Reserve will therefore rapidly shrink during the next few years.

Changes in Establishment and Effective of the Militia

during the last seven years, exclusive of officers and permanent staff:—

Date.	Strength.	Establishment.	Wanting to complete.
1st Jan., 1900	98,130	123,137	25,007
" 1901	92,741	124,252	31,511
" 1902	102,845	123,993	21,148
" 1903	102,220	133,351	30,931
1st Oct., 1903	89,743	126,942	37,181
" 1904	86,491	127,559	41,068
" 1905	85,814	123,086	37,272

The figures do not include Militia Reservists called out on permanent service with the Line during the South African war. The recruits enrolled in the first nine months of 1903 were 25,688, in the year up to Sept. 30th, 1904, 35,264, and in the year up to Sept. 30th, 1905, 35,030.

The Reserve Division of the Militia has an established strength of 10,000. Its formation began in 1903, and on Oct. 1st, 1905, the strength was 7,657.

Enrolled Strength of the Imperial Yeomanry in 1902, 21,840, and the number present at the inspection 19,570; 1903, enrolled 26,372, at inspection 23,779; 1904, enrolled 27,388, at inspection 24,632; 1905, enrolled 25,341, at inspection 23,036. The establishment being 27,638, the number wanting to complete was 2297. Exclusive of officers and permanent staff, the strength on Oct. 1st, 1905, was 23,587.

Strength of the Volunteers.

The conditions affecting unfavourably the strength of the Volunteers and the changes suggested or impending have been given above.

The enrolled strength has been as follows since the establishment of the force: '60, 119,146; '61, 161,239; '62, 157,818; '63, 162,935; '64, 170,544; '65, 178,484; '66, 181,565; '67, 187,864; '68, 199,194; '69, 195,287; '70, 193,893; '71, 169,608; '72, 178,279; '73, 171,937; '74, 175,387; '75, 181,080; '76, 185,501; '77, 193,026; '78, 203,213; '79, 206,265; '80, 206,537; '81, 208,308; '82, 207,336; '83, 209,365; '84, 215,015; '85, 224,012; '86, 226,752; '87, 228,038; '88, 226,469; '89, 224,021; '90, 221,048; '91, 222,046; '92, 225,423; '93, 227,741; '94, 231,328; '95, 231,704; '96, 236,059; '97, 231,796; '98, 230,678; '99, 229,854; 1900, 277,628; 1901, 288,476; 1902, 268,550; 1903, 253,281; 1904, 253,909; 1905, 249,611. In the Memorandum presented with the Army Estimates, 1906-7, the strength on Jan. 1st, 1906, was stated to be 241,708, as compared with 245,525 on Jan. 1st, 1905.

The table preceding shows the total net estimate of expenditure on the Home and Colonial establishments exclusive of India; and for the sake of comparison the net estimate of 1905-6 is given. The Estimates of 1905-6 were framed on a new plan approved by the Committee of Public Accounts, the main principle being to arrange the votes and their subheads to correspond with the provinces of the various Directors responsible as above for the administration of funds. Hence the net expenditure in 1904-5 was not shown for purposes of comparison in the estimates of 1905-6. The principal increases are £119,000 for pay, £24,000 for volunteer corps, £80,000 for armaments, and £23,000 for works; the principal decreases £79,000 for quarterings, transport, etc., £138,000 for supplies and clothing, and £63,000 for Ordnance Department establishments. The net increase on ordinary services is £90,000, and the net decrease on ordinary and extraordinary services £17,000.

Further Particulars of Expenditure.

The following are details of the total normal military expenditure of this country in each of the undermentioned financial years '95-96 to 1905-6, including supplementary votes and expenditure under Military Works Acts:—

Year.	Estimates apart from War.	Under Military Loans.	Total (apart from War), including Loans.

1905-6	28,600,000	2,915,000	31,515,000

V. Terms of Service.

In view of the great demand for men, very important inducements for enlistment have been made. The requirements as to age and height are varied from time to time, and may be obtained at any recruiting station. The standards have been improved, and the particulars are given in the Annual Report on Recruiting. In practice, for "growing youths," they are slightly modified. Under a special Army Order (Aug. 3rd, 1906) the following are the terms of service:—

1. Royal Horse and Royal Field Artillery: All enlistments (except of boys), including artificers, for 6 years with the colours and 6 years in the reserve, or, if the soldier completes his 6 years' service with the colours while abroad, then for a further period, not exceeding 1 year, with the colours, and the remainder of the 12 years in the reserve.

2. Royal Garrison Artillery: All enlistments (except of boys), including artificers, for a period of 8 years with the colours and 4 years in the reserve, or, if the soldier completes his 8 years' service with the colours while abroad, then for a further period, not exceeding 1 year, with the colours, and the remainder of the 12 years in the reserve.

3. Infantry of the Line: All enlistments (except of boys) for a period of 7 years with the colours and 5 years in the reserve, or, if the soldier completes his 7 years' service with the colours while abroad, then for a further period, not exceeding 1 year, with the colours, and the remainder of the 12 years in the reserve.

Service in Army Reserve.

The Army Reserve is that force to which men are transferred on expiration of their period of service with the colours, as indicated above. They may be called up annually for training for a period not exceeding 12 days or 20 drills. While in the Reserve they are liable to be recalled to the colours in case of national danger or great emergency, and if so recalled are treated in every respect as soldiers, and are allowed to regain the rank they held on transfer to the Reserve. Prior to the war the men in Section D, entrance to which has now been closed, could not be called up for service until the whole of the First-class Reserve had been embodied. The rate of pay is from 4d. to 6d. a day.

VI. The Indian Army.

A very important change was brought about during 1905 in the system of administering the Indian Army, owing to the strong representations of Lord Kitchener. The arrangements now are as follows:

Army Department.—The Commander-in-Chief is directly responsible to the Governor-General in Council for command, staff, and regimental appointments, promotion, discipline, training, organisation, distribution of the Army, intelligence, mobilisation, schemes of offence and defence, peace manoeuvres, war preparations (excluding supply of matériel), and the conduct of war. As regards the Supply and Transport Department, the arrangement which has recently been made will be adhered to. Such matériel, ammunition, and stores as are required for mobilisation will be entrusted to a personnel directly responsible to the Commander-in-Chief.

Department of Military Supply.—The functions of the Military Department, in charge of another member of Council, are limited to responsibility for the control of Army contracts, the purchase of stores, ordnance, and remounts, the management of Military Works, the Clothing and Manufacturing Departments, Indian Medical Service, and Indian Marine. The Military Supply Member's duties are more of a civil than of a military nature, and his business is to assist the Commander-in-Chief in his endeavours to render the Army in all respects fit for war, within the limits of financial considerations.

The Viceroy and Governor-General in Council is responsible for the superintendence, direction, and control of the whole Military Government of India.

Under the Commander-in-Chief are three Lieutenant-Generals commanding the Northern, Western and Eastern Army Corps, in addition to which are the troops of the late Madras command and those of the Burma command. The Commander-in-Chief's executive officers are the Military Secretary, the Adjutant-General, the Quartermaster-General, and the Principal Medical Officer. The departments of the Military Member of Council deal with supply, transport, etc.

The Army in India consists of British Regular Forces, Indian Regular Forces, the various local corps, British volunteers, Indian Army Reserves, Imperial Service Troops, and Military Police. The establishment of the British regiments serving in India in 1906-7 is 75,031, including the following units and branches: 9 regiments of cavalry, 11 horse artillery batteries, 42 field batteries, 3 howitzer batteries, 8 mountain batteries, 22 garrison artillery companies, 6 heavy batteries, 52 battalions of infantry, details of Royal Engineers, R.A. Medical Corps, etc.

The three great commands are—

Northern Army Corps (Lieut.-Gen. Sir Bindon Blood), with divisions at Peshawur, Rawal Pindi and Lahore, and independent brigades at Kohat, Derajat, and Bannu.

Western Army Corps (Lieut.-Gen. Sir A. Hunter, D.S.O.), with divisions at Quetta, Mhow and Poona, and a brigade at Aden.

Eastern Army Corps (Gen. Sir A. Gaslee), with divisions at Meerut and Lucknow. These three important commands retain the staffs of the late Punjab, Bombay and Bengal armies which they replace, with some modification of boundaries; but ultimately, when proper barracks have been provided, the arrangement will permit the distribution of troops upon the frontier and upon the lines of approach. Increased powers are given to officers of divisions, giving the lieutenant-generals more leisure for the training of their commands for war. The great commands are divided into districts under major-generals or brigadiers. There are divisions not included in the commands in Secunderabad (Lieut.-Gen. Sir C. Egerton) and Burma (Major-Gen. Sir G. T. Pretyman). The great departments of the Army are upon an extensive scale.

Recruiting is for both long and short service, and the whole country is divided into recruiting districts.

India has also as a second line the Volunteers, about 32,000 strong; the Imperial Service Troops, maintained by the Native States; the Frontier Militia on the north-west frontier; and the Military Police on that frontier and in Assam and Burma. The Militia and Police are under the civil power.

The units of the Native Army are as follows: 3 regiments of Body-guards, 39 regiments of Cavalry and the Aden troop, 10 Mountain Batteries, 1 Frontier Garrison company, 78 guns, 28 companies of Sappers and Miners, 139 Infantry battalions, and some others. The Auxiliary Forces, which have been alluded to, consist of 66 Volunteer corps, 33 Imperial Service corps, 6 Militia corps, and 21 Militia Police corps.

The Imperial Service Troops, under the superintendence of British officers, are trained for service by certain feudatory princes. The plan of embodying "Imperial Service troops," under agreement with the feudatory states, was adopted during Lord Dufferin's viceroyalty. The result has been admirable, and the native Princes have been enthusiastic in their prosecution of the plan. A splendid reserve has been created, numbering at least 19,000 well-trained men, located thus: Kashmir, 4350; Punjab, 4950; Rajputana, 4000; other states of Central and Western India, 4500; Southern India, 1400. Some of these troops have displayed the utmost hardihood and courage in the Frontier operations. Outside these are the large armies of the Native States, which may be described as irregulars, and are of uncertain value. The local corps of Central India and Rajputana are really police under military supervision, while the Military Police are under civil control.

In the following table of the aggregate strength of military forces available in India, the figures must be considered as approximate to some extent, because there may have been some alteration in authorised establishments since the figures were made up:—

British Regular Forces . . .	75,031
Indian Regular Forces . . .	154,111
British Volunteers . . .	31,500
Indian Army Reserves . . .	22,000
Imperial Service Troops . . .	19,000
Local Corps . . .	5,250
Military Police . . .	28,340
Total . . .	325,231

Lord Kitchener established a Staff College for India in 1905, located at Quetta. Commandant, Brigadier-General A. W. L. Bayly, C.B., D.S.O.

VII. Special Army Matters.

The General Staff.

The Army Council decided on Aug. 9th, 1905, to constitute a General Staff of the Army, and the purpose was made known in November of the same year by Mr. Arnold Forster. On Sept. 12th, 1906, by Special Army Order, instructions for the organisation of the General Staff were promulgated to the Army, the Order being accompanied by an explanatory Memorandum from Mr. Haldane. Under these rules the General Staff will be organised in two principal divisions—that at Army headquarters and the divisions of the staff in different districts. The Staff at Headquarters is to advise on the strategic distribution of the Army, to supervise the education of officers and the training and preparation of the forces, to study schemes of operations, collect and collate military intelligence, direct the general policy in Army matters, and secure continuity of action. The General Staff in commands and districts is to assist officers commanding in promoting efficiency, especially in regard to the education of officers and the training of the troops, and in carrying out the policy prescribed by Army headquarters.

An appendix to the Order showed that there were to be 67 staff-officers at headquarters, and 114 in the commands. Appointments to the staff are to be made from a special list drawn up and periodically revised by the Army Council, in consultation with the Selection Board and with the Commander-in-Chief in India. This list will not be published. Generally a certificate of the Staff College will be necessary, and 8 years' service in the Army; but exceptions may be made in special circumstances. At home and in the colonies appointments to the General Staff are to be made from the General Staff list upon the advice of the Chief of the General Staff, while in India the Commander-in-Chief will make the appointments. All appointments to the staff will be for 4 years, after which an officer, if below the rank of substantive lieutenant-colonel, will return to regimental duty for a period of not less than one year. All appointments on the staff to be probationary for the first year. Approved service on the General Staff is to be recognised by accelerated promotion in the form of brevet up to the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and above that rank by selection for the rank of substantive colonel. It was stated in Mr. Haldane's Memorandum that the General Staff will be judged by the men it produces, and, from expressions that followed, the scheme is seen to be experimental and under trial. The object is to bring together officers likely to prove capable of forming a school of progressive military thought. The present staff-officers of the Army will not be appointed to the staff in virtue of the positions they now hold.

The War Stores Commission.

The Report of the Royal Commission on War Stores in South Africa was a very remarkable document, being based upon an inquiry into the allegations contained in the report of Sir William Butler's committee. The Commissioners made what was practically an attack upon our military administrative system, but failed to find any evidence of the existence of those "cleverly-arranged contrivances," or of the "substantial financiers moving in the background," whose influence was alleged in the previous report. No evidence was discovered of corruption on the part of military officers, though certain transactions were described as "quite inexcusable." The real gravamen of the report affected the control of the business by the financial authorities at the War Office, which seemed to have been characterised by singular slackness, while the business of the office of the Director of Supplies in South Africa was conducted "with inexcusable carelessness and extraordinary ineptitude." The Pay Department worked "with a want of intelligence that is deplorable." Though there was no peculation, responsible officers showed great laxity in their relations with contractors, in one case contrary to the "spirit and letter of the King's regulations." It was undeniable, too, that there was much corruption amongst the non-commissioned officers attached to the Supply Department. As to the actual loss to the nation during the 22 months from June 1902 to March 1904, that of a "preventable" character amounted to somewhere between £750,000 and £1,250,000. There was great confusion, due partly to the character of the organisation at the War Office. Lord Kitchener, for example, had selected, as his financial adviser, Major Armstrong, but that officer's position was never made regular—a failure directly attributed to the inaction of a War Office official. The gentlemen from the Financial Department who went out to South Africa to investigate the situation failed to report upon the dual system; but high praise was given to Mr. D. C. Richmond, C.B., late Controller and Auditor-General, for his vigilance and pertinacity, without which most of the transactions the Commission has investigated would never have seen the light. At the same time, the system adopted in South Africa had been somewhat misunderstood. The idea was that the vast accumulation of stores at the close of the war made it advisable that the military authorities should dispose of them, there being then a great demand for the civil population, and that subsequently, when prices fell, stores should be purchased as they were required; but, unfortunately, prices remained high, and the same stores were bought back again. Sir Neville Lyttelton was deprived of his expert adviser by the recall of Colonel Morgan, chief of the Supply Department. Colonel Morgan's successor was inexperienced, and had to deal with a vast and complicated system which had been approved both by Lord Kitchener and General Lyttelton. As to the responsibility of the latter, the Commissioners declined to enter into it from the theoretical standpoint, and clearly the officer commanding-in-chief had a right to depend upon those under him. Severe censures were passed upon some officers for incompetence and ineptitude, and on the whole the report left a very unpleasant impression. The War Office failed in its administration and control, and officers were expected to undertake duties for which they had never been trained. The Commissioners said that the country was entitled to expect sufficient intelligence from its officers to conduct ordinary business transactions.

The decision of the War Office as to the disciplinary measures to be taken was announced on Oct. 15th, 1906. Mr. Haldane advised the Government that General Lyttelton could be held only technically responsible, and no action was taken. Four officers and two civilian officials, who had been removed under suspicion, resumed their places; in the case of one officer and many warrant and non-commissioned officers no action was taken, several officers were censured, four others lost steps of seniority, seven officers were retired, and several warrant and non-commissioned officers were dismissed the Army.

The Colonies and Imperial Defence.

The subject of the military defence of the Colonies was much discussed during 1906, and the following facts are, therefore, of interest:—

Colonial Military Systems are all framed primarily for home defence, no man being liable for service outside his country.

Canadian Militia System.—General principle of the recent reorganisation: to ensure a strength of 100,000 men being available as a "first line of defence." The desired peace and war establishment to be such that addition of one-third to the former will complete the latter. Present proportion, 60,000 to 100,000. The Permanent Force to be the means of instruction. Establishment: permanent force, 5000 men. Active militia: mounted troops—peace, 3106 all ranks; war, 7928 all ranks. Artillery (field): peace, 2013 all ranks; war, 3470 all ranks. Infantry: peace, 34,257; war, 86,401. Total strength of active militia: officers, 3000; rank and file, 41,000; horses, 7600, when at peace. War: officers, 5000; rank and file, 100,000; horses, 17,500. Rifle clubs: active members, 14,000. The cadet organisation is very comprehensive.

Australian Commonwealth System.—Based on two principles: (a) The defence of Australian soil; (b) The defence of Australian interests wherever threatened. The system consists of an elastic framework capable of expansion to receive additional fighting material. Administration—Force provided: (a) Permanent cadre force; (b) Field force, 6 battalions light horse, 3 battalions infantry; (c) Garrison force for local defence. Percentage of non-efficients, 20 per cent.; rifle clubs as a reserve to militia. Establishment: Garrison force, 11,752 for peace and war. Field force: peace strength, half war strength. Peace establishment: light horse, 6415, with 24 guns; infantry, 7377, with 36 guns. War establishment: light horse, 12,996, with 36 guns; infantry, 14,733, with 40 guns. Total: war, 27,753 all ranks, with 84 guns; peace, 13,831, with 60 guns. Including garrison troops, gross strength: peace, 25,700; war, 39,600. Partially trained: light horse (approximately), 7000; cadets, 9103. Rifle club members, 28,721. Grand total of all forces: officers, 2371; other ranks, 59,147.

New Zealand Forces.—The establishments are the same for peace and war. Strength: officers, 750; other ranks, 15,202. Proportion of trained men to total capable of bearing arms, 10.2 per cent., being the largest in the empire. The rifle club movement is very progressive, and the cadet movement very extensive. Total cadets, 14,600.

ART, 1906.

A proposal to include works by living artists in the winter exhibition at the Royal Academy in 1906 was accepted by the Council, but rejected by the Academicians in General Assembly, and the exhibition, which opened at Burlington House on Jan. 1st, was therefore composed once more wholly of pictures and drawings by deceased painters. One of the features of the exhibition was the collection of about eighty drawings by the late George Frederick Watts, bequeathed by him to the Royal Academy. The oil paintings in the exhibition were, with few exceptions, painted by British artists, and were supplemented by an excellent collection of water-colours by Turner and other artists.

The summer exhibition of the Royal Academy was opened on Monday, May 7th. The committee of arrangement was composed of Sir W. B. Richmond, Mr. Frank Dicksee, Mr. David Murray, Mr. J. S. Sargent, Mr. J. M. Swan, Mr. W. W. Ouless, Mr. Hamo Thornycroft and Mr. T. G. Jackson. The number of works sent in by non-members was 11,789 (636 more than in 1905), and the number exhibited, including 203 contributed by members, was 1799. The sales showed no signs of recovering from the recent general depression. Three pictures were bought by the Chantrey Trustees: the large landscape by Mr. David Farquharson, A.R.A., "Birnham Wood" (£1500); another landscape by Mr. G. D. Leslie, R.A., "The Deserted Mill" (price not stated); and "The Heretic" (£180), by Mr. Frank Craig. The Chantrey Trustees also bought from the gallery of the Royal Society of Painters in Water Colours a figure composition by Mr. Robert Anning Bell, "The Garden of Sweet Sound" (£105).

Other pictures sold at Burlington House included "A Medway Fleet" (£300), by Mr. W. L. Wyllie, A.R.A.; "Les Braves Gens" (£315), by Mr. J. P. Beadle; "Joseph Addison reciting his poem 'The Campaign'" (£210), by Mr. G. O. Reid; "Evening in the Village" (£250), by Mr. Stanhope Forbes, A.R.A.; "The Hamlet" (£200), by Mr. J. Buxton Knight; "A Sylvan God" (£315), by Mr. Arthur Wardle; "Farewell to the Forest" (£630), by Mr. David Murray, R.A.; "Washing Day" (£472 10s.), by Mr. Edward Stott, A.R.A.; "Knoxbrex Moor" (£250), by Mr. John C. Mitchell; "Islands of the Adriatic" (£250), by Mr. Adrian Stokes; "The Barn Door" (£200), by Mr. Geo. Clausen, A.R.A.; "A Highland River, Glen Affric" (£200), and "May" (£250), by Mr. J. MacWhirter, R.A.; "Evening's Last and Sweetest Hour" (£500) and "Fast Fades the Lingerings Light" (£500), by Mr. Joseph Farquharson, A.R.A.; "The Evening Meal" (£250), by Mr. Terrick Williams; "The Maid was in the Garden" (£262 10s.), by Mr. Yeend King; "Vows" (£350), by Mr. E. Blair Leighton; "The Suppliants" (£262 10s.), by Mr. Arthur A. Dixon; "The Ever Open Door" (£1050), by Mr. Sigismund Goetze; "Hush!" (£300), by Mr. J. H. Lorimer; "Reading the Letter" (£200), by Mr. Harold Knight; "La Via Vecchia" (£157 10s.), by Mr. Horace Fisher; "Seven Summers" (£210), by Mr. A. Chevallier Taylor; "Winter in Liguria" (£500), by Mr. H. H. La Thangue, A.R.A.; "Viola" (£400), by Mr. C. E. Perugini; and the small water-colour by Sir Edward Poynter, P.R.A., "Belinda" (£210).

At the New Gallery the International Society held two exhibitions, the first in January and February, composed of oil paintings (including examples by American artists), and the second in February and March of water-colours, engravings, pen drawings and pastels. At the New Gallery summer exhibition the general level was rather above the general average of the last two or three years; and the New English Art Club showed some attractive pictures at its new headquarters in Dering Yard, New Bond Street. The Arts and Crafts Society showed at the Grafton Galleries. In the City an excellent exhibition of Flemish art was held at the Guildhall, and in the autumn a curiously interesting collection of pictures and drawings by Mr. Holman Hunt was shown at the Leicester Galleries. A new departure was made by Messrs. Agnew in the exhibition of "Independent Art," composed chiefly of pictures by Scottish painters and members of the New English Art Club.

The artistic honours of the year included the bestowal of knighthoods upon Mr. Luke Fildes, R.A., the painter of the State portraits of the King and Queen, and upon Mr. F. Carruthers Gould, the political cartoonist; Mr. S. J. Solomon, A.R.A., was promoted to membership of the Royal Academy, and Mr. Edward Stott and Mr. F. W. Pomeroy were elected Associates. The Royal Academy revived the class of Associate-Engraver, to which Mr. William Strang and Mr. Frank Short were elected. Mr. Josef Israels, the Dutch painter, and Mr. Augustus St. Gaudens, the American sculptor, were elected Honorary Foreign Academicians. Mr. Holman Hunt, Mr. J. S. Sargent and Mr. P. W. Steer were invited to contribute portraits of themselves to the famous Uffizi Gallery at Florence; and a severe struggle for the presidency of the Royal Society of British Artists resulted in the election of Mr. Alfred East, A.R.A., as successor to the late Sir Wyke Bayliss.

At the National Gallery the Directorship, made vacant by the resignation of Sir Edward Poynter, was conferred upon Sir Charles Holroyd, who was succeeded as Director of the National Gallery of British Art by Mr. D. S. MacColl. At the Victoria and Albert Museum, where considerable progress was made during the year with the new building, a new Director was appointed in the person of Mr. A. B. Skinner, in succession to Sir Caspar Purdon Clarke, resigned. The most important picture acquired by the National Gallery was the famous Velasquez "Venus and Cupid," which, owing to the indefatigable exertions of the National Art Collections Fund, was purchased from the Morritt family for £45,000. Other pictures acquired by the National Gallery included a small Madonna and Child ascribed to Raphael and once the property of Rogers the poet, a landscape by Diaz, notable as being the first picture by a Barbizon artist that has found a place in Trafalgar Square, and a coast piece with many small figures by Hermann Sattleven, a Dutch painter whose work was not previously represented in our national collection. The National Gallery of British Art received during the year Whistler's nocturne, "Old Battersea Bridge," removed thither from the National Gallery, and Mr. Sargent's well-known portrait of Miss Ellen Terry as Lady Macbeth, which was sold at the Irving sale for 1200 guineas. It was presented to the National Gallery of British Art by Mr. Duveen. But the most important additions to this gallery were the group of Turners chosen from among the vast number of unexhibited works by that great master that are stored away in the cellars of the National Gallery. The exhibition of these Turners was in some respects the most interesting event of the year in the art world.

A great studio was erected by the Government on the summit of Primrose Hill for the convenience of Mr. Brock, R.A., who was engaged throughout the year on the statuary work that he designed for the national memorial to Queen Victoria, with which much progress was made. It was announced by Lord Liverpool that the Government proposed to erect in bronze, on a site near the Serpentine, the equestrian statue by Watts, "Physical Energy," the model of which was bequeathed to the nation by the artist.

No great collections were dispersed in the auction-rooms, but some of the sales were nevertheless marked by features of great interest. The Irving sale (Dec. 1905) was remarkable for the sale of the Sargent referred to above, and Whistler's portrait of Irving as Philip of Spain, for which an American collector gave 4800 guineas. According to Mr. Bram Stoker, Irving gave Whistler either £200 or £400 for this portrait. Even more striking was the advance in price of one of the lots in the sale of the collection of the late Mr. T. H. Woods, one of the partners in the firm of Christie, Manson & Woods. In 1881 at Christie's Mr. Woods bought a portrait of Lady Waldegrave by Hoppner for 23 guineas. At his sale it fetched 6000 guineas. Another picture, "The Stanhope Children," by Romney, sold for 4600 guineas, was bought by Mr. Woods about thirty-five years ago for 28 guineas. The sum total realised for the Woods pictures was £19,942, and the collection of objets d'art formed by the same gentleman was sold for £7181. The pictures that belonged to the late Mr. T. Agnew, a partner in the great firm of picture dealers, realised £10,727; and those of Mr. Harry Quilter, who was at one time the art critic of the Times, £8132. The largest collection sold during the year at Christie's was that of the late Mr. E. M. Denny, and this realised £28,906, a small sum in comparison with the totals of some of the great sales of recent years. The highest price realised at Christie's for a single canvas was 6400 guineas, paid for Turner's "Rape of Europa." Other pictures sold for large sums were Romney's "Mrs. Mingay" (6200 guineas) and "Mrs. Siddons" (2500 guineas); Gainsborough's "Viscountess Tracy" (6000 guineas); Botticelli's "Virgin, Christ and St. John" (5000 guineas); Raeburn's group of

Mr. Johnstone of Alva, with some of his family (5800 guineas), and "Colonel Harvey" (3000 guineas); Sir Joshua Reynolds's "Nelly O'Brien" (2500 guineas); and Lawrence's "Emily Ogilvie" (3000 guineas). The last-named price was a record for a Lawrence in the auction room. A sketch by Cosway of three members of the Loftus family, probably made by that facile painter in two or three hours, was sold for 1150 guineas; and a drawing by John Downman, A.R.A., an artist whose work has risen steadily in value during the past decade, for 820 guineas.

The sums bid for old silver, porcelain, tapestry and furniture were less sensational than in 1904 or 1905, but the price of £2900 was paid for two small tazze of the Elizabethan period—little vessels less than six inches in height, which at one time belonged to the town of Boston, in Lincolnshire, and formed part of the Corporation plate. High prices were paid for panels of old Beauvais tapestry, and £1323 was given for eight Chippendale mahogany chairs. The highest price paid for a mezzotint was £700 for an engraving of Sir Joshua's portrait of Lady Caroline Montagu Scott, by J. R. Smith.

ARTILLERY.

Military.—All the Powers have now adopted quick-firing field guns, and in many armies they have already been issued to the troops. In the British Army the Aldershot Army Corps is supplied with the new gun approved for the Horse and Field Artillery, that of the former being a 12½-pounder and that of the latter an 18½-pounder. The field gun has a muzzle velocity of 1160 foot-seconds, and its weight is 9 cwt. The weight of gun, carriage and limber, behind traces, is 38½ cwt, and of the waggon and waggon limber, filled, 37½ cwt. The total number of rounds carried is 100. The weights for the horse guns are somewhat less, but the ammunition supply is the same. The carriage is fixed to the ground by a simple spade at the end of the trail, similar to the Krupp design, which is more efficient than the wheel brake and spade of the Japanese. The recoil of the gun is absorbed in the carriage, and the gun returned to the firing position rapidly and automatically. This is done by means of a buffer operated by powerful springs, and not, as in the French system, by compressed air. This buffer is above the gun, which is fastened to it, and recoils or slides a distance of about 4 ft. The sights are independent of the gun, and the layer does not have to move away from them when the gun recoils. The gun is protected by a shield, and the waggons have some armour. The weight is heavier than the present 15 pounder, but the shell is much more powerful, while the total weight of the equipment is within ½ cwt. of that of the lighter Continental equipments. The Germans have adopted a Krupp quick-firing field gun ("C. 96") which is said to answer all expectations. The French led the way with a very remarkable gun, running back axially on its carriage, which is practically immovable in horizontal fire, and the gun will fire 20 rounds a minute. A hydro-pneumatic brake controls the gun and carriage, and there is a spade under each wheel and one at the trail. The breech action is a marvel of simplicity. The breech opens with a single action. The gun is provided with a light bullet-proof shield, so that when in action the four men working it are under cover. Norway has adopted the Erhardt system, and Sweden and Denmark the well-known Krupp pattern with sliding breech. Eight other Powers appear to have concluded their trials within the past twelve months. Switzerland and the Netherlands have given the preference, after comparative trials, to the Krupp gun, and Turkey and Roumania have followed suit. Portugal, after testing the Creusot and Krupp patterns, ordered from the former firm all the field guns she required. Mexico has ordered her guns partly at St. Chamond and partly at Le Creusot. The new American gun is to be provided mostly in the United States, but fifty guns were ordered from the Erhardt firm at Düsseldorf. Russia and Italy have partly renewed their field artillery armament, but seem to be still continuing trials before proceeding further with the work. It was assumed that the new Japanese Arisaka gun, which is of a very light character, was giving excellent results; but recent accounts seem to show that it is not equal to the new Russian gun, with which, however, it is believed, the whole of the Russian artillery are not yet armed. The Arisaka gun is an 11-pounder, the Russian (Engelhardt) gun a 13½-pounder, firing 16 rounds a minute. When limbered up the latter weighs 34 cwt. for the horse artillery, and 37½ cwt. for the field artillery. Heavy guns are being introduced in all the great armies, of which our own 60-pounder is an example. The French quick-firing field howitzer, invented by Major Rimailho, is a novelty, the gun and its mounting being separated on the march to gain mobility. It has been tried with success.

Naval.—The naval engagements in the Far East have thrown a flood of light upon the question of naval armament, and it is now universally recognised that the actions of the future will be fought at long range, and that the day of the medium armaments of quite recent periods, as found in ships now in existence, has probably passed away. The result is that in the Dreadnought and the new foreign battleships the medium armament disappears. Displacements are going up to 18,000 tons, and if the 12 in. gun retains its place for the main gun positions, the other guns in future battleships will not be of less than 10-in. calibre and of first-class quality. This is the tendency to be noticed wherever great ships are to be built; and, at the other end of the scale, we come to the smaller armaments intended mainly for repelling torpedo attack. Thus, below the 10-in. or even the 12-in. gun, it is probable that few guns will be found until we come down to the 3½-in. The main point is that the 6-in. guns of the Formidable class, increased to 9½-in. in the King Edward class, are now to be further increased in power until they approximate to the heaviest armament. There have been great improvements in the systems of mounting guns, combined with new arrangements for ammunition supply in any position of the gun. The hand elevating and training arrangements are admirable pieces of mechanism, giving surprising facility. The new breech mechanisms, as in the 12-in. Vickers guns in the service, have the advantage of presenting a larger locking area in the breech screw. All the new guns are vastly more powerful than their predecessors. They are being increased in length, and our latest (Vickers) 12-in. (Mark X) is of 45 calibre length, as compared with 40 calibres in its predecessor.

Austin, Alfred, appointed Poet Laureate (q.v.) on New Year's Day '96, was b. 1835 at Headingley, near Leeds. He was ed. at Stonyhurst College and St. Mary's College, Oscott, took his degree (Lond. Univ.) in '53, and was called to the bar of the Inner Temple, '57. His best-known works are "The Human Tragedy," "Savonarola," "The Tower of Babel," "Prince Lucifer," "Fortunatus the Pessimist" ('92), "The Garden that I Love," ('94), "In Veronica's Garden," and "Lamia's Winter Quarters" ('95), "Alfred the Great, England's Darling" ('96), "The Conversion of Wincklemann" ('97), "The Poet's Diary" (1904), and "The Door of Humility" (1906). For many years he was a writer in the Standard and the Quarterly Review. He was also one of the founders of the National Review. His plays include "Flodden Field" (His Majesty's, 1903), and "A Lesson in Harmony" (Garrick, 1904). Address: Swinford Old Manor, Ashford, Kent.

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY.

Ruler.

Francis Joseph I., b. Aug. 18th, 1830, was son of the late Archduke Francis Charles, and succeeded his uncle, Ferdinand I., as Emperor of Austria, Dec. 2nd, '48. Crowned King of Hungary June 8th, '67. The beginning of his reign was marked by important events. Hungary was in a state of rebellion, which was quelled by the help of Russia. His Italian dominions were saved by the genius of General Radetzky. The Emperor made strenuous efforts to prevent the Crimean war, and refused to join France and England. After the Austro-French war ('59), he was compelled to sign the treaty of peace of Villafranca, by which Lombardy was ceded to Italy. In '66 he lost the duchy of Holstein, obtained by the convention of Gastein, and in the same year, as the result of the war with Prussia, Venetia also. That year was fatal to the supremacy of Austria in Germany, the contest being decided in favour of Prussia by the treaties of Nikolsburg and Prague respectively. The Turkish provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina were, by decision of the Berlin Congress ('78), placed under the administration of Austria-Hungary. In '54 the Emperor Francis Joseph married the Princess Elizabeth Amalie Eugenie, (daughter of the Duke Maximilian Joseph of Bavaria), who was murdered by an Italian anarchist at Geneva in '98. The death of the Crown Prince Rudolph made the Archduke Francis Ferdinand (q.v.), a nephew of the Emperor's, the heir to the throne.

The Delegations and the Ausgleich.

Austria-Hungary is a monarchy composed of a Cisleithan portion, officially known as Austria, and a Transleithan portion known as Hungary. The reigning dynasty is the Hapsburg-Lorraine dynasty, and the law of succession is that the Crown passes by right of primogeniture and lineal succession to males, or, in default of males, to females. Each country has, according to the Ausgleich, or Compromise made in 1867, its own constitution, a limited monarchy, and each possesses a separate parliament, but they have united under a common sovereign in the establishment of a common army and navy, and in the conduct of foreign affairs. The control in regard to common affairs and the voting of money for common purposes are entrusted to a supreme body known as the Delegations. Of these there are two, each composed of 60 members, representing the legislative bodies of Austria and Hungary, the upper houses returning 20 and the lower houses 40 delegates. The members of the Delegations are appointed for one year, and are summoned annually by the Emperor alternately at Vienna and at Budapest. Subject to the Delegations are the three executive departments for Foreign Affairs, War, and Common Finance, and the Common Court of Public Accounts. The Ausgleich is expressly subject to periodical revision, only so far as it affects the regulation of the fiscal and commercial affairs of the two countries, the quota paid by them to the common expenses of the Empire, and the privileges of the Austro-Hungarian Bank. The customs and commercial treaty agreed to in 1867 is renewable every ten years, and was denounced in Dec. '96 by the Hungarian Government in order to secure, if possible, more favourable terms for the future. The treaty expired Dec. 31st, '97, but has since been prolonged provisionally. During '99 the contributions to the common expenditure were fixed thus: Austria, 65.6 per cent.; Hungary, 34.4 per cent.; they have since been continued at this figure. In 1902 the Szell and Körber Ministries arrived at an agreement, but this was never formally approved by the two Parliaments. Hungary now claims to be an independent Customs territory, whereas Austria claims that Austria-Hungary is the Customs unit.

Austria-Hungary is one of the three Powers which make up the Triple Alliance (q.v.).

The Army.

The Active Army of the Dual Monarchy is an organisation common to both kingdoms, and has its Ersatz, or supplementary, Reserve, with local forces for Bosnia and Herzegovina attached. There are fifteen army corps, and certain troops in the military districts of Zara in Dalmatia. In addition are the Austrian Landwehr and Landsturm and the Hungarian Landwehr and Landsturm, known as the Honved, by which the army is brought up to war strength.

The fifteen army corps comprise 5 cavalry divisions and 39 infantry divisions of the active army, and on mobilisation a Landwehr division would be attached to each. The active army comprises 466 battalions of Infantry (102 regiments of the line, 4 of Tyrolese Rifles and 4 Bosnian, and 26 battalions Regular Rifles). The Cavalry on a peace footing comprises 252 squadrons (15 regiments of Dragoons, 11 of Uhlans, and 16 of Hussars), and the Artillery 251 batteries, exclusive of 18 battalions of Fortress Artillery and 15 of Pioneers. The Field Artillery is formed in 14 brigades, and a group of 3 mountain batteries in the Tyrol. On a peace footing there are 224 field batteries, 16 horse batteries, 11 mountain batteries, 56 ammunition columns (in skeleton), and 56 depots. The war strength would give a total of 328 batteries (exclusive of fortress units), with a total of 2464 guns.

The following table shows the total strength of the forces; but it is believed that by embodying all classes of the Landsturm 3,000,000 men could be put in the field.

	Peace.	War.
Field Army . . . . .	266,000	687,000
Landwehr and Honved . . . . .	51,000	237,000
Reserve Troops . . . . .	6,000	192,000
Fortress Troops . . . . .	7,000	31,000
Transport Staff, etc. . . . .	16,000	—
Landsturm . . . . .	—	393,000
	346,000	1,540,000

Several new Landwehr battalions were created in 1906. The Honved (national Hungarian army) is subject in war time only to the Commander-in-Chief, and in peace time only to the Royal Hungarian jurisdiction. (See History, below).

The Navy.

The Estimates for 1906 show that the sum allotted to new construction was 30,897,410 kr., but there is in addition a sum of 1,950,000 kr. arising out of votes for previous years. The numbers of all ranks in the Austrian Navy, including reserves, total 11,000. The executive officers are distributed as follows: 1 admiral, 3 vice-admirals, 10 rear-admirals, 20 captains, 33 commanders, 38 lieutenant-commanders, 147 lieutenants, 80 sub-lieutenants, 300 midshipmen, and 87 cadets. The strength of the Austrian Navy on Oct. 31st in ships built was: battle ships, 11; armoured cruisers, 3; protected cruisers, 5; torpedo vessels, 7; torpedo-boat destroyers, 1; torpedo boats, 7. Building: battleships, 1; torpedo-boat destroyers, 11; torpedo boats, 22. The principal Government Dockyard of Austria-Hungary is situated at Pola. There are 3 small docks there.

Two battleships and 1 cruiser were completed for the Austrian Navy during 1906: these were the Erzherzog Karl, launched 1903, the Erzherzog Friedrich, launched 1904, and the Sankt Georg. The battleship Erzherzog Ferdinand Max is still completing. The following vessels have been struck off the effective list: the Kronprinz Erzherzog Rudolf, the Kronprinzessin Erzherzogin Stephanie, both launched in '87, the Tegelhoff, launched in '75, and the small cruiser Tiger. The Chief of the Navy, Count Montecuccoli, is in favour of battleships of at least 14,000 tons. Plans are ready for submarines, and some are to be put in hand. During 1906 manœuvres took place in the waters of Ancona.

Austria.

Austria has an area of 115,903 sq. m.; estimated population in 1902, 26,150,708. The variety of races and languages included in the empire is great. There are about 9,000,000 Germans, 6,000,000 Bohemians, Moravians, etc., 4,250,000 Poles, 3,380,000 Ruthenians, 1,200,000 Slovenes, besides smaller numbers of Servians, Croats, Italians, etc. The empire is governed by an Emperor and by the Reichsrath, or Council of the Empire, consisting of an Upper House and a Lower House. The Reichsrath has its own ministers and government, and exercises full parliamentary functions on all matters within its competence—from which, however, Foreign Affairs and War are excluded. The present Upper House contains 238 members. It is composed of the Princes of the Imperial family who are of age, of whom there are 16, of 65 hereditary nobles, of 11 archbishops and bishops, and of 140 (in 1905) life-members nominated by the Emperor for distinguished services in science or art, or to the Church or State. The Lower House contains 425 members, who are the popular representatives of the seventeen provinces which comprise the Austrian Empire: viz., Lower Austria, 46 members; Upper Austria, 20; Salzburg, 6; Styria, 27; Carinthia, 10; Carniola, 11; Trieste, 5; Görz and Gradiska, 5; Istria, 5; Tyrol, 21; Vorarlberg, 4; Bohemia, 110; Moravia, 43; Silesia, 12; Galicia, 78; Bukovina, 11; Dalmatia, 11. According to the present system they are elected for six years by five groups: the large landed proprietors, who choose 85 members; the Chambers of Commerce, who choose 21; the inhabitants of towns, 118; the inhabitants of country districts, 129; and the general body of electors, including roughly all male citizens over twenty-four with a residential qualification of six months, who choose 72. Members of the Lower House receive 16s. 8d. per day while in attendance, with travelling expenses.

Provincial matters, and matters not expressly reserved to the Reichsrath, are administered by the seventeen provincial diets, or Landtage, the members of which are elected for six years, and meet in session annually, while local matters are dealt with by communal councils, or by corporations in towns. The chief towns are Vienna, pop. 1,674,957; Prague, 201,589; Lemberg, 159,877; Gratz, 138,080; and Trieste, 178,600.

About a dozen dailies are published in Vienna, of which the principal are the following: The Neues Wiener Tagblatt, which has the largest circulation in Austria and Hungary. Editor,

Mr. Wilhelm Singer. London correspondent, Dr. Maurice Ernst. The Neue Freie Presse, which possesses a world-wide reputation, especially for its financial column. The Fremdenblatt is accredited as also being a Foreign Office organ; while the Zeit professes to be wholly independent. The best-known illustrated comic papers in Vienna are Der Floh and the Figaro.

Hungary.

Hungary has an area of 125,430 sq. m.; population, 1902, 19,254,559. The various races include about 7,500,000 Magyars, 2,130,000 Germans, 2,000,000 Slovaks, 2,800,000 Roumanians, 1,700,000 Croats, 1,052,000 Servians, and others. The kingdom includes Hungary, Croatia-Slavonia, and Transylvania, and is governed by a King (the Emperor of Austria), and a Reichstag, consisting of a House of Magnates and a House of Representatives. The former comprises 73 hereditary peers, paying land tax of at least 6000 crowns a year, some 55 high ecclesiastical dignitaries of the Roman Catholic, Greek, and Protestant Churches, 73 life-peers, all the archdukes who have attained their majority, 3 delegates from the Diet of Croatia-Slavonia, and 19 state dignitaries and judges. The House of Representatives contains 453 members, elected for five years by male citizens over 20, with a low property qualification. Of these 413 represent Hungary, and 40 Croatia and Slavonia. Members of the Lower House receive £200 a year, with £66 13s. for house rent. For local government there are municipalities and rural communes with representative bodies. Transylvania is in full legislative and administrative union with Hungary, but Croatia-Slavonia has its own Ban, or governor, and its own provincial diet, consisting of 90 members, for the transaction of provincial matters. The population of Transylvania is largely Roumanian, and much discontent exists amongst them on account of the persecution and injustice which they allege they suffer at the hands of the Magyar rulers of Hungary. The capital is Budapest (pop. 732,322). Budapest possesses more daily papers than Vienna. Amongst the best known in England is the Pester Lloyd (Editor, Dr. Max Falk; London representative, H. Osten, 8, Arundell Street, Piccadilly, W.) Amongst the Budapest dailies published in Hungarian should be mentioned the Budapesti Hirlap and the Pesti Hirlap.

Bosnia-Herzegovina, though in strictness still a province of the Porte, has since the Treaty of Berlin in '78 been occupied and administered by Austria-Hungary, and may fairly be considered as belonging to that empire. Its area is 19,702 sq. miles, and the population is about 1,737,000, most of whom are Croato-Servians. It is placed under the Austro-Hungarian Finance Minister, Baron Stephen Burian of Rajecz, and the Provincial Government is located at the capital, Sarajevo (pop. 38,000).

Liechtenstein is a principality under Prince John II. (b. Oct. 5th, 1840; succeeded '58), lying between Austrian Tyrol and the Rhine, which practically is included in the Empire. Area, 65 sq. miles; population, 9500; capital, Vaduz. The administration is directed from Vienna.

Industries and Statistics.

The chief religious bodies in Austria, where religious liberty is the ruling principle, are Roman Catholics, Greek Catholics, Lutheran and Reformed Evangelicals, Armenians and Jews. In Hungary much the same divisions exist, and full liberty and equality prevail. Roman Catholics form about 80 per cent. of the population in Austria, and about 50 per cent. in Hungary. Attendance in the elementary schools is compulsory in both countries, although the period of attendance varies in different districts, and the educational fabric includes also gymnasia and other preparatory schools, universities and colleges, and technical schools. The larger half of the population in both countries is engaged in and dependent upon agriculture, cereals, beet, wine and silk being produced. There are extensive and valuable forests, and mining for coal and iron is also carried on very largely. The chief exports are sugar, grain, cattle, horses, eggs, and other agricultural produce, timber, woollen and leather goods, glass and glassware, and fancy goods. There are 29,378 miles of railways.

The estimated revenue and expenditure for common affairs for 1905 amounted to £20,430,325. For Austria alone the estimated revenue in 1905 was £74,079,225, and the expenditure £74,013,610; for Hungary alone the estimated revenue in 1904 was £45,957,370, and the expenditure £44,743,922; for Bosnia-Herzegovina the revenue (1904) was £2,142,300, and the expenditure £2,140,115. The public debt of Austria was in 1904 £382,739,850; the public debt of Hungary in 1903 was £219,679,000.

Imports .	£78,213,000	£85,329,000	£89,912,000
Exports .	88,741,000	87,028,000	90,337,000

The United Kingdom sent £6,088,142 of the imports in 1903, £6,180,201 in 1904, and £6,101,328 in 1905; and took £9,212,224 of the exports in 1903, £6,981,878 in 1904, and £7,190,359 in 1905.

Political Parties.

Austria. The Lower House of the Reichsrath includes members of widely varying race and creed: for instance German Liberals, National Germans, Anti-Semites, Poles, Ruthenians, Young Czechs, Old Czechs, Independent Czechs, Left Centre, Clericals, Slavonians and Serbo-Croats, Bohemian Feudal Conservatives, Moravian Central Party, Italians, Roumanians, and German Conservatives. Count Taaffe, long the Prime Minister, in Oct. '93 lost the support of the German Liberals, the Poles, and the Conservatives, because of his Electoral Reform measure, which practically amounted to a measure of universal suffrage; and he finally had to resign. He was succeeded by Prince Windischgrätz, who, with the help of the Poles, the German Liberals, and the Conservatives, managed to form a Coalition Cabinet, which held office till June '95, when it was succeeded first by a provisional administration under Count Kielmansegg, and then by a non-party Cabinet under Count Badeni. The Poles, the Moderate German Liberals, and the Young Czechs formed the majority upon which Count Badeni relied during '97. His famous language ordinance, allowing the official use of the Czech language in Bohemia and Moravia, alienated the Germans, and provoked a racial conflict of a most bitter character between the Germans and the Czechs. The Czechs laid stress on the language question, because their aim is to obtain for Bohemia a semi-independent status such as Hungary enjoys; whereas the Germans desire to maintain the existing centralised form of government with their own supremacy under it. When Count Badeni fell, in Nov. '97, Baron Gautsch formed a stop-gap Ministry for three months, and was succeeded by Count Thun. Finally Count Thun resigned, the language ordinances were repealed, and a Ministry under Count Clary was formed, relying mainly upon the Germans for a majority in the Reichsrath. He had to resign (Dec. 21st, '99), and eventually Dr. von Körber formed a Ministry composed largely of permanent officials, and relying upon no party for support. At the elections in Dec. 1900 and Jan. 1901, the Clericals, both the Ultramontanians in the Alpine provinces and the Anti-Semites in the urban districts, lost heavily, the Social Democrats being responsible for their downfall in Vienna. The Poles more than held their own, but the young Czechs lost ground slightly. The German Nationalists, led by Herr Schönerer, returned 21 strong as against 5 in the last House, and the extreme Germans generally strengthened their position at the expense of the more moderate Germans. Dr. von Körber held office till Dec. 31st, 1904, when he was succeeded as Premier by Baron Gautsch. See History below.

Hungary. Parties here are distinguished as Liberals, Independents, the Croatian delegates (who usually vote with the Liberals), and the Nationalists. At the general election in Oct. '96 the Liberals gained a decisive victory. There were then returned 282 Liberals, 37 Nationalists, 48 Kossuthists, 7 Ugronists, 20 of the People's Party, and 10 owing allegiance to no party. The net Liberal gain was estimated to be 65 seats, while all the other parties except the Kossuthists, led by M. Franz Kossuth, lost ground. The Ugronists afterwards joined the Kossuthists, and passed under Clerical influence. At the end of '98, and early in '99, there was a serious split in the Liberal party, and the dissentients, with the aid of the Opposition, mainly controlled by the Clerical party, succeeded in driving Baron Banffy from office in Feb. '99. He was succeeded by M. Koloman Szell, but the Liberals remained in power. The National Party afterwards fell asunder, the members mostly joining the Liberals. In 1903 the insistent demand for the use of Hungarian as the language of command in the Army led to the resignation of M. Szell on June 16th, Count Hedervary formed a Cabinet, but was defeated and succeeded by Count Stephen Tisza with a Clerical Ministry, the Independents and Liberals forming a bitter and obstructive opposition. Count Apponyi seceded from the Liberal party in Nov. 1903, and led an independent group of National Liberals. In 1904, to meet Parliamentary obstruction, Count Tisza introduced new Standing Orders, and was met by violent opposition on the part of the Opposition and the National Liberals, led by Count Apponyi and M. Kossuth. At the general election in Jan. 1905 Count Tisza and the Liberals were severely defeated, and resigned office. Count Julius Andrássy and M. Kossuth were invited to form a Coalition Cabinet, but they could not agree with the King as to the concessions demanded by the Coalition majority, and Baron Fejervary formed a Ministry in June. M. Kristóffy, Minister of the Interior, then brought forward the proposal of universal manhood suffrage, which was adopted by his colleagues and eagerly supported by the Socialists and non-Magyar races of Hungary, to the considerable embarrassment of the Coalition. See History below.

History, 1906.

In Austria.

Baron Gautsch presented his measures for reforming the franchise to the Austrian Lower Chamber (Feb. 23rd). He proposed to abolish the system of grouping electors, and to place all elections on the same footing, except where racial considerations should require special provisions; to raise the number of seats from 425 to 455, the seats being redistributed according to popular taxation and educational acquirements. Under the proposed changes Lower Austria would have gained 9 seats, Bohemia

9, and Galicia 10. The Bill proposed that every male citizen over 24 and not under any legal disability should be registered as a voter after having resided for one year in an electoral district. The qualification of a Deputy was possession of Austrian citizenship for 3 years and completion of his 30th year. The Bill provided for direct voting. To permit of the representation of racial minorities in Galicia, each constituency there was given two Deputies, but no voter was to vote for more than one Deputy. In Moravia, and other provinces where there were divisions between Czechs and Germans, the electorate would be divided according to race. Bills for securing the freedom and secrecy of the ballot, and for preventing wanton obstruction in the Chamber, were also introduced.

Polish opposition to the Franchise Bill, however, led to the resignation of Baron Gautsch (May 2nd) and the appointment of Prince Hohenlohe Schillingfürst as his successor. He promptly announced his adhesion to the franchise reform proposals of his predecessors, and expressed his hope that it would put an end to racial strife. A difference arose, however, with Hungary as to the form in which the economic relations between the two countries should be settled, and Prince Hohenlohe and his colleagues resigned (28th). Hungary had stipulated, and the Crown agreed, that in voting the tariff on which the new Austro-Hungarian treaties with Germany, Italy, etc., were based, it should be voted as a Hungarian, and not as an Austro-Hungarian tariff, and that in place of the existing economic compact between the two countries a special commercial treaty should be concluded involving Hungary's total economic independence of Austria. The question was one purely of form, since the tariff voted by Hungary was absolutely identical with that voted by Austria, and it was agreed that no change should be made in the actual economic relations of the two countries before the end of 1917. All that Hungary obtained was the formal recognition of her economic independence of Austria. But the matter created very strong and bitter feeling against Hungary in Austria, and the Chamber passed the following resolution: "The Chamber of Deputies enters a most decided protest against the modification—without consent of the Reichsrath—by the one-sided action of Hungary of the prevailing juridical status created by the legal promulgation of the common Austro-Hungarian Customs tariff, a status purchased by Austria with heavy economic sacrifices. The House emphatically demands that no decree of prorogation shall make it impossible for the Reichsrath at this critical moment to defend the rights of Parliament and the interests of the kingdoms and lands represented in the Reichsrath."

A new administration under Baron von Beck was formed (June 1st), in which the German People's Party (Dr. von Derschatta), the German Progressives (Hofrath von Marchet), the Poles (Count Dzieduszycki and M. de Korytowski), and the Young Czechs (Dr. Pacak and Dr. Forscht) were all represented, the only official members of the Cabinet being the Ministers for Agriculture, Justice, and the Interior. Negotiations with Hungary as to the economic relations of the two countries were begun in September, and it was apparent that there was considerable divergence between their views. The two Premiers ultimately agreed to refer various points to special commissions of experts. Count Goluchowski, Austro-Hungarian Minister for Foreign Affairs, resigned (Oct. 21st), and was replaced by Baron von Aerenenthal.

In Hungary.

After passing a resolution of protest against another prorogation of Parliament before the estimates had been voted, the House adjourned until March 1st (Dec. 19th, 1905). The year 1905 was remarkable for the fact that not a single law was voted by Parliament, and the Statute Book, therefore, showed a blank for the first time since 1867. The Universal Suffrage Bill of the Fejervary Government was published the same day. It proposed to enfranchise all male citizens above 24 who could read and write Magyar, retaining the franchise for the next two elections to existing electors unable to read and write it. Baron Fejervary once more tendered his resignation (20th), but the King refused to accept it. Negotiations followed between the King and the Coalition leaders, and lasted through January and into February. Count Julius Andrássy was the medium in regard to the most promising of these overtures, which, however, failed at last (Feb. 4th). The Coalition made conditions as to the commercial treaty—viz., that they would accept it as an independent State, and conclude it on the basis of an independent tariff, making a free trade treaty with Austria. As to the military question, the Coalition adhered to their attitude, but proposed that matters should remain in statu quo till the nation had again been consulted, so that the King might know whether the military demands represented the nation's will. They also proposed a broad electoral reform before taking the nation's decision, and stipulated for the reinstatement in their offices of all officials who had been suspended during the crisis. On this reply being laid before the King, His Majesty intimated that its terms were unacceptable, and that Count Andrássy's mission was at an end. The publication of the details of the negotiations did not create a favourable impression, and some members of the Coalition, like Baron Banffy, declared that the reply of the Coalition to the King did not represent what had been agreed on by the Committee. It then appeared that there had been misunderstanding, but it was too late to rectify it, and Parliament was dissolved (19th by a rescript which charged the Coalition with having "refused persistently to take over the Government on an acceptable basis without violating our Royal rights as by law guaranteed." The new tariff and the commercial treaty with Germany had been promulgated in Austria with full Parliamentary sanction, but in Hungary without the ratification of Parliament. The treaty recognised Austria-Hungary as a single Customs territory until the end of 1917.

The withdrawal of Baron Banffy, the ex-Premier, from the Coalition was announced (March 5th). Baron Fejervary partially reconstructed his Cabinet (7th). An official ordinance was issued (16th) dissolving the Executive Committee of the Coalition, since it had arrogated to itself powers reserved to the State, and had incited the people against the Government. The Coalition had announced that treaties concluded by the Government without Parliamentary sanction were null and void, and that voluntary performance of military service and payment of taxes were contrary to law and unpatriotic. Then suddenly a change came over the scene. Negotiations were once more opened between the Crown and the Coalition, the latter having made fresh proposals which did not infringe the military prerogatives of the Crown. These proposals were accepted, and a new Ministry was formed, with Dr. Wekerle as Premier, Count Julius Andrássy, Count Apponyi, and M. Kossuth all taking office with him (April 8th). The Liberal party decided to dissolve itself (11th), and Count Stephen Tisza retired into private life. The elections resulted in an overwhelming majority for the new Government, at least 250 of the Deputies returned being Independents.

Parliament was opened by the King (May 22nd), and the King's Speech referred to the necessity of restoring "legal and juridical continuity" by the Parliamentary sanction of supply and the collecting of taxes. A Universal Suffrage Bill was announced, together with many internal reforms. The estimates were then sanctioned, the Recruits Bill was voted, and a great mass of legislative arrears was disposed of before Parliament adjourned (July 29th). The negotiations as to a new economic settlement with Austria are referred to above. In September a number of members of the English Eighty Club visited Buda-Pest, and were entertained by the Government.

BANKING.

THE BANK OF ENGLAND.
CLEARING HOUSE SYSTEM.
INSTITUTE OF BANKERS.
PEOPLE'S BANKS.

The Bank of England.

The Bank was established in 1694 with a capital of £1,200,000, which has been increased from time to time until it reached £14,553,000 in 1816, at which amount it now stands. It has also, a rest, or reserve, of about £3,000,000. Under the Bank Charter Act of '44, the Bank is divided into the Issue and Banking Departments. From the former the Bank is permitted to issue £14,000,000 of notes of its own upon certain securities, of which the debt owing to it by the Government, amounting to £11,015,100, formed part. Every note issued in excess of £14,000,000 must be represented by gold coin or bullion. It is also provided that, if any of the note-issuing banks discontinue issuing their own notes, His Majesty in Council may authorise the Bank of England to increase its securities in the Issue Department by an amount not exceeding two-thirds of these lapsed issues. The fiduciary issue of the Bank has so risen at different periods from '44 that it now stands at £18,450,000. The annual sum payable by the Bank for its exclusive privileges has been increased from £120,000, as settled in '33, to £180,000, and all profit from the increase of the issue of their notes beyond £14,000,000 is directed to go to the public. As regards what are called dead bank notes it is enacted that, when Bank of England notes issued more than forty years have not been presented for payment, the Bank may write off the amount, or any portion of the amount, of these notes from the amount of such issued from the Issue Department, and the Bank Charter Act of '44 is to apply as if the amount of notes thus written off had not been issued. The Bank will, however, be liable to pay any note so written off if it is presented for payment. Another source of profit to the Department is the gain made in the purchase of foreign coin and bullion brought to it, for which under the Act of '44 the Bank pays at the rate of £3 17s. 9d. per oz., being 17d. per oz. under Mint price.

In the Banking Department the Bank of England, in addition to transacting business as other large English banks do, acts as the banker of the Government in the management and payment of dividends on the National Debt, the issue and withdrawal of Exchequer bills and bonds, the issue of Government loans, and the banking operations connected with the Government offices, the Indian Government, and much of the financial business of Colonial Governments. By the Bank Act of '92 the remuneration to be paid to the Bank of England for the management of the National Debt is to be a yearly sum at the rate of £325 per million pounds of such debt up to £500,000,000, and at the rate of £100 for every million above this amount up to and including the year ending March 31st, 1912, and thereafter from year to year until Parliament otherwise directs. During such period this annual sum is not to be less than £160,000. For the management of Exchequer bonds and Exchequer bills the Bank is to receive £100 per million, and for the management of Treasury bills £200 for every million pounds of the maximum amount of bills outstanding at any one time during the financial year. The Bank also takes charge of the reserves of other bankers in connection with clearing-house transfers, and in consequence of this the reserves of the Bank are generally the only unused money in the country that can be had on a sudden demand.

Besides the head office and two branch offices in London, the Bank of England has branches at Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, Leeds, Hull, Bristol, Newcastle, Plymouth, and Portsmouth.

The management of the Bank is in the hands of a governor, deputy-governor, and 24 directors, elected by stockholders who have held £500 worth of stock for at least six months previous to the election. A director is required to hold £2000, a deputy-governor £3000, and a governor £4000 of the stock. The Court, or Board of Directors, meet every Thursday, when the weekly account is presented. The two governors have the chief administration of the institution, and attend daily at the Bank.

Governor, Mr. A. F. Wallace, 1905-6.

Deputy-Governor, Mr. W. M. Campbell, 1905-6.

Chief Accountant, H. B. Orchard.

Chief Cashier, J. G. Nairne.

Secretary, K. Grahame.

The Clearing-house System.

A clearing house is an establishment in large cities in which the business of banks with other banks is adjusted. Each bank which deals with the London Clearing House sends clerks daily, who take with them the various bills and cheques in possession of their bank or drawn on other bankers. This adjustment establishment, and the bankers connected with it, have accounts at the Bank of England, and the balances, which were formerly settled by cash or notes of this Bank, are now settled by transfers from one account to another. The arrangements for clearing are directed by a committee appointed by the banks. There are two paid managers or inspectors to better carry out these arrangements. Accounts are closed at four o'clock. Three-quarters of an hour is allowed for the banks to consider drafts upon them, and to determine whether they are to be honoured. In the meantime the bills and cheques have been classified at the Clearing House, and by 5.30 accounts are adjusted, each bank paying or receiving the balance due to it. The notification of the total amount of bills, cheques and drafts passing through the Clearing House is an indication of the state of trade, and as the Metropolis is the main cosmopolitan centre of commerce, this record has a world-wide range. The sums passed through the London Clearing House for 1905 reached the enormous total of £12,287,935,000, as against £10,564,197,000 in 1904. In the provincial clearing houses cheques are drawn not only on the members' banks actually presenting, but also on their branches within a specified distance of the centre. There are clearing houses at Bristol, Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, Leeds, Sheffield, Newcastle-on-Tyne, and Leicester; and in Scotland at Edinburgh, Glasgow, Aberdeen, Dundee, Greenock, Leith, Paisley, and Inverness. In Ireland the only clearing house is in Dublin.

Chief Inspector, Philip W. Matthews.

Deputy-Inspector, A. E. Salt, Lombard Street.

Institute of Bankers.

This Institute was founded in '79, to facilitate the consideration and discussion of matters of interest to the profession, and to give opportunities for the acquisition of a knowledge of the theory of banking. It has at present in London, the provinces, in India and the Colonies over 5000 adherents: viz., 411 Fellows, who are partners, directors, or managers of banks, 1350 Associates, consisting of officials of over 10 years' standing, and those who have passed the final examination, and nearly 4000 ordinary members drawn from the juniors on bank staffs. These different classes subscribe £2 2s., £1 1s., and 10s. 6d. per annum respectively. Its organ is the Journal of the Institute of Bankers, which also contains matter of interest to bankers generally. The annual examinations for the certificate of the Institute are held in the spring in London and numerous provincial centres.

Offices, 34, Clement's Lane, Lombard Street.

President, J. Spencer Phillips, Esq.

Secretary, Mr. Ernest Sykes.

People's Banks.

The movement usually designated "People's Banks" had its origin about the year 1849 in the north of Germany, where, almost simultaneously, although working quite independently of one another, systems of popular banking were established by Schulze-Delitzsche and Raiffeisen. These banks have played an exceedingly important part in the agricultural progress and the remarkable commercial development of Germany during the last three decades. How important may be gathered from the fact that there are now more than 8000 of these institutions in Germany and Austria-Hungary, with a total membership of over 2,000,000, disposing of over £20,000,000 sterling, and doing business to the amount of over £400,000,000 yearly.

Next to Germany the greatest success of the movement has been attained in Italy. There in 1866 Signor Luzzatti established the "People's Bank of Milan," with the trivial sum of £28. It now possesses a paid-up capital of £500,000, and during its existence has loaned out over £5,000,000 to the industrial classes, chiefly in very small sums. One-third of the whole banking business of Italy is transacted through the medium of "The People's Banks," of which there are now more than a thousand in operation.

From these centres it has spread in various directions: to Switzerland, Roumania, Bulgaria, Denmark, Belgium, and Holland; and in India, within the space of five years, 150 similar land banks have been established. Japan and China have also taken up the idea. France and Russia, too, have both witnessed several attempts to found the system.

People's Banks were first introduced to popular notice in the United Kingdom by Mr. H. W. Wolff in his book "People's Banks," which appeared in '93, and by the advocacy of Mr. R. A. Yerburgh, who became in '94 the founder of the "Agricultural Banks Association." In '97 Mr. Yerburgh's Association became merged in the "Co-operative Banks Association," which in 1904 was amalgamated with the Agricultural Organisation Society (see p. 10). In Ireland it has been found admirably adapted to the circumstances and needs of the country, and has developed in a more rapid ratio. The rural banks are registered under the Friendly Societies' Acts on the basis of mutual and unlimited liability (the principle of the majority of the German "People's Banks"); and the town banks under the Industrial and Provident Societies' Act (which is the system obtaining in Italy) on the limited liability principle.

All information can be obtained of the following bodies:—

BANKRUPTCY.

This is mainly regulated in England and Wales by the Bankruptcy Act, '83, the Bankruptcy (Discharge and Closure) Act, '87, the Bankruptcy Act '90, and the rules made thereunder. In all its branches this system is subject to the control of the Board of Trade (q.v.). For the proper administration of the system there is the Bankruptcy Division of the High Court of Justice, which has jurisdiction in the City of London and its liberties, and also within the districts of the Metropolitan County Courts. Outside these boundaries the County Courts have bankruptcy jurisdiction. A great portion of this in both the High Court and County Courts is exercised by the Registrars, who hear petitions for adjudication in bankruptcy, hold public examinations of the debtors, approve of compositions, and grant discharges when these are unopposed. The Bankruptcy Department of the Board of Trade consists of Official Receivers, and a central staff under the Inspector-General, who audit trustees' accounts, and overlook the conduct and dealings of these persons, and the other local officials. In order to be made a bankrupt, it is essential that the debtor shall have committed one or more of the recognised acts of bankruptcy (see ed. '96). The act of bankruptcy on which the petition against the debtor is founded must have occurred within three months. An infant, though engaged in trade, cannot be made bankrupt, but a married woman can be, and in respect of her separate property if she carries on a trade distinct from her husband, or when he is a convict or in exile; as in such cases she is liable to be sued personally as a femme sole.

In April 1906 the President of the Board of Trade appointed Mr. M. J. M. MacKenzie (Chairman), Mr. J. Addison, Mr. J. Barker, M.P., Mr. G. M. Chamberlin, Mr. S. T. Evans, K.C. M.P., Sir E. W. Fithian, Mr. W. B. Peat, Mr. W. M. Richardson, and Mr. J. Smith, C.B., to be a Committee to inquire into and report upon the effect of the Bankruptcy laws in force in the United Kingdom. The Committee are to report specially as to the desirability of amending the provisions of the Bankruptcy Law in relation to the following matters—viz., the investigation of the bankrupt's conduct, and the realisation of his estate; the position of debtors who are married women; the right of a bankrupt to discharge and in the case of a bankrupt solicitor to renew his practising certificate; also the rights of trustees in bankruptcy against persons who have honestly dealt with bankrupts in respect of property acquired during the bankruptcy and against persons claiming under settlements when the settler has become bankrupt. The Committee are also to report as to the desirability of requiring certain classes of securities which are now exempt from registration to be registered, and of bringing under official control and audit estates administered by trustees under voluntary arrangements made between insolvent debtors and their creditors.

According to the report of the Inspector-General in Bankruptcy for the year ended Dec. 31st, 1905, the number of receiving orders made in England and Wales was 4764, involving liabilities of £5,915,867, and the assets realised £2,343,627. The number of deeds of arrangement was 3839, the liabilities thereunder being £3,758,603, and the assets £2,046,955. The failures showed a decrease of 28 in the total number of failures, and of £2,411,887 in the amount of liabilities in bankruptcy and under deeds of arrangement.

Inspector-General in Bankruptcy, Mr. William Evans, Horse Guards Avenue, Whitehall, S.W. Barclay, Sir Thomas, LL.D., Ph.D., is the eldest son of the late George Barclay, LL.D., of Bonvil, Cupar, Fife, and was b. at Dunfermline in 1853, and ed. at Univ. Coll. London, and at London, Paris, Bonn, and Jena Universities. He was called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn '81, and for a number of years was one of the Times correspondents in Paris, but resigned the post in order to take up French law practice. He is a great authority on International Law, a member of the Institute of International Law, a vice-president of the International Law Association, and a member of the Supreme Council, of the Congo Free State. He has done much to promote the cause of International Arbitration in France, Germany, America, and this country. Officer of the Legion of Honour, and knighted by the King June 24th, 1904. 13, Old Square, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.; Reform Club; 17, Rue Pasquier, Paris.

Baring Gould, Rev. Sabine, M.A., Rector of Lew-Trenchard, North Devon, since '81, and formerly Vicar of Dalton, Yorks, and Rector of East Mersea, Essex. He is the eldest son of the late Mr. E. Baring-Gould, of Lew-Trenchard, and was b. at Exeter, Jan. 28th, '34, and ed. at Clare Coll. Camb. His literary activity has been and still is phenomenal. Fiction, theology, history, mythology, archæology, folk-lore, art, music: in all these provinces he has won great triumphs, though perhaps he is best known by his novels, "Mehalah," first published in '80, "Mrs. Curgenven," and "Cheap Jack Zita," '93, "The Broom Squire," '96. A charming "Garland of Country Song" appeared in '94, "Old English Fairy Tales" in '95, a life of Napoleon in '96, "A Study of St. Paul" in '97, "Domitia" in '98, "Pabo the Priest," "Furze-bloom," and "A Book of the West" in '99, "Winefred" and "A Book of Dartmoor" in 1900, "Royal Georgie" and "A Book of Brittany" in 1901, "Miss Quillet" in 1902, "A Book of N. Wales" and "In Dewisland" in 1903, "Siegfried" and "A Book of Ghosts" in 1904, "A Book of S. Wales" and "A Book of the Riviera" in 1905. He is a J.P. for Devon.

Baronetage, Standing Council of the, 58, Coleman Street, E.C. Registrar, F. W. Pixley, F.S.A.

Barrie, J. M., also known as "Gavin Ogilvy," was b. at Kirriemuir, Forfarshire, in 1860. He was ed. at Dumfries Academy, and graduated M.A. at Edin. Univ. in '82. After holding a journalistic position in Nottingham he came to London and wrote for the British Weekly, St. James's Gazette, Speaker, and National Observer. His first volume, "Better Dead," appeared in '87; "Auld Licht Idylls" and "When a Man's Single" in '88; "A Window in Thrums" and "An Edinburgh Eleven" in '89; "My Lady Nicotine" in '90; "The Little Minister" in '91; "Sentimental Tommy," and "Margaret Ogilvy, a Memoir," in '96; "Tommy and Grizel" in 1900; and in 1902 "The Little White Bird." Mr. Barrie's work for the stage includes "Walker, London," in '92; "Jane Annie," written with Mr. Conan Doyle, and brought out at the Savoy in '93; "The Professor's Love Story"; "The Little Minister," '97; "The Wedding Guest," 1900; "Quality Street," 1902, "The Admirable Crichton" and "Little Mary," 1903, "Alice Sit-by-the-Fire," 1905, and "Josephine," 1906. Mr. Barrie was, in '94, married to Miss Mary Ansell, who played charmingly in "Walker, London," when it was first produced. Address: Kirriemuir, N.B.

Barton, The Right Hon. Sir Edmund, G.C.M.G., K.C., D.C.L., LL.D., M.A., was b. at Glebe, Sydney, N.S.W., Jan. 18th, 1849, and ed. at the Sydney Grammar School and University. He was called as a barrister in '71, and took silk '89; elected to represent his University in the Legislative Assembly '79, became Speaker '83-7, and entered the Legislative Council '87-91; Attorney-General '89 and '91. He was the senior representative of New South Wales at the '97 Federal Convention, and took the leading part in its proceedings until the Federal Constitution Bill was adopted. He came to England in 1900 in support of the Constitution Bill, and was Premier of the first Commonwealth Ministry from Jan. 1901 till April 1903, when he became Senior Puisne Judge of the High Court, P.C. 1901 and G.C.M.G. 1902. Address: Miandetta, Kirribilli Point, Sydney, N.S.W.

Battenberg, Rear-Admiral H.S.H. Prince Louis Alexander of, G.C.B., G.C.V.O., K.C.M.G., is the eldest son of Prince Alexander of Hesse, was b. May 24th, 1854, and m. in '84 the Princess Victoria, daughter of the Grand Duke of Hesse and Princess Alice. He is a naturalised British subject. Entered the Navy '68, rose to the rank of captain '91, served in the Egyptian War '82, is an Elder Brother of Trinity House, A.D.C. to the King, was Director of Naval Intelligence 1902-4, and in Dec. 1904 was appointed to the command of the Second Cruiser Squadron, which visited Canada, Newfoundland, and the United States in 1905.

Beaumont, Admiral Sir Lewis Anthony, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., was b. May 19th, 1847, and entered the Navy '60. He served in the Arctic Expedition '75-6, was Private Secretary to Lord Northbrook '83-5, Director of Naval Intelligence '94-9, and A.D.C. to Queen Victoria '95-7. He attained the rank of Rear-Admiral in '97, and commanded the Pacific fleet '99-1900 and the Australian fleet 1901-3. He is a Grand Officer of the Legion of Honour. In 1904 he was appointed to act as the Naval Representative of Great Britain on the International Commission of Inquiry into the North Sea Incident, and succeeded Admiral Sir E. Seymour as Commander-in-Chief at Devonport in 1905.

Bebel, Ferdinand August, chief of the German Socialists, was b. at Cologne, Feb. 22nd, 1840. He has risen from the working classes, and was first heard of as a master-turner at Leipzig, '64. A friend and confidant of Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels, he was elected in '67 a member of the short-lived North German Parliament, and in '71 into the new German Reichstag. Accused in '72, together with his friend Liebknecht, of an "attempt at high treason," he was condemned to two years' imprisonment, and nine months for insult to the German Emperor. But he was re-elected to Parliament, where he has always maintained his position. His works include "Unsere Ziele," 10 eds., "Der Deutsche Bauernkrieg" ('76), "Christentum und Sozialismus," "Die Frau," 18 eds. ('93), "Die Mohammedanisch-Arabishe Kulturperiode" ('89), "Sonntagsarbeit," "Charles Fourier," "Die Lage der Arbeiter in den Bäckereien," etc. Since Liebknecht's death he may be considered as the head of German Socialists. At the Congresses of Lübeck and Dresden in 1902 and 1903 he successfully opposed the tendency represented by Bernstein towards practical co-operation, on given points, with the old Liberal parties.

BELGIUM.

Ruler.

King Leopold II. was b. at Brussels, April 9th, 1835, and is the son of King Leopold I., whom he succeeded, Dec. 10th, '65. He has travelled much in Europe, Asia Minor, and Egypt. He was practically the founder, and is now the ruling sovereign, of the Congo Free State (q.v.). He married, in '53, the Archduchess Maria of Austria, who died Sept. 19th, 1902, and by whom he has three daughters. The eldest, Princess Louise, married in '75 Prince Philip of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, but the marriage was dissolved in Jan. 1906. The second, Princess Stephanie, widow of the late Crown Prince Rudolf of Austria, married Count Lonyay in '99. The third is Princess Clementine. The heir presumptive is Prince Albert, second son of the late Count of Flanders, brother of the King. He was born April 8th, '75, married (Oct. 2nd, 1900) the Duchess Elisabeth of Bavaria, and has two sons, Prince Leopold, b. Nov. 3rd, 1901, and Prince Charles Theodore, b. Oct. 10th, 1903. The Chamber voted him an annual allowance of 200,000 fr. in Dec. 1905. The King has a Civil List of 3,500,000 fr.

Government.

A kingdom under Leopold II. of Saxe-Coburg, and by the constitution of '31, following on the secession from the Netherlands in '30, declared to be a constitutional, representative, and hereditary monarchy. Belgium is a neutral power, her neutrality being guaranteed under the Treaty of London, 1831, by Great Britain, Austria, Prussia, and Russia. The executive power is vested in the King and his Ministers, the legislative power jointly in King, Senate, and Chamber of Deputies. The principle of manhood suffrage with compulsory voting prevails tempered by the plural vote and proportional representation of minorities, based upon a somewhat intricate system. All citizens over 25, who have lived at least a year in the same commune, have a vote. An additional vote is accorded them if they are (1) either 35 years of age, married, with legitimate offspring, and pay a tax of at least 5 fr. to the State; or (2) are 25 years old and own immovable property to the value of at least 2000 fr., or have a corresponding income from such property, or for two years have received at least 100 fr. a year from Belgian funds. Two additional votes are given to citizens of 25 years of age who possess a diploma of higher education or have filled a public or private position implying the possession of such education. No citizen can have more than three votes. From this electorate both Houses of the Legislature are chosen, save for those senators who are elected indirectly. The Senate of 110 members is elected for 8 years. The number of members elected directly, 83, is equal to half the number of deputies. The indirectly elected senators are chosen by the provincial councils, 2 for each province with less than 500,000 inhabitants; 3 for each with more than 500,000 and less than 1,000,000; and 4 for each with over 1,000,000. The Deputies are elected for four years, in the proportion of 1 to every 40,000 inhabitants, and number 166. One-half retire every two years. Senators must be 40, and deputies 25 years of age. Each deputy receives 4000 fr. yearly, and travels free.

The Army.

The Army has been reorganised according to a scheme prepared by a mixed commission, but the result has been very disappointing, and there is a strong belief that personal service must replace volunteering and substitution.

The establishment in 1905 was fixed at 100,000 men, and the recruit contingent at 13,300, but the actual strength is far below the establishment, and regiments are in some places so weak that training is difficult. The nominal liability is 8 years with the colours and 5 in the reserve.

The composition is as follows: Cavalry—2 regiments of Chasseurs, 2 of Guides, and 4 of Lancers. Each regiment consists of 4 squadrons Active and 1 Reserve. To the above have to be added the Gendarmerie (over 1700 men). Artillery—4 field and 4 fortress regiments (in all 204 guns). Engineers—1 regiment of 3 battalions, a reserve battalion, and 5 special technical companies. Infantry—14 regiments of the line, of 4 battalions of 4 companies each, 3 Active and 1 Reserve battalion; 1 regiment of Grenadiers, similarly organised; 1 regiment of Carabiniers of 6 battalions (4 active and 2 reserve), and 3 regiments of chasseurs-à-pied.

The Civil or National Guard is under the Minister of the Interior in peace time, and numbers approximately 45,000 men reckoned as "active," and 100,000 "non-active."

Industries, etc.

Local government is carried on by 9 provincia and 2622 communal councils. The country is divided by a difference of language, the Flemish inhabitants in the north using the Flemish tongue in all its varieties of local patois, while the Walloons of the southern provinces speak French. There are 2,822,005 who speak Flemish only, 2,574,805 who speak French only, and 801,587 who speak French and Flemish. The north, too, is chiefly agricultural, and the south industrial. Almost the entire population is of the Roman Catholic faith, but full religious liberty prevails, and grants are made from the national treasury to all denominations. There are 7032 primary, 2604 infant, and 3591 adult schools, attended by 843,172, 246,514, and 181,532 pupils respectively, and the higher branches of education are well provided for. The success of the manufacturing industries of the country is attributed, to a certain extent, to the high standard of technical education prevailing. Agriculture, mining, iron, sugar, and textile manufacturing are the chief occupations; and textiles, sugar, machinery, and agricultural products are the chief exports. Raw materials are admitted free of duty, but there are small duties on manufactured goods imported. An Agricultural Commission exists in each province, and a special Council advises the Government as to the best means of promoting the various national industries. There are 2850 miles of railway in operation, of which 2516 are owned and worked by the State. The total length of the canals and navigable waterways of the country is 1360 miles, 85 per cent. of which are under the direct control of the State, and the cheap transport thus rendered possible gives to all industries an incalculable advantage. The population of the chief towns in 1904 was: Brussels, 598,599; Antwerp, 291,949; Liège, 168,532; Ghent, 162,482.

The chief newspapers are the Indépendance Belge, the Etoile Belge, and the Petit Bleu. There are also three dailies: Le Soir, La Reforme, Le National Bruxellois, which only cost 2 centimes (less than one-fifth of a penny).

Statistics and Diplomatic.

British Consul-General at Antwerp, Sir E. C. Hertslet.

Political Parties.

Before '93 there were practically only two parties—the Clerics or Catholics, and the Anti-Catholics or Liberals. Gradually, however, after the amendment of the Constitution in '93 a strong and well-organised party of Socialists sprang up. As a general rule, the Socialists are stronger in the Walloon provinces, and the Catholics in the Flemish provinces. In July '96 the distribution of parties in the Chamber was—111 Catholics, 12 Liberals, and 29 Socialists. The principle of proportional representation was applied for the first time at the general election on May 27th, 1900, which resulted in the return of 85 Catholics, 33 Liberals and Radicals, 33 Socialists and 1 Christian Democrat. As a result of the 1902 election, the new Chamber consisted of 95 Catholics, 35 Liberals, 34 Socialists, and 2 Christian Democrats. The Opposition won 5 seats in the Chamber at the 1904 election, and 2 in the Senate. In May 1906 all sections of the Left combined in support of a common programme—reform of the franchise, compulsory education, and personal service in the army instead of recruiting by paid substitute. The result of the election appears in the following table:—

	Old Chamber.	New Chamber.
Catholics . . .	93	89
Liberals . . .	43	47
Socialists . . .	28	28
Christian Democrat . . .	1	1

Benckendorff, The Count de, who succeeded M. de Staal as Russian Ambassador in London in Nov. 1902, was born at Berlin in 1849. He entered the Russian Foreign Office in '68, was appointed Hon. Attaché to the Embassy at Rome in '69, and retired from the Diplomatic Service in '77. He was appointed First Secretary to the Embassy in Vienna '86, and afterwards Councillor there, Minister to Denmark '97, and Ambassador in London 1902. Address: Chesham House, Chesham Place, S.W.

Bent, Hon. Thomas, Premier of Victoria, was b. at Pinroth, N.S.W., 1838, and settled in Victoria '49. Entered political life as M.L.A. Victoria '73, Commissioner Public Works '80, Railways '81-3, Speaker '92-4, Minister Public Works, Health, and Railways, 1903-4, and succeeded Mr. Irvine as Premier Feb. 1904. Address: Brighton, Victoria.

Beresford, Admiral Lord Charles W. D., G.C.V.O., K.C.B., son of the Rev. John, 4th Marquis of Waterford; b. 1846; entered as a cadet on the Britannia '59; Commander '75, Captain '82, Rear-Admiral '97, Vice-Admiral 1902, Admiral 1903, Commander-in-Chief in the Mediterranean 1904; a Lord of the Admiralty '86-8; accompanied King Edward VII. as naval A.D.C. on his visit to India '75-6; was in '82 in command of the gunboat Condor at the bombardment of Alexandria; subsequently served with the Nile expedition, and commanded the Safia, whose action under repaired boiler saved the whole column. M.P. for Waterford '74-80, East Marylebone '85-90, York '98-1900, and Woolwich 1902-3. Address: Park Gate House, Ham Common, and 14, Wilton Crescent, S.W.

Beri-Beri. A disease known from the most ancient times. It is said to be mentioned in the oldest extant medical work, attributed to Hwang-ti (B.C. 2697). It broke out in Japan about the middle of the eighteenth century, and is to this day very prevalent in that country, where it is known as "kakke." It occurs in China, in the Dutch East Indies, and in the Malay Peninsula. In the latter country it causes great loss of life among the Chinese coolies. Common some years ago in India, it is now comparatively rare. The cause of the disease is not known. As to its nature, it may be described as a specific form of "peripheral neuritis," with a special tendency to implicate the pneumogastric nerve, thus accounting for a natural tendency to failure of the heart. The disease is unfavourably influenced by bad conditions of ventilation and dirt. Its cause has been variously attributed to a rice diet and to deficiency of nitrogenous food, but, it appears, without sufficient evidence. It is certain, however, that since the introduction of a more liberal diet it has practically disappeared in the Japanese Navy, which was formerly affected to the extent of 25 per cent. of its strength.

Bernhardt (Bernard), Rosine Sarah, French tragic actress, was b. at Paris, Oct. 22nd, 1846, of Jewish parents, but, by the will of her father, baptised, educated in a convent at Versailles, received ('58) at the Paris Conservatoire, appeared at the Théâtre Français in '62 as "Iphigénie," but without success. In '67, at the Odéon, in the rôle of the Queen, in Victor Hugo's Ruy Blas, she gained her first striking success. The war of '70-'71 interrupted her career, and she became, for a while, a nurse. She then won a position in the Théâtre Français, the troupe of which she accompanied in '79 to London, where her triumphs have been repeated in succeeding years, and where she married a M. d'Amala. She was left a widow in '89. She broke her contract with the Français in '80, and has since been touring, with great éclat, in America, and in all the principal countries of Europe, excepting Germany. She now directs a theatre of her own in Paris. She is also a painter and sculptor.

Bernstein, Eduard, German author and politician, was b. Jan. 6th, 1850, at Berlin, and studied at the Werder public school Gymnasium. He became a bank clerk, but took to literature and Socialism, and was a pupil of Marx and Engels. To avoid prosecution he left Germany in '78, and lived in England from '88 to 1901. He became a member of the German Parliament in 1902, where he plays an important rôle as a moderate Socialist. He strongly opposed the new Protective Tariff, and has met with some opposition from the older Socialist leaders because of his desire to promote a working agreement with the Liberals, instead of holding aloof from all parties (see GERMANY). He was editor of or contributor to various Socialist periodicals, and founded the existing monthly "Documente des Socialismus," which he still directs.

Bertie, The Right Hon. Sir Francis Leveson, G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., K.C.B., British Ambassador to France, is a son of the 6th Earl of Abingdon, and brother of the present Earl. He was b. 1844; ed. at Eton, and entered the Foreign Office in 1863. He was private secretary to Mr. R. Bourke when Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, '74 to '80, and was Second Secretary to Lords Beaconsfield and Salisbury at the Berlin Congress in '78. In '94 he was appointed Assistant Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and in 1903 Ambassador to Italy. In August 1904 he was appointed to succeed Sir Edmund Monson at Paris at the end of the year. He married in '74 Lady Féodorowna Cecilia, daughter of the 1st Earl Cowley.

Bibliographical Society, 20, Hanover Square, W. Hon. Sec., A. W. Pollard.

Bible Society, The British and Foreign, was established in 1804, its object being the translation and circulation of the Scriptures. Up to 1906 198,515,199 Bibles and portions of the Bible, in 400 languages and dialects, had been issued under its auspices. The expenditure of the Society in 1905-6 was over £238,000. Work abroad is carried on not only through the missionary societies, and Biblewomen supplied to them, but by some thirty agents in foreign countries, under whose a staff of 900 colporteurs is engaged in distributing the Scriptures. Bible House, 146, Queen Victoria Street, E.C. Secretaries, Revs. A. Taylor, M.A., and J. H. Ritson, M.A.

Biographies. See Index at front of book for names of people of whom biographies are given separately. Biographies of all ruling sovereigns, etc., will be found in the articles on their countries. Under PARLIAMENT biographical notices of all Peers and M.P.'s are given, and under PRIVY COUNCIL of Privy Councillors.

Birds, Protection of. The Wild Birds Protection Acts, 1880 to 1904, prohibit the shooting or snaring of all wild birds during close time, and grant special and fuller protection in the case of certain wild birds named in a schedule; prohibit the offering for sale after March 15th of any wild bird recently killed or taken; enable orders to be made, on the application of a county council, prohibiting the taking or destroying of the eggs of certain wild birds, and of the eggs of any wild bird in certain breeding areas, also prohibiting the taking or killing of any wild bird beyond the breeding period or close time, etc.; and prohibit the use of the poletrap. Close time is fixed between March 1st and August 1st in each year, but the period may be extended or varied by any county council, and orders can be made on the application of a council giving protection to named birds during the remainder of the year. The close time for game birds is: partridges, Feb. 1st—Sept. 1st; pheasants, Feb. 1st—Oct. 1st; bustard, March 1st—Sept. 1st; grouse, Dec. 10th—Aug. 12th; blackgame, Dec. 10th—Aug. 20th; and no game can be taken on a Sunday or Christmas Day. Information as to the birds named in the schedule, and the duration of close time can be obtained of the clerks of county councils. The Royal Society for the Protection of Birds discourages the wanton destruction of birds, interests itself in their protection, employs watchers for breeding-grounds, and requires of its members that they shall not wear the feathers of any bird not killed for the purpose of food, the ostrich only excepted. On the question of killing game birds the society is strictly neutral. It has over 6000 associates. Hon. Sec., F. E. Lemon; Sec., Miss L. Gardiner. Offices, 3, Hanover Square, W.

Birkbeck College, Breams Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C., was founded by the late Dr. Birkbeck, Dec. 2nd, 1823. The present buildings were opened in '85. The College is in close relationship with the University of London. The Day and Evening Courses of Study prepare for the examinations of the University of London in the Faculties of Arts, Science, Commerce, and Law. There are splendidly equipped Physical, Chemical, Biological, and Metallurgical Laboratories. Principal, G. Armistage-Smith, D.Lit., M.A.; Secretary and Clerk to the Governing Body, H. Wells Eames.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS.

Registration.

The duty of registering the birth of all children who are born alive is by law imposed upon the parents, who must, within 42 days after the birth, give information to the Registrar, and sign the register in his presence. Failing the parents, the law requires the occupier of the house where the birth took place, or some person present at the birth, or the person having charge of the child, to register the birth. The registration is free of charge, unless the registrar is requested to attend at the house where the birth took place, when the fee is 1s. A small fee is charged for a certified copy of the entry in the register. There are provisions by which, in case of failure of registration within 42 days, the registrar may require any of the above-named persons to register; but after twelve months the birth cannot be registered except with the written authority of the Registrar-General. Still-born children are not registered. Children born at sea, on board a British vessel, must be registered by the commanding officer sending the necessary particulars to the Registrar-General. The father of an illegitimate child can only have his name entered on the register at the joint request of himself and of the mother.

The duty of registering a death similarly rests upon the nearest relatives present at the death or during the last illness, or living in the same district; failing them, upon those present at the death, or the occupier of the house, or the person ordering the burial. Registration should be made within five days of the death, either personally or in writing; but in the latter case the written notice must be accompanied by a medical certificate of the cause of death, and the register must still be signed within fourteen days. The registration is free of charge, unless the registrar attend at the house where the death took place, when the fee is 1s. After fourteen days and within twelve months the registrar may, failing the receipt of the information as to the death, require any person who should have effected the registration to attend and give the information required. But after twelve months no death can be registered except with the written authority of the Registrar-General. A certificate of death in the ordinary course is given without fee, and this certificate must be delivered to the person who buries or performs any funeral service for the burial of the deceased.

The birth rates vary appreciably in the different parts of the United Kingdom. In England and Wales the birth rate has fallen pretty steadily from 31'4 in 1891 to 27'2 in 1905. In Scotland it has fallen from 31'2 in 1891 to 28'1 in 1905. In Ireland, on the other hand, it has risen very slightly from 23'1 in 1891 to 23'4 in 1905, having varied only a decimal point or two in the intervening years.

The death rates have fallen in all parts of the United Kingdom. In England the fall was a steady one from 20'2 in 1891 to 15'2 in 1905. In Scotland it was from 20'7 in 1891 to 15'9 in 1905. In Ireland the rate has varied but little. It was 18'4 in 1891, went up to 19'4 in 1892 and 19'6 in 1900, and went down to 16'7 in 1896. In 1905 it was 17'1.

Björnson, Björnstjerne, the Norwegian poet, dramatist, and novelist, was b. Dec. 8th, 1832, at Kvikne, in the heart of Norway, where his father was the clergyman. In '52 he entered the University of Christiania, and began to earn a scanty living as a journalist in '54. He was director of the National Theatre in Bergen '57-59, and then returned to Christiania, where he became co-editor of one of the leading papers. In '60 he went abroad, visiting Denmark, Italy, Germany, and France. In '63 he returned to Norway, in '65 was appointed artistic director of the Christiania Theatre, and edited the illustrated Norsk Folkeblad for six years. Since '82 he has lived abroad for many years, but of late has generally spent his summers on his Aulestad farm, in the Gansdal Valley, Norway. Björnson has taken an active part in the political life of his country, both as a speaker and a writer. Nearly all his stories and plays are translated into English and most European languages, but "Beyond Human Power" (Part I.) is the only play that has been performed on the English stage. It was produced by Mrs. P. Campbell in 1901 at the Royalty Theatre. His 70th birthday was celebrated on Dec. 8th, 1902, by congratulations from far and near, a deputation from the Storting waiting on him, and the people of Denmark presenting an address containing 30,000 signatures.

Blind Association, British and Foreign, for promoting the Education and Employment of the Blind. Incorporated 1902. Sec., W. P. E. Barnes, 206, Great Portland Street, W.

Blind, College for the Higher Education of the, Worcester. Founded 1866; constituted as an endowed public school by a deed of foundation '89. Annual scholarships given by Gardner's Trust for the Blind, by the Staffordshire and Worcestershire County Councils, and by the masters and boys of Uppingham School. Boys annually sent to the Universities, and prepared for business, professional, and social life. Head Master, The Rev. T. Barnard, M.A. Oxon.

Blind, Karl, b. at Mannheim, Sept. 4th, 1826, came forward, even during his studies at the University of Heidelberg, as an active agitator in the movements which led to the revolution of '48. Having participated in the rising led by Hecker, and been wounded, he fled to Strasbourg; but returned and fought in the rising commanded by Struve in the autumn of that year, in the Black Forest. He was captured and condemned to eight years' imprisonment, but was forcibly set at liberty in '49, when the people and soldiers of Baden effected the downfall of the government of the Grand Duke. Sent by the newly constituted popular government with a diplomatic mission to Paris, he was arrested as a supposed participator in Ledru-Rollin's rising, June 13th, '49, in the interest of the then Roman Republic. Expelled from France, he lived first at Brussels, then chose London as his permanent residence. Here, or from here, he was in frequent active communication with Mazzini, Garibaldi, and Louis Blanc. His comments upon current political events were frequent, and many of them have appeared in English publications. Folklore and historical studies have also occupied him much.

Blind Pensions. The Royal Blind Pension Society grants pensions to indigent blind of good moral character, without regard to sect or creed. Secretary, W. Elliott Terry. Office, 237, Southwark Bridge Road, S.E. (Sec Advt.)

Blind, School for the, Leatherhead. The object of the Institution is "to render the blind self-reliant by teaching them a trade." Principal, Rev. London depot, 246, 248, 250, Waterloo Road, S.E.; London Office, 1, St. George's Circus, S.E.; Chief Offices, Highlands Road, Leatherhead.

BOLIVIA.

Bolivia is bounded on the north by Peru and Brazil; on the east by Brazil and Paraguay; on the south by the Argentine Republic and Chile; on the west by Chile and the Pacific Ocean. Bolivia has no sea-coast, having lost her own to Chile during the war of 1875-83, which was terminated by a compact of peace, '80, under which Bolivia alleged that Chile was bound to procure her an outlet to the sea. A treaty with Chile was signed on Oct. 17th, 1904, recognising the definite sovereignty of the latter country over the province of Antofagasta, Chile undertaking the payment of the '79 war claims. Bolivia was given free transit through Chile to the Pacific ports, with Customs officers at Antofagasta and Arica. An arrangement that Chile should build a railway from Arica to La Paz, and transfer the Bolivian section to Bolivia 15 years after completion, and the concession of the most-favoured-nation treatment to Chile, were included in the treaty, together with a clause appointing Germany as arbitrator in any difficulties arising between the two countries. As to the boundary between Bolivia and Brazil, in 1903 a treaty transferring the territories of Upper Acre, Upper Purus and Upper Jurua to Brazil as far as the 19° S. long. in exchange for the concession to Bolivia of territory on the frontier of Mato Grosso and the River Madeira, plus £2,000,000 and various commercial facilities, was signed Nov. 21st, 1903.

The executive power is in the hands of a President, elected for four years, with a Congress of two Chambers, a Senate of 16 members, elected for six years, and a Chamber of 72 Deputies, elected for four years by universal suffrage, as is also the President. Prefects administer the 9 Departments into which the country is divided, and subordinate officers the 57 provinces and 595 cantons making up the Departments. The inhabitants are chiefly Indians. The Roman Catholic is the State religion, but liberty prevails. Education is free and obligatory, though the law is not strictly enforced. The standing army is fixed at 2900, but reserves and a territorial guard bring up the possible fighting strength to over 82,000. It is a very rich country, abounding in minerals, especially copper, tin, and silver. It produces potatoes, barley, grapes, coffee, cacao, etc.; and exports wool, rubber, coffee, and minerals. But industry is wanting in the country, which offers a wide field to European labourers. Length of railways about 700 miles.

The capital of Bolivia is La Paz, pop. 62,500; and other chief towns are Sucre, pop. 27,500, Cochabamba, pop. 30,000, and Oruro, pop. 16,000.

Area, 567,360 sq. m.; pop. 1901, 1,644,372, estimated in 1904 at 2,181,415. Revenue, 1904, £855,520; 1905, £866,769; expenditure, 1904, £855,510; 1905, £868,521. Imports, 1903, £1,362,024; 1904, £1,651,953; 1905, £1,691,564. Exports, 1903, £2,159,121; 1904, £1,763,578; 1905, £2,461,087. Internal debt, £300,000 (£1 = 12 Bols. 50 c.).

President, Colonel Ismael Montes. — Vice-President, Dr. Eliodoro Villazon.

Ministry: Foreign Affairs, Dr. Claudio Pinilla. — Interior, Dr. Anibal Capriles. — Finance, Don Daniel del Castillo. — Justice and Public Instruction, Dr. Juan Saracho. — War, Dr. J. S. Qunteros.

Minister in London, Senor Dr. Don Fernando e Guachalla, 74, Compayne Gardens, N.W. — Consulate: 12, Fenchurch Street, E.C. — Military Attaché, Col. Don Pedro Suárez.

British Minister and Consul-General, W. N. Beauchamp, Esq. (resides at Lima). Consul: G. Harrison (La Paz). Vice-Consuls: Dr. J. R. Smith (Oruro), E. F. Moore (La Sucre).

Bonham, Sir George Francis, 2nd Bart., H.M. Minister at Berne, was b. 1847, and succeeded to the baronetcy in '63. Ed. Eton and Exeter Coll. Oxford, he joined the Diplomatic service '69, and served as attaché at St. Petersburg, Vienna, and other European capitals; Minister at Belgrade 1900; appointed to Berne Dec. 1905.

Booth, Charles, F.R.S., P.C., was b. at Liverpool on March 30th, 1840, and ed. at the Royal Institute School there. He has been a partner in the firm of Alfred Booth & Co., Liverpool, since 1862, but the study of social problems has been his life-work. He has published "Life and Labour of the People in London," "Pauperism," "Condition of the Aged Poor," and "Old Age Pensions." He is an ex-President of the Royal Statistical Society. D.Sc. Camb., '93. P.C. June 24th, 1904. D.C.L. Oxon. 1904, LL.D. Liverpool 1906. Address: 24, Great Cumberland Place, W.

Booth, Rev. William, better known as General Booth, the founder of the Salvation Army, was b. at Nottingham, April 10th, 1829. Entered the Methodist New Connexion ministry '50. He resigned, however, in '61, preferring to work as an evangelist amongst those who never attended a place of worship at all. In '65 he established in the East End of London the Christian Mission, out of which grew the worldwide organisation known as The Salvation Army, which has invaded almost every town of England and Wales, and sent missionary contingents into various foreign countries, including France, Switzerland, Holland, Belgium, Scandinavia, Finland, Italy, India, Australasia, U.S.A., Canada, S. America, W. Indies, Java, and Japan. His eldest son is the Chief of the Staff, and other members of his family have also co-operated with him in his missionary enterprise. There are in all 16,522 officers employed in the work, besides 4757 persons without rank. He has of late years given much time to the development of the scheme of social amelioration initiated in Nov. '90 on the lines of his famous book "In Darkest England and the Way out." General Booth has been received in private audience by both the King and Queen of England, and has had interviews with many of the leading Ministers of various countries, colonies, and dependencies throughout the world. He accomplished remarkable motor tours through the country in 1905 and 1906, went to Australia and New Zealand in 1905, and formulated a scheme for emigration and colonisation. In 1906 the late Mr. George Herring placed at his disposal, for the use of the Salvation Army, a sum of £100,000, to enable him to carry out an experiment in home colonisation, on condition that the entire amount should be paid again by the Army to the King's Hospital Fund in 25 annual instalments. In 1905 he received the freedom of the City of London and of Nottingham. Address: 101, Queen Victoria Street, E.C.

Borneo. A large island of the Malay archipelago, divided into various states. Estimated total area 300,000 sq. m.; estimated pop. 1,846,000. Holland claims as a possession 212,737 sq. m. of territory on the south, east, and west of the island, with a population of about 1,250,000. In reality this immense tract is parcelled out into various native states. Those on the coast are more or less under Dutch influence. Of the interior little is even known. The principal Dutch settlements are at Sambas, Pontiana, Banjarmasin, and Koti. At Martapura are the diamond fields of the Borneo Mining Co., which, for a time, by agreement with the De Beers Co., are now again being worked. There are also coal mines in operation. On the north-west coast is Sarawak, to the north-east of that Brunei, and beyond that British North Borneo. The two former are protectorates of Great Britain, and British North Borneo was in 1906 made part of the Straits Settlements Colony. Between British North Borneo and the Dutch territories on the east is the native state of Sulu. The whole island is rich in valuable timber, woods, fruits, spices, drugs and gums, and has a varied fauna. Minerals: coal, iron, gold, diamonds, antimony, quicksilver, etc. Soil exceedingly fertile, and well adapted for the cultivation of all tropical products. Principal exports: sago, beeswax, edible birds'-nests, camphor, rattans, gold, pepper, caoutchouc, gutta percha, spices, drugs and dyes, etc. The people belong to various races—Malays, Dyaks, Kyans, Negritos, Bugis, and Chinese. Tattooed races, Kanowits, Pakatans and others, inhabit the interior.

Botha, Louis, the Commandant-General of the Boer forces after the death of Joubert, was b. at Greytown, in Natal, in '64. He had his share of fighting as a young man with the native tribes in that district, and after serving under the Zulu chief Dinizulu he settled on a farm near Vryheid in what was then called the New Republic. This was afterwards incorporated with the Transvaal, and Botha then represented Vryheid in the Volksraad. He consistently took the more liberal view in all political matters during the years that followed, but when war broke out he led the Vryheid commando and was in the first fighting round Dundee, with his friend Lucas Meyer. He directed the Boers with conspicuous success at Colenso and Spion Kop, and after Joubert's death he succeeded him by his express desire as Commandant-General. After the conclusion of peace in 1902 he visited England and Europe.

Bourgeois, Léon, French statesman, was b. at Paris in 1851. He read for the Bar, and entered the Chamber of Deputies in '88, becoming Under-Secretary of State for the Interior in that year, and afterwards Minister of Education in the Cabinets of M. Freycinet and M. Loubet, and Minister of Justice under M. Ribot. In '05 he formed a ministry himself, consisting entirely of Radicals, but friction with the Senate led to his resignation. In '98 he became once more Minister of Education, and in '99 was one of the French delegates at the Hague Peace Conference, where he greatly distinguished himself. He strongly supported M. Waldeck-Rousseau's administration, in 1902 and 1903 was elected President of the Chamber of Deputies, and in March 1902 became Foreign Minister under M. Sarrien, but did not retain office when the Cabinet was reconstructed by M. Clemenceau in Oct. 1906.

Bourget, Paul, French writer; b. at Amiens in 1851. He appeared first in verse in "Vie inquiète" ('74), followed by "Edel" ('78) and "Les Aveux" ('82), in which he was supposed to be first an admirer of and successor to Baudelaire, with tendencies in the direction of Shelley, Keats, and even Tennyson. His novels are numerous, beginning with "L'Irréparable" ('84). His "Essays de Psychologie Contemporaine" ('84) and "Etudes et Portraits" ('88) met with a friendly reception, and he has gradually become a favourite writer in the circles of fashionable ladies, though not in those alone. More than most French writers, he has travelled and tried to familiarise himself with other countries—not Italy alone, but also England and the United States.

Bourne, The Most Rev. Francis, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Westminster, and successor of Cardinal Vaughan as head of the Roman Catholic Church in England, was b. at Clapham, March 23rd, 1861, and was at the time of his appointment as Archbishop the youngest member of the Catholic Episcopate in England. His father, the late Mr. Henry Bourne, was Principal Clerk in the Receiver-General's Branch in the Post Office, and died in '70. Archbishop Bourne was ed. at St. Cuthbert's College, Ushaw, at St. Edmund's College, Old Hall, St. Thomas' Seminary, Hammersmith, and the Seminary of St. Sulpice, Paris, where he received the diaconate in '83. After a year at Louvain University he was made priest in '84, and for five years officiated as assistant priest at Blackheath, Mortlake, and West Grinstead. In '89 he founded and was made rector of an ecclesiastical seminary for the education of the clergy of the diocese of Southwark, acting also as Professor of Moral Theology and Holy Scripture. In '95 he went to Rome, and was named Domestic Prelate to the Pope; in '96 he was appointed Bishop of Epiphania and Coadjutor with the right of succession to the see of Southwark, of which he became Bishop in '97 on Bishop Butt's resignation. During the long period of ill-health which Cardinal Vaughan endured he was often called upon to act as his substitute, and upon his death he was appointed, Aug. 28th, 1903, by Pope Pius X. to succeed him. He is a good preacher, has a great reputation as an administrator, and has wide and enlightened views as to the training of students for the priesthood. Archbishop's House, Westminster. P.O. Telephone 1758 Victoria.

Boys' Brigade. Companies are formed in connection with churches, missions, and Sunday-schools, and the boys are trained largely by means of military drill and discipline. The total number of boys enrolled in the United Kingdom is 55,000, and their ages vary from 12 to 17. The officers number 5400. The movement has spread to America and the Colonies. The total strength of the Brigade throughout the world is 95,000. Brigade Secretary, Mr. W. A. Smith, 162, Buchanan Street, Glasgow. London Secretary, Mr. Roger S. Peacock, 34, Paternoster Row, E.C.

BRAZIL.

President.

The President is Dr. Affonso Penna, elected by universal suffrage in the 20 federated States to serve from 1906 to 1910. He is a native of Minas Geraes State, and his success was the outcome of a coalition of the principal States against São Paulo, which has supplied all past Presidents. Senhor Penna was one of Dom Pedro's ministers, who accepted and supported the Republic after its proclamation. He has been President of his State, and Governor of the Bank of the Republic. He was Vice-President of the Republic and President of the Senate at the time of his election to the chief magistracy.

Government.

A republic on the east coast of Central South America, which, until 1889, was an empire under Emperor Pedro II., of the house of Braganza. A revolution then, however, broke out, a National Congress was assembled by the Provisional Government, and a new Constitution was drafted, and finally adopted in Feb. '91. The chief feature of this was the establishment of the old provinces as twenty-one separate states, self-governed except for federal purposes, but with all fiscal matters, the maintenance of order, the defence of the country, the currency, reserved to the Federal Government. Legislative authority is exercised by the National Congress, composed of a Senate of 63 members, and a Chamber of Deputies of 212 members. Congress meets annually on May 3rd for a four months' session. Deputies and senators are paid. The former must have been citizens for four and the latter for six years. Deputies are elected directly, with provision for minority representation, for three years, one member being chosen for every 70,000 of the population. The Senators are directly elected, three for each state, for nine years (one-third retiring every three years). The executive authority is in the hands of the President, elected for four years only by the people directly.

Army and Navy.

The strength and organisation of the army is as follows: staff, 28; engineer corps, 66; general staff corps, 124; medical staff, 163; artillery staff, 62; 6 regiments of artillery (24 batteries), 2,412; 6 battalions of fortress artillery (24 batteries), 1984; 2 battalions of engineers, 862; 14 cavalry regiments, 5670; 1 transport corps, 278; 40 infantry battalions, 17,840; total, 29,489. The troops are divided into seven military districts, the most important being Rio Grande do Sul (11,226 men).

The Navy numbers about 8500 of all ranks. The executive officers are distributed as follows: 1 admiral, 2 vice-admirals, 10 rear-admirals, 18 captains, 30 commanders, 60 lieutenant-commanders, 175 lieutenants, and 160 sub-lieutenants. The ships built number in all 28: viz., coast defence ships, 3; protected cruisers, 3; torpedo vessels, 4; destroyers, 6; torpedo boats, 12. The ships projected under a new naval programme are:—Battleships, 3; armoured cruisers, 3; torpedo-boat destroyers, 6; torpedo boats, 12; submarines, 3.

The battleships are to be of about 13,000 tons displacement, and the armoured cruisers of 10,000 tons. The contracts for the cruisers were placed with the firms of John Brown, Vickers, Sons & Maxim, and Armstrong, Whitworth & Co. In Jan. 1906 the Aquidaban battleship was lost, with 223 officers and men. During the year the cadets' training ship, Benjamin Constant, visited British and European ports. The only important dockyard is situated at Rio de Janeiro, where there are three docks to take cruisers, and two smaller ones. Besides this there are naval bases at Para, Bahia, Pernambuco, and Ladario de Matto Grosso.

Industries, etc.

There is no connection between Church and State, and all religions are tolerated, but the Roman Catholic prevails. Education is free, but not compulsory, and illiteracy is very prevalent. The chief products are coffee, rubber, tobacco, sugar, maté, cocoa and cotton. Diamonds, gold, manganese and iron are found, and mining is being more actively carried on than formerly. There are several flourishing German and Italian colonies in the southern states. There are 10,408 miles of railway open for traffic.

The award of the Swiss Government, to whom the matter was referred for arbitration, settled the boundary dispute between Brazil and French Guiana on Dec. 1st, 1900. An agreement was made with Bolivia in Nov. 1903 as to the Acre territory. The territories of Upper Acre, Upper Purus, and Upper Jurua were transferred to Brazil, the compensation to Brazil being £2,000,000, a territorial concession, and various commercial facilities. Peru disputes the boundaries in this region, but the matter is to be settled by arbitration. See PAN-AMERICAN CONGRESS.

Statistics and Diplomatic.

Area, 3,218,082 sq. m.; pop. 20,000,000. The population consists of whites, negroes, and Indians. Capital, Rio Janeiro, pop. 1,000,000. It is, however, an article of the Constitution that the capital of the Republic shall at some future time be built on the central plateau of Brazil; and a lofty plateau in the state of Goyaz has been suggested for the purpose.

BREWING INDUSTRY, UNITED KINGDOM.

The number of Breweries, as shown by the number of licences issued to Brewers for Sale, has dropped from 9050 in 1894-5 to 5142 in 1905-6.

The net Beer Duty paid in 1905-6 was £12,982,878.

The number of barrels on which duty was paid was 34,103,263, and of this total 33,504,100 barrels were retained for consumption in the United Kingdom, giving an estimated consumption per head of the population of 27.90 gallons.

The number of licences issued to Brewers not for sale (farmers who brew for their labourers, etc.) dropped from 17,041 in '94-5 to 9322 in 1905-6.

The rate of Beer Duty was 6s. 3d. per barrel in '94, 6s. 9d. per barrel '94-1900, and since March 6th, 1900, has been 7s. 9d. per barrel.

The Commissioners of Inland Revenue in 1906 published a statement for the year ending Sept. 30th, 1905, showing the tendency to absorb the brewing trade in the hands of large firms. Of the total number of brewers for sale, one firm produced over 2,000,000 barrels, and one between 1,000,000 and 1,500,000 barrels. At the other end of the scale there were 3787 persons or firms producing under 1000 barrels each.

During the year in question the following brewing materials were used: 51,818,697 bushels of malt; 125,671 bushels of unmalted corn; 1,348,553 cwt. of rice, rice and maize grits, etc.; 2,746,615 cwt. of sugar glucose, etc.; 62,360,814 lbs. of hops; and 49,202 lbs. of hop substitutes.

Bridge, Sir Frederick, M.A., M.V.O., Mus. Doc., organist of Westminster Abbey, was b. at Oldbury 1844. Ed. at the Cathedral School, Rochester, he became a pupil of the late Sir John Goss. In '69 he was appointed organist of the Manchester Cathedral, and in '71 Professor of Harmony at Owens College. He has been connected with Westminster Abbey since '75, and was appointed in '90 Professor of Music at Gresham College, in '96 Conductor of the Royal Choral Society, and in 1902 King Edward Professor of Music in the University of London. His compositions, mainly produced at the great provincial festivals, include the "Hymn to the Creator," "Rock of Ages," "Callirhoë," "The Repentance of Nineveh," and "The Cradle of Christ"; many anthems and services, carols, etc. He is the author of four of Novello's Primers on the subject of Counterpoint, Organ Accompaniment, and "Musical Gestures." He was knighted in '97, and received the Royal Victorian Order (4th Class) for his services as director of the music at the Coronation of King Edward VII. in 1902. Addresses: The Cloisters, Westminster Abbey; Cairnbarrow, Huntly, N.B.

Bridge, Admiral Sir Cyprian A. G., G.C.B., was b. March 15th, 1839, and entered the Navy in '53. He served in the Russian war in '54, in the Indian Mutiny, and with the Naval Brigade on the Burmese frontier. He has had a long and active career, was Director of Naval Intelligence '89-94, and Commander-in-Chief on the Australian station '95-8. In Feb. 1901 he was chosen by the Admiralty to succeed Sir E. H. Seymour as Commander-in-Chief on the China station on his retirement from that post in June 1901, and he held that command till 1904. He was appointed in 1904 by the Board of Trade to report on the North Sea outrage. 1, Eaton Terrace, S.W.

Brisson, Henri, is the son of a barrister, and was b. at Bourges July 31st, 1835. Having joined the Paris Bar, he took up journalism and founded the Avenir National. After the fall of the empire he was appointed a deputy-mayor of Paris '70, and in '71 became a deputy. He was elected Vice-President of the Chamber in '79, President in '81, succeeding Gambetta in that position, and Premier in '85; an unsuccessful candidate for the Presidency in '87; he retained, however, a prominent position as a Radical leader, and presided over the Panama Inquiry Committee. President of the Chamber '96-8, and formed a Radical administration in June '98, which only lasted till October. He has continued to give a loyal support to the subsequent Republican governments.

British and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society. Founded 1839, its first President being Thomas Clarkson. The objects of the Society are; "The universal extinction of slavery and the slave trade; and the protection of the rights and interests of the enfranchised population in the British possessions, and of all persons captured as slaves." Patron, H.M. the King; Journal, The Anti-Slavery Reporter; President, Sir T. F. Buxton, Bart., G.C.M.G.; Secretary, Travers Buxton. Office, 51, Denison House, Vauxhall Bridge Road, S.W.

THE BRITISH

The British Empire consists of

- (1) The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland,
- (2) The Empire of India, and
- (3) The British Dominions beyond the seas, including all Colonies, Protectorates, and Dependencies, the whole forming one empire under Edward VII. (q.v.), King and Emperor, whose title rests upon the Act of Settlement, 1701, which settled the succession to the throne on the Princess Sophia of Hanover and the "heirs of her body being Protestants."

We furnish below a table showing the geographical distribution of the various parts of the Empire, their capitals, area, population, public revenue and expenditure, imports and exports, the dates at which they were acquired, and their political status and government. The dependencies are classified thus:—(a) Colonies possessing a full constitution, with responsible government; (b) colonies in which the legislature is partly elective and partly controlled by the governor, styled representative government; (c) Crown colonies, which are ruled directly by the Imperial Government, through their respective governors and local officials; (d) dependencies subordinate to the government of others, provinces and parts of colonies, administered by functionaries appointed by the governments on which they are dependent; (e) protectorates, internally independent, but more or less subject to British control, by treaty and otherwise; (f) places nominally belonging to Great Britain, but either unoccupied or not under authority. Territories occupied by troops, but not declared to be actually British possessions (e.g., Egypt, Soudan), have not been included in this table, and many small possessions, like the numerous islands in the Pacific, are not given a place.

Following the table will be found fully descriptive articles upon India and the Colonies and Dependencies. The figures given in the table are as far as possible the latest received in England.

The area of the British Empire was estimated in the General Report on the 1901 Census (Cd. 2174, 1904) at 11,876,745 sq. m., and the population at 400,543,713, made up thus—

In '37 the area of the British Empire was estimated at 8,329,000 sq. m., and in '61 it was about the same figure. Of the total, 9,115,000 sq. m. are under settled government, the self-governing colonies alone covering about 7,000,000 sq. m.

In '37 the population of the British Empire was 168,000,000; in '61 it was estimated at 175,000,000; in '71 at 235,000,000; in '81 over 254,000,000; in '91 nearly 372,000,000; and in 1901 it had reached over 400,000,000.

In '37 there were about 25,750,000 British in the United Kingdom and about 1,500,000 in the Colonies, making a total of 27,250,000. In 1905 there were 43,220,000 British in Great Britain and 10,780,000 in the Colonies, giving a total of 54,000,000.

The total revenues of the Empire amounted to about £75,000,000 in 1837, the United Kingdom having a revenue of £50,000,000, and India and the Colonies about £25,000,000. In 1903 the revenues of the Empire amounted to £317,000,000.

I. THE UNITED KINGDOM.

The plan of the ANNUAL is such that it has been found advisable to place under separate headings the articles which describe the parliamentary, local government, military, naval, educational, financial, legal, mercantile and commercial, religious, industrial and general constitution and activities of the United Kingdom, and a reference to the Index will enable these articles to be consulted with ease.

Isle of Man. Lies in the Irish Channel, equidistant from England, Scotland, and Ireland. Area, 220 sq. m.; pop. 54,752. Divisions are 6 sheadings (or counties) and 17 civil parishes. Castletown is the ancient capital, but Douglas (pop. 19,149) is the chief town and the seat of government. There are peculiar breeds of ponies, cattle, cats, etc. Government is "home rule" under a Governor, who, with Council and House of Keys of 24 members, makes up the Tynwald Court. Acts, after assent of the Crown, must be proclaimed on Tynwald Hill. The Deemsters are Judges of the Common Law Division of the High Court. Industries are farming, fishing, mining of lead, copper, iron, zinc, and reception of tourists. The land is in a high state of cultivation. Railways exist between the various towns. The Manx people are mostly of Celtic nationality. Their language and old customs are gradually disappearing.

Lieutenant-Governor, Lord Raglan.—Clerk of the Rolls and Judge of the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice, Thomas Kneen.—First Deemster, Stewart Stevenson Moore.—Second Deemster, C. T. C. Callow.—Attorney-General, George Alfred Ring.—Receiver-General, Col. Anderson.

The Channel Islands lie in the southern part of the English Channel, 10 to 30 miles from the French coast. Anciently an appanage of the Duchy of Normandy, they have belonged to England since the Conquest. Total area about 76 sq. m.; pop. 95,841. Divided into two separate governments, called Bailiwicks, that of Jersey (area 45 sq. m., pop. 52,706), and that of Guernsey (area, with Alderney, Sark, Herm, Jethou, etc., 31 sq. m., pop. 43,045). The capitals are respectively St. Helier and St. Pierre. Each Bailiwick enjoys a kind of autonomy. The Crown appoints a Lieutenant-Governor and a Bailiff to each, and each has its representative legislature called the States. The English Church is the established religion, and the islands are included in the see of Winchester. Relics of Norman customs survive in the administration. The people are an intermixture of French and English. Granitic rock is the foundation of the islands. They are extremely fertile and picturesque. Agriculture is largely carried on, and the greenhouse culture of grapes, tomatoes, flowers and vegetables has increased considerably of late years. The fisheries are important, embracing lobster, oysters and cod.

JERSEY: Lieutenant-Governor, Major-Gen. Hugh S. Gough, C.B., C.M.G.—Bailiff, Sir William H. Venables Vernon, Kt.—Dean, Very Rev. Samuel Falle, M.A.—Attorney-General, A. Hilgrove Turner, Esq.—Vicomte, R. R. Lemprière, Esq.—Solicitor-General, H. Le V. dit Durell, Esq.—Government Secretary, W. Whitaker Maitland, Esq.—H.M. Receiver-General, Capt. C. E. Malet-de-Carteret.—Greffier, E. Le Sueur, Esq.

GUERNSEY, SARK, ALDERNEY, ETC.: Lieutenant-Governor and Commanding Troops, Maj.-Gen. B. B. D. Campbell, C.V.O., C.B.—Bailiff, Sir Henry Giffard, K.C.—Dean, Very Rev. Thos. Bell, M.A., Hon. Canon of Winchester.—H.M. Procureur, E. C. Ozanne.—H.M. Comptroller, A. Wm. Bell.—Gov. Secretary, Col. Wm. Bell, C.B.—Receiver-General, Col. A. H. Collings.—H.M.'s Greffier, Q. le Pelley, Esq.

II. THE EMPIRE OF INDIA.

India is a dependency of Great Britain, consisting partly of territory under the direct administration of British officials, and partly of native states, all subordinate, in varying degrees of relationship, to the suzerain power. The nine great provinces are Madras, Bombay, Bengal, the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, the Punjab, Burma, Eastern Bengal and Assam, the Central Provinces, and the North-Western Frontier Province. The British territory in India was acquired by the East India Company, by conquest or treaty, in the course of one hundred years, dating from the battle of Plassey (1757). As a result of the mutiny of the Sepoy army (1857-8), the East India Company ceased to exist; and the direct sovereignty was vested by the Government of India Act, '58, in the Crown. In accordance with the Royal Titles Act of '76, the King of Great Britain and Ireland assumes the additional title of Emperor of India. The Parliament of the United Kingdom is, of course, supreme over India; but this supremacy is enforced rather by means of Ministerial responsibility than by direct legislation. Practically, all the statutes relating to India are in the nature of either constitutional enactments or financial provisions.

The Act of Parliament that abolished the Company also created a Secretary of State for India, together with a Council of twelve members, selected for a period of ten years from among Indian ex-officials for the most part, whose names are given on p. 52. The main duty of the Council is to control the expenditure of the Indian revenues, both in India and elsewhere, and generally to conduct the business done in England in regard to the government of India. In England every measure concerning India runs in the name of the Secretary of State; and he alone is responsible to Parliament. In practice he is always a Cabinet minister of the first rank.

In India the supreme authority, both executive and legislative, is vested in the Governor-General in Council. The Governor-General, or Viceroy, who is generally appointed for five years, and receives a salary of £16,720 a year, has power to overrule his Council in cases of emergency. For ordinary purposes the Council is composed of six members, all appointed, like the Governor-General himself, by the Crown for a period of five years. The work of the Council is distributed amongst the departments of Finance, Commerce, Home Affairs, Revenue and Agriculture, Army, Military Supply, Legislation, and Public Works. The Foreign Department is under the special care of the Viceroy. For personnel of Governor-General's Council see p. 52. For purposes of legislation this Council is augmented by sixteen additional members, nominated by the Governor-General, of whom one-half must be non-official persons, and of whom some are always natives. The seat of the Supreme Government is Calcutta, with an annual migration to the hill station of Simla for the hot season.

As to the Indian Army see pp. 24, 25.

As regards the work of administration, Madras and Bombay, which boast a historic existence for two centuries, are styled Presidencies, and enjoy a certain precedence, are each ruled by a Governor, appointed by the Crown, with legislative and executive councils modelled on those of the Governor-General. They each possess an army and a civil service of their own. Bengal, the United Provinces, the Punjab, Burma, and Eastern Bengal and Assam are each under a Lieut.-Governor appointed by the Viceroy with the approval of the Crown, and have each a legislative council. The Central Provinces and the N.W. Frontier Province are under a Chief Commissioner appointed by the Viceroy in Council. A Chief Commissioner presides over each of the following: Coorg, Ajmere-Merwara, British Baluchistan, and the Andaman Islands. In addition, there are some smaller tracts under the direct administration of the Governor-General. Within the provinces, and under the control of the secretariat, or central provincial bureau, the actual unit of administration is the District, which forms the charge of an officer, usually styled Collector or Deputy-Commissioner. His principal duties are executive, magisterial, and fiscal; but he also exercises supervision over police, jails, schools, public works, forests, etc. The Districts, of which there are 259 in British India, are combined into Divisions under Commissioners. As to justice, the Collector in each District is usually judge both of first instance and appeal. Madras, Bombay, Bengal and the United Provinces have each a High Court, from which there is an ultimate appeal to the Privy Council in England. The Punjab has a Chief Court, and Burma, the Central Provinces, Oudh and Sind have each a Judicial Commissioner, Burma having also a Chief Court. For local government purposes there are the municipal bodies, numbering about 746, in all towns of sufficient size, appointed on the elective principle as to the majority, but with some Government members in all cases, and having charge of municipal business generally, including the care of roads, fairs and markets, open spaces, water supply, drainage, education, hospitals, etc. In the rural districts there are about 1087 district and local boards, having charge of local roads, sanitation, education, hospitals, etc. Port Trustees have charge of harbour works, pilotage, etc.

The staff of administration consists of: (1) the covenanted civil service, appointed after competitive examination in England; (2) the statutory civil service, selected from among natives; (3) military officers of the staff corps in civil employ; (4) a miscellaneous class of uncovenanted civil servants of different grades, who may be either Europeans or natives.

The Indian Civil Service, besides the ordinary departments of civil administration, includes judicial posts, the medical service, the forest department, and officers of the staff corps in civil employ. Candidates are required to pass a competitive examination in England—which examinations are as a rule held annually during August in London. Candidates must be above 22 and under 24 on Aug. 1st of the year in which the examination is held. Application for admission to the examination must be made on or before July 1st in each year to the Secretary, Civil Service Commission, London, W. Applications for information as to the India Forest Service and India Police Force should be addressed to the Secretary, Judicial and Public Department, India Office, London, S.W.

Religion. The Hindu religion is professed by over 207,000,000, or nearly three-fourths of the whole population. The Mohammedans number about 62,500,000 adherents, the Buddhists about 9,500,000 (chiefly in Burma), and Christians (in 1901) 2,923,349. The number of Christians in '91 was 2,284,380, and the increase in the ten years amounted to 28 per cent., a much greater rate than that shown by the general population. The majority of the native Christians are to be found in the Madras Presidency. The Parsis numbered 94,200 in 1901.

Educational institutions are of two kinds—public, which are under the Department of Public Instruction, and private, which are not. There are five universities, with 198 affiliated colleges for arts, Oriental learning, and professional courses; 5,817 secondary schools, with 679,769 scholars; and 106,461 primary schools, with 3,630,155 pupils. Including the private institutions, the number of scholars is about 5,036,240, of whom 560,341 are girls.

The large majority of the population are engaged in agricultural pursuits, nearly 200,000,000 being either engaged in tilling the soil or dependent upon those so engaged; and the land-tax is, next to the income from railways, the chief source of Indian revenue. There is an Agricultural Department in every large province, for the purpose of improving agricultural methods and disseminating information, with an Inspector-General of Agriculture appointed by the Supreme Government. Metal and textile workers, glass and pottery workers, with their dependants, number close on 20,000,000, and there are large numbers employed in service. Great irrigation works have been carried out, the area irrigated being over 31,000,000 acres. The principal crops cultivated are rice, wheat, millet, pulse, and other food grains, oil-seeds, tea, cotton, sugar-cane, tobacco, and indigo. The area devoted to tea in 1905 was 527,290 acres, chiefly in Assam and Bengal, and the production was 221,488,120 lbs., the greater part of which was exported to the United Kingdom. There were 212,832 acres under coffee, and the production was 31,178,716 lbs. The cultivation of opium is a Government monopoly, and is restricted to Bengal and the United Provinces, with a small cultivation for local use in the Punjab and Ajmere-Merwara and on the frontier of Upper Burma. The Government receive the crop and manufacture it at the factories at Patna and Ghazipur for the foreign market. Malwa opium is grown in Baroda and in some of the Native States, and heavy duties are levied on the exports of this opium, a duty being also paid to the Indian Treasury. All salt imported into or manufactured in India has to pay duty. There are 13,017,092 acres under cotton. See article on TEXTILE INDUSTRIES.

There are two kinds of tenure under which the land is held. The first, the Zamindari tenure, prevails principally in Bengal, the Punjab, and the United Provinces, while it also exists in the Central Provinces, Madras, and Assam. Under this system the land is held in large estates, averaging about 800 acres, by zamindari and by village communities, and the state revenue is assessed and paid on each estate as a whole for stated periods. About 318,000,000 acres are held under this system. The rayat-wari system prevails in Bombay, Madras, Sind, Burma, Assam, and to some extent in the Central Provinces. Under this system the land is held by petty proprietors direct from the Government, and the revenue is assessed with each holding, and is paid directly to the State. About 278,000,000 acres are held under this system. The land revenue in 1904-5 amounted to £18,953,997.

Special attention is paid to afforestation, and huge forest tracts have been demarcated and reserved in recent years, while the Forest Department has a less complete control over the "protected" and "unclassified" forests. The forest area in 1904-5 was 68,560,296 acres. The country is rich in coal, though little mining has as yet been done. The production in 1905 was 8,417,739 tons, of which more than four-fifths came from Bengal. The railways of India have been constructed either by private companies to which the State guarantees interest, or directly by the State. The total number of miles open for traffic in 1906 was 28,617, and 3297 miles were under construction. The chief exports are wheat, rice, jute, cotton, hides and skins, opium, indigo, tea, and oil-seeds.

The principal Indian journals are largely the organs representative of the services or the English trading classes living at the centres of government. In Calcutta, the leading dailies are the Englishman, which claims to be the oldest English paper in India, the Indian Daily News, and the Statesman, which advocates a Liberal policy. In Madras there are the Mail, Times, and Standard; at Bombay the Times of India and the Gazette; at Allahabad the Pioneer, at Lucknow the Daily Telegraph, at Lahore the Civil and Military Gazette, at Delhi the Morning Post, and in Burma the Rangoon Times. There are a large number of vernacular papers published in India.

Indian National Congress. Some twenty years ago a movement took definite shape, among the educated classes of India of all races, religions, and provinces—to meet together and discuss their political wants. Hitherto the people of India had been widely separated from one another by differences of language, creed, and caste; and these differences had been intensified by distance. It was the English Government that for the first time made it possible for them to unite in a common object. The original stimulus came from the education in English, which is given in all the colleges and higher schools, and in many of the common schools; but the scheme could never have been realised if it had not been for the development of the railway system. The first Indian National Congress was held at Bombay in Dec. '85; the president was Mr. W. C. Bonnerjee, a Bengal Brahmin. The twenty-first Congress was held in Benares in December 1905, under the presidency of the Hon. Gopal Krishna Gokhale, C.I.E. The Chairman of the British Committee is Sir W. Wedderburn. The official report of the various sessions of the Congress may be obtained from the British Committee, 84 and 85, Palace Chambers, Westminster, S.W. A weekly journal, named India, "a record and review of Indian affairs," is published at the same address. India publishes a full report of all proceedings in Parliament relating to Indian affairs.

The area of British territory alone (excluding native states) is 1,087,249 sq. m., and the population (1901) 231,899,507. The total area of India, including Burma and the native states, is given as 1,766,597 sq. m., and the total population, according to the census taken in 1901, numbers 294,361,056. The population of Calcutta is 1,125,400, Bombay 776,006, Madras 509,346, Haidarabad 448,466, Lucknow 264,049, Rangoon 234,881, Delhi 208,575, Benares 209,331. The revenue for 1902-3 was £77,434,915; 1903-4, £83,756,155; 1904-5, £84,812,971. The expenditure was: 1902-3, £74,365,366; 1903-4, £80,759,755; 1904-5, £81,356,905. The public debt is £81,529,000 in India, and £132,887,000 in England. The imports for 1903-4 were £87,412,254, and for 1904-5 £95,948,000. The exports were, 1903-4, £112,374,027; and 1904-5, £116,002,000. Of the imports on private account 65·2 per cent. come from the United Kingdom, and the balance from the colonies and from foreign countries; of the exports 27·5 per cent. go to the United Kingdom, 28·5 to European countries, and the balance to other foreign countries and the colonies. There is a general duty of 5 per cent. on the value of goods imported, the chief exceptions being railway material, industrial and agricultural machinery, food-grains, some raw materials, etc., which are admitted free; cotton goods which pay 3½%, and iron and steel which pay 1%.

Burma comprises a vast tract of country in southern Asia, bounded on the north and west by the mountainous ranges of Tibet, Assam, and Manipur, on the east by Chinese territory, and partly on the south-east by Siam. There are three great tribal families in the country, the chief of which is the Mran-má (from which the word Burma is derived); and while distinct from the Aryans in India and the Chinese on the other side, the natives to some extent partake of the peculiarities of both. Area, 236,738 sq. m.; pop. 10,490,624. The Chins or Kachins are inhabitants of the outlying highlands of the Bhamo and Katha districts of Upper Burma. The Shan States lie between Burma and Indo-China.

Lieutenant-Governor, Sir H. Thirkell White, K.C.I.E.

Legislative Council: Maung Shwe Waing, F. C. Gates, H. W. V. Colebrook, R. S. Giles, J. P. Hay, M.V.O., Maung Ba Tu.

Secretaries to the Government: Chief Secretary, F. C. Gates.—Revenue Secretary, R. E. V. Arbuthnot.—Secretary, W. F. Rice.—Financial Commissioner, W. T. Hall.—Public Works Department, H. W. V. Colebrook.

Eastern Bengal and Assam is a Lieutenant-Governorship constituted in 1905 from those districts of Bengal Proper which lie east of the Ganges together with the province of Assam. Capital, Dacca, in Eastern Bengal. The population is entirely rural, and almost every kind of useful vegetable product is grown. In Assam the cultivation and manufacture of tea is the great commercial industry of the country. Area, 101,147 sq. m.; pop. 30,788,134.

Lieut.-Governor, Lancelot Hare, C.S.I., C.I.E., who succeeded Sir Bampfylde Fuller in Aug. 1906.

The Central Provinces contain much wasteland and jungle. Coal is found at Warora, and the only important manufactures are weaving and the working of iron ore. Area, 100,396 sq. m.; pop. 11,990,419. The Berars (area, 17,710 sq. m., pop. 2,754,016), are attached to the Central Provinces for administrative purposes.

Chief Commissioner, J. O. Miller, C.S.I.

Secretaries to the Government: Chief Secretary, H. A. Crump.—Second Secretary, W. N. Maw.—Third Secretary, Capt. T. C. Plowden.—Commissioner of Settlements and Agriculture, C. W. E. Montgomerie.—Judicial Commissioners, S. Ismay, C.S.I., H. V. Drake-Brockman, J. K. Batten.—Public Works Department, G. K. Watts.

The North-Western Frontier Province was created in November 1901 out of the four trans-Indus districts of the Punjab, including the districts of Peshawar, Kohat, Bannu, and Dera Ismail Khan, with the tribal country beyond them, and the political agencies of Dir, Swat, Chitral, the Khaibar, the Kuram, Tochi and Wana. The province was put under a Chief Commissioner resident at Peshawar, aided by a Revenue and a Judicial Commissioner. Area, 16,466 sq. m.; pop. 2,125,480.

Chief Commissioner, Lieut.-Col. Sir H. A. Deane, K.C.S.I.—Judicial Commissioner, C. E. F. Bunbury.—Revenue Commissioner, M. F. O'Dwyer.—Inspector-General of Police, H. H. G. Rotton.

The Andaman and Nicobar Islands (area, 3188 sq. m., pop. 24,649, including 1882 Andamanese, 6511 Nicobarese, and 16,256 resident in the convict settlement) lie in the Bay of Bengal. They are administered by a Chief Commissioner. The Andamans contain valuable forests, and the Nicobars produce coconuts. The convict settlement is in the Andaman Islands.

Chief Commissioner, Major H. A. Browning.

Ajmer-Merwara (area, 2711 sq. m., pop. 476,912) (in Rajputana) has a population consisting mainly of Hindus, though there are 72,000 Mahometans.

Chief Commissioner, E. G. Colvin, C.S.I.

Coorg (area, 1582 sq. m., pop. 180,607) is another minor district. Chief Commissioner, S. M. Fraser, C.I.E. (Resident at Mysore).

Baluchistan is a country in southern Central Asia, lying to the south of Afghanistan, and extending to the Persian Gulf. Persia is on the west and British India on the east. It includes (1) British Baluchistan, consisting of Quetta and the Bolan, held on a perpetual lease from the Khan of Khelat since '83, Sibi, Pishin and other districts assigned to Britain by the treaty of Gundamak, etc.; (2) the Native States of Khelat and Las Bela; and (3) the Tribal Areas inhabited by the Marri and Bugti tribes. The total area is about 132,315 sq. m.; population some 1,050,000 tribesmen. The British territory is now administered from Quetta as the headquarters by the Agent to the Governor-General. It has an area of 45,804 sq. m.; pop. 308,246. There are five administrative districts under Political Agents, one of whom is also Agent for Khelat. The principal chief of the native states is Sir Mir Mahmud Khan, G.C.I.E., Khan of Khelat, who receives an annual subsidy from the Indian Government of 100,000 rupees a year. He succeeded his father in '93. The ruling chief of Las Bela is Jam Mir Kamal Khan, who succeeded in '96. Khelat has an area of 73,025 sq. m.; pop. 637,127. Area of Las Bela 641 sq. m.; pop. 56,109. The Tribal Areas 7129 sq. m.; pop. 39,000. The country is of great strategic importance, commanding the numerous passes to the south of the great caravan route through the Gomal to Ghuzni, Kabul, and Kandahar. The construction of the Quetta-Nushki Railway line was sanctioned in 1902. It is about 82 miles long, and was estimated to cost in all 70 lakhs of rupees. The route selected involved passing through three mountain barriers—viz., the Chiltan, the Mashelak, and the southern tail of the Khwaja Amran range, which separate the Quetta Plateau from the Nushki Plain, by the intermediate steps of the Mastung and Sharud Plains. It was completed in the autumn of 1905.

Agent to the Governor-General, Major Sir A. H. McMahon, K.C.I.E., C.S.I.

Bhutan is a small independent state in the Eastern Himalayas, bounded on the north-east and north-west by Tibet and on the south by British India. The population is mostly Bhudist and Mongolian. Part of Tibet runs between Sikkim and Bhutan, and forms the valley of Chumbi, through which is the best route from India to Tibet. The Indian Government pay the leading chiefs, the principal of whom is the Tongsa Penlop, Sri Offen Wang Chuk, K.C.I.E., a subsidy of 50,000 rupees. Area, 17,000 sq. m.: pop. about 25,000.

Nepal. A kingdom in the Himalayas, with Tibet on the north, Sikkim on the east, and British India on the south and west, which is independent, but maintains friendly relations with the Indian Government, who have a Resident at the capital, Katmandu (pop. 50,000). The population is of mixed character, but the Ghoorkas predominate. The ruler is the Maharajah Dhiraj, born August 8th, '75, and succeeded in '81. Area about 54,000 sq. miles; pop. estimated at from 2,000,000 to 5,000,000.

Resident (at Katmandu), Major J. Manners Smith, V.C., C.I.E. (officiating).

Sikkim is a feudatory state in the Himalayas, bounded on the north and east by Tibet, on the south by Darjiling, and on the west by Nepal. It is under the protection of Great Britain, which controls both its foreign relations and internal affairs, a Political Agent advising the Maharaja and his Council. Trade with Tibet is carried on through Sikkim. Area, 2818 sq. m.; pop. 59,014.

Native States in India.

The native or feudatory states occupy more than one-third of the country. The British Government has control over them, but not of the direct character which it exercises over the wholly British territory. Some, but not all, of these states pay tribute to the supreme Government. The nature of British control over these states varies, and is exerted chiefly through a Political Resident, who assists the native prince. These princes can manage their internal affairs, but have no power to make war or peace. Their external relations are in the hands of the Supreme Government, and they can only maintain a limited military force. The area and population of these states are as follows:—

	Area.	Pop. 1901.
Haidarabad . . .	82,698	11,141,142
Baroda . . .	8,099	1,952,692

Residents: At Baroda, Lieut.-Col. M. J. Meade,

C.I.E., I.A.; at Hyderabad, C. S. Bayley, C.S.I.; at Kashmir, Sir F. E. Younghusband, K.C.I.E.; at Mysore, S. M. Fraser, C.I.E.

History, 1906.

In the House of Commons, during the debate on the Address, an amendment was moved (Feb. 26th) that "such modifications should be made in the form of administration in Bengal as will tend to allay the existing discontent" at the partition of the province. Mr. Morley said there had been a great subsidence in the feeling against the redistribution of the province, and he did not think it desirable or defensible to attempt to reconstruct Bengal or to restore the old distribution of power in that area. At the same time he was bound to say that nothing was ever worse done so far as the disregard which was shown to the feelings and opinion of the people concerned. The amendment further represented that the reasonable demands of the Indian people for a larger share in the administration of their affairs should receive the consideration of the Government. Mr. Morley, in his reply, said that the officials who had most dealings with the people of India admitted that they had in them admirable material on which, by-and-by and step by step, a system should be built up under which they should have a far greater share than they now had in the government.

In presenting the Indian Budget (July 20th) Mr. Morley gave an outline of the Government's future policy. Referring to the number of amendments on the paper, he said that they meant, if they meant anything, that the government of India by this country was a bad failure. He did not believe a word of it. After announcing the estimated surplus for the year, and the remission of the salt duty which it was intended to make, he referred to the State railways, the State canals, and the State forests, and said that India was not "an inert and lifeless bureaucracy of official machinery, but a great vital scheme of government." That India was a poor country he did not deny; that the system of government was costly he knew; that it was extravagant he suspected; but there was not one of these three things he could not say of his own country. Having argued that free trade was absolutely essential to India, and referred to military expenditure and the scheme of Lord Kitchener, he said a stage had been reached in the gradual and inevitable working out of Indian policy which made it wise and in the natural order of things that they should advance with a firm, courageous, and intrepid step some paces further on the path of continuous rational improvement in the Indian system of government. A new spirit was abroad, and they must face and recognise it with candour and consideration. They could not transplant British institutions wholesale to India, but they could transplant the spirit of British institutions. He indicated his view that more time should be given to the discussions of the Budget in Calcutta, and referred to the question of the moving of amendments to the proposals of the Viceroy and his advisers, and the extension of the representative element in the Legislative Council. On these three points the Viceroy had appointed a Committee to consider what reforms were possible.

The commencement of the Royal tour made by the Prince and Princess of Wales was recorded in the 1906 ANNUAL. They landed at Bombay on Nov. 9th, 1905, and by the time that they embarked again at Karachi, on March 10th, 1906, on the conclusion of the tour, they had travelled over 8000 miles by rail, besides making the voyage from Calcutta to Rangoon and thence back to Madras.

III. COLONIES, PROTECTORATES, ETC.

COLONIAL OFFICE.

The authority of the Crown throughout our colonial dependencies is exercised by the Secretary of State for the Colonies, now the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Elgin, K.G., who took office in Sir Henry Campbell Bannerman's Government in Dec. 1905. Governors of Colonies are selected from those whose names he submits for the King's approval; the enactments of all colonial legislatures come before him for approval or disallowance, and in some cases the veto has been exercised; and in his office the constitution of new colonial legislatures is planned. The direct executive action of the department is mainly confined to Crown Colonies, Protectorates, etc. (for a full list of which see table, pp. 46-9). In the self-governing Colonies the department is the channel of communication in regard to all matters arising in the Colonies affecting foreign powers and matters of general Imperial concern. An Emigrants' Information Office (q.v.) is attached to the department. Colonies having responsible governments are represented in London by High Commissioners or Agents-General. The names and offices of the various Agents-General will be found under the alphabetical headings of the various colonies which they represent. The British Settlements Act '87 enables His Majesty in Council to provide for the government of his possessions acquired by settlement, and by Order in Council to establish all such laws and institutions, and constitute such courts and officers, and make such provisions and regulations for the administration of justice, as may appear to be necessary.

Permanent Under-Secretary of State, Sir Montagu F. Ommanney, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., I.S.O.

Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, Winston S. Churchill, M.P.

Assistant Under-Secretaries, Frederick Graham, C.B.; C. P. Lucas, C.B.; (Legal) Hugh B. Cox, C.B.; R. L. Antrobus, C.B.

Librarian, C. Atchley, I.S.O.

Chief Registrar, W. F. Westbrook.

Crown Agents for the Colonies.

The Crown Agents for the Colonies act as commercial and financial agents in the United Kingdom for all the Crown Colonies, for the government of which the Colonial Secretary of State is by the necessities of their constitution ultimately responsible. They receive instructions directly from the Colonial Governments, only referring to the Colonial Secretary when they have reason to think that he has it under consideration to suspend or modify a particular work or service. The expenditure for articles supplied by the Crown Agents requires the sanction of the Colonial Secretary, but the responsibility for this rests upon the Colonial Governments and not upon the Crown Agents.

The following are the Colonies or Protectorates for which the Crown Agents transact business in this country: Bahamas, Barbados, Basutoland, Bechuanaland Protectorate, Bermuda, British Central Africa, British Guiana, British Honduras, Ceylon, Cyprus, East Africa Protectorate, Falkland Islands, Fiji, Gambia, Gibraltar, Gold Coast, Hong Kong, Jamaica, Leeward Islands (Antigua, Dominica, Montserrat, St. Kitts-Nevis, Virgin Islands), Malta, Mauritius, Newfoundland, Northern Nigeria, Southern Nigeria, Orange River Colony, St. Helena, Seychelles Islands, Sierra Leone, Somaliland Protectorate, Straits Settlements (Singapore, Penang and Malacca, and Native States of Perak, Selangor, Pahang, Negri Sembilan); Transvaal, Tobago, Trinidad, Turks Islands, Uganda Protectorate, Wei-Hai-Wei, and the Windward Islands (Grenada, St. Lucia, St. Vincent). The Crown Agents also act as Agents for the South African Constabulary, the Uganda Railway, the Central South African Railways, the King's African Rifles, the West African Frontier Force, the Government of Zanzibar, and the Tanjong Pagar Dock Board, Singapore.

The Stock Transfer Office is at 1, Tokenhouse Buildings, E.C.

The Crown Agents are—

Sir E. E. Blake, K.C.M.G.,

Major M. A. Cameron, C.M.G., late R.E.

W. H. Mercer, Esq., C.M.G.,

Offices, Whitehall Gardens, S.W.

Secretary, P. H. Ezechiel.—Chief Clerk and Accountant, E. G. Antrobus.—Registrar of Inscribed Stocks, C. F. R. H. Urquhart.—Chief Cashier, L. Adams.—Head of Engineering and Works Branch, Major J. F. Carmichael, R.E.—Head of Engineering Inspection Branch, A. M. Heath, A.M.I.C.E.—Head of General Stores Branch, H. F. Smith.—Head of Shipping Branch, W. E. James.—Head of Appointments Branch, H. Martin.

Colonial Officers and Trade Inquiries.

Officers have been designated in most of the Colonies to receive and answer commercial inquiries addressed to them, either by the Commercial Intelligence Branch of the Board of Trade, or by British merchants and traders who may seek advice. It is suggested that, in all cases, commercial inquiries should go through the Commercial Intelligence Branch of the Board of Trade, 73, Basinghall Street, London, E.C., as the information may sometimes be already available at that Branch. Special Trade Inquiry offices are also located at 73, Basinghall Street in regard to India, Canada, Queensland, Cape Colony, Transvaal, and the Orange River Colony..

COLONIES IN EUROPE.

Gibraltar. Ruled as a Crown colony by the military Governor. The name is a corruption of Jebel el Tarik, the Mount of Tarik. A rocky promontory, 2½ miles long and with an extreme breadth of ¾ mile, on the south of Spain, connected with Andalusia by a low isthmus, and is a British fortress and the "key" of the Mediterranean. Area, 1½ sq. m.; pop. 19,326, excluding the garrison, which in 1906 numbered 6,339. The rock rises to 1439 feet, and is impregnablely fortified. The town lies within the bay, on the western side. Anchorage is bad. The port is free, and is the entre-pôt of a considerable trade between North Africa and the United Kingdom. It is also a coaling station of first-rate importance.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief, General Sir F. W. E. F. Forestier-Walker, G.C.M.G., K.C.B.—Colonial Secretary, Fred. Evans, C.M.G., C.V.O.—Treasurer and Collector, A. C. Greenwood.—Chief Justice, Sir H. R. P. Schooles.—Attorney-General, A. M. Coll, K.C.

Malta. A Crown colony. Anciently Melita. Situated in the Mediterranean, 56 miles south of Sicily. With smaller islands, Gozo and Comino, area 117 sq. m., pop. 205,059, excluding the garrison of about 10,272. Malta itself contains about 158,000 inhabitants. Capital, Valetta, pop. 50,000, a fine city, impregvably fortified, commanding a noble harbour. It is the chief naval and coaling station in the Mediterranean. Executive in the hands of a military Governor and Executive Council. The Council of Government consists of the Governor and the Vice-President, the Lieutenant-Governor and Chief Secretary, 9 official and 8 elected members, and chooses its own president. The Maltese, who speak Italian or English in the upper classes and a dialect of Semitic origin (derived from the Carthaginian and Arabic tongues) in the lower, are nearly all Roman Catholics, and the Government schools, which provide free primary education for children are Roman Catholic also. The chief products are cotton, wine, and corn.

Governor and Commander of the Troops, Gen. Sir C. M. Clarke, Bart., G.C.B., G.C.V.O.—Lieut.-Governor and Chief Secretary to Government, E. M. Merewether, C.V.O., C.M.G.

Cyprus. An island in the Levant, 60 miles south of Asia Minor and 40 west of Syria, occupied by Great Britain under the Convention with Turkey of June 4th, 1878. Area, 3584 sq. m.; pop. (1904) 246,510, of whom 182,739 are Greek Christians and 51,309 Mahometans, and 130 military. Divided into six districts. Capital, Nicosia, pop. 14,752, inland. Chief produce, cotton, wine, caroubs, wheat, barley, wool, silk, spirits, sponges, raisins. The island is administered by a High Commissioner, with an Executive Council of 4 and a Legislative Council of 18, of whom 12 are elected. Under the Convention of '78 an annual tribute of £92,800, with 4,166,220 oke of salt, is payable to the Sultan. There are 496 schools of all classes, with 25,100 scholars.

High Commissioner, Sir C. King Harman, K.C.M.G.

Executive Council: Chief Secretary, Capt. A. H. Young, C.M.G.—King's Advocate, W. Rees Davies.—Receiver-General, Lt.-Col. J. C. Gore.—Additional Members, the Bishop of Kitium, Theophanis Theodotou, and the Chief Cadi.

COLONIES IN ASIA.

Aden. A town and territory on the south coast of Yemen, Arabia, 110 miles east of the Straits of Bab-el-Mandeb. Total area, 80 sq. m.; pop. 41,222. A Resident acts as military and civil governor, subject to the Government of Bombay. The harbour, a very fine one, touched at by 1500 ships annually, is the entrepôt of trade between Europe and America on the one hand, and India, Southern Arabia and the east coast of Africa on the other. It is a coaling station for the British Navy, and as such is strongly fortified. In Nov. 1901 an agreement between Turkey and Great Britain was arrived at for the delimitation of the frontiers and spheres of influence between Yemen and Aden. The islands of Perim and Kuria-Muria off the coast of Arabia, and Socotra off the coast of Africa, are dependencies of Aden. Perim has an area of about five sq. miles, and is used as a coaling depôt for the Mercantile Marine. Socotra has an area of 1382 sq. miles, and a population of 12,000 of Arab descent. Capital, Tamarida. Products, aloes, dates, figs, etc.

Political Resident, Major-Gen. H. M. Mason.

Bahrein Islands. These islands in the Persian Gulf have been under British protection since 1847. The chief town is Moharek, on the island of that name, pop. 22,000; but the commercial capital is Manamah, pop. 25,000. The ruling chief is Sheikh Esa. The British Political Resident resides at Bushire. The chief industry is pearl fishing, but dates and grain are also exported.

British North Borneo (area 31,106 sq. m., pop. 160,000) is not an official dependency, but is the property of the British North Borneo Company, to whom a royal charter was granted in 1881. In '83 a formal protectorate was proclaimed over British North Borneo. The administration of the territory is in the hands of a Governor, assisted by a Council, and by Residents appointed to preside over provinces and districts; the machinery being similar to that in Crown colonies. The British North Borneo Company sells or leases its lands to planters, and derives its revenues from the proceeds of sales and taxes. About 1,000,000 acres have been leased for the cultivation of tobacco, and the industry is rapidly developing. The cultivation of rubber and cotton is being encouraged, and the cocoanut and timber trade is extending. The chief town and seat of the administration is Sandakan; pop. 9500. A railway 100 miles long, inclusive of sidings, runs from Jesselton, Gaya Bay, on the west coast, to Tenom in the interior. Thence another railway some 20 miles long runs from Beaufort Junction to Weston, Brunei Bay.

Court of Directors: Chairman, Sir C. J. Jessel, Bart.; Rear-Admiral Sir Bouverie Clark, K.C.B.; Frederick C. Stoop, Esq.; W. C. Cowie (Managing Director); E. Dent; J. A. Maitland; Major-General Sir Alfred Turner, K.C.B.; Sir J. West Ridgeway, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., K.C.S.I.—Secretary, Harington G. Forbes.—London Office, 37, Threadneedle Street, E.C.

Establishment: Governor and Principal Representative of the Company in North Borneo, Edward Peregrine Gueritz.

Consul-General, (Singapore), Sir J. Anderson, K.C.M.G.

Brunei, or Borneo Proper, is a state in the island of Borneo lying north-east of Sarawak. Area about 3000 sq. m. Capital, Brunei, with a population of about 12,000. It is ruled by a Sultan, Hassim Jalud Alam Akamadin. A protectorate was proclaimed over Brunei by England in '88, and in 1905 a British Resident was appointed with powers to control the general administration of the state.

Ceylon. An island almost joined to the southern extremity of India by a chain of reefs and sandbanks called Adam's Bridge. Its extreme length is 266 miles, and its width 140 miles. It is a Crown colony. Area, 25,333 sq. m.; pop. 3,950,123 at end of 1905. Divided into nine administrative provinces. Capital, Colombo, pop. 158,228. Bulk of population Cingalese, then Tamil coolies, Moormen (Arabs), Eurasians, and Malays. Europeans about 9000. An aboriginal nomadic race, the Veddahs, occupy the interior, but they only number about 2000. The Government is in the hands of a Governor nominated by the Crown, an Executive Council of 5, and a Legislative Council of 17 members, which is composed of the Executive Council, 4 other official members, and 8 non-official members. Colombo, Kandy, and Galle have municipal government, and there are 18 local boards. The basis of the law is Roman Dutch, but the criminal law has been remodelled from the Indian Penal Code. There is an Imperial garrison of about 1800 men. Trincomalee is a fortified naval station, forming the headquarters of the British fleet in East Indian waters, and Colombo harbour is strongly fortified. The chief newspapers are the Observer and the Times. More than half of the population are Buddhists. The Hindus number 828,622, and the Mahometans and Christians number about 248,000 and 362,000 respectively. Education is unsectarian, and in the case of vernacular schools free. Coffee was formerly Ceylon's principal product for export; but tea and the cocoanut palm are now the chief staples, and rubber has rapidly grown to a position of the highest importance. Other products are grain, rice and cinnamon. Experiments are being made with cotton in the dry zones. Railways, owned and worked by the Government, extend 467 miles. The Maldive Archipelago is tributary to Ceylon. It consists of groups of islets 500 miles west of Ceylon, inhabited by a Mahometan population estimated at 30,000. Mali is the chief island. The produce consists of millet, fruit, and coconuts. For Adams's Bridge Railway and Colombo Harbour Works, see ENGINEERING.

Governor, Sir Henry Arthur Blake, G.C.M.G.
Executive Council: Lieut.-Governor and Colonial Secretary, Sir A. M. Ashmore, K.C.M.G.—Commanding the Forces, Colonel (temporary Brigadier-General) R. C. B. Lawrence.—Attorney-General, A. G. Lascelles.—Auditor-General, ———.—Treasurer, H. C. Nicolle.

Hong Kong. An island and Crown colony, situated close to the mouth of the Canton river, and divided from the southern coast of China by the Ly-ee-moon pass. It was ceded to Great Britain in 1841, at the close of the opium war. The peninsula of Kowloon, opposite the island, and the small adjacent Stonecutter's Island, now strongly fortified, with other islets, appertain to the colony. Capital, Victoria (commonly called Hong Kong, pop. 300,000). Area, 32 sq. m.; pop. 356,850. In '93 a portion of territory adjacent to Kowloon, together with Mirs Bay and Deep Bay and the island of Lan-tao, were leased to Great Britain by the Chinese Government for ninety-nine years. The area leased is 376 sq. miles, and is administered as part of the colony: pop. 106,011. Government is in the hands of a Governor, with Executive and Legislative Councils, the latter including 7 official and 6 unofficial members, 4 of whom are nominated by the Governor. The island is our "Eastern Gibraltar," and is both a military and naval station. There is an Imperial garrison of 3798 officers and men, including the Hong Kong Regiment. It is also the great emporium for the European trade with China, and for the local coast trade, and is a free port. Imports, chiefly goods for China, cottons, and other manufactured articles; exports, tea, silk, and other Chinese produce. Of the total tonnage entered and cleared in 1904—viz. 24,754,042 tons—54·31 per cent. was British. A typhoon caused great damage (Sept. 18th, 1906). It was stated that 10,000 Chinese lost their lives, and Bishop Hoare of Victoria was drowned. The damage to property was put at £2,000,000.

Governor, Sir M. Nathan, K.C.M.G.
Executive Council: Officer commanding the Troops, Major-Gen. Villiers Hatton, C.B.—Colonial Secretary, F. H. May, C.M.G.—Attorney-General, Sir H. Berkeley.—Treasurer, A. M. Thomson.—Director of Public Works, W. Chatham.—Principal Civil Medical Officer, Dr. J. M. Atkinson.—Sir C. P. Chater, C.M.G.; E. A. Hewett.

Sarawak lies on the north-west coast of the island of Borneo. Its area is 41,000 sq. m., and pop. 500,000; and in '88 it was constituted an independent state under the protection of Great Britain, all its foreign relations being conducted by H.M. Government. Capital, Kuching; pop. 25,000. Seaboard extends 380 miles. The government was handed over by the Sultan of Brunei in '42 to Sir James Brooke, who ruled as Rajah till '68, when he was succeeded by his nephew, His Highness the Rajah Sir Charles Johnson Brooke, G.C.M.G. The Rajah married, in '69, Margaret Alice Lily de Windt, and his heir is Charles Vyner Brooke, b. Sept. 26th, '74. Under the just and equitable rule of the Brookes, Sarawak has been reclaimed from barbarism. The chief exports are rubber, pepper, and sago flour. Coal is mined on a considerable scale, and gold is also worked.

Wei-hai-wei, which was leased to Great Britain by China by a Convention signed at Peking, July 1st, '98, is a city situated in a deep bay about 18 miles in circumference. The city is on the Shantung promontory, about 40 miles east of Chefoo, and lies nearly opposite Port Arthur. Wei-hai-wei Harbour is sheltered, and can accommodate a large number of vessels. Forts command the entrances to the harbour. With the city and harbour there passed under British jurisdiction the island of Liu-Kung, on the north side of the bay, and all other islands and waters in the bay, together with a belt of land 10 miles wide along the entire coast-line of the bay. The area is 285 sq. m., and the Chinese population is about 150,000, while the sphere of influence over which the British Government holds military rights has an area of 1500 sq. m. Gold and other minerals exist, but have not yet been worked to any extent. The only export is salt fish, sent to Southern China. The territory is administered by a Commissioner under the Colonial Office, residing at Port Edward, on the mainland.

Commissioner, J. H. Stewart Lockhart, Esq., C.M.G. Government Secretary, R. Walter.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

A Crown colony in the Malay Peninsula, deriving its name from the Straits of Malacca, which form the great trade route between India and China. Area about 1542 sq. m.; pop. 603,460, including 281,933 Chinese, 215,058 Malays, and 57,150 natives of India. The capital of the colony and seat of government is Singapore. The Governor (who is also Governor of Labuan) is assisted by Executive and Legislative Councils, the first consisting of nine official members, and the second of these with seven non-official members, two of whom are nominated by the Chambers of Commerce of Singapore and Penang. There are municipal boards partly elected and partly nominated by the Government at Singapore, Penang, and Malacca. The strength of the Imperial garrison is about 2366. The chief exports are tin, tapioca, copra, sago, rice, sugar, gambier, gums, and spices.

The constituent parts are as follows:—Singapore, an island off the southern extremity of the Malay Peninsula, area 206 sq. m., pop. 228,555. It is hilly and forested, fertile, and not unhealthy for Europeans. Chief local products, pepper and gambier. The city of Singapore is a great commercial centre for the East. It has a commodious harbour, protected by fortifications. It is the headquarters of H.M. military and naval forces in these regions. The garrison consists of two battalions of infantry and two garrison companies of artillery. The colony also maintains an armed police force of 2000 officers and men.—Penang, or Prince of Wales' Island, lies 360 miles north of Singapore, and about two miles off the coast of Province Wellesley. Area 107 sq. m., pop., including Province Wellesley and the Dindings, 228,207. The port and capital is Georgetown, better known as Penang. A Resident Councillor controls the administration. Province Wellesley is politically one with Penang. It stretches 45 miles along the coast of the mainland. Area 288 sq. m., pop. 108,117. The Dindings, about 80 miles south of Penang, consist of the island of Pangkor and a small strip of territory on the mainland, where is Lumut, the headquarters, with a fine harbour. Politically this settlement is a part of Penang. Area about 205 sq. m.—Malacca is a town and territory 240 miles south of Penang. Its coast, rocky and barren, extends 42 miles. Area 659 sq. m., pop. 95,487. It is ruled by a Resident Councillor, subject to the Governor of the colony. The chief export is tapioca. Included in the administration of the Straits Settlements are the Cocos (or Keeling) Islands, a small coral group lying some 700 miles S.W. of Java (area 9 sq. m., pop. 669), annexed to Singapore in 1903, and Christmas Island, which lies 200 miles S.W. of Java, and was annexed to Singapore in 1900.

Labuan, an island situated in a bay on the north-west coast of Borneo. Was administered by the British North Borneo Company for the British Government from '89 till Dec. 31st, 1905. It was then put under the administration of the Governor of the Straits Settlements, and by Letters Patent dated Oct. 30th, 1906, the colony was made part of the Straits Settlements. Area 31 sq. m.: pop. 8411, mostly Malays. Port and town, Victoria, pop. 1500. Extensive coal beds exist in the island.

The Protected Malay States.

On the mainland there are several protected Malay States, which, though not part of the colony, are subject to the supervision of a High Commissioner (the Governor of the Straits Settlements), which is exercised through British Residents, who assist the native rulers in the administration of the States. Perak, Selangor, Pahang and Negri Sembilan agreed to form one administrative federation under a British Resident-General in July '96. These countries are rich in natural resources, and for several years Perak and Selangor have exported the greater part of the Straits tin, which now accounts for about 46,000 out of the world's annual output of 75,000 tons of tin. The greater part of the Straits output is smelted at Singapore and goes to America, and an attempt to buy and ship the ore to New York, and smelt it there, was met in 1903 by the imposition of a duty on all tin ore exported without such guarantee as the Resident might require that it would be smelted in the Colony. The soil is fertile, and there are vast areas of forest land available for conversion into plantations; but mining at present makes agriculture a secondary consideration. There are about 340 miles of railway, chiefly in Perak and Selangor. See table, pp. 46-9.

Perak, on the western coast of the peninsula; area 6550 sq. m., pop. 400,000. Capital Taiping. The ports are Teluk Anson and Port Weld.

Selangor adjoins Perak along its southern frontier; area 3200 sq. m., pop. 234,404. The capital is Kuala Lumpur (pop. 77,234), the largest town on the mainland of the Peninsula. Coffee and rubber are grown.

Sungei Ujong and Jelebu, together with Negri Sembilan, the name given to a federation of nine small states lying to the north and east of Malacca, are administered by one Resident, who resides at Seremban. Area 2600 sq. m., pop. 118,747. Planting, especially of coffee, is progressing here.

Pahang, the latest acquired and largest of the Malay States, contains a lot of gold, but needs funds for its development. Area 14,000 sq. m., pop. 85,000.

Johore is an independent Malay State under Sultan Ibrahim, at the southern extremity of the peninsula. The foreign relations of the State, however, are in the hands of the British Government. Area 9000 sq. m., pop. about 200,000. Capital Johore Bharu.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief, Sir J. Anderson, K.C.M.G.

Executive Council: The Governor; Officer commanding H.M. Troops, Major-Gen. Inigo Jones, C.B.—Colonial Secretary, Capt. A. H. Young, C.M.G.—Resident Councillor of Penang, J. K. Birch.—Resident Councillor of Malacca, R. N. Bland.—Attorney-General, ———.—Treasurer, W. Evans.—Auditor-General, E. C. Hill.—Colonial Engineer, A. Murray.

Resident-General for Protected States, Sir W. T. Taylor, K.C.M.G.

BRITISH SOUTH AFRICA.

The office of High Commissioner in and for South Africa was created by Letters Patent in 1878. He represents the Crown in all matters occurring in South Africa beyond the limits of the colonies therein. He is Governor of Basutoland, and controls the administration of the Bechuanaland Protectorate, of Swaziland, and of Rhodesia. In 1900 it was arranged that the office of High Commissioner should be held with that of Governor of the Transvaal and Orange River Colony. The expenses of the High Commissioner are borne partly by Imperial funds. Census returns issued in 1904 showed that in British South Africa, south of the Zambesi, the white population numbered 1,135,016, and the coloured population 5,198,175.

The Central South African Railways operated a length of 1780 miles at the end of Dec. 1905, and there were 644 miles under construction and 259 projected.

A Customs Convention for the five Colonies was agreed to in 1906. It provided for the increase of most of the existing duties, but also for preferential treatment to the extent of a 20-per-cent. reduction in the general ad-valorem rates on British goods and the goods of such British colonies and possessions as should grant reciprocal privileges to the products and manufactures of South Africa. It was stipulated, however, that the goods should be bonâ-fide manufactures of the United Kingdom.

High Commissioner, The Earl of Selborne, G.C.M.G., appointed to succeed Lord Milner March 2nd, 1905.

General Officer Commanding, Lieut.-Gen. Sir H. J. T. Hildyard, K.C.B.

General Manager of Central South African Railways, T. R. Price, C.M.G.

Basutoland. A native province of British South Africa, situated to the north-east of Cape Colony. It lies inclosed between Natal, the Orange River Colony, and Cape Colony. Basutoland was disannexed from Cape Colony in 1884, and has since been administered by a Resident Commissioner, under the High Commissioner for South Africa. The chiefs adjudicate on cases between natives, appeals lying to the Magistrates' Courts, in which all cases between natives and Europeans are heard. A hut tax of £1 per hut is levied, and in 1903 was paid on 603,561 huts. Area, 10,293 sq. m.; pop. 348,848 in 1904, including 805 Europeans. Capital, Maseru; pop. 862. There are 217 schools, with 13,660 scholars. The country includes the finest grain-producing land in South Africa, gold and other minerals are believed to exist, and the climate is magnificent. The chief products are wool, wheat, mealies, and Kaffir corn. The natives keep large herds of cattle. The province is included in the South African Customs Union.

Paramount Chief, Letsie, elected in 1905 on the death of Lerothodi.

Resident Commissioner, H. C. Sloley, C.M.G.

Bechuanaland Protectorate. The Protectorate (area about 386,200 sq. m., pop. 120,776, including 1004 whites, in 1904) extends from the Molopo river in the south northwards to the Zambesi, and is bounded on the east by the Transvaal colony and Matabeleland, and on the west by German South-West Africa. The administration is carried on by a Resident Commissioner, whose headquarters are at Mafeking, under the High Commissioner, with two Assistant Commissioners, one at Palapye and another at Gaberones. A mounted police force maintains order. There is also a small force of native police. The Protectorate includes the lands of Khama, chief of the Bamangwato, lying south-west of Matabeleland, of Sebele, chief of the Bakwena, of Bathoen, chief of the Bangwaketsi, of Linchwe, chief of the Bakhatla, and of Sekgoma, chief of the Batawana, all of whose lands are reserved and delimited, and of Mokgosi, chief of the Bamalete, and Rawe, chief of the Bakhurutzi, whose lands are not proclaimed as reserves. A hut tax is levied. The railway from Cape Town to Kimberley is continued through Vryburg and Mafeking to Palapye, Tati, and Bulawayo.

Resident Commissioner, _____; Assistant Commissioners, J. Ellenberger; Major Panzera.

CAPE COLONY.

Cape Colony occupies the extreme southern portion of Africa. Its boundaries are: west, the Atlantic Ocean; north, the Orange river and the Bechuanaland Protectorate; east, the Orange River Colony, Basutoland, and Natal; south, the Indian Ocean. The area of the colony is 276,995 sq. m., and the pop. 2,409,804. Whites number 579,741, and those of other than European or white races 1,830,063. Capital, Cape Town, pop. 87,483; other chief towns, Port Elizabeth, pop. 23,266, the chief commercial port; Grahamstown, pop. 10,498, the capital of the eastern province; Kimberley, pop. 28,718, the seat of the diamond trade; Queenstown, King Williamstown, and Panmure, or East London. Simon's Bay is an Imperial naval station 22 miles south of Cape Town. The Transkeian Territories and Walfisch Bay have some separate provincial status. The Transkeian Territories and Walfisch Bay (pop. 1015), an isolated port on the coast of Damaraland, are administered by resident magistrates. Pondoland became an integral portion of the colony in March '94, and the Crown colony of Bechuanaland in '95.

The Executive is in the hands of a Governor with a responsible Ministry of five principal ministers. The Parliament consists of a Legislative Council of 26 members, and a House of Assembly of 107 members. Members of the Legislative Council are elected for seven years, and of the Assembly for five years. The members of both Houses are paid £1 1s. per day. The electors are the same in each case, and are qualified as occupiers of property worth £75, or receiving a salary equivalent to £50. The laws are founded on a modification of the Roman-Dutch Law. Both English and Dutch languages are used in Parliament and the Courts. The Colony possesses a complete system of local self-government, 74 elective councils maintaining the roads, and having powers as to public works, licensing and police in all the 77 divisions. There are also 112 municipal councils and 80 village management boards.

The permanent military forces are the Cape Mounted Rifles (790) and Cape Police (1700). There are also 49 Volunteer Corps, numbering 7613, with 12 guns. There is an important Admiralty establishment at Simon's Bay, and Table Bay is strongly fortified. As to Education, there is a University at Cape Town (Royal Charter 1877), and there are more than 2600 State-aided elementary schools, besides private and religious institutions. There is no State Church. The principal denominations are Dutch Reformed, Episcopalian, Independent, Presbyterian, Wesleyan, and Roman Catholic. The colony possesses 2987 miles of Government railway open, 587 miles of privately owned lines worked by Government, and 201 miles of line privately owned and worked. In Aug. 1906 Parliament passed a Bill providing for the construction of 480 miles of line at a cost of £2,026,226. Government lands are granted, leased, or may be rented on easy terms. The chief minerals worked in the colony are copper, coal, and gold. The chief diamond fields are at and near Kimberley, in Griqualand West, and their export in 1905 was valued at £6,758,623. Agricultural operations include the production of wool, wine, wheat and other cereals, and the breeding of horses, cattle, sheep, and ostriches. There are valuable forests. The principal exports are gold, diamonds, wool, mohair, ostrich feathers, hides and skins, copper ore, and aloes. The chief newspapers are the Cape Times (London office: 14, St. Mary Axe); the Argus (which supports the Government, and is published by a company that also publishes the Johannesburg Star, the Bulawayo Chronicle, etc.), the South African News, the Diamond Fields Advertiser, and OnsLand (published tri-weekly) which is the paper of the Dutch colonists. The Owl is a 3d. weekly humorous paper. At East London is published the East London Despatch and at Port Elizabeth the Cape Daily Telegraph (evening).

A Boer filibuster named Ferreira led a raid into the Colony from German S.W. Africa, but was captured, with his followers, on Nov. 17th, 1906, by a detachment of the Cape Mounted Rifles.

Revenue, 1903-4, £9,913,855; 1904-5, £8,505,270; expenditure, 1903-4, £10,862,866; 1904-5, £9,033,501. Imports, 1903-4, £27,658,132; 1904-5, £19,985,245; exports, 1903-4, £27,019,913; 1904-5, £29,862,535. Public debt, 1904, £39,379,104.

Government.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief, Hon. Sir Walter Francis Hely-Hutchinson, G.C.M.G.

Ministry: Premier, The Hon. Dr. L. S. Jameson, C.B., M.D., M.L.A.—Treasurer, The Hon. E. H. Walton, M.L.A.—Colonial Secretary, Col. the Hon. C. P. Crewe, C.B., M.L.A.—Attorney-General, The Hon. Victor Sampson, M.L.A., K.C.—Commissioner for Public Works, The Hon. Dr. T. W. Smartt, M.L.A.—Secretary for Agriculture, The Hon. A. J. Fuller, M.L.A.

Commandant-General of Cape Colonial Forces, Colonel H. T. Lukin, C.M.G., D.S.O.

Agent-General in London, Sir Thomas E. Fuller, K.C.M.G., 100, Victoria Street, S.W.—Secretary, T. Slingsby Nightingale.—Emigration Agent, H. H. Erskine.

NATAL.

A British colony situated on the south-east coast of Africa, discovered by Vasco da Gama on Christmas Day 1497, and hence named Terra Natalis. Seaboard extends a distance of about 376 miles. Portuguese East Africa and the Transvaal border the colony on the north, Orange River Colony and Basutoland on the west, and Cape Colony on the south-west. Area, including Zululand, Amatongaland, and the Vryheid, Utrecht and Wakkerstroom districts transferred from the Transvaal in 1902, 36,434 sq. m.; pop. (1904) 1,108,754, including 97,109 whites, 100,918 Indians and Asiatics, 6686 mixed races, 79,978 natives in service, and 824,063 natives in locations and areas. Capital, Pietermaritzburg, pop. 31,199; the only port is Durban, with a pop. of 79,000.

Zululand and British Amatongaland, which had formerly been administered as a dependent protectorate, were in Dec. '07 made an integral part of the colony. The area of Zululand is about 10,500 sq. m.; pop. 181,000, including 1100 whites. It has 210 miles of seaboard. Gold and other minerals have been found in no inconsiderable quantities, but they have not been worked as yet.

The Transvaal Districts transferred, in 1902, as mentioned above, had an area of 7234 sq. m., and a pop. of 80,250.

Natal is administered by a Governor, a Ministry of 6, a Legislative Council of 12 members, appointed for ten years by the Governor, with the advice of the Ministry, and a Legislative Assembly of 43 members, elected for four years by voters having a property qualification of £50, or paying £10 rent per annum, or having an income of £96. For local government there are municipal corporations at Durban, Pietermaritzburg, Newcastle, Ladysmith and Dundee, and local boards at Verulam, and Greytown.

The military forces are mounted rifles (1000), a field battery (100 men), a composite regiment of 200 men, and an infantry battalion of 500, besides about 1000 Europeans as an armed and mounted police. The naval corps numbers 199.

Many natives live apart in locations provided for them by the Government, about 2,250,000 acres of land being vested for this purpose in the Native Trust. A Native High Court administers civil justice, and deals with all political crimes and crimes arising out of native law and custom—ordinary crimes falling under the ordinary criminal law. Natives can acquire the franchise under certain conditions.

An Act providing for a Poll Tax of £1 on all adult males, including Europeans, natives and Asiatics, was passed in August 1905.

Religion is well provided for by denominational bodies, but no State aid. There are 32 Government primary schools; and a large number of other primary and secondary schools, for both European and native children, are aided and inspected by the Government. The chief products of the colony are wool, cereals, coal (a rapidly growing industry), iron, and sugar. The coal deposits are in the northern portion of the colony, the Dundee district being the best developed area. The output in 1904 was 858,298 tons. There are 710 miles of railway constructed, and worked by the Government. The chief newspapers are the Natal Mercury and the Natal Advertiser.

Revenue, 1903-4, £4,160,145; expenditure, £4,071,439; exports, 1904, £9,400,771; imports, £11,078,650; debt, 1904, £16,019,143.

Governor, His Excellency Sir Henry McCallum, G.C.M.G.

Ministry: Premier and Colonial Secretary, Hon. C. J. Smythe.—Attorney-General, Hon. G. A. de R. Labistour.—Railways and Harbours, Hon. J. E. Maydon.—Treasurer, Hon. T. Hyslop.—Justice, Hon. T. Watt, C.M.G.—Native Affairs and Public Works, Hon. H. D. Winter.—Agriculture, Hon. W. F. Clayton.

Commissioner of Zululand, Sir Charles J. R. Saunders, K.C.M.G.

Legislative Council: Messrs. Crawford (President), Jameson, A. M. Campbell, F. T. Angus, C. J. Labuschagne, D. C. Uys, M. Campbell, Sutton, Kirkman, Turner, Baynes, W. A. Hutchinson, and C. J. A. Birkenstock.

Agent-General in London, The Hon. Sir William Arbuckle, 26, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.—Secretary to Agency, R. Russell, Esq., M.A., B.C.L.

History, 1906.

Early in the year the Government made preparations in case of disturbances among the natives following on opposition to the poll tax which became due on Jan. 1st, and which, it was agreed, should be enforced on March 1st. A body of Zulus attacked a police force who were sent to arrest some natives at Byrnetown, in the Richmond district, near Pietermaritzburg, for resisting the collection of the tax (Feb. 8th). An officer and a trooper were killed, and another officer was wounded. Martial law was at once proclaimed, and a force of Natal Carabineers with artillery proceeded to the spot. Two of the natives implicated were court-martialled and shot in the presence of their tribe (15th), and the kraals and crops of the implicated natives were destroyed. The Premier stated (March 28th) that twelve other natives implicated in the murder had been sentenced to death by court-martial. When this was made known in England the Imperial Government ordered the suspension of the execution of the sentence pending the consideration of the matter by H.M. Government. The Natal Ministry refused to accede to this, whereupon the Governor ordered the suspension, and the Ministry resigned. The Imperial Government telegraphed that they had no intention of interfering with the action of the Natal Government, but were in duty bound, in view of the presence of British troops in the Colony, and of all the existing circumstances, to obtain full and precise information in reference to these martial law cases, in regard to which an Act of Indemnity had ultimately to be assented to by the Crown. H.M. Government recognised, in the light of the information furnished them, that the decision of this grave matter rested with the Natal Ministry. Lord Elgin added that he regretted the Imperial Government were not given, with the announcement of the imminent execution of the twelve men, the detailed information that was afterwards supplied to them. The Natal Ministry thereupon withdrew its resignation (31st), and the natives were shot (April 2nd), after having confessed their guilt.

Bambaata, a chief in the Greytown district, who had been deposed by the Government, attacked the troops at Keate's Drift (5th), and then fled across the Tugela into Zululand. Government called on the Zulus to capture him, and offered a reward of £500. The attitude of the Zulus, however, was far from reassuring, and some of them refused to co-operate in the pursuit. A large force (which ultimately numbered 5500) was raised, the offer of the reward was withdrawn, and military operations commenced, the Legislative Assembly passing a Bill which authorised a loan of £500,000 for the suppression of the rebellion. Colonel McKenzie superintended the operations, and by May 30th the backbone of the rising was considered to be broken. A severe defeat was inflicted on the rebels (June 10th), Bambaata was killed, and the chief Siganarda, who had joined him, surrendered and soon afterwards died. After heavy fighting (July 2nd) 600 of the rebels were reported to have been killed. The Assembly formally thanked the sister colonies which had sent troops in its aid, and the Imperial Government for its offer of assistance (12th). By the end of the month the rebellion was at an end, large numbers having surrendered. Colonel McKenzie said over 2000 rebels had been killed, and about 3000 taken prisoners. Martial law was formally withdrawn (Oct. 2nd), and an Indemnity Act was published.

ORANGE RIVER COLONY.

Founded by Boers who trekked from Cape Colony in 1836, and recognised in '54 as an independent Dutch republic under the title of the Orange Free State. Under the terms of a treaty made with the Transvaal in '97, and the pressure of President Steyn, the Government of the Free State threw in their lot with the Transvaal Government in Oct. '99, and the first act of hostility in the Boer war was committed by Free State forces. The country was, on May 28th, 1900, formally annexed by Great Britain after its occupation by Lord Roberts, proclaimed as the Orange River Colony, and put under military rule, Lord Milner being appointed as Governor both of the Orange River and the Transvaal Colonies, with a Lieutenant-Governor at Bloemfontein. Executive and Legislative Councils were also established, the latter containing 6 official and 8 unofficial members; but the Boers in the Colony demand a constitution like that of the Transvaal, and indeed press for full self-government.

In the King's Speech (Feb. 10th, 1906) a promise of a constitution granting responsible government was made, but exception was taken to it on the ground that it would at once hand the Colony over to the Boers. The Committee presided over by Sir J. West Ridgeway was instructed to make some estimate of the results of giving a constitution to the Colony; and when, on July 31st, the decision of H.M. Government as to the Transvaal was announced the Earl of Elgin said that the Government did not propose to deal at once with the Orange River Colony, since the two colonies had different characteristics, and there was not the same urgency in the case of the latter as to the conditions of labour.

Roman-Dutch law prevails, and there is an Appeal Court independent of that in the Transvaal. The predominant religion is that of the Dutch Reformed Church, supported by the State. By the end of 1905 15,577 children were under instruction in the schools established by the Government. The country is not well suited for agriculture, but good grazing is afforded by the rolling plains, of which it chiefly consists, and stock and sheep farming are extensively carried on. Coal is abundant in the north of the colony, and diamond mines exist. The railways are placed under the control of the Intercolonial Council. See under TRANSVAAL, pp. 64-5. The chief newspaper is the Bloemfontein Post. The South African Constabulary police the country (London office: King's Court, Broadway, Westminster).

Area 50,392 sq. m.; pop. (1904 census), 387,315, 142,679 being Europeans and 244,636 coloured persons. Capital, Bloemfontein, pop. 33,893, including town 25,873, troops 3487, and 4530 civilians, etc., with troops. Other chief towns are Harrismith (5306), Kroonstad (5,977), Jagersfontein (5650), and Ladybrand (3207). Revenue, 1904-5, £786,049; 1905-6, £760,200; expenditure, 1904-5, £780,535; 1905-6, £758,800; public debt, £5000; imports, 1904-5, £3,251,098; exports, £2,263,925.

Governor, Earl of Selborne, G.C.M.G., appointed 1905.

Executive Council: Lieutenant-Governor, Brigadier-Gen. Sir H. J. Goold-Adams, K.C.M.G., C.B.—Colonial Secretary, H. F. Wilson, C.M.G.—Treasurer, A. Browne, I.S.O.—Collector of Customs, J. H. Meiring.—

Attorney-General, H. F. Blaine, K.C.—Director of Agriculture, C. W. Palmer.—Chief Justice, Sir A. F. S. Maasdorp.

TRANSVAAL.

The Transvaal lies N. of the Vaal river and S. of the Limpopo river. It is bounded W. by Bechuanaland; E. by Portuguese East Africa and Zululand; S. by Natal and Orange River Colony.

The Transvaal was founded in 1831 by Boers, who journeyed thither from Cape Colony, and gradually formed a settled Government, whose independence was acknowledged by Great Britain by the Sand River Convention in 1852. Serious difficulties with the natives arose from time to time, and in 1877 the country was annexed by the British Government. In 1880 the Boers took up arms to regain their independence. Majuba and the 1881 Convention followed, giving the Transvaal complete self-government subject to the suzerainty of Great Britain. Another Convention was signed in 1884, under which the country was renamed the South African Republic, the control over foreign relations, except with the Orange Free State, being reserved to the British Crown. In '86 gold was discovered on the Witwatersrand range of hills, and these have since, after the first rush and the inevitable collapse, proved to be of immense value (see GOLD FIELDS AND PRODUCTION). The centre of the gold fields is Johannesburg, which had in '99 a population of over 100,000, including over 50,000 whites. It was the discontent amongst the "Outlanders" of Johannesburg which ultimately led to the war between the Transvaal and Great Britain. Fighting began in Oct. '99, and after some initial successes the Boers were driven back, Lord Roberts reaching Bloemfontein March 13th, and Pretoria June 5th, 1900. On Sept. 1st, 1900, the country was formally annexed to the British Empire, though terms of peace were not signed till May 31st, 1902. Lord Milner then assumed office as Governor of the Transvaal, and Executive and Legislative Councils were constituted. See History below.

The judicial system set up since the annexation includes resident J.P.'s, resident magistrates at all populous centres, the Witwatersrand High Court with civil and criminal jurisdiction, and the Supreme Court of the Transvaal with original and appellate jurisdiction. Circuit courts are also held. The South African Constabulary form the main police force, and are now 5000 strong (London office: King's Court, Broadway, Westminster). The educational system provides for free elementary education, and in accordance with the terms of peace, for the teaching of the Dutch language where parents desire it, and on the same conditions for denominational instruction in school hours, though the general religious instruction is undenominational. In 1905 there were 380 primary schools with 27,874 scholars. The number of farm schools was 271, with 9688 scholars. The Boers generally belong to the Dutch Reformed Church, but the English Episcopal and Free Churches have a large number of adherents. For local administration there are elective municipalities in Pretoria and Johannesburg, and all the larger towns and villages. The regular military forces in 1904 had a total strength of 14,149, according to the census. They are under the command of the Commander-in-Chief at Pretoria, who also commands the forces throughout British South Africa. A Volunteer force, 5221 strong, has also been formed.

The country offers great facilities for agriculture and stock-rearing, but wants developing. The number of farms before the war was estimated at rather more than 12,000. The chief exports were gold, wool, cattle, hides, grain, and ostrich feathers. Coal is found of fair quality, and the output is steadily rising. It amounted to 2,150,922 tons, valued at £883,891, in 1904. The chief newspapers are the Rand Mail, Johannesburg Star, and Transvaal Leader, all published at 3d.

Area, 113,642 sq. m.; pop. (1904) 1,354,200, of whom 300,225 were whites, 1,030,029 aboriginal natives, and 23,946 of other coloured races. The Johannesburg municipality in 1904 had an area of 81½ sq. m. and a population of 155,642, of whom 83,363 were whites; that of Pretoria municipality was 15,539.

The revenue in 1902-3 was £4,682,000; 1903-4, £4,465,000; 1905-6, £4,576,200; expenditure, 1902-3, £4,578,000; 1903-4, £4,358,000, 1905-6, £4,279,772. Imports, 1902, £14,972,925; 1903, £21,794,997; 1904, £14,321,877; exports, 1902, £7,431,632; 1903, £12,909,912; 1904, £17,770,988. Public Debt: The Imperial Government, by the South African Loan and War Contribution Act, 1903, guaranteed interest at 3 per cent. and the sinking fund payments on a loan of £35,000,000, to be repaid within 50 years from April 1st, 1904.

History, 1906.

The introduction of Chinese labour for the gold mining industry was sanctioned in 1904, and by the end of that year 21,462 coolies had been imported. The subject is one that has given rise to heated controversy.

Soon after the Liberal Government had assumed office the Earl of Elgin sent a telegram to Lord Selborne (Dec. 21st, 1905) stating that the experiment of the introduction of Chinese labourers should not be extended further until the Imperial Government could learn the opinion of the colony through an elected and really representative Legislature; and they had accordingly decided that recruiting, embarkation and importation of Chinese coolies should be arrested pending a decision as to the grant of responsible government to the colony. H.M. Government also desired that the importation of other coolies for which importation licences had been granted should be stopped if possible; but after careful consideration of the matter by the Law Advisers of the Colony and the Crown it was decided that such licences were valid, and could only be revoked by ex post facto legislation. They therefore repudiated all responsibility for them, but allowed them to stand, deciding as above stated that no fresh licences should be issued. The number of Chinese in the Transvaal on Dec. 31st, 1905, was 47,218. Licences had been granted to import 14,700 more, and 1949 coolies were then in transit to the colony. There were also 87,673 Kaffirs employed. The Chamber of Mines issued a Memorandum in January urging that the gold industry was dependent on Chinese labour, and that great loss would be inflicted on the industry and on the community in general if the work had to be abandoned for which provision had been made in expectation of a steady supply of Chinese labour. H.M. Government at the same time altered several provisions of the Chinese Labour Ordinance, and made arrangements by which those coolies should be repatriated who could show good reason why they should be. On Oct. 31st, 1906, the number of Chinese in the country was 53,134.

The announcement that responsible government was contemplated created considerable excitement in the colony. The Progressive Association resolved at a public meeting to petition that the following fundamental principles should be maintained: one vote one value; equal electoral districts on a basis of voters; single-member constituencies; and automatic redistribution of seats. The Responsible Government party also urged adherence to the principle of one vote one value; but the Boers demanded that population should be taken as the basis of electoral districts. The King's Speech at the opening of the Imperial Parliament (Feb. 10th) definitely announced that "in order to establish responsible government" the Letters Patent of 1905 providing for representative government would be recalled. On March 22nd the appointment of a Committee of Inquiry was announced, consisting of Sir J. West Ridgeway, G.C.M.G., K.C.B. (chairman), Lord Sandhurst, Sir Francis Hopwood, and Col. Johnston, R.E., to inform H.M. Government as to the effect of the application of different principles upon the actual conditions of the Transvaal, as affected by the numbers, distribution and social condition of the population. The Committee went out at once, and left the Transvaal for Bloemfontein on June 4th. A deputation of the Progressives afterwards went to London to lay their views before H.M. Government, and to urge that the Boers should not be granted conditions which would give them control of the government.

On July 31st the Earl of Elgin in the Lords and Mr. Churchill in the Commons outlined the main provisions of the new constitution proposed by H.M. Government. The Government decided that representation should be given on a voters' basis coupled with manhood suffrage and a residential qualification of 6 months; that the existing magisterial districts should be retained, but divided where necessary into single-member constituencies; that there should be automatic redistribution and a new election every 5 years; that generally the figures of the census of 1904 should be used for the distribution of seats, but that the Rand should be given 34 seats, including Krugersdorp rural, Pretoria 6 seats, and the rest of the country 29 (Barberton, Lichtenburg, Marico, Waterburg, 1 each; Lydenburg, Ermelo, Heidelberg, Middelburg, Rustenburg, Standerton, Wakkerstroom, Wolmaienstad, and Zoutpansburg, 2 each; Potchefstroom, 1; Potchefstroom district, 3; Pretoria rural district, 3), making 69 seats in all; that the Speaker, after election, should become a paid officer and vacate his seat; that members should be paid; that there should be an elective Second Chamber on the Cape model, nominated, however, by the Crown for the first Parliament, and afterwards elected; that the Inter-Colonial Council should be continued for a period. The Earl of Elgin said the Government viewed with favour the formation of a Land Board to administer the colonies of settlers formed under the land settlement arrangements, if such an institution could be formed by general consent. Referring to the promised War contribution of £30,000,000, his lordship said this promise had a moral, but no legal force. It impaired the borrowing powers of the colonies, and H.M. Government proposed to instruct the High Commissioner to inquire whether the obligation could be removed. All native territory which had been and was administered by the High Commissioner should remain under his control, and Swaziland should also be put under his administration, with the customary safeguards for native rights. The Letters Patent would provide for the reservation of any Bill whereby persons not of European birth or descent may be subjected to any disability to which Europeans were not subjected, and no law sanctioning any conditions of a servile character would be accepted. A clause would provide that the existing Chinese Labour Ordinance should not be inserted by the new Legislature, but that the new Legislature should frame, if so advised, a new Ordinance connected with this purpose.

Lord Selborne afterwards made the inquiry, referred to above, as to the War contribution, and a new scheme was suggested—that a loan of £4,000,000 should be raised, the issue to be guaranteed by the same financial houses which agreed to underwrite the first instalment of the £30,000,000 loan. The loan should be allocated thus: £1,250,000 in settlement of war claims; £250,000 for a railway in the Orange River Colony; £1,000,000 for the establishment of a Transvaal Land Bank; and £1,500,000 for the promotion of land settlement.

An ordinance amending the law as to the Registration of Asiatics was passed in September, but the Royal assent was withheld pending the representations of the British Indians in the Transvaal, who alleged that it subjected them to worse disabilities than had been the case under the Boer régime. Lord Elgin received the deputation (Nov. 8th), and promised to consider the question most carefully.

Intercolonial Council.

By an Order in Council, dated May 20th, 1903, an Intercolonial Council was established "to advise the High Commissioner and Governor on the financial administration of the South African railways and the employment of their revenue, the expenditure on the South African Constabulary, certain official expenditure common to the two Colonies of the Transvaal and the Orange River Colony which is placed by the Order under the administration of the Council, and any other common expenditure which may from time to time be placed under its authority by the Legislative Councils of the two colonies with the consent of a Secretary of State." The Council consists of the High Commissioner, the Lieutenant-Governors of the two Colonies, the Inspector-General of the South African Constabulary, the Commissioner of Railways, and members of the Transvaal and Orange River Colony Executive and Legislative Councils. There are in all 25 members. There were 1540 miles of railway open for traffic at the end of 1904, 403 miles under construction and 711 projected. Estimated Revenue 1905-6: railways, £4,976,993; interest on loan advances, £40,000; contribution from the two Colonies, £983,919—total £6,005,912. Expenditure: service of the guaranteed loan, £596,096; railways, £4,311,930; constabulary, £989,180; minor services, £102,800—total £5,999,106.

Swaziland.

Swaziland, which passed with the Transvaal under British rule in 1900, is now a Protectorate administered by the Governor of the Transvaal. It is bounded on the east by the Delagoa Bay territory of Portuguese East Africa and Tongaland, which intervene between it and the coast. Area, 8000 sq. m.; pop. 84,586. Capital, Embabaa. It is a mountainous tract stretching along the Limpopo range, with richly fertile valleys, valuable fields of gold and coal, and considerable agricultural and pastoral resources. The Swazi are a section of the Zulu race, and the native ruler is the Queen Regent, Lobatsebeni. By an Order in Council, Aug. 7th, 1903, a Resident Commissioner, with Assistant Commissioners, judges, and other officers to administer justice and collect taxes, were appointed. A Proclamation was issued (Oct. 3rd, 1904) providing for the administration of the country and for the establishment of magistrates' Circuit Courts. The jurisdiction of the paramount and other chiefs is retained in all civil disputes in which only aboriginal natives are concerned, but with an appeal to a resident magistrate. The agricultural and grazing rights of the natives were protected.

RHODESIA.

On Oct. 29th, '89, a Royal Charter was granted to the British South Africa Company, conferring upon it large administrative powers in the region north of Cape Colony, now known as Rhodesia, which has an estimated area of 431,265 sq. m., and a pop. of 1,353,000, and authorising it to promote trade and commerce and to work mineral and other concessions in those regions. After the Jameson raid the control of the military forces of the country was placed entirely in the hands of the Imperial Government. The authorised share capital of the Company amounts to £6,000,000. Rhodesia is divided into two portions by the river Zambesi.

Northern Rhodesia (divided into North-Eastern and North-Western Rhodesia) is the British sphere lying between the Portuguese settlements, German East Africa and the Congo Free State, excepting the British Central Africa Protectorate. North-Eastern Rhodesia has an area of 105,488 sq. m. and a pop. of about 346,250. Ivory and rubber are exported, and cotton is being grown with some success (see article on TEXTILE INDUSTRIES). North-Western Rhodesia has an area of 181,947 sq. m. and a pop. of 400,600. It is also called Barotseland, and contains the country ruled by King Lewanika, whose headquarters are at Lealui. The headquarters of the Administrator of North-Eastern Rhodesia are at Fort Jameson, and of the Administrator of North-Western Rhodesia at Kalomo. There is a High Court of North-Eastern Rhodesia, of which Mr. Leicester P. Beaufort is the Judge. For North-Western Rhodesia one of the Judges of the High Court of Southern Rhodesia presides at the sittings of the High Court.

Southern Rhodesia includes the two provinces of Matabeleland and Mashonaland (area 143,830 sq. m., pop. 618,998; over 564,000 are natives. It lies between the northern boundary of the Transvaal on the south, and the Zambesi on the north, with the Portuguese provinces of Manica and Sofala as the eastern boundary. The seat of government is Salisbury (pop. 1726), which is also the capital of Mashonaland; the chief town of Matabeleland is Bulawayo (pop. 3840). On Nov. 4th, '97, the railway from Vryburg to Bulawayo was formally opened. On May 1st, 99, the first train from Beira, the eastern port, entered Salisbury, a distance of 375 miles, and the railway from Salisbury to Bulawayo, via Gwelo, a distance of 300 miles, was completed on Oct. 6th, 1902. During 1903 railways were built from Bulawayo to Gwanda, from Bulawayo to the Matopos, and from Gwelo to Selukwe. In 1904 the extension northward reached the Victoria Falls on the Zambesi; on Sept. 12th, 1905, the Victoria Falls Bridge was opened, and on June 11th, 1906, Broken Hill, 374 miles from the Falls and 206 from Cape Town, was reached. A new township, Livingstone, has been established on the north bank of the Zambesi, 6 miles from the Falls (see Cape to Cairo Railway under ENGINEERING). The total railway system open for traffic is now over 2000 miles. The output of gold from the mines in 1904 amounted to 267,737 oz., and in 1905 to 407,048 oz.

The Government is conducted by the Executive Council of Southern Rhodesia, consisting of the Administrator of Southern Rhodesia (Sir W. H. Milton, K.C.M.G.) and four members appointed by the Company, with the approval of a Secretary of State, and by a Legislative Council consisting of the Administrator, and fourteen other members, of whom seven are appointed by the Company with the approval of a Secretary of State and seven elected by the registered voters of Mashonaland and Matabeleland. The Resident Commissioner is a member of both the Executive and Legislative Councils, but without a vote. The duration of each Legislative Council is for three years. The ordinances of the latter are subject to confirmation by the High Commissioner and to disallowance by the Secretary of State. Native affairs are administered, under the Administrator, by a Chief Native Commissioner in each province, assisted in each case by Commissioners and Assistant Commissioners. Land has been reserved for tribal settlements, and an annual hut tax of £1 is imposed. The Judicial Establishment consists of the High Court of Southern Rhodesia with two judges, the Attorney-General, Solicitor-General, and local magistrates. The territory is divided into magisterial districts, and appeal lies from the magistrate to the judges, and from the High Court to the Supreme Court of the Cape. There are magistrates at Salisbury, Bulawayo, Victoria, Umtali, Gwanda, Gwelo, and Melsetter. Civil cases between native and native are tried in accordance with native law, with certain restrictions. The control of the military forces of Southern Rhodesia, known as the British South Africa

Police, is in the hands of the Imperial Government, acting through the High Commissioner for South Africa, though the cost is paid by the Company. The chief newspapers are the Bulawayo Chronicle, Rhodesia Herald, Rhodesia Times, and Rhodesia Advertiser.

Board of Directors: The Duke of Abercorn, K.G. (President), Lord Gifford, V.C., Sir Lewis Michell, J. Rochfort Maguire, P. Lyttelton Gell, Dr. L. S. Jameson, C.B., H. Birchenough, Esq., C.M.G.—London office, 2, London Wall Buildings, E.C.—Manager, H. Wilson Fox.—Secretary, D. E. Brodie.—Assistant Secretary, A. P. Millar.—Registrar, R. C. Bolton.

Administration: Administrator of Southern Rhodesia, Sir W. H. Milton, K.C.M.G. (Salisbury).—Resident Commissioner and Commandant-General, Lieut.-Col. R. Chester Master.—Administrator of North-Eastern Rhodesia, R. Codrington.—Administrator of North-Western Rhodesia, R. T. Coryndon.

BRITISH EAST AFRICA.

British Central Africa Protectorate. A portion of British Central Africa lying round the shores of Lake Nyasa, and extending nearly to the banks of the Zambesi. It includes all British Nyasaland, as well as the Shiré Highlands and the greater part of the basin of the river Shiré. The administration is in the hands of a Commissioner acting under the Colonial Office, to which department it was in 1904 transferred from the Foreign Office. The Protectorate is divided into 13 Districts, and these are managed by a number of Collectors and Assistant Collectors, Judicial Officers, etc. By an Order in Council of 1902 a High Court was established in and for the Protectorate. The armed forces of the Protectorate consist of a naval force on the Zambesi, the Upper Shiré, and Lake Nyasa, including 5 gunboats, 100 Sikhs and about 779 native troops, forming the 2nd battalion of the King's African Rifles. The port is Chinde, at the mouth of the Zambesi, where a small concession has been granted by the Portuguese Government. The area of the Protectorate is 40,980 sq. m., and the pop. 997,650; the European inhabitants number about 600, Indians 409, and the native inhabitants 977,641. The principal occupation of the European settlers is planting; and many thriving plantations of coffee, sugar, and tobacco have been established. Cotton cultivation is now being developed with every prospect of success (see article on TEXTILE INDUSTRIES). Rubber and ivory are also exported. The chief towns are: Blantyre (pop. 6500), Zomba (headquarters of the Administration), Fort Johnston (the principal port on Lake Nyasa and naval dépôt), Karonga (north end of Lake Nyasa), the starting-point for Tanganyika, and Kotakota (west coast of Lake Nyasa). Almost the entire trade of British Central Africa is with the United Kingdom. A concession for the construction of a railway between Chiromo and Blantyre was granted to the Shiré Nyasaland Co. on Dec. 31st, 1902, and the line is slowly progressing. The British Central Africa Co. (office, 20, Abchurch Lane, E.C.) supplies information to settlers.

Commissioner and Commander-in-Chief, Sir Alfred Sharpe, K.C.M.G., C.B.—Deputy-Com- missioner, Major F. B. Pearce, C.M.G.—Agent at Chinde, S. H. Fletcher.—Chief Judicial Officer (Blantyre), C. J. Griffin.—Secretary to the Administration, A. J. Williams.—Senior Naval Officer on Lake Nyasa, E. L. Rhoades.—Surveyor, T. I. Binnie.

Inspector-General of Protectorate Forces, Brigadier-Gen. Sir W. H. Manning, K.C.M.G., C.B.

East Africa Protectorate. This extends about 400 miles along the coast northwards from Umba, at the mouth of the Umba river, and inland to the borders of Uganda. It adjoins the Italian and Abyssinian spheres on the north and German East Africa on the south. The Imperial British East Africa Company opened up the country, having in 1887 obtained a concession of territory from the Sultan of Zanzibar and in '88 a charter from the British Government. An arrangement for buying them out was, however, come to in '95, and the direct administration of the country was undertaken by H.M. Government. The Protectorate, which is administered by a Commissioner and Consul-General, who is also British Agent and Consul-General at Zanzibar, is divided into the following districts, each under a sub-commissioner: the Coast Province, capital Mombasa; Ukamba, capital Nairobi; Tanaland with Witu, capital Lamu; Jubaland, capital Kismayu; Kenya, capital Fort Hall; Naivasha; and Kisumu. The chief ports are Mombasa (which is also the capital of the whole Protectorate), pop. 27,000; Lamu, Vanga, and Kismayu. A hut tax is imposed upon the natives. The military forces consist of the 3rd or East Africa battalion of the King's African Rifles. The establishment has a strength of 24 officers and 1000 rank and file. There is also an armed native police force about 1600 strong. A railway of 584 miles' length has been constructed from Mombasa to Lake Victoria Nyanza. The East Africa Syndicate Ltd. have found considerable mineral deposits. Agricultural operations are also increasing. It was proposed to settle a Jewish colony in East Africa, in connection with the Zionist movement (see Jews); but in Aug. 1905 the Zionist Congress resolved not to proceed further with the matter. The principal products of the country are cloves, ivory, indiarubber, copra, hides, etc. Area 189,838 sq. m.; pop. 2,000,000, including 1464 Europeans and Eurasians.

Commissioner and Commander-in-Chief, Lieut.-Col. J. Hayes Sadler, C.B.

Uganda Protectorate The, includes not only Uganda proper, but Unyoro, Busoga, and other countries westwards up to the boundary of the Congo Free State, and northwards to the Egyptian Soudan. It lies between the Congo Free State on the west and the East Africa Protectorate on the east, the southern boundary being 1° S. lat. and the Anglo-German frontier, and the northern an undetermined line from a point near Lado on the White Nile to the watershed of Lake Rudolf, separating it from the Egyptian Soudan. The native capital of the country is Mengo, but the British administration, under a Commissioner and Consul-General, has its headquarters at Entebbe, on the N.W. shore of Lake Victoria. The Imperial Government took over the administration from the Imperial British East Africa Company in '94, and made the country a protectorate. A High Court for the Protectorate was established in 1902, with an Appeal Court at Zanzibar. The King, or "Kabaka," is H.H. Daudi Chua, who, being a minor, is now under a regency of three chiefs. He receives a stated allowance from the Government. There is also a Lukiko, or native council of 80 chiefs. The trade, which is increasing, is mainly in ivory, cattle, wild coffee, and rubber. Iron ore abounds, and wheat grows well. The development of the country has progressed wonderfully in the last year or two, and will doubtless go on still faster now that the railway from the coast is completed. The line runs from Mombasa, on the coast, to Port Florence, on the north-east corner of the Victoria Nyanza, a distance of 584 miles. The net loss on the working from April 1902 to March 1903 was £49,690. Several mail, passenger, and trading steamers are now plying on the lake. The military force includes the 4th battalion King's African Rifles, the total strength being about 825 officers and men. There is a native police force about 1100 strong. The prosperity of the country is threatened by the terrible "sleeping sickness," which has destroyed thousands. Area about 89,400 sq. m., pop. about 4,000,000, including some 380 Europeans.

Commissioner and Commander-in-Chief, H. Hesketh Bell, C.M.G.

Zanzibar Protectorate. The, consists of the island of Zanzibar (area 640 sq. m., pop. 150,000) and the island of Pemba (area 380 sq. m., pop. 50,000). Capital, Zanzibar, which has a fine roadstead. The Sultan is Seyyid Ali bin Hamoud, b. '85, succeeded July 18th, 1902. The government is conducted by British officials appointed by His Highness with the sanction of the Foreign Office, and is under the general control of H.M. Agent and Consul-General. The principal members are the First Minister, the Financial Member of Council, and the Judicial Member of Council and Attorney-General. Slavery was abolished in April '07. H.M. Court for Zanzibar forms the Court of Appeal from the High Courts of British Central and East Africa and Uganda. The products are mainly cloves (which form four-fifths of the entire clove crop of the world), copra, chillies, ivory, rubber, hides, and gum.

Agent and Consul-General, Basil S. Cave, C.B. Judge, Lindsey Smith. — Assistant Judges, J. W. Murison and M. F. Buzard. — Consul, J. H. Sinclair.

Somaliland Protectorate. The British sphere of interest in Somaliland and on the coast of the Gulf of Aden, which has existed since 1884, is known by this name. It is administered under the Foreign Office by a Commissioner and Consul-General. It has about 400 miles of coast, and extends inland 300 miles at its deepest point. Within this territory lie the ports Zaila, Bulhar, and Berbera, but their trade is affected by the railway which runs from Jibuti in French Somaliland to Harar (see ABYSSINIA). The boundaries were fixed by agreements with Italy in '94, and with Abyssinia in '07. The Somaliland Battalion of the King's African Rifles forms the military force. The chief town is Berbera, pop. about 30,000. The products are chiefly cattle, coffee, skins and hides, ostrich feathers, ivory, and gum. Area 68,000 sq. m.; pop. 300,000.

Commissioner and Commander-in-Chief, Capt. H. E. S. Cordeaux, C.B., C.M.G.

BRITISH WEST AFRICA.

Gambia. A Crown colony on the Gambia river, the most northerly and the oldest of the British settlements on the coast of West Africa. Capital, Bathurst (pop. 8807). Consists of St. Mary's Island, with Combo on south, Albreda, Barra, and The Ceded Mile on north bank. Up the river are several stations, of which McCarthy's Island, 187 miles from the mouth, is the highest. The area of the colony and protectorate is 3704 sq. m.; pop. 163,718. The military force consists of the Gambia Company of the West African Frontier Force. A hut tax of about 4s. per annum is levied in the protectorate. Products ground-nuts, hides, beeswax, indiarubber, etc. Ruled by a Governor, a Legislative Council of 8 members, 4 non-official, and an Executive Council. By the Anglo-French Agreement, signed April 8th, 1904, the frontier was modified in such a way as to assure Yarbata, at the head of the navigable Gambia, 300 miles from the sea, and the landing-places belonging to that locality, to Senegambia. Access to the navigable portion of the river and transit for sea-going merchantmen up the river were granted to the French Government under arrangements subsequently made. The area transferred was about 50 sq. m.

Governor, Sir George C. Denton, K.C.M.G. Colonial Secretary, H. M. Brandford Griffith, C.M.G.

Gold Coast Colony. A Crown colony on the coast of West Africa, bounded on the east by Togoland (German), and on the west by the Ivory Coast (French). The colony has a coast-line of about 350 miles. The area, inclusive of Adansi, Ashanti, and the Northern Territories, may be put at about 120,000 square miles, and the population at 1,500,000, of whom about 500 are Europeans. The territories in the hinterland to the north of Ashanti were made a separate district in '97 under the name of the "Northern Territories" (area about 24,000 sq. m., pop. 2,500,000), and are administered by a Commissioner. The Niger Convention, drawn up by the Anglo-French Commission sitting at Paris, and signed June 15th, '98, and the agreement with Germany of Nov. 15th, '99, settled the boundaries of the hinterland to the west and the north. The native state of Ashanti lies inland, at the back of the central portion of the colony, and is administered by a Chief Commissioner (capital Kumasi, pop. 5940). Accra is the administrative centre of the colony, and has a population of 17,892. The Government includes a Governor, an Executive Council, and a Legislative Council of 9, 5 of whom are non-official. For defence there is the Gold Coast regiment of the West African Frontier Force of two battalions. One battalion and one battery are stationed in Ashanti, and the other battalion in the Northern Territories. The products are chiefly palm-oil, gold, palm kernels, rubber, cocoa, timber, etc. The country is very rich as regards both minerals and agriculture. The gold export in 1905 was £619,554, a large proportion coming from the mines of the Ashanti Goldfields Corporation. Cotton is grown, and its cultivation is now encouraged. A railway runs from Sekondi via Tarkwa and Obuassi to Kumasi, a distance of 168 miles. See GOLD FIELDS.

Governor, Sir J. P. Rodger, K.C.M.G. Executive Council: Colonial Secretary, Major

H. Bryan, C.M.G. — Attorney-General, Wilmoughby Osborne. — Treasurer, C. Riby Williams, C.M.G. — Officer Commanding Gold Coast Regiment West African Frontier Force, Lieut.-Col. C. H. P. Carter, C.M.G.

Chief Commissioner Ashanti, F. C. Fuller, C.M.G.

Chief Commissioner Northern Territories, Lieut.-Col. A. E. Watherston, C.M.G., R.E.

Northern Nigeria. A British Protectorate constituted Jan. 1st, 1900, over territories up till then in the occupation of the Royal Niger Company. The northern boundary, settled by the Anglo-French Agreement 1904, is the French Soudan, from Barua on Lake Chad to a point on the Niger ten miles north of Ilo. The western boundary is the French territory in the hinterland of Dahomey. The southern boundary is formed by the Lagos Protectorate and Southern Nigeria. The eastern boundary is that of the Cameroons, running north-east to Lake Chad. The Protectorate includes the old Fulah Empire, of which the Sultan of Sokoto is the head. The Hausa states of the Fulah Empire are Mahometan, but many of the tribes in the Protectorate are pagans. "The Niger Company, Ltd.," carry on trading, mining, and banking operations, the working of forests, and the cultivation of indigo, tobacco, and other indigenous products. A High Commissioner controls the administration of the Protectorate, which has been divided into 16 provinces—viz., Borgu, Illorin, Kontagora, Bida, Kappa, Lower and Upper Benue, Middle Niger, Muri, Sokoto, Katsena, Kano, Yola, Bautshi, and Basas, each under a Resident. The Government utilises the native chiefs, and establishes Native Courts, wherever possible, under the supervision of the Residents. There are also Provincial Courts held by the Residents themselves, with a Supreme Court which serves as a Court of Appeal for both Northern and Southern Nigeria. The 1st and 2nd Battalions West African Frontier Force, consisting of Hausas and Yorubas with a few other natives, constitute the military force, and have a strength of 2400 infantry, 3 batteries of artillery, with sappers, and medical and transport staff. The principal station is Lokoja, at the junction of the Benue and the Niger, but the headquarters are at Zungeru, up the Kaduna River. A port for the Protectorate is reserved at the mouth of the Forcados river in Southern Nigeria, with Burutu, which is used as a depot and transhipment station. The chief towns in the Protectorate are Wurno (capital of Sokoto), Gando, Sokoto, Kano, Bida, Yola, Yakuba, Zaria, and Illorin. The country is fertile, and its agricultural resources are undoubtedly great. The inland regions are said to be fairly healthy, and produce cotton, indigo, rubber, hides, and ivory, while minerals are stated to abound in certain parts. It is said that Northern Nigeria alone could produce all the raw cotton that Lancashire requires, provided the transport difficulty were met by the construction of railways. Area 258,000 sq. m.; pop. 9,161,700.

In Jan. 1906 an expedition, organised and led by Lieut.-Col. Hasler, left Lokoja to punish the Munshis of Abinsi for an outrage on the Hausa and Nupe trading population. In February an outbreak occurred at Sokoto in which three officers and a company of mounted men were killed. A portion of the West African Frontier Force under Major Goodwin engaged the rebels (March 12th), and defeated them. In April renewed activity on the part of the Senussi Mahomedan leaders on the eastern frontier of Borno was reported. In May a British force, under Colonel Lowry Cole, was sent against the Emir of Hadeija, which is six days' march from Kano. The enemy were defeated, and the Emir was captured. A Convention for the delimitation of the British and French possessions between the Niger and Lake Chad was signed in London (May 29th). The new frontier gives to France a practicable line of communication with Lake Chad.

Southern Nigeria. By an Order in Council, dated Feb. 16th, 1906, the name of the colony of Lagos was altered to Southern Nigeria, and the administration of the Southern Nigeria Protectorate was placed under that of the new colony, which is now known as the Colony and Protectorate of Southern Nigeria. The town and island of Lagos lie on the coast of the Bight of Benin, 150 miles east of the Gold Coast. Lagos has a population of 42,000. The Governor is assisted by an Executive Council and a Legislative Council of 10 members, the latter including 5 unofficial members. Resident officers are stationed at Ibadan and other towns in the interior, with a Superintendent of Native Affairs at Abeokuta. The population of the latter town is estimated at 150,000, and of Ibadan at 200,000. The military force consists of about 1900 men of the West African Frontier Force. Much has been done of late to open up the interior to British commerce, and a new rubber industry and cotton planting are being actively developed. The chief exports are palm oil and kernels, mahogany, gums, ivory, and rubber. The railway from Lagos to Abeokuta and Ibadan (126½ miles) was completed and opened by the Governor on March 4th, 1901. It is to be extended to Oshogbo, 72 miles farther. Area 80,410 sq. m.; pop. about 6,000,000.

Sierra Leone, a British colony on the West African coast, founded in 1807. Sierra Leone proper is a peninsula, containing about 300 sq. miles, but the colony has a coast-line of 210 miles in length. Area, with the Protectorate in the hinterland, 33,100 sq. m.; pop. about 1,100,000. It is bounded on the north by the Grand Scarcies river, which separates it from Casamance, a part of Senegal, and on the south by Liberia. On the east the frontier was settled by an agreement made between Great Britain and France in Jan. '95, by which the colony relinquished all control of the head waters of the Niger, and became inclosed on every side. By the Anglo-French agreement, April 8th, 1904, the Los Islands (pop. 1422) were ceded to France to form part of French Guinea. The interior is divided into 5 districts—Karene, Ronietta, Bandajuma, Koinadugu, Panguma, each under a District Commissioner. A house tax is levied on the natives. The leading tribes are the Temnes in the north, the Mendis in the south, and the Yonnis in the middle districts. A railway runs from Freetown via Songotown, Rotifunk, Morjamba and Bo to Baima, a total distance of 222 miles. It was completed in August 1905. The capital is Freetown, with a population of over 34,000 and municipal government. It is the local headquarters of a battalion of the West African Frontier Force, about 500 strong, besides engineers and artillery. There is also an armed police force 265 strong, and an establishment for victualling and coaling ships of the Royal Navy. The chief exports are palm oil, palm kernels, kola nuts, hides, and rubber. Cotton grows freely, and its cultivation is now being encouraged. The bulk of the palm kernels and oil go to Germany, which took 34·7% (the United Kingdom 30·5%) of the exports in 1903, while Germany sent 10·3 (the U.K. 73·5%) of the imports. The colony is administered by a Governor, an Executive Council of 6 members, and a Legislative Council consisting of the Executive and 4 nominated members.

COLONIES IN NORTH AMERICA.

DOMINION OF CANADA.

The Dominion of Canada consists of the upper portion of the North American continent except part of Labrador, which belongs to Newfoundland, and Alaska, which belongs to the United States. Its area is 3,653,946 sq. miles. In 1867 the provinces of Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick united under one federal government; in '70 Manitoba and North-West Territories were added, the latter by purchase in '69 from the Hudson's Bay Company; British Columbia joined in '71, and Prince Edward Island in '73. In '80 an Order in Council was issued, annexing to the Dominion such British possessions in North America, other than Newfoundland, as were not previously in the Dominion. Federal capital, Ottawa, in Ontario, pop. 59,902. The population of the Dominion at the 1901 census was 5,371,315, and in 1904 was estimated at 5,604,328. The French-speaking part of the population number 1,649,371, and the large majority of them reside in Quebec; the Germans, 309,741. The Indians number 108,112.

The Federal Parliament is modelled after that of the United Kingdom, with a Senate whose members are nominated for life, 24 from Ontario, 24 from Quebec, 10 from Nova Scotia, 10 from New Brunswick, 4 from Manitoba, 3 from British Columbia, 4 from Prince Edward Island, 4 from Alberta, and 4 from Saskatchewan. The House of Commons consists of 214 members elected quinquennially on a low suffrage, 86 coming from Ontario, 65 from Quebec, 18 from Nova Scotia, 13 from New Brunswick, 7 from British Columbia, 4 from Prince Edward Island, 10 from Manitoba, 5 from Alberta, 5 from Saskatchewan, and 1 from the Yukon Territory. (It was proposed, in Nov. 1906 to give Alberta 7 and Saskatchewan 9 members, on the basis of their population.) The basis on which the number of members is allotted to each province is that Quebec shall always have 65 and the other provinces a proportional number according to their population at each decennial census. Election is by ballot, and the franchise is regulated by the Provincial Legislatures. Senators and representatives are paid £500 per annum, with a deduction of £3 for every day that a member is absent. The Governor-General, representing the King, receives £10,000 yearly, and is assisted by a Privy Council chosen by himself. The Prime Minister receives £2400, and Cabinet Ministers and the Leader of the Opposition £1400 each. In each of the provinces a Lieut.-Governor, appointed by the Governor-General in Council, represents the executive authority, and details as to the provincial administration are given below. The territory not comprised within any province—e.g. the North-East Territory and the Arctic Islands—is administered by the Minister of the Interior. The limits of federal and provincial jurisdiction are regulated by the British North America Act '67. The Dominion Parliament has exclusive legislative power in all matters, including finance, trade, postal service, currency, banking, navigation, defence, etc., except those specifically delegated to the provincial legislatures. Bills passed by the Dominion Parliament require the assent of the Governor-General, and may be disallowed within two years by the King.

There is no State church, but the Roman Catholic Church in the province of Quebec has secured to it the privileges enjoyed by it previous to British rule, of collecting tithes, etc. The estimated strength of the chief religious bodies is: Roman Catholics, 2,228,997; Methodists, 916,862; Presbyterians, 842,301; Church of England, 680,346; Baptists, 316,714. Elementary education is free, and is liberally supported by grants from the provincial Governments, aided by local taxation. There are altogether 19,891 public schools of all grades, with 29,542 teachers and 1,112,120 pupils. Besides these there are many private schools, and each province has one or more universities. The Governor-General appoints the judges of the Superior Courts and county courts in the provinces, and over all is the Supreme Court at Ottawa, with appellate civil and criminal jurisdiction throughout the Dominion.

The permanent troops of Canada consist of 2 squadrons of cavalry, 2 field batteries, 2 garrison companies of artillery and 4 companies of infantry; and the Royal North-West Mounted Police are practically a fine military force. The Permanent Militia numbers 1366, and the Active Militia 46,158. Under the Militia law all British subjects in the Dominion between 18 and 60 may be called out to serve in four classes of the Militia Reserve. There is a Royal Military College at Kingston, and the Dominion is divided into twelve military districts. The new scheme for reorganising the Militia upon a strong military basis provides for a permanent military establishment of 104,618 men, with complete auxiliaries, including medical corps, army service corps, intelligence department, and transport; 50,000 on a peace footing, one-half of the force to drill every year, and another 50,000 to be held as a reserve, the annual drill being optional, but the men being supplied with rifles and ammunition and encouraged to make themselves proficient in the use of firearms. See ARMY, BRITISH, VII.

Canada is the largest of all the British possessions. The climate varies, being in the east cold but clear in winter, warm in summer; while the climate of the British Columbia coast resembles that of England. The winter is dry, healthy, and invigorating. The mineral deposits are practically inexhaustible, particularly coal, iron, nickel, copper, and gold. The mineral output of 1905 included gold, $14,486,833; nickel, $7,550,526; silver, $3,605,957; copper, $7,420,451; coal, $17,658,615. The fisheries on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts are extremely valuable, and the timber supply is very rich. Manufactures are carried on extensively, and employ about 400,000 persons. Agriculture is, however, the main industry of the Dominion, and in Manitoba and the North-West the wheat-growing as well as general farming capabilities are immeasurable. Ranching has in late years also proved profitable. There has been a tremendous tide of immigration flowing into the North-West, especially during the last few years.

There are 1249 papers, of which 117 are daily papers, published in the Dominion, including the Toronto Globe, the Government organ; the Montreal Star; the Toronto Telegraph, a smart evening paper, owned by Mr. Ross Robertson; the Montreal Gazette, which represents the old type of Canadian Conservatism; the Montreal Herald, a Laurier journal; and the Montreal La Presse, issued daily and weekly for French readers.

There were in 1905 sixty-five railway lines working in the Dominion of Canada, with a total mileage of 20,601. The Government own about 1519 miles of railway, and a magnificent system of canals. In 1905 there were 767 miles of electric railways. The principal railway systems are those of the Canadian Pacific, with 8298 miles; Grand Trunk of Canada, 3570 miles; Intercolonial, 1442 miles; Canadian Northern, 1880 miles. The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, which was approved by Parliament in 1904, and is being built with Government aid, will extend across the Dominion from Moncton, New Brunswick, on the east coast, to a terminus on Kaien Island, at the mouth of the Skeena River, on the Pacific Coast. Its total length will be 3500 miles. The contract between the Government and the Grand Trunk in 1894, under which the Company shall construct in the Winnipeg western division of the line, from guaranteeing to the Pacific, the Government gave four-fifths of the principal and interest of three sections, and the bond issue necessary for construction, paying a cash subsidy for the mountain section, which will eventually amount to guaranteeing £1,600,000 and £2,000,000. The Company issues the remaining one-fourth of the bond, and becomes proprietor of this section. The eastern division, from Winnipeg to Moncton, the Government will construct it, and when complete it is to be leased to the Company (who are to have free use of the line for the first 7 years) for 50 years, when it reverts to the Government, though the Company are then to retain the terminals and such branch lines as they may select, with running rights, for a further 50 years. The Company will work both sections when they are completed.

By the Tariff Act '97 a rebate of 12½ per cent. of the Customs Duties was granted to countries whose tariff was judged as favourable to Canada as the Canadian tariff so reduced, and the United Kingdom and New South Wales were at once given the benefit of the reduction, with the result that the concession had to be extended to all countries entitled to most-favoured-nation treatment in Canada. The Commercial Treaties of the United Kingdom with Germany and Belgium were, however, denounced in view of this, and on Aug. 1st, '98, a rebate of 25 per cent. was given to the United Kingdom and the West Indies, and to such other countries in the British Empire as accorded reciprocal treatment to Canada. In 1900 the preferential treatment was increased from 25 per cent. to 33½ per cent. See also History, 1906, below.

Revenue, 1904-5, £14,526,573; expenditure, £11,431,526; exports, 1904-5, £43,890,576; imports, 1904-5, £53,282,426; public debt, £75,020,071.

Governor-General, The Right Hon. Earl Grey, G.C.M.G.

Frank Oliver.—Agriculture, Hon. Sydney Fisher.—Customs, Hon. W. Paterson.—Inland Revenue, Hon. W. Templeman.

High Commissioner for the Dominion of Canada, Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, G.C.M.G., 17 and 19, Victoria Street, London, S.W.—Secretary, W. L. Griffith.

Political Parties.

The two chief political parties are known as Conservatives and Liberals. From the date of confederation, in 1867, the Liberals were only in power once till their signal victory in '96. The late Sir John Macdonald, the leader of the Conservative party, held office from '67 to '91, with the exception of five years, when a Liberal Government was in power. Under Mr. Mackenzie was in power, but he was succeeded by John Macdonald, who died in 1891. He was succeeded by Sir John Thompson, John Abbott, and he Mackenzie Bowell, on whose death Sir John Thompson succeeded him (Dec. 12th, 1905). The Manitoba question and other questions of the Government's position during 1906, the Government's internal dissension, and '96, and after some time Sir Charles Tupper became Premier in April, 1906, of the dissolution of Parliament which followed. At the general election Liberals, 86 Conservatives, and 8 Independents, the latter being on the whole supporters of the Liberals. A wave of Imperial and loyal feeling at the time of the Jubilee in '97 had as one of its results the institution of a preferential tariff in favour of the mother-country, which ultimately gave British goods an advantage of 33½ per cent. over other imports. The result of the general election in 1900 was the return of the Liberals to power with an increased majority. When the 1904 general election came on, Sir Wilfred Laurier's Government had a majority of 52 in a House of 214. The chief issue was the railway policy of the country. The returns showed that the result of the election was to give the Government a large majority. Ontario continued to return a majority of Conservatives, but Quebec and the other provinces gave overwhelming support to the Ministry.

History, 1906.

The formal control of the garrison of Halifax was assumed by the Dominion Government (Jan. 16th), and the last of the Imperial troops stationed in Canada sailed for home (March 5th), leaving the military forces of the Dominion exclusively Canadian. Speaking at Quebec on Aug. 22nd, Lord Grey said that the first duty of Canada to the Empire was to make herself strong, and there was other work to be done which might be of even greater importance than immediate contribution to the British Navy. As soon as the times were ripe, Canada might be relied on to do her duty towards the Fleet which protected her commerce.

The Ministerial Committee of investigation into the country's industries with a view to revising the tariff, finished its sittings in February. The Committee received a memorial from the Canadian Manufacturers' Association (Feb. 6th) demanding a policy which would defend them from foreign competition and encourage the growth and expansion of the industries within their borders. They desired a higher tariff against foreign countries in favour of British trade, but also asked for such a tariff as would enable the Canadian manufacturer to compete on equal terms in his home market with the manufacturers of Great Britain. Sir Wilfrid Laurier said at Toronto (22nd) that mutual preference was a question which would concern not the people of Canada, but the people of Great Britain, and it was not easy for Great Britain to give a preference because it would involve an alteration in her tariff policy. He did not think it was possible to have a uniform tariff for the British Empire, but every component part should be left to do the best it could for itself. In October it was stated that the Government had adopted the principle of a maximum general tariff, and a minimum general tariff, with a British preference lower than the latter.

Mr. Fielding's Budget speech (May 22nd) showed the continued prosperity of the Dominion. The past fiscal year had realised a surplus of £1,572,618, and he anticipated a surplus of £2,500,000 for the current year. He promised a revised tariff during the next session. In October the Provincial Premiers met the Dominion Ministry in conference, with a view to the readjustment of the financial relations between the supreme Government and the provinces. It was agreed that the fixed allowance for each province should be 80 cents per head, based on the result of each decennial census instead of upon the census of 1861, with a special additional allowance of £20,000 for 10 years to British Columbia. The Premier of British Columbia, however, considered this inadequate, and withdrew from the Conference. It was also agreed to recommend each Provincial Legislature to abolish the special tax on commercial travellers.

An Act was passed during the year making the fiscal year end on March 31st instead of June 30th. The fiscal year 1906-7, therefore, runs from July 1st, 1906, to March 31st, 1907.

Prince Arthur of Connaught, on his return journey from Japan, passed through the Dominion in March and April, and was given a warm welcome throughout the country. H.R.H. was the guest of the Governor-General at Ottawa for several days. In May an address was sent by Parliament asking their Majesties the King and Queen to visit Canada in the near future, but in July H.M. replied expressing his regret that he felt at present unable to entertain the idea, "owing to the necessities of his position." The British Medical Association held its annual meetings at Toronto in August, all parts of the British Empire being represented.

Provinces of Canada.

British Columbia, Canada's maritime province on the Pacific, extends from the United States boundary to 60° N. lat., and is bounded on the east by Athabasca and the province of Alberta. Area, 395,610 sq. m.; pop. 250,000 (1906), including about 29,000 Indians, 15,000 Chinese, and 5000 Japanese. Minerals consist chiefly of coal, copper, silver, and gold. Vancouver Island contains large deposits of good steam coal, and there are other large deposits in East Kootenay and other parts of the province. Gold has been found in the Kootenay, Cariboo, and Cassiar districts, near the Columbia river, in great abundance. The town of Rossland became the centre of the district. An important industry is carried on in tinned salmon. There are also valuable timber and fruit-growing industries established. Capital, Victoria, on Vancouver Island, pop. 25,000. Vancouver City (pop. 45,000), on the mainland, is the terminus of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The government of the colony is administered by a Lieut.-Governor and a responsible Ministry. There is a Legislative Assembly consisting of 42 members. Manhood suffrage prevails in provincial elections.

Lieutenant-Governor, Hon. James Dunsmuir. — Premier and Minister of Mines, Hon. Richard McBride. — Attorney-General and Secretary, Hon. F. J. Fulton, K.C. — Lands and Works, Hon. R. F. Green. — President of Council, Hon. F. L. Carter Cotton. — Finance, Hon. R. G. Tatlow.

Manitoba was formerly known as the Red River Settlement, and entered the Dominion in 1870. It takes its name from Lake Manitoba, which is situated 60 miles S.W. of Lake Winnipeg. Area, 72,864 sq. m.; pop. 360,590 (1906). Capital, Winnipeg (pop. over 100,000), at the junction of the Assiniboine and Red rivers. The climate is healthy, but there are great extremes of temperature. Soil very fertile, and yields abundantly, being peculiarly adapted to the growth of wheat. Large numbers of horses, cattle, sheep, and swine are raised. Coal abounds, gold is worked in the east, iron ore on the islands of Lake Winnipeg, and the northern part is heavily timbered. In 1905 there were 45,260 farms, and farm property was valued at £45,000,000. Executive vested in a Lieutenant-Governor appointed by the Governor-General of the Dominion, and a Ministry. There is a Legislative Assembly, numbering 40 members, elected by districts for four years.

Lieutenant-Governor, The Hon. Sir D. H. McMillan, K.C.M.G.

Executive Council: Premier, Hon. R. P. Roblin.—Treasurer, Hon. J. H. Agnew.—Public Works, Hon. R. Rogers.—Attorney-General, Hon. Colin H. Campbell.—Prov. Sec., Hon. D. H. McFadden.

New Brunswick lies along the Bay of Fundy. Area, 27,700 sq. m.; pop. 331,120. Capital Fredericton, pop. 7000; chief commercial centre St. John, with a population of 40,711. Divided into fifteen counties. The chief navigable rivers are the St. John, the Restigouche and the Miramichi. Administered by a Lieut.-Governor and Executive Council. The people elect a Legislative Assembly of 46 members. Coal, iron, and antimony abound, and there are fine timber forests. Cereals are largely grown, and fruits, and the fisheries are remunerative.

Lieutenant-Governor, Hon. J. B. Snowball.

Executive Council: Premier, Hon. L. J. Tweedie.—Chief Commissioner of Public Works, Hon. Chas. H. La Billois.—Surveyor-General, Hon. F. J. Sweeney.—Attorney-General, Hon. W. Pugsley.—Commissioner for Agriculture, Hon. L. P. Farris.—Solicitor-General, Hon. W. P. Jones.

Nova Scotia is a peninsula connected by a narrow isthmus with New Brunswick. Incorporated with it is Cape Breton Island, formerly a distinct colony. Area 20,907 sq. m.; pop. 459,574. Capital, Halifax; pop. 40,832; a fine city and harbour, also an Imperial military and naval station. Divided into 18 counties. The coal mines near Halifax and Cape Breton turn out about 2,000,000 tons of coal per annum, and the whole of the Dominion Government railways are worked with coal from these mines. Iron and gold are also worked, but agriculture is the chief occupation. Fishing also employs many. Administered by a Lieut.-Governor and Executive. The Legislative Council has 21 members and the House of Assembly 38 members. The colony was originally a French one, and then called Acadia; ceded to England 1714.

Lieutenant-Governor: The Hon. D. C. Fraser.

Executive Council: Premier and Provincial Secretary, Hon. Geo. H. Murray.—Attorney-General, Hon. A. Drysdale.—Commissioner of Works and Mines, Hon. W. T. Pipes.—Without office, Hons. T. Johnson, A. H. Comeau, A. Macgillivray, T. R. Black, David McPherson, and C. P. Chisholm.

Ontario (formerly called Upper Canada). Area, 222,000 sq. m.; pop. 2,782,947. It extends along the north shores of the River St. Lawrence and the great lakes, and is important as containing the Dominion metropolis, Ottawa (pop. 59,928). Provincial capital, Toronto (pop. in 1905, 262,149), the second city in Canada in wealth and population. Besides the two capitals, important towns are Hamilton (pop. 52,634), London (pop. 37,081), Guelph, St. Catherine's, Brantford, Belleville, and Chatham. Administered by a Lieut.-Governor and responsible Ministry. There is only one chamber, the Legislative Assembly, which has 98 members elected by manhood suffrage for four years. The land is very fertile, and produces cereals, fruit, etc., in abundance. The lumber trade in the province is a very important one.

Lieutenant-Governor: His Honour W. Mortimer Clark, K.C.

Executive Council: Premier, Hon. J. P. Whitney, K.C.—Attorney-General, Hon. J. F. Foy.—Treasurer, Hon. A. J. Matheson.—Education, Hon. R. A. Pyne.—Minister of Agriculture, Hon. R. Monteith.—Lands, Forests, and Mines, Hon. F. Cochrane.—Provincial Secretary, Hon. W. J. Hanna.—Public Works, Hon. J. O. Reaume.—Ministers without portfolio, Hon. Dr. Willoughby, Hon. J. S. Hendrie and Hon. A. Beck.

Prince Edward Island lies in St. Lawrence Gulf, north of Nova Scotia and between New Brunswick and Cape Breton. Area, 2133 sq. m.; pop. 103,259. Capital, Charlottetown, pop. 12,080. Divided into three counties. Administered by a Lieut.-Governor and Executive Council. The people elect a House of Assembly of 30 by manhood suffrage. Climate milder than neighbouring provinces. The adjoining waters include the most valuable fishing grounds of America.

Lieutenant-Governor: Hon. Donald A. McKinnon, K.C.

Executive Council: Premier and Attorney-General, Hon. A. Peters. Provincial Secretary, Treasurer, and Commissioner of Agriculture, Hon. G. E. Reid.—Public Works, Hon. J. H. Commiskey.—Without portfolio, Hon. James W. Richards, Hon. Peter McNutt, Hon. George E. Hughes, Hon. G. Godkin, Hon. B. Gallant, Hon. G. Simpson.

Agent-General in the United Kingdom: Harrison Watson, 73, Basinghall Street, London, E.C.

Quebec (formerly called Lower Canada) lies eastward of Ontario, occupying both banks of the St. Lawrence. Area, 347,350 sq. m.; pop. 1,648,898; mostly descendants of original French colonists. There are 1,291,699 Roman Catholics in the province. Capital, Quebec, pop. 68,840; a picturesque and very strong fortress, with historic associations. Montreal, a splendid city on the St. Lawrence, is the chief seaport and the most populous town in the Dominion, with 267,730 inhabitants. Other towns are St. Henri, Hull, and Sherbrooke. Administered by a Lieutenant-Governor and responsible Ministry. A Legislative Council of 24 members appointed for life by the Lieut.-Governor. The Legislative Assembly has 74 members. All cereals and fruits are produced in abundance; there is a big lumber trade, and manufactures flourish.

Lieutenant-Governor: The Hon. Sir Louis A. Jetté, K.C.M.G.

Executive Council: Premier and Attorney-General, Hon. Lomer Gouin.—Treasurer, Hon. A. Tessier.—Lands and Forests, Hon. A. Turgeon, C.M.G.—Commissioner of Agriculture, Hon. J. Allard.—Provincial Secretary, Hon. Rodolphe Roy.—Public Works, Hon. W. A. Weir.—Colonisation, Mines, and Fisheries, Hon. J. Prevost.—Without portfolio, Hon. J. C. Kaim.

Alberta, a new province proclaimed Sept. 1st, 1905, was carved out of the North-West Territories. It includes the former district of Alberta, the western half of Athabasca, and a strip of Assiniboia and Saskatchewan. Area about 225,000 sq. m.; pop. 183,000. Capital, Edmonton. Executive vested in a Lieut.-Governor, with a responsible Ministry. The Legislative Assembly consists of 25 members. The Dominion Government retains control of the public lands, and pays an annual allowance to the Provincial Government in consideration thereof. The province is represented in the Dominion Senate by 4 members; and in the House of Commons by 5 members.

Lieut.-Governor: Hon. G. H. V. Bulyea.

Premier: Hon. A. C. Rutherford.

Saskatchewan, a new province proclaimed Sept. 4th, 1905, was until that year a part of the North-West Territories. It comprises the eastern half of Athabasca and the greater part of the old districts of Assiniboia and Saskatchewan. Area, 225,000 sq. m.; pop. (June 30, 1906), nearly 300,000. Capital, Regina. Executive vested in a Lieut.-Governor and a responsible Ministry. The Legislative Assembly consists of 25 members (15 Liberals and 10 Conservatives in 1906). The Dominion Government retains control of the public lands, and in consideration thereof pays an annual allowance to the Provincial Government. The province is represented in the Dominion Senate by 4 members, and in the House of Commons by 5 members.

Lieut.-Governor: Hon. A. E. Forget.

Premier: Hon. Walter Scott.—Attorney-General, Hon. J. H. Lamont.—Treasurer and Education, Hon. J. A. Calder.—Secretary and Agriculture, Hon. W. R. Motherwell.—Clerk of Executive Council, J. A. Reid.

Territories.

The North-West Territories comprise those territories formerly known as Rupert's Land and the North-Western Territory (except the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, the district of Keewatin, and the Yukon Territory), together with all British territories and possessions in North America and all islands adjacent to any such territories or possessions, except Newfoundland and its dependencies. Included in the territories are the districts of Mackenzie (area, 562,182 sq. m., pop. 5216), Ungava (area, 354,961 sq. m., pop. 5113), and Franklin (area, 500,000 sq. m., pop. 9000).

Commissioner: Mr. F. White, C.M.G.

The Yukon Territory was in '98 constituted a separate territory, and is administered by a Commissioner, with an Executive Council of 10 members, 5 of whom are elected. Klondike is only a small section of Yukon. The gold-bearing area extends south-eastwards from the 141st meridian into British Columbia. Indications show that it is at least 500 miles long, and in places upwards of 100 miles wide. The arctic climate and the shortness of the summer season appear to be the great hindrances to mining operations, together with the scarcity of supplies caused by the remoteness of the district, and the great difficulty of the transit. Dawson City, which has sprung up at the junction of the Klondike and Yukon rivers, has a population of 9142. Area, 196,976 sq. m. pop. 27,219.

Commissioner: W. W. B. McInnes.

Senior Judge: Mr. Justice Dugas.

NORTH ATLANTIC COLONIES.

Bermuda Islands. A group of small islands and coral reefs, situated in the North Atlantic, 600 miles east of Cape Hatteras. Area of group, 18 sq. m., the principal island containing 16 sq. m. Pop. 7053 whites and 13,156 coloured persons, excluding the garrison. Administered by a Governor with an Executive Council of 6 members, and Legislative Council of 9 members, and an elected House of Assembly of 36 members. It is a naval station, and in 1905 the military force numbered 2359 and the naval force 1702, and is becoming a favourite winter resort for Americans and Canadians. The capital and seat of government is Hamilton. There is regular steam communication between Bermuda and New York, Halifax, Jamaica, etc. The chief products are early vegetables, lily bulbs, and onions, and practically all the exports go to the United States. For the floating dock being constructed see ENGINEERING.

Governor, Lieut.-Gen. Sir R. M. Stewart, K.C.B.

Executive Council: The Governor.—Colonial Secretary, Eyre Hutson.—Attorney-General, R. Gray.—Receiver-General, F. W. Major.—C. Peniston; J. H. Trimmingham.

British Guiana. A Crown colony in north of S. America, bounded on the east by Dutch Guiana, on the south by Brazil, on the west by Venezuela, and on the north and north-east by the Atlantic. Area 90,277 square miles; pop. 302,172. Capital, Georgetown (Demerara), pop. 48,192, a picturesque, well-built city and port, provided with various excellent modern institutions; second town and port, New Amsterdam (Berbice), pop. 7012. The population is mixed, including whites, negroes, aboriginal Indians, East Indian coolies, and Chinese. Rich alluvial low-lying plains extend 40 to 70 miles from the coast, and are the seat of cultivation and settlement. The staple article cultivated is sugar-cane. Gold mining is now attracting considerable attention, and there are promising diamond fields. The chief lack of the colony is labourers to develop its great agricultural and mineral resources. Executive in hands of Governor and Executive Council; legislation conducted by a Court of Policy of 15 members, 7 official and 8 elected. For finance measures 6 elected representatives are added, forming Combined Court. Civil law is modified Roman-Dutch; criminal law is English. Exports consist chiefly of sugar, rum, molasses, and gold.

A general strike of casual wharf labourers at Georgetown for higher wages, in Nov. 1905, led to riots early in December, in which a good deal of damage was done and some lives were lost. The police force was subsequently increased by 40 mounted men, and a volunteer corps was formed.

Governor, Sir F. M. Hodgson, K.C.M.G.—Government Secretary, C. T. Cox, C.M.G.

Court of Policy: President, The Governor.—Gov. Secretary, C. T. Cox, C.M.G.—Attorney-General, Sir Thomas Rayner, K.C.—Auditor-General, N. Darnell Davis, C.M.G.—Immigration Agent-General, R. Duff; and others.

British Honduras. A Crown colony in Central America, bounded by Yucatan on N., Guatemala W. and S., and Caribbean Sea E. Area, 7562 sq. m. The population (39,688) includes whites, aboriginal Indians, Caribs, negroes, East Indians, and Chinese. The chief towns are Belize (6972), Corosal (1514), and Orange Walk (1967). Near the coast the country is swampy, with numerous lagoons abounding. The northern district is a flat plain; but on the west, away from the coast, hills and valleys, clothed with timber, abound, and rich grassy plains afford excellent pasturage. The chief rivers are the Hondo, the New River, and the Old or Belize River. A railway is being surveyed from Belize through the hinterland into the Peten province of Guatemala. The products are chiefly logwood and mahogany (which, however, is beginning to fail on the sea littoral), with bananas, coconuts, plantains, rubber, and gum. The Government is composed of the Governor, an Executive Council and a Legislative Council of three official and five unofficial members.

Governor, Lieut.-Col. E. J. E. Swayne, C.B.
Executive Council: The Governor.—Colonial Secretary, W. Collet, C.M.G.—Treasurer, H. B. Walcott.—Attorney-General, F. M. Maxwell.—Carlos Melhado; H. C. Usher, I.S.O.

Labrador. A great peninsula on the east coast of British North America, lying between the Gulf of St. Lawrence and Hudson Bay. From Cape Chidley (Hudson's Strait) to Blanc Sablon (Strait of Belle Isle), including the basin of the Hamilton, it belongs to Newfoundland, the remainder of the peninsula forming part of Quebec and the North-West Territories. The area is about 200,000 sq. miles, and pop. 3634.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

This—the oldest British Colony—was discovered in 1497 by John Cabot with an English expedition. Area 42,734 sq. m.; pop., including both Newfoundland and Labrador, 230,000. Capital, St. John's (pop. 29,594). Newfoundland divides Labrador with Canada, her share being estimated at 120,000 sq. m., with a resident population of 4000. The colony is ruled by a Governor, with a Legislative Council of 18 members appointed by the Crown, and a House of Assembly of 136 members elected for four years, from 18 districts, by manhood suffrage and the ballot. A branch of the Royal Naval Reserve has existed in the island since 1900. The religious bodies are: Church of England, 69,823; Church of Rome, 72,696; Wesleyan, 53,276; other denominations, 6245. Education is purely denominational. Representative Government was granted in '32. The railway was commenced in '81, and has now been extended across the island to Port aux Basques, and steamship connection with the American railway system is maintained. The railway has given great impetus to pulp manufacture, mining, lumbering, and general trade. Newfoundland abounds in copper and iron, particularly at Belle Isle, in Conception Bay. Coal is abundant, but the output is still inconsiderable. Newfoundland is a great place for sport. Caribou shooting is excellent, and there is good fishing for salmon and trout. The principal industries are the seal and cod fisheries, and agriculture by small farmers. The best land is in the Codroy valley and on the west coast.

By the Anglo-French Convention signed April 8th, 1904, France kept for her subjects, on a footing of equality with British subjects, and subject to all local laws and regulations, the right of fishing during the usual fishing season ending Oct. 20th, in the territorial waters of that part of the coast of Newfoundland comprised between St. John's Cape and Cape Ray going northward. The right of fishing retained for French subjects extends to every kind of fish, including bait, as well as shell fish. It was agreed that the French citizens engaged in fishing, or in the preparation of fish, on the "Treaty Shore," prior to the closing of the fishing season of 1903, should either abandon their establishments there or give up their occupation, receiving a pecuniary indemnity from the British Government, to be settled by an arbitration tribunal composed of an officer of each nation, with an umpire in case of disagreement. In further compensation for the surrender of her privileges a modification of the Gambia-Senegambia frontier was made in favour of France, giving Yvabenda to Senegambia (see p. 67). The Los Islands, opposite Konakry Island, were also ceded to France, and a modification of the Anglo-French boundary line in the Niger and Lake Chad region was agreed upon.

Governor, Sir W. MacGregor, K.C.M.G., C.B.
Executive Council: Premier and Colonial Secretary, the Rt. Hon. Sir R. Bond, K.C.M.G.—Justice, Sir E. P. Morris, K.C.—Finance, E. M. Jackman.—Marine and Fisheries, E. Dawe.—Ministers without portfolio, G. Knowling, J. S. Pitts, J. D. Ryan, and H. Gear.

History, 1906.

In 1905 considerable friction was caused by a dispute with the United States as to the right of American fishermen to engage in the winter herring fishery on the west coast of Newfoundland. The root of the Colonial grievance was that American vessels had come to buy Newfoundland herrings, which were admitted into the States duty free, whereas the same herrings taken to the States in Newfoundland vessels were charged a duty. The Colonial Government then endeavoured to enforce the Bait Act against the United States fishermen, forbidding Colonial fishermen to sell bait to them or to hire themselves as members of their crews. In the 1906 session a Foreign Fishing Vessels Act, containing the severest regulations against foreign fishing vessels, was passed, but was reserved for the King's assent; and negotiations between the British and United States Governments were proceeded with. In addition to the points referred to above the question of the use of purse-seines came up, the Americans claiming the right to use them, and the Colonial Government objecting that they were too destructive in their effects. Finally a modus vivendi was arranged for the season 1906-7, pending and without prejudice to the further discussion of the questions at issue. H.M. Government agreed not to bring into force the Foreign Fishing Vessels Act, 1906, or the first and third sections of the 1905 Act; and consented to the use of purse-seines by American fishermen, subject to due regard to their modes of fishery. The United States Government directed American fishing vessels to report at Custom House on arrival in and departure from Colonial waters, to pay light dues, to abstain from Sunday fishing, and to recruit Newfoundland fishermen, if necessary, only outside the three-mile limit. Colonial opinion seemed to be very strong against the modus vivendi, and the Government announced their intention of enforcing every Colonial statute possible against the Americans, and of allowing Newfoundland fishermen also to use purse-seines.

WEST INDIES.

The name of "West Indies" was given by Columbus to the islands surrounding the Caribbean Sea. They are divisible into the Bahamas, the Greater Antilles, and the Lesser Antilles. The last are also divided into Windward and Leeward groups; and to them may be added the islands off the Venezuelan coast. The total area is estimated at upwards of 90,000 sq. m., and the total pop. at 5,000,000, of whom two-thirds are negroes.

Bahama Islands. A chain of islands, 600 miles in length, lying between the S.E. corner of Cuba and Florida. Area, 4466 sq. m.; pop. 58,175, the majority being of the negro race. Twenty islands of the group are inhabited, but there are besides about 3000 islets and rocks. The chief island politically is New Providence (area, 58 sq. miles), on which is the capital, Nassau, pop. 12,000, a favourite winter health resort for Americans and West Indians. Other islands are Andros, Eleuthera, Great and Little Bahama, Abaco, Inagua, etc. Much forest and valuable timber. Cattle largely reared. Saint Salvador, where Columbus first landed in 1492, is one of the Bahamas. Chief exports: sponges, turtles, pineapples, oranges, and sisal fibre, mainly to the United States. The Government is representative. There is a Governor and an Executive, a Legislative Council, and a House of Assembly of 29 members. Education is free, compulsory, and unsectarian.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief, Sir William Grey-Wilson, K.C.M.G.

Executive Council: Colonial Secretary, W. Hart Bennett, — Attorney-General, — — — Receiver-General, W. R. Hunt. — W. E. Armbrister; Joseph Brown; J. H. Young; and J. P. Sands.

Barbados is geographically but not politically one of the Windward group. Area, 166 sq. m.; pop. 199,542. Capital, Bridgetown, pop. 30,000. It is administered by a Governor, with Executive Committee, consisting of 3 official and 7 unofficial members, a Legislative Council of 9 members, and a House of Assembly of 24 members, elected annually. The chief exports, which go very largely to the United States, are sugar and molasses.

Governor, Sir G. T. Carter, K.C.M.G.
Executive Council: The Governor.—Officer commanding the Troops, Major-General J. F. Hilton.—Colonial Secretary, S. W. Knaggs.—Attorney-General, W. H. Stoker, K.C.

Jamaica. The largest of the British West India Islands, lying 90 miles south of Cuba. Its length is 144 miles, and its greatest width 49 miles. Area 4207 sq. miles. The island is mountainous, and a range of hills, known as the Blue Mountains, runs from east to west, rising to 7423 feet in one place. Turks and Caicos Islands, southern islands of the Bahama group (area 169 sq. miles, pop. in 1901 5287), with important salt, sponge, and fibre industries, have been annexed to the colony, and are administered by a Commissioner. Grand and Little Cayman (area 55 sq. miles, pop. 5919), Pedro Cays and Morant Cays are also dependencies. The capital of Jamaica is Kingston, pop. 48,500, with Spanish Town (the old capital) of next importance. The principal ports are Port Royal (harbour of Kingston), Montego Bay, and Falmouth. Exports: bananas, oranges, sugar, rum, coffee, cocoa, and dye-woods. Of the exports 68 per cent. go to the United States and 19 per cent. to the United Kingdom; of the imports 53 per cent. are sent by the United Kingdom and 40 per cent. by the United States. The Government includes a Governor, a Legislative Assembly of 29 members, 5 official, 10 nominated by the Crown, and 14 elected, and a consultative Privy Council. There is an Imperial garrison of 1799 officers and men at Kingston, and a naval dockyard and coaling station at Port Royal. Total population of Jamaica and dependencies on March 31st, 1903, 785,434, consisting chiefly of negroes.

Captain-General and Governor, Sir J. A. Swettenham, K.C.M.G.

Privy Council: Senior Officer commanding the Troops, Brigadier-Gen. Caulfield; Colonial Secretary, H. C. Bourne, C.M.G.—Attorney-General, T. B. Oughton.—Director of Public Works, Valentine G. Bell, C.M.G.; Dr. J. Pringle, Lieut.-Col. C. J. Ward.

Trinidad and Tobago. Trinidad is an island of rectangular shape, with an area of about 1754 sq. m., pop. 299,800, separated from the mainland of Venezuela by the Gulf of Paria. In '89 the island of Tobago was separated from the Windward Islands and joined with Trinidad; and in '98 it was made a ward of the united colony of Trinidad and Tobago, the revenue, expenditure and debt being merged in those of the united colony. Tobago has an area of 114 sq. m., with a population of 19,200. The population of the whole colony in 1906 was 334,852. Scarborough (pop. 1769) is the chief town. The capital of the colony is Port-of-Spain (pop. 54,100), in the north-eastern corner of the island, which possesses the best harbour in the West Indies. The products are cocoa, sugar, asphalt, coconuts, and fibre. The asphalt output, which is the product of the Pitch Lake, the property of the Crown, is about 100,000 tons per annum, and the payment to the Government by the company which leases the lake was in 1905 £36,486. The Government consists of a Governor, an Executive Council of 7 members, and a Legislature composed of the Governor, 11 official and 11 unofficial members, all appointed by the Crown. Cocoa planting is extending rapidly, and rubber in Tobago.

Governor, Sir H. M. Jackson, K.C.M.G.
Executive Council: Colonial Secretary, H. C. Clifford, C.M.G.—Attorney-General, L. E. Agostini, K.C.—Solicitor-General, R. S. A. Warner, K.C.—Auditor-General, R. G. Bushe.—Commandant, Lieut.-Col. H. E. Brake, C.B., D.S.O.—Receiver-General, Denis Slyne, Walsh Wrightson, C.M.G., and R. H. McCarthy.

LEEWARD ISLANDS.

The westward section of the Lesser Antilles (so called in distinction from the Windward Islands, with reference to the trade winds). Of the whole group Guadeloupe, Martinique, St. Bartholomew, and part of St. Martin belong to France; St. Eustatius, Saba, and part of St. Martin to Holland; and some of the Virgin Isles to Denmark. Those which belong to Great Britain are described below. The Leeward Islands Confederation has representative government, with a Governor, Executive, and Federal Legislative Council, though each presidency possesses its own constitution. The Legislative Council consists of 8 official and 8 elective members. There is an armed police force 187 strong. Number of scholars on the roll 1903-4, 23,952; average attendance only 10,787. The capital and seat of government of the Leeward Islands is St. John (Antigua). Total area of the colony 704 sq. miles; total pop. 132,406.

Antigua. Area, 108 sq. m.; pop. 34,953. The capital, St. John, pop. nearly 10,000, is the seat of the federal government. English Harbour is a naval station. Products, sugar and pine-apples chiefly. Government is administered by the Governor of the Leeward Islands, and a Council, consisting of 8 official and 8 non-official members, all nominated by the Governor. Four delegates are sent to the Federal Council. Barbuda (pop. 775) and Redonda (pop. 120) are dependencies of Antigua. Exports: salt, phosphates of lime, and cattle. Area, 62½ miles; pop. 895.

Montserrat. Area, 32 sq. m.; pop. 13,127. Capital, Plymouth. Governed by a Commissioner and Executive Council nominated by the Sovereign, and a Legislative Council of 4 members appointed by the Crown. The chief exports are sugar, limes, coffee, and cocoa. Cotton is being grown with favourable results.

St. Christopher, or St. Kitts. Area, 65 sq. m.; pop. 30,523. There is an Administrator with an Executive Council for the Presidency, which includes Nevis and Anguilla, and a Legislative Council of 6 official and 6 unofficial members. Capital, Basseterre, pop. about 10,000. Sugar and sugar products are the chief exports, but cotton is now being grown with success. Nevis has an area of 50 sq. miles; pop. 13,699. Capital, Charlestown, pop. 1500. The island is simply a single cone-shaped mountain, surrounded by a margin of low lands. Anguilla has an area of 35 sq. m.; pop. 471. It is low and flat, deficient in wood and water. Produces salt from a lake, phosphate of lime, cattle, ponies, and garden stock.

Dominica lies between Guadeloupe and Martinique. Area, 291 sq. m.; pop. 30,790. Capital, Roseau, pop. 5764; second town Portsmouth. Cocoa, limejuice, coffee, fruits, and spices are the chief productions. Two-thirds of the people speak French, but the use of English is increasing. The Council consists of 12 members, 6 official and 6 non-official, all nominated by the Governor.

The Virgin Islands lie immediately to the west of Puerto Rico. Of the principal islands, Denmark possesses Santa Cruz, St. Thomas, and St. John; and England owns Tortola, Virgin Gorda, and Anegada. The latter, with smaller islands, form a presidency, under the administration of a Commissioner. The total area, embracing in all about 32 islands, is 58 sq. m.; total pop. 5143.

Governor of Leeward Islands, Sir E. B. Sweet-Escott, K.C.M.G.

Executive Council: The Governor.—The Administrator of St. Kitts and Nevis; The Administrator of Dominica.—Colonial Secretary and Attorney-General, E. St. J. Branch.—T. D. Foote, F. S. Wigley, I.S.O., B. S. Davis, J. J. Camacho, E. A. Foster, I.S.O., Francis Watts, C.M.G., W. H. Whyham, W. D. Auchinleck, Sir D. Morris, K.C.M.G.

WINDWARD ISLANDS.

The Windward Islands, so called in distinction from the Leeward Islands, with reference to the trade winds, form part of the Lesser Antilles. All the islands are, for administrative purposes, under one Governor and Commander-in-Chief, but each has its own Administrator and separate institutions. There is no common legislature, laws, revenue, or tariff; but there is a common Court of Appeal, consisting of the Chief Justices of the Islands and of Barbados. The total area of the colony is about 524 sq. miles, and the total pop. about 163,000. Revenue, 1904-5; Grenada, £68,993; St. Lucia, £69,273; St. Vincent, £22,448. Expenditure, 1904-5; Grenada, £69,510; St. Lucia, £65,508; St. Vincent, £25,228.

Grenada is the largest of the group, and is the residence of the Governor of the Windward Islands. Its area is about 133 sq. miles, and the population 69,530. Capital, St. George (pop. 5188). The products are cocoa, fruits, cotton, coffee, and spices. The Government includes the Governor-in-chief of the Windward Islands, an Executive Council of 6, and a Legislative Council of 13—6 official, and 7 nominated by the Crown.—The Grenadines are a cluster of islets lying between Grenada and St. Vincent, some of which are subordinate to Grenada and some to St. Vincent. Area, 25 sq. m., pop. 6400. The largest is Carriacou, with an area of 10 sq. m. and pop. 6497. Revenue (1905-6), £69,954; expenditure, £71,968; debt, £123,670; imports, £237,256; exports, £283,955.

St. Lucia is the most northerly island of the colony. Area about 234 sq. m.; pop. 52,682. Capital, Castries (pop. 8000), the harbour of which is one of the best in the West Indies, and which is the chief coaling station for the fleet there. The whites are mostly French Creoles; the dominant religion is Roman Catholic, and education chiefly so; the law is based on old French codes. The scenery of the island is exceptionally beautiful. Products chiefly sugar, cocoa, tobacco, and spices. Government in the hands of an Administrator with a nominated Executive and Legislative Council. Revenue, 1904-5, £69,273; expenditure, £65,508; imports, £370,706; exports, £172,030; debt, £164,680.

St. Vincent lies about 21 miles south-west of St. Lucia. Area about 132 sq. m.; pop. 49,236, of whom about 32,000 are blacks. Capital, Kingstown (pop. 4547). Revenue, 1904-5, £22,448; expenditure, £25,228; debt, £5050; imports, 1904-5, £74,238; exports, £51,902. Chief exports: arrow-root, sugar, cocoa, live stock and poultry, fruit and vegetables. The fisheries are abundantly productive. Efforts are being made to establish a cotton industry. The Government includes an Administrator and a Legislative Council of 4 official and 4 unofficial members, all nominated by the Crown.

Governor (and Governor of Grenada), R. Williams, C.M.G.—Administrator of St. Lucia, P. C. Cork, C.M.G.—Administrator of St. Vincent, E. J. Cameron, C.M.G.

AUSTRALASIA.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

The colonies of Queensland, New South Wales, Victoria, South Australia, Western Australia, and Tasmania, combined as Original States to form, as from Jan. 1st, 1901, a Federal Commonwealth under the title of the Commonwealth of Australia.

Australia is the largest island in the world—about one-fifth less than Europe, and about as large as the United States, excluding Alaska. It extends 2400 miles west to east, and 1971 miles north to south. Area computed at 2,946,691 sq. miles, or twenty-six times the size of Great Britain and Ireland. Population (Dec. 1905) 4,002,893. Australia is a great plateau, elevated on the east and inclined towards the west. The eastern half and most of the other territories bordering the coasts on north and west are extremely fertile, and well adapted for grazing. Wool still continues to be the staple export, but the trade in frozen and tinned meat is increasing, and a wine industry is rapidly growing up, especially in South Australia and Victoria. The great central depression is sterile, and almost impassable on account of want of water, together with prickly growths. Coal abounds in various districts, particularly in New South Wales and Queensland. Gold, silver, tin, iron, and copper are extensively worked. Climate varies from tropical to temperate. There are over 13,600 miles of railroad open, but, as will be seen below, they remain under the control of the States, and are not made a Commonwealth service. The black aborigines are few, and rapidly decreasing, but their present strength is probably about 210,000.

Government.

The Constitution of the Commonwealth is contained in the Commonwealth of Australia Constitution Act 1900, and provides for the admission of other Australasian colonies and British possessions. Any proposal to alter the Constitution must be passed by an absolute majority of each House of Parliament, and submitted to the electors in each State. The legislative power is vested in a Federal Parliament, consisting of the King, a Senate, and a House of Representatives. A Governor-General, with a salary of £10,000 per annum, represents the King. The Senate consists of 36 members, six for each Original State, directly chosen by the people of the State voting as one electorate (though Queensland has power to divide the State into divisions) for a term of six years. The Senate cannot originate or amend Bills appropriating revenue or moneys or imposing taxation, but, with this exception, has equal power with the House of Representatives. If the Senate thrice rejects a Bill passed by the House of Representatives, or insists on passing it with amendments to which the other House will not agree, the Governor-General may dissolve the Senate and the House of Representatives. In the event of disagreement after the dissolution, the Governor-General has power to convene a joint sitting of the members of the two Houses, to vote together and decide the point or points at issue. The House of Representatives consists of 75 members directly elected for three years by the people of the Commonwealth, the number of members being, as nearly as practicable, twice the number of senators. New South Wales has 27 members; Victoria, 22; Queensland, 9; South Australia, 7; Western Australia, 5; and Tasmania, 5. A person entitled to become a member of the House or of the Senate must be twenty-one years of age, must be an elector or a person qualified to become an elector, must have resided within the limits of the Commonwealth for at least three years; and must be a subject of the King, either natural-born or for at least five years naturalised. Senators and members of the House of Representatives receive an allowance of £400 a year. The Federal Parliament has power to make laws for trade, taxation, bounties, borrowing, postal services, naval and military matters, currency, banking, divorce, marriage, old age pensions, immigration and emigration, etc. The State Parliaments retain legislative authority in regard to all matters not transferred to the Federal Parliament. State Governors are still appointed by the Crown, and they still correspond on State business directly with the Secretary of State for the Colonies, the Governor-General being kept informed. When a proposed law is passed by both Houses of Parliament the Governor-General may assent, withhold assent, reserve the law for the King's pleasure, or return it to the House in which it originated, with any amendments which he may recommend, and the Houses may deal with the recommendation. The King may disallow any law within one year from the Governor-General's assent, and such disallowance shall annul the law from the day when the disallowance is made known. A measure reserved for the King's pleasure is not to have any force unless and until, within two years from the day on which it was presented to the Governor-General, the Governor-General makes known that it has received the King's assent.

The executive power of the Commonwealth is vested in the Governor-General, with an Executive Council of 7 Ministers, whose salaries may not exceed, in all, £12,000 per annum. The judicial power is exercised by a Federal Supreme Court, called the High Court of Australia, and other Courts vested with Federal jurisdiction. Trade, commerce, and intercourse among the States are absolutely free. The Commonwealth makes uniform customs and excise duties, and of the net revenue from such duties not more than one-fourth may be applied by the Commonwealth towards its expenditure. A State cannot coin money nor make anything but gold and silver coin as legal tender in payment of debts. The Commonwealth cannot make any law for establishing any religion, or for imposing any religious observance, or prohibiting the free exercise of any religion, and no religious test is required as a qualification for any office or public trust.

At present Parliament sits at Melbourne, but both Houses of Parliament have selected Dalgety, a township 206 miles south of Sydney, on the Snowy river, with a pop. of about 300, as the seat of government.

Defence.

The Military Forces of the Commonwealth comprise a field force and a garrison force. The Field Force troops are Militia, and are divided among the six States as far as possible on a population basis. The Garrison troops are mainly Volunteers, with a proportion of permanently employed officers and men. The totals of establishment for the year 1906-6 were: Field force, 12,437; garrison force, 10,447; unallotted, 900; total, 23,784.

The Defence Act provides that members of Rifle Clubs shall form part of the Reserve forces. Their strength on June 30th, 1906, was:

	No. of Clubs.	No. of Members.
New South Wales	162	7,941
Victoria	351	18,202
Queensland	99	3,857
South Australia	81	3,400
Western Australia	65	3,126
Tasmania	13	556
Total	771	37,082

As a result of a conference between State and Commonwealth representatives in Nov. 1905, the Senior and Junior Cadets throughout the Commonwealth have been organised under a scheme. Provision has at present been made for 2850 senior and 20,881 junior cadets, allotted to the several States approximately.

The local naval forces consist of 175 permanent officers and men, and 1665 partially paid members of naval brigades, the maintenance of these forces costing £75,000 per annum. There is an Imperial naval force on the Australian Station (including New Zealand). The Colonial contribution towards maintenance is £240,000 a year (£200,000 being contributed by Australia). This agreement has never been popular, and in 1906 Captain Creswell, Director of the Commonwealth Naval Forces, drew up a scheme for the formation of an Australian local fleet. This scheme, however, was disapproved by the Committee of Imperial Defence, who took the view that the Imperial Fleet provided for all emergencies except raids, which could be guarded against by the existing forts.

Education and Press.

Primary Education is compulsory and secular in all the States, though in New South Wales and Western Australia secular instruction is held to cover general religious teaching as distinguished from dogmatic instruction. In Queensland, South Australia, Victoria, and Western Australia public instruction is free, but in New South Wales a fee of 3d. is charged, and small fees are required in Tasmania from those able to pay. The school age is 6 to 14 years in New South Wales and Western Australia, 6 to 13 in Victoria, 6 to 12 in Queensland, and 7 to 13 in South Australia and Tasmania. Secondary Education is very generally provided and liberally assisted by the State; grammar, high, and technical schools do good work; all the States except Tasmania have agricultural colleges; and finally there are the Universities of Sydney, Melbourne, Adelaide, and Tasmania. Abundant provision is made in all the States, except Tasmania, for elementary scholars to mount this educational ladder.

There are in all about 1200 papers published in Australasia, but the leading dailies may be counted on the fingers. Sydney, the capital of New South Wales, boasts the oldest paper in the Australian colonies—the Sydney Morning Herald. In point of circulation the Sydney Daily Telegraph probably stands first. The Sydney Sunday Times is the only journal which has special and exclusive cables from London. Mr. J. Henniker Heaton, M.P., has a large interest in the Sydney Town and Country Journal and the Evening News. The Sydney Bulletin is a 6d. weekly. At Melbourne are published the Melbourne Argus, the Melbourne Age, and the Herald (evening). In South Australia, Adelaide possesses the Advertiser, of which the editor and proprietor is Sir J. Langdon-Bonython, and the Register. Brisbane, the capital of Queensland, has the Brisbane Courier, the Brisbane Telegraph, Daily Mail, and Evening Observer; whilst in Western Australia the West Australian is published at Perth, and in Tasmania the Hobart Mercury is the chief paper. Cable news is supplied by the Australian Press Association, 80, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Revenue, 1902-3, £12,105,878; '03-4, £11,631,056; '04-5, £11,400,315; '05-6, £11,879,343; expenditure, 1902-3, £3,901,759; '03-4, £4,252,519; '04-5, £4,322,829; '05-6, £4,494,841. Surplus revenue paid to States, 1902-3, £8,204,563; 1903-4, £7,378,479; '04-5, £7,142,769; '05-6, £7,384,502.

Imports.—The value of imports has not greatly varied during the last three years. In 1903 it amounted to £38,835,682. In 1905 it was about the same, the value of imports free of duty amounting to £14,072,661, and of dutiable goods to £24,274,670, or a total of £38,346,731. The figures show that 36·70% of the imports consisted of articles free of duty, and 63·30% of dutiable articles.

Exports.—In 1900, the year before federation, the value of the exports was £45,956,882. In 1905 it had increased to £56,841,035, or an increase in five years of £10,884,153. The value of imports per head of population for 1905 amounted to £9 9s. 3d., and of exports to £14 6s. 6d., making the total trade of Australia per head of population £23 9s. 9d.

The total State debts of the Commonwealth amounted in 1905 to £236,680,739:—

Political Parties.

There have from the beginning been three parties in the Commonwealth Parliament. The first Cabinet was formed by Mr. (now Sir Edward) Barton, and the first election, in March 1901, turned on the Tariff question in most of the States, though in Queensland the chief issue was the question of black labour on the sugar plantations. In the result the Government secured a majority in both Houses, but the Labour party secured 76 seats in the House and 8 in the Senate. Mr. G. H. Reid became the leader of the Opposition, and Mr. Watson of the Labour party. In Sept. 1903 the Ministry was reconstituted, Sir E. Barton resigning the Premiership to become a Judge of the High Court, and Mr. Deakin succeeding him.

The second general election took place on Dec. 16th, 1903, and resulted in the return of 8 Conservatives, 14 Liberals, and 14 Labour members to the Senate; and 26 Liberals, 26 Conservatives, and 23 Labour members to the House of Representatives. The main feature of the election was the triumph of the Labour party. In New South Wales Mr. Reid and the Free Trade party won a great victory. Women voted for the first time, and went to the poll in large numbers.

In April 1904 Mr. Watson formed a Labour Ministry, having, with the aid of the Liberals, defeated Mr. Deakin's Government over a proposal to exclude State employees from the Arbitration Bill. He in turn was defeated in Aug. 1904, over a proposal giving preference to trade unionists over non-unionists, and Mr. Reid formed a Liberal Ministry. In July 1905 Mr. Deakin returned to power. The aims of the Labour Party were in 1905 declared to be (1) the cultivation of an Australian sentiment, based upon the maintenance of racial purity, and the development in Australia of an enlightened and self-reliant community; (2) the securing of the full results of their industry to all producers by the collective ownership of monopolies, and the extension of the industrial and economic functions of the State and municipality. For Nov. 1906 elections, see OCCURRENCES DURING PRINTING.

History of Australia, 1906.

The Bills introduced by Mr. Deakin on Nov. 10th, 1905, amending the Immigration Laws (see 1906 ed., p. 77) were carried through Parliament (Dec. 14th). They permitted the admission, on certain conditions, of immigrants under contracts to perform labour, provided no workers of equal skill and ability were available in the Commonwealth; and also enabled the Commonwealth to make arrangements with other countries whereby merchants and tourists can enter Australia.

Sir John Forrest in his Budget statement (July 31st) outlined a scheme for taking over the State debts existing at the date of federation, and amounting to £202,000,000, making them Australian consols, the currency to be thirty years. He suggested that the debts incurred since federation, amounting to £35,000,000, should be taken over as soon as an amendment to the Constitution should permit such a course, and introduced a Bill for this purpose (Aug. 29th), which the House passed (Sept. 20th). The Senate passed the Bill also (Oct. 4th), with an amendment providing that all State debts should be transferred to the Commonwealth in equal proportions if any were taken over; but this amendment the House of Representatives rejected. A Conference of State Ministers and Leaders of the Opposition approved the scheme subject to certain modifications (12th).

The Premier, Mr. Deakin, laid before the House (Aug. 29th) a motion increasing certain duties for foreign countries by 10 per cent., and giving a preference to that amount on British products imported into the Commonwealth in British ships. The House passed a Bill giving effect to this proposal (Sept. 14th), and the Senate also adopted it (Oct. 5th). The Imperial Government, however, pointed out that shipping preferences were barred by treaties with different countries, and the Bill was accordingly amended in this respect in the House; but the Senate would not agree to delete the proviso, and the Government reserved the Bill for the Royal Assent. An agreement for a preferential tariff with New Zealand was also introduced (Aug. 29th), and was approved by the House (Sept. 13th). A similar treaty with South Africa was approved (Oct. 5th).

The Constituent States.

New South Wales is the oldest of these, and was founded as a penal settlement in 1788. It has Queensland on the north, and Victoria on the south. From the sea upon the east it stretches to about long. 140 E., which meridian divides it from South Australia. Total area, 310,700 sq. m.; pop. (Sept. 30th, 1906), 1,524,580. The capital is Sydney, on Port Jackson, pop. 520,600. Ruled by a Governor and responsible Ministry. Legislative power is vested in a Parliament of two Houses. The upper, or Legislative Council, consists at present of 53 members (the number is unlimited, but is not to be less than 21) appointed by the Governor for life. The lower house, or Legislative Assembly, is composed of 90 members, elected triennially on a basis of manhood suffrage. Every male subject above twenty-one, having resided for one year in the colony and for one month in his electoral district, possesses a vote. The elections take place all on the same day. Members are paid the sum of £300 a year. For local government purposes the colony recognises 79 boroughs and 113 municipal districts, besides Sydney. The Church of England has by far the most adherents, next coming the Roman Catholics, the Presbyterians, the Wesleyans and the Congregationalists, in the order named. There is no state aid to religion. There are 3390 miles of Government railway open. Much grain is grown, and there are over 39,500,000 sheep in the colony. There are large forests, and gold, silver, lead, zinc, coal, and copper are mined. The staple export is wool. Silver and gold, coal, hides, tallow, and frozen meat are also exported.

Revenue, year ended June 30th, 1906, £12,291,367; expenditure, £11,395,243. Imports, 1905, £29,424,008; exports, £36,757,002. Public debt, July 31st, 1906, £85,698,585.

Norfolk Island, 900 miles east from Australia (area 12 sq. miles, pop. 827), is administered as a dependency by a resident magistrate, assisted by an elected council of 12 members. The chief village is Kingston. Lord Howe Island (pop. 100) is also a dependency, administered by a visiting magistrate from Sydney.

Queensland was originally administered by New South Wales, as forming part of that colony; but in 1859 it was given a separate status. It comprises the N.E. section of the continent, immediately N. of New South Wales. It is 1300 miles from N. to S., and 900 miles from E. to W., including 668,497 sq. m. of area. Population, 523,266. The capital is Brisbane, pop. 121,262, situated on the river of that name, 500 miles N. of Sydney. Other leading towns are Charters Towers, Gympie, Toowoomba, Maryborough, Rockhampton, and Townsville. The colony is separated into three divisions—Southern, Central, and Northern. In the first the bulk of the population reside, with 45 representatives in Parliament; the Central district has 11 representatives; and the Northern 16. The north yields tropical produce of all kinds, and in many of the seaboard districts a most important sugar industry is established, with small proprietors farming limited areas. There are about 9000 Kanakas and other Polynesians in the sugar districts. The Commonwealth Government in 1901 passed the Pacific Islands Labourers Act, providing that all Polynesians should be sent back to their islands by the end of 1906, and prohibiting their importation after that time. In the southern portions of the colony products of the temperate zone flourish, and wheat forms an important item of agriculture. The pastoral industry is very large, and mining is a considerable industry—gold, silver, copper, tin, and coal all being worked. Timber is found in abundance, both hard and soft woods being indigenous. There are supplies of smokeless coal near Rockhampton and near Port Gladstone. Executive vested in Governor and responsible Ministry. Parliament consists of two houses—Legislative Council and Legislative Assembly. The former is composed of 44 members, nominated for life by the Governor on the advice of the Ministry. No limit is placed to the number of members. The latter has 72 members elected from 61 electoral districts for three years on a manhood-suffrage basis, with a residential qualification in the colony of six months. The members are paid £300 a year. The principal religious bodies are Church of England, Roman Catholic, Methodist, and Presbyterian. Valuable land grants were formerly made to these bodies, which they now retain free from taxation. The chief exports are gold, wool, frozen meat, hides and skins, and sugar. There are about 2997 miles of railway open.

Revenue, 1904, £4,249,385; expenditure, £4,261,809; imports, 1905, £6,544,921; exports, £11,852,367; public debt, £4,116,399.

South Australia comprises the central section of Australia, and stretches across the entire continent from north to south. The older portion, South Australia proper, lies between 129° and 141° E. long., and from the sea to 26° S. lat. To this was added in 1863 the Northern Territory, lying between 129° and 138° E. long., stretching up to the Indian Ocean, and containing an area of 523,620 sq. m., with a population of 4890 and about 20,000 aborigines. The capital is Palmerston, on the noble harbour of Port Darwin. Mineral and agricultural resources considerable. Cotton growing is to be encouraged. Local administration is in the hands of a Resident, but the Government have invited the Commonwealth to assume control of the Territory. Various islands on both the south and north coasts belong to the colony. The whole colony, thus constituted, contains an area of 903,690 sq. m., and a population of 389,727. Capital, Adelaide; pop., with surrounding suburbs, 163,430. There is much fair pasture-land; but the soil and climate of the south are chiefly adapted for the growth of wheat, which has already made the colony the "granary of Australasia," and for vine and olive, both of which are now extensively planted. The mulberry thrives, but sericulture has yet to be introduced. The climate of the south is one of the most agreeable and healthy in Australia. The chief minerals are copper, gold, silver, and lead, copper being easily first. Executive, the Governor and responsible Ministry. Parliament consists of Legislative Council and House of Assembly. Council consists of 18 members, half retiring every three years. £50 freehold or £20 annual leasehold, or £25 annual rent with a six-months' registration, qualifies for the franchise. In 1905 the Legislative Assembly reduced the franchise qualification for the Legislative Council from £25 to £15, but the Council rejected the proposal and restored the former figure. In 1906 the Assembly again carried the proposal and the Council again refused its consent. A conference between the two Houses failed to produce agreement, and the Premier asked the Governor to dissolve Parliament. He refused at first, but afterwards consented, and the new elections took place on Nov. 3rd. The Assembly contains 42 members elected triennially by adult suffrage. Members of both Council and Assembly are paid £200 per annum. No member can sit in either House and in the Commonwealth Parliament at the same time. For local government purposes there are 32 municipal and 140 district councils. The Church of England, the Roman Catholics, and Wesleyans, are the principal denominations. Wool, wheat, and copper are the chief exports. There are 1882 miles of railway open.

Revenue, 1905-6, £2,806,011; expenditure, £2,806,011; imports, 1905, £8,439,619; exports, £9,410,667; public debt, £30,038,485.

Tasmania is an island south of Australia, and separated from it by Bass's Straits, 120 miles across. Formerly called Van Diemen's Land. Extends 210 miles north to south, and 200 miles west to east. The area is 26,215 sq. m., or (including the islands belonging to the colony) 26,375 sq. m., with a pop. of 174,233. Capital, Hobart, pop. 34,682, in the south. Second city, Launceston, pop. 21,294. Several groups of islands are looked upon as being within the colony, including the Furneaux group, King Island, and Bruny Islands. Ruled by a Governor and responsible Ministry. There are also a Legislative Council of 18 members elected for a term of six years, and a House of Assembly of 35 members elected for three years by manhood suffrage with a 12 months' residential qualification. Members are paid £100 per annum. For local government there are municipal councils, town boards, and road and water trusts. As to religion, the Church of England, Roman Catholic and Wesleyan Methodist are the chief denominations, numbering respectively 30,870, 87,348, and 11,639 adherents. The climate is most healthy and temperate. The minerals found are copper, gold, tin, coal, and silver. Wool, wheat, oats, and hay are largely produced, and agriculturists are beginning to turn their attention to fruit and hops. There are 620 miles of railways, of which about 459 are Government property.

Estimated revenue, 1906-7, £891,367; expenditure, £874,470; imports, 1904, £2,554,454; exports, £3,007,460; public debt, £9,557,286.

Victoria is the smallest in size and southernmost in position of the colonies in Australia. It occupies the south-eastern corner, and is divided from New South Wales on the north by the Murray river, and from South Australia on the west by the 141st meridian of E. long. Area, 87,884 sq. miles; pop. (Dec. 31st, 1905), 1,218,571; 1901 census: Chinese, 7,349; aborigines, 652. The capital is Melbourne, the largest city in Australia (pop. 515,350), situated on Hobson's Bay and the river Yarra. The Executive is vested in the Governor and a responsible Ministry. There are two Houses of Parliament. The Legislative Council consists of 35 members, elected for six years by male citizens possessing freehold property worth £10 per annum or leasehold with tenure of at least five years, worth £15 per annum, or occupying as tenant property of the same annual value, unless possessed of educational qualification. The Legislative Assembly of 68 members is elected triennially by ratepaying qualification or manhood suffrage. Members of the Lower House are paid £300 a year. For local government the colony is divided into 60 urban and 148 rural municipalities, each with an elective Council. The chief religious denominations are the Church of England, Presbyterians, Methodists and Roman Catholics. Agriculture, mining and manufactures employ the bulk of the population. The chief products are gold, wool, wheat, and butter. Coal is found of good quality, with enormous deposits of brown coal. There are 3401 miles of railway in operation.

Mr. Irvine, Premier of Victoria, resigned (Feb. 9th, 1904) owing to ill-health, and Mr. Thomas Bent, Minister of Public Works, then formed a new Ministry (18th).

Revenue, 1904-5, £7,509,657; expenditure, 1904-5, £6,982,623; imports, 1904, £20,091,951; exports, £24,404,917; public debt, 1905, £51,763,766.

Western Australia comprises all the western half of Australia beyond the 120th meridian of E. long. It is 1480 miles N. to S. and 1000 E. to W., and has a coast-line of 5200 miles. Area, 975,920 sq. m.; pop., Aug. 1906, 262,492. Capital, Perth (with suburbs), pop. estimated 1905, 52,300; chief port Fremantle, pop. 27,100. Representative government was first given to the colony in '70 in a limited form; but in '90 the Imperial Parliament gave a new constitution, vesting the administration in a Governor and Parliament. The Legislative Council, or Upper House, contains 30 members elected for six years; the Legislative Assembly, or Lower House, contains 50 members elected for three years. Electors to the Council must have resided in the State for six months, and possess £100 freehold or £25 per annum leasehold, or be householders to the value of £25, or occupy or mine Crown lands rented at £10 per annum. The qualifications of electors to the Assembly, who may be of either sex, are—six months' residence in the district; or the possession of £50 freehold or £10 leasehold, or holding a house of the value of £10, or leasing Crown lands at £5 per annum. For local government purposes there are 44 municipal councils and 91 district roads boards. The climate varies considerably, for the colony stretches over twenty degrees of latitude, but the inhabitants laud it as the healthiest in the world. In the north and north-east there are large pastoral tracts, suitable also in parts for tropical products. The products of the colony are gold, wool, pearl-shells, pearls, timber, sandal-wood, guano, coal, copper, and tin. The gold is found at Kimberley, in the N.W., Yilgarn, Kalgoorlie, Coolgardie, etc., in the S.W., and at several points between these two districts. The production in 1905 was £8,305,652. There are 2145 miles of railway open, of which 1605 belong to the Government.

Both the Assembly and the Council carried resolutions in 1906 affirming that the union of the State with the rest of the Commonwealth was detrimental to Western Australian interests, and that the question of secession should be submitted to the people.

Revenue, 1905-6, £3,558,939; expenditure, £3,632,313. Imports, 1903, £6,769,922; 1904, £6,672,480; 1905, £6,481,874. Exports, 1903, £10,324,732; 1904, £10,271,511; 1905, £9,871,019. Debt, 1906, £16,737,950.

Governor, His Excellency Admiral Sir Frederick G. D. Bedford, G.C.B.

British New Guinea, also known as the Territory of Papua, comprises the south-eastern part of the island, the Trobriand, Woodlark, d'Entrecasteaux and Louisiade groups, and the adjacent islands south of the 8th parallel south latitude. It is bounded on the west by Dutch and on the north by German territory. Its area is about 90,540 sq. m., 87,786 sq. m. on the mainland, and 2754 sq. m. of islands; and the population is estimated at about 350,500, of whom only 642 are Europeans. A protectorate was proclaimed over the territory in '84, and in '88 it was definitely annexed. In Nov. 1901 the Government of the Australian Commonwealth undertook the administration, and the transfer was made in 1903. It is administered by a Governor, who resides at Port Moresby (pop. 1640). There are six magisterial divisions, each under a resident magistrate. The country is being gradually settled, and it is hoped that the natives may be trained to use their tribal lands for commercial purposes. The climate favours the cultivation of all tropical products. Much of the interior is still in the stone age, and aboriginal methods of cultivation and industry are still general amongst the population. All minerals, except coal, are reserved to the Crown. The chief exports are trepang, copra, pearl-shell, gold and sandal-wood. The London Missionary Society has been established in the island since 1870, and has done much good work.

Executive Council: Administrator, Capt. F. R. Barton, C.M.G.—Government Secretary, Anthony Musgrave, C.M.G.—Chief Judicial Officer, J. H. P. Murray.

NEW ZEALAND.

New Zealand is a colony, consisting of a group of islands in the South Pacific, about 1200 miles E. by S. from Australia. There are two large islands: North Island, 500 m. by 250, area 44,468 sq. m.; South Island, sometimes also called Middle Island, 500 m. by 200, area 58,525 sq. m.; also Stewart Island, area 665 sq. m.; Chatham, Auckland, and other Islands at some distance E. and S., are 813 sq. m. Area of entire colony, 104,471 sq. m.; population 888,639, exclusive of the Maoris, who number 43,143. Capital, Wellington, pop. (including suburbs) 62,844; chief cities, Dunedin, 56,024; Auckland, 82,189; Christchurch, 67,862.

The Cook, or Hervey, Islands, a group of six islands, with a few islets, which, with other groups, were annexed to the Colony in Oct. 1900, lie in the eastern Pacific, between 18° 15' and 21° 47' S. lat. and 157° and 160° W. long, and are the only British possession in the eastern Pacific between Fiji and the Marquesas. They are very fertile and healthy. Area, 150 sq. m.; population about 6000. The chief island is Rarotonga, others being Mangaia, Atiu, Mauke, Mitirua, Takutea, the Aitutaki group, and the Hervey group, including Manuae and Te Au-o-tu. The principal products are coffee, copra, and limejuice, with a considerable export of oranges and other tropical fruits to New Zealand.

Other islands dependent on New Zealand are Niue, the Palmerston Atoll, Penryn, Suvaarow, Manahiki and Rakahanga, Danger Island and Massan. Area about 130 sq. m.; pop. about 600.

Government is carried on by a Governor, who is advised by a responsible Ministry. Of the two houses of parliament, the Legislative Council consists of 35 members nominated by the Governor for life (except those nominated subsequently to Sept. 17th, '91, after which date all appointments are for seven years only), the House of Representatives of 80 (including 4 Maoris) members elected triennially on an adult suffrage. The qualifications for electors are residence in the colony for a year, and in the electoral district for three months. Members of the Lower House receive £300, and of the Upper House £200 a year. For local government the country is divided into 96 counties and 103 boroughs, the counties being further divided into town districts and road districts. There is a Government Insurance Department, and all the more important public works are in the hands of the Government and other public bodies, and have been carried out for the most part on the co-operative system, the Government providing the materials and letting out the work to parties of artisans and labourers at fixed rates. An eight-hours day prevails, and a Conciliation and Arbitration Act is in force. About 40 per cent. of the inhabitants belong to the Church of England, 22 per cent. are Presbyterians, and 10 per cent. Methodists. Education is compulsory, free, and secular; and the University of New Zealand, which has four colleges, at Dunedin, Christchurch, Wellington, and Auckland, confers degrees. Ports defended by heavy batteries, mines, and torpedo-boats. A permanent force of artillery and engineers 355 strong is maintained, and the volunteer force numbers over 19,000. The majority of the population are engaged in agricultural and pastoral pursuits, and a big frozen meat industry is being fostered. There are also important coal, gold and silver mines. There are 2406 miles of Government railway, as well as numerous roads and water communication. The chief exports are wool, frozen meat, sheep skins and pelts, tallow, butter, gold, gum, and grain.

There are 226 daily, weekly, and monthly periodicals. The leading dailies are the Government organ, the Auckland Star, and the New Zealand Herald; at Wellington the New Zealand Times and the Evening Post; Christchurch has the Lyttelton Times and the Press, both morning dailies; Truth and the Star, evening dailies; the Otago Daily Times, morning daily, at Dunedin; the Dunedin Star is an evening Opposition journal.

Revenue, 1905, £7,584,359; expenditure, £7,122,340; imports, 1905, £12,828,857; exports, £15,655,947; public debt, £59,670,471.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief, The Right Hon. Lord Plunket, K.C.V.O., K.C.M.G.

Ministry: Prime Minister, Colonial Treasurer, Postmaster-General, Commissioner of Electric Telegraphs, and Minister of Industries and Commerce, Hon. Sir. J. G. Ward, K.C.M.G.—Railways and Public Works, Hon. W. Hall-Jones.—Native Minister and Commissioner of Stamp Duties, Hon. J. Carroll.—Justice, Mines, and Immigration, Hon. J. McGowan.—Attorney-General, Colonial Secretary, and Defence, Hon. A. Pitt.—Commissioner of Trade and Customs, Minister of Labour, and Marine, Hon. J. A. Millar.—Lands and Agriculture, Hon. R. McNab.—Education and Public Health, Hon. G. Fowlds.

High Commissioner in London, Hon. W. P. Reeves, 13, Victoria Street, S.W.—Secretary, Walter Kennaway, C.M.G.

History, 1906.

The Elections in Dec. 1905 gave the Government of Mr. Seddon a sweeping victory, the Opposition securing less than 20 seats in a House of 80. The death of Mr. Seddon took place with tragic suddenness (June 10th), while he was away on a visit to Australia. His body was taken home, and lay in State in the Parliament buildings before the funeral took place (20th). A temporary Administration was formed by Mr. Hall-Jones until the arrival of Sir Joseph Ward, who formed a Ministry (Aug. 6th) to follow generally on the lines of Mr. Seddon's policy. Later in the year the Labour Party in Parliament showed a tendency to break away from supporting the Government and assert the claims of labour. A reciprocity treaty with Australia was proposed, but the House rejected it (Oct. 4th): see AUSTRALIA. An International Exhibition, under the auspices of the Government, was held at Christchurch, commencing on Nov. 1st.

WESTERN PACIFIC.

The office of High Commissioner for the Western Pacific was created by an Order in Council of 1877 to provide a Civil Court for the settlement of disputes between British subjects living in these islands. The High Commissioner's jurisdiction extends over all islands in the Western Pacific not within the limits of the colonies of Fiji, Queensland, and New South Wales, and not within the jurisdiction of any civilised power. In '93 the jurisdiction was extended to foreigners, and in most cases to natives residing in British settlements or protectorates within the limits of the Order, including the New Hebrides (q.v.) and the Melanesian groups. The High Commissioner is the Governor of Fiji, and his Court includes the Chief Justice of Fiji and every other Judge of the Supreme Court acting as Judicial Commissioners, and a number of Deputy Commissioners appointed by the High Commissioner. Certain naval officers commanding men-of-war on the Australian station are at times appointed Deputy Commissioners.

High Commissioner, Sir E. F. im Thurn, K.C.M.G., C.B.—Chief Judicial Commissioner, C. H. Major.—Resident Deputy Commissioner, Solomon Islands, C. M. Woodford.—Resident Deputy Commissioner, Gilbert and Ellice Islands, W. Telfer Campbell, Esq.—Resident Deputy Commissioner, New Hebrides, Capt. E. G. Rason, R.N.

Fanning Island. Area 15 sq. m.; pop. 150. It is a landing-place for the Pacific Cable.

Fiji. An island group and British Crown colony in the South Pacific, about 1200 miles from Auckland, N.Z. Fiji is a corruption of Viti, the native name. Consists of two considerable islands: Viti Levu, 4112 sq. m.; Vanua Levu, 2432 sq. m.; and 225 smaller. Total area, 7435 sq. m.; total pop. 121,074. Capital, Suva, in Viti Levu; second town, Levuka, in Ovalau. Island of Rotumah (area, 14 sq. m., pop. 2192), to the north, annexed to Fiji in '81, is administered by a Commissioner. The cultivation of sugar, fruits, tobacco, Para rubber, and copra is the chief industry. The forests contain valuable timber. Climate tropical, but healthy and favourable to Europeans. Natives, Polynesian with Papuan intermixture; are peaceable, orderly, becoming Christianised and civilised. Europeans number 2548, and there are about 20,000 Indian and Polynesian labourers. In '74 the "king" and chiefs voluntarily ceded the group to England. Fiji is administered by the Governor, who is also His Majesty's High Commissioner and Consul-General for the Western Pacific. The Legislative Council consists of 6 official and 6 unofficial members, appointed by the Governor. Local government is largely in the hands of the natives through village and district councils. Two State-aided public schools, and many native schools carried on by the Wesleyan and Roman Catholic missions, the former being in a large majority. The chief exports are sugar, copra, fruit, and spirits.

Governor and Commander-in-Chief, Sir E. F. im Thurn, K.C.M.G., C.B.—Chief Justice, C. H. Major.—Attorney-General, A. Ehrhardt.—Colonial Secretary and Receiver-General, A. W. Mahaffy.—Agent-General for Immigration, A. R. Coates.

Gilbert and Ellice Islands. The Gilbert Islands have an area of 166 sq. m., the Ellice Islands of 14 sq. m.; pop. 35,300. Revenue, 1900, £2665; expenditure, £2230. Imports, 1900, £20,359; exports, £21,582.

Phoenix Group include eight islands. Area 16 sq. m.; pop. 59.

Pitcairn Islands. Area 2 sq. m.; pop. 169. Administered by a Chief Magistrate and Council. Arrowroot and coffee of excellent quality are produced.

Solomon Islands. The British islands lie in the Western Pacific, between 7° 30' and 13° S. lat. and 150° and 163° E. long., and include Guadalcanar, San Christoval, Malaita, New Georgia, Gela, Tulagi, as well as Santa Cruz, Vanicoro, and the islands ceded by Germany in '99, including Choiseul, Ysabel, the islands in Bougainville Straits, and Lord Howe's group. British protection extends over all the islands between the Solomon and the Torres groups, and a Resident has his headquarters at Tulagi. The natives are Melanesians, and most of them cannibals. Area about 8,400 sq. m. Pop. about 150,000, including 110 Europeans. Revenue, 1904-5, £1,994; expenditure, £2,307; imports, 1904-5, £33,656; exports, £47,405. The chief exports are copra, ivory nuts, pearl-shells, etc. The sago palm grows in vast numbers. As to the German Islands see GERMANY.

Tonga Isles, or the Friendly Islands, are governed, under a British protectorate, proclaimed 1900, by an hereditary monarch, King George Tubou II., and a legislative assembly of two orders—viz., 31 nobles, and 31 elected representatives of the people, with an executive consisting of a ministry nominated by the King. Three groups of islands, called Tonga, Haabai, and Vavau, constitute the kingdom. The trade of the islands is mainly with Australia and New Zealand. Chief exports are copra, bananas, and oranges. Area 390 sq. m.; pop. 21,103, including about 240 whites. Capital, Tongatabu. Imports, 1905, £70,868; exports, £110,728.

British Agent and Consul, Hamilton Hunter, C.M.G.

Union or Tokelau Islands include Nassau and Danger Islands. Area 7 sq. m.; pop. 1050.

MISCELLANEOUS ISLAND POSSESSIONS.

Ascension Island. In the South Atlantic, 960 miles from the African coast. The port is called Georgetown, and is furnished as a naval station, with batteries and storehouses, for British ships on the West Coast of Africa, under the control of the Admiralty. Used as a coaling depot for the West African squadron. Area, 35 sq. m.; pop. 266. Turtles, for which the island is famous, are found in abundance between December and May.

Governor, Capt. R. K. McAlpine, R.N.

Falkland Islands. A Crown colony and naval coaling depot in the South Atlantic, about 300 miles east of Magellan's Straits. Capital and port, Stanley, on East Falkland, which island contains 3000 sq. m.; West Falkland has an area of 2300 sq. m., and the smaller islands of the group cover about 1200 sq. m. Pop. 2009. Wool and frozen mutton are exported to the United Kingdom, which sends about 90 per cent. of the imports and takes nearly all the exports, the balance going to S. America. The Governor is assisted by an Executive and a Legislative Council. South Georgia, an island group, 1000 miles E.S.E., has been annexed to the colony. Its area is 1000 sq. m., but it is snow-covered, sterile, and uninhabited.

Governor and Chief Justice, W. L. Allardye, C.M.G.

Executive Council: The Governor.—Colonial Secretary, H. E. W. Grant.—Treasurer, W. A. Thompson.—Colonial Surgeon, E. T. Born.

St. Helena. Is an island in the South Atlantic belonging to Great Britain, 1140 miles from the African coast, and 800 miles S.E. of Ascension, the nearest land. Port and capital is Jamestown, pop. 2000, which is an Imperial coaling station. The opening of the Suez Canal and the consequent diversion of shipping from the island have led to its continuous decline of late years. It is administered by a Governor and Executive Council. It was decided in 1906 to remove the garrison hitherto stationed on the island. Area, 47 sq. m.; pop. 3512. The chief industries are fishing and agriculture.

Governor, Lieut.-Col. H. L. Gallwey, C.M.G., D.S.O.

Executive Council: Lord Bishop of St. Helena; Officer commanding the Troops.—G. N. Moss; H. J. Bovell.

Mauritius. An island in the Indian Ocean 500 miles east of Madagascar, 2000 miles from India, and 2300 from the Cape. It is a British Crown colony. Area, 705 sq. m.; pop. 378,645, including 262,770 of Indian origin or descent. The island is divided into nine districts, Capital and chief port, Port Louis (pop. 56,000). A Governor presides over the administration, which is conducted by Executive and Legislative Councils. Of the Council of Government, numbering 27 members, 8 are ex-officio members, 9 nominated by the Governor and 10 elected. The capital is strongly defended, and the strength of the garrison is about 2400. There is now a constabulary of about 750. French is spoken all over the island, but both languages are used in the Council of Government, and English in the Courts of Justice. The State aids the Churches with grants, the Roman Catholics being in a large majority. There is a Royal College, and also many Government and other schools. The chief products are sugar, rum, vanilla, aloe-fibre and oil. Dependent appanages of the colony, under the administration of its Governor, are various groups in the Indian Ocean. Rodrigues, the Oil Islands, including Diego Garcia and the Chagos group, and the St. Brandon group are, the chief of them. Their total area is 172 m.; pop. 5119. Rodrigues comes first in importance, and abounds in fruits. It lies 344 miles east of Mauritius, and is under the administration of a Magistrate appointed by the Governor of Mauritius. Pop. 3681. The Oil Islands include the Chagos and Trois Frères Islands. Diego Garcia (pop. 526) is the most important, and with its spacious bay is used as a coaling station for steamers. The St. Brandon or Cargados Islands are mostly mere sandbanks. Governor, Sir C. Boyle, K.C.M.G.

Executive Council: Officer commanding the Forces, Col. C. T. E. Metcalfe, C.B.—Colonial Secretary, Sir Graham J. Bower, K.C.M.G.—Procureur and Advocate-General, F. A. Herchenroder.—Receiver-General, J. J. Brown.—Auditor-General, D. S. MacGregor.—H. Leclézio, C.M.G.; E. Laurent.

Seychelles Islands. These were until Nov. 1903 dependent upon Mauritius, but on Nov. 9th were made a separate Crown colony. They lie in the Indian Ocean about 935 miles north of Mauritius, and include the Amirantes, Cosmoledo, Providence, Aldabra, and other groups. The largest and most populous of them is Mahé (area 55½ sq. m.), whose capital, Victoria, has a safe and commodious harbour. The Seychelles are under a Governor, with Executive and Legislative Councils. Area 148 sq. m.; pop. 20,767. Exports, cocoanut oil, vanilla, and guano.

Governor, W. E. Davidson, Esq., C.M.G.
Executive Council: Legal Adviser, R. S. de Vere.—Treasurer, G. H. Griffiths.—Auditor, L. O. Chitty.

BRITISH MUSEUM.

This Museum was founded in the year 1753, when the collection of Sir Hans Sloane and the Harleian collection of manuscripts were acquired, and an Act of Parliament was passed "for providing one general repository for the better reception and more convenient use of the said collections, and of the Cottonian Library, and of the additions thereto." The famous collection of MSS. made by Sir Robert Cotton, which was presented to the nation by Sir John Cotton, his descendant, in 1700, was virtually, however, the beginning of the Museum. The above collections were then designated "The British Museum," deposited in Montagu House, Bloomsbury, in 1754, and opened to the public on Jan. 15th, 1759. In 1816 temporary additions had to be made to the old building to accommodate the Elgin marbles, and by '45 the four sides of the present Museum, designed by Sir Robert Smirke, were erected, and Montagu House removed. Further additions afterwards became necessary, and in '57 the magnificent reading-room, with its book-galleries, was built. During the years '80-'83 the transference of the natural history collections was made to the new Museum in Cromwell Road, South Kensington. Space for the future extension of the buildings has been provided by the purchase in '95 of the rows of houses, with their gardens, which abut on the Museum on the east, north, and west; the ground thus secured forming, together with that already occupied, an isolated square plot of 13 acres.

The MSS. Department contains upwards of 55,000 volumes, besides Greek, Coptic, and Latin papyri, charters, and seals. The Printed Book Department contains about 2,000,000 volumes, and receives, under the Copyright Act of '42, a copy of every book published in the United Kingdom. The annual increase from all sources amounts to about 46,000 volumes, exclusive of continuations, music, newspapers, etc. The progress of printing is splendidly illustrated by the collections in this department. The Oriental Printed Books and MSS. Department was established in '92. The Greek and Roman Antiquities Department includes the Hamilton collection, purchased in 1772, the Townley marbles, purchased in 1805; and, by later additions, the Parthenon sculptures, better known as the Elgin marbles, the Phigaleian marbles, the Payne-Knight collections, the Lycian marbles, the Mausoleum remains, and many other choice specimens of Greek sculpture, bronzes, fictile vases, gems, and ornaments. The Coins and Medals Department, originating in the Cottonian and Sloane collections, includes magnificent specimens of Anglo-Saxon, English, Greek, Roman, Oriental, and other coins. The Egyptian and Assyrian Antiquities Department contains an especially valuable and complete collection of Egyptian, Babylonian, Assyrian, Phœnician, and Semitic antiquities. The names of Sir Henry Layard, Sir Henry Rawlinson, and other explorers are inseparably connected with this department. The British and Mediæval Antiquities and Ethnographical Collections contain all antiquities found in the British Isles, Anglo-Saxon, Celtic, or Roman, and glass-work, pottery, arms, ivories, and other antiquities illustrating life in the Middle Ages. There are also fine collections of glass, pottery, and majolica, of prehistoric antiquities, of ethnographical objects, and of Oriental antiquities. The Prints and Drawings Department contains one of the most noted collections of its kind. The original drawings of old masters, etchings, and engravings of the various schools of eminence, are of extreme interest and value.

The Museum is open on week days from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; after 4 p.m. in January, February, November, and December, and after 5 p.m. in March, September, and October, only certain of the galleries remain open: viz.,—on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, exhibitions of manuscripts, printed books, prints and drawings, porcelain, glass, majolica, prehistoric, British, Anglo-Saxon, mediæval and ethnographical collections; on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, Egyptian, Assyrian, Greek and Roman galleries (exclusive of the Vase Rooms and Bronze Room); Gold Ornament Room, American collections, and the Waddesdon Room. On Sunday afternoons the Museum is open from 2 to 4 p.m. in January, February, November, December; from 2 to 5 p.m. in October; from 2 to 5.30 p.m. in March and September; from 2 to 6 p.m. in April, May, June, July, August. The Museum is closed on Good Friday and on Christmas Day. Students are admitted to the several departments under regulations to be obtained from the Director. Admission to the reading-room is by ticket. A reader's ticket is granted to persons over twenty-one years of age on a written application, stating object of researches, etc., and accompanied by a recommendation from a householder, who must be a person of recognised position, and who must certify that the applicant will make proper use of the reading-room. The authorities will not accept the recommendations of hotel and lodging-house keepers in favour of their lodgers. The total number of visitors to the Museum in 1905 (exclusive of readers) was 813,659. The visitors to the reading-room numbered 214,940, a daily average of 711. Director and Principal Librarian, Sir E. Maunde Thompson, K.C.B., I.S.O., D.C.L., LL.D., V.P.S.A.

British Red Cross Society. The Society was inaugurated at a meeting held at Buckingham Palace on July 17th, 1905, under the presidency of H.M. The Queen. It is the outcome of a fusion of two existing bodies—the "British National Society for Aid to the Sick and Wounded in War" and the "Central British Red Cross Council." Its primary object is to furnish aid to the sick and wounded in time of war. Such aid must necessarily be supplementary to that furnished by the medical departments of the Navy and Army. The Admiralty and War Office have accorded their official recognition to the Society as the organisation responsible for the Red Cross movement throughout the empire. President, H.M. Queen Alexandra; Chairman Executive Committee, Sir Frederick Treves, Bart., G.C.V.O., C.B.; Sec., Mr. James G. Vokes; Assistant Sec., Mr. Frank Hastings. Offices, 9, Victoria Street, London, S.W.

Brooke, Rev. Stopford A., M.A., was b. 1832. Ed. at Trin. Coll., Dublin, where he graduated ('56), winning the Downe Prize and Vice-Chancellor's medal for English verse. He was formerly Chaplain to Queen Victoria and to the Empress Frederick of Germany. In '80 Mr. Brooke seceded from the Church of England because he could not accept the orthodox views on miracles, and became minister of Bedford Chapel, Bloomsbury. In '95, however, after a lengthy illness, he found himself compelled to retire from the post. He is the author of several works, among which are "Life and Letters of the late F. W. Robertson," a "Primer of English Literature," an able review of which is to be found in Mr. Matthew Arnold's "Miscellaneous Essays," "The Early Life of Jesus," several volumes of sermons, a volume of poems issued '88, a "History of English Poetry," a work on Early English Literature, which subject he has made peculiarly his own, a lecture delivered in '93 entitled "Theology in English Poetry," an able criticism of "Tennyson: his Art and Relation to Modern Life" ('94), "The Old Testament and Modern Life" ('96), and a book on Browning in 1902.

Bryan, William Jennings, was b. at Salem, Marion County, Illinois, March 19th, 1860. Ed. at a public school at Salem, the Whipple Academy, Jacksonville, and Illinois College. Deciding to follow a legal career, he studied at the Union Law College, Chicago, and first practised for himself at Jacksonville. In '87 he removed to Lincoln, Nebraska, and in '90 he was elected to Congress as an extreme Free Silver man. Re-elected in '92, he afterwards lost his seat because of his uncompromising views on the Silver question. He still kept up his law practice and edited an Omaha newspaper. In '96, at the Democratic Convention at Chicago, he was nominated for the Presidency, but was beaten, Mr. McKinley receiving an overwhelming majority of votes. At the beginning of the Spanish-American war he was appointed Colonel of the Nebraska Volunteers (June 4th, '98), but saw no fighting. In 1900 he was again nominated for the presidency, but Mr. McKinley was returned with an increased majority. He visited England and spoke on arbitration at the Inter-Parliamentary Conference in July 1906. On his return to the States he was accorded a great reception, and was formally welcomed as the Democratic candidate for the Presidency at the next election.

Buckle, George Earle, son of the Rev. George Buckle, canon of Wells Cathedral, was b. near Bath 1854. He is editor of the Times, to which post he was appointed in '84, having previously been connected with the editorial staff of that journal. He was ed. at Honiton Grammar School, Winchester, and New Coll., Oxford, of which he was a scholar. He won the Newdigate Prize for English Verse in '75, took a First Class in Literæ Humaniores '76, and a First Class in Modern History in the following year. He was subsequently elected to a Fellowship of All Souls' Coll., and was called to the bar at Lincoln's Inn in '80.

Builders, Institute of, 31 and 32, Bedford Street, Strand, W.C. Sec., T. Costigan.

BULGARIA.

Ruler.

Prince Ferdinand was b. in Vienna, Feb. 26th, 1861, youngest son of the late Prince Augustus of Saxe-Coburg and Princess Clémentine of Bourbon-Orleans, a daughter of Louis Philippe. He has served as an officer in the Austrian army, and possesses large estates in Hungary. After the deposition of Prince Alexander in Sept. '86, Prince Ferdinand was offered and accepted the vacant throne, and on Aug. 14th, '87, took the oath to the Bulgarian constitution at Tirnova. His sovereignty was not formally recognised by the Porte and the Powers until Feb. '96. He married (April 20th, '93) Princess Marie Louise of Parma, daughter of the Duke of Parma; and has two sons, of whom the eldest, Prince Boris, b. Jan. 30th, '94, was in '96 admitted to the Orthodox Greek Church. The Princess Marie Louise died Jan. 31st, '99. In March 1905 the Prince was made an Hon. G.C.B.

Government.

By the Treaty of Berlin, '78, Bulgaria was constituted an autonomous and tributary principality under the suzerainty of the Porte. In '85 Eastern Roumelia was united to Bulgaria. The executive power is vested in the Prince, assisted by a council of ministers, and the legislative power in a single chamber, the Sobranje or National Assembly, elected for five years by manhood suffrage in the proportion of one member to every 20,000 of the population. There is also a Great Sobranje, consisting of delegates selected in the proportion of 1 to 10,000 of the population, to which constitutional and other questions, such as a vacancy on the throne or the acquisition of territory, must be referred.

Army.

The Army has been brought to a notable degree of efficiency. Military attachés who have witnessed the operations of the troops are agreed that they are capable of holding their own against the best European troops. The forces are divided into three categories: the Regular Army, the Reserve and the Militia, and all Bulgarians are liable for personal service, with few exceptions, from the age of 20 to 45, substitution not being permitted. The country is divided into six divisional districts, and the annual contingent is about 18,000 men. The peace strength is: Infantry, 1300 officers and 28,550 men; cavalry, 200 officers and 3850 men; field artillery, 280 officers and 5020 men; mountain artillery, 45 officers and 900 men; fortress artillery, 65 officers and 950 men; engineers, 18 officers and 1900 men; transport, 20 officers and 160 men: total, 1900 officers and 41,330 men. The total war strength is 3870 officers, 202,500 men, and 29,200 horses: plus at least 20,000 Komitajis, a force of semi-trained and experienced guerillas. The infantry arm is the 8 mm. Mannlicher rifle.

Statistics and Diplomatic.

The State religion is that of the Orthodox Greek Church, to which over 3,000,000 of the population belong, but its Government is independent of the Orthodox Communion, and is carried on by the Bulgarian Exarch and the national Synod of Bishops. There are 643,253 Mahometans amongst the inhabitants. Education is free and obligatory. Theoretically the State owns the land, but the practice is that the land is held on a perpetual lease by a multitude of small farmers, who pass it on to their heirs, and pay one-tenth of the produce as rent. All minerals belong to the State. The chief exports are cereals, eggs, and other agricultural and pastoral produce. The bulk of the trade is with Austria-Hungary, Belgium, Great Britain, Turkey, and Germany. Railways (1020 miles) connect Sofia with Constantinople and Belgrade, and Rustchuk with Varna.

A commercial treaty with Great Britain, based upon the principle of the most-favoured-nation treatment, was signed Dec. 9th, 1905, and provided for a number of reductions of duty on British products.

History, 1906.

A Convention with Serbia, concluded in July 1905, and providing for the establishment of a customs union between the two countries, was made public (Jan. 5th). It was to commence on Mar. 1st, 1906, and expire on Mar. 1st, 1917, and with the exception of certain specified goods, provided for the free exchange of the products of both countries. The adoption of an identical tariff for imports from foreign countries was contemplated on the expiry of the convention. The two countries further agreed to conclude a monetary convention, to assimilate their weights and measures, and to arrange for the execution of judicial decrees and sentences, and for extradition. An addition to the convention provided for the appointment of a mixed commission to determine the frontier between the two countries. The Austro-Hungarian Government promptly took umbrage at the convention, and required Serbia to denounce it (see Serbia). A Convention with Italy was concluded (17th), containing the most-favoured-nation clause and a specially favourable tariff for some Italian products. The Turkish Government demanded the abrogation of the convention with Serbia (21st), on the ground that under the Berlin Treaty Bulgaria had not the right to make such a convention with a foreign State. Bulgaria, however, maintained an absolute right to conclude commercial agreements with foreign States, and declined to comply with the Turkish demand. In August the indignation caused by the action of Greek bands in Macedonia led to a serious outbreak at Anchialos. A number of buildings were burnt down and several persons were killed. M. Petkoff succeeded General Petroff as Premier (Nov. 5th).

Buller, General Sir Redvers Henry, V.C., G.C.B., G.C.M.G., was b. 1839. Ensign '58. Served in the campaigns in China ('60), Ashanti ('73-4), South Africa ('78-9), when he commanded the Frontier Light Horse in the Zulu war and won his V.C., Egypt ('82-4), and Soudan ('84-5). All his regimental service has been in the 6th King's Royal Rifles. In '82 he married Audrey, daughter of the 4th Marquis Townshend, and widow of the Hon. G. T. Howard. He was Under-Secretary for Ireland for a short time in '87. He was Quartermaster-General '87-90, Adjutant-General '90-97, and succeeded the Duke of Connaught in the Aldershot command '98. In '99 he was appointed to the chief command of the British forces in South Africa, and took personal charge of the force directed to relieve Ladysmith, but when his attack on the Boer position at Colenso was repulsed (Dec. '99), Lord Roberts was sent out as Commander-in-Chief. General Buller finally succeeded in relieving Ladysmith, drove the Boers out of Natal, and took part in the fighting in the Eastern Transvaal. He returned home in Oct. 1900, on Jan. 10th, 1901, resumed his command at Aldershot, and on Oct. 1st was given the command of the First Army Corps at Aldershot; but on Oct. 22nd was retired on half-pay, in consequence of a speech which he made in London on the 10th, in reply to charges made against him in respect of a heliogram sent by him to Sir George White after Colenso, and in respect of his general fitness to command an Army Corps. During 1902 much controversy was aroused on this subject, the Government refusing to comply with the General's request that the telegrams relating to the fighting for the relief of Ladysmith should be published. Address: Downes, Crediton, Devon.

Bülow, Prince Bernhard von, was b. in 1849, a son of Herr von Bülow, who was Foreign Secretary of Germany under Prince Bismarck, '73-9. He entered the German Foreign Office in '73, and acted as Secretary of Embassy in Rome, St. Petersburg, and Vienna, holding the important post of Chargé d'Affaires to Greece during the Russo-Turkish war. At the conclusion of that war he was appointed one of the Secretaries of the Berlin Congress, and after more diplomatic service in Paris and St. Petersburg, he was appointed Minister to Roumania '88, and to Italy '93. Whilst he acted in the former capacity the commercial treaty between Germany and Roumania was concluded. During '97 he acted as Foreign Secretary while Baron von Marschall was on leave, and was at last definitely appointed to that office. In '99 he concluded the treaty with Spain, whereby the Caroline, Marianne and Pelew Islands were ceded to Germany, and upon this achievement he was appointed Count Bülow. In Oct. 1900, on the resignation of Prince Hohenlohe, he succeeded him as Chancellor of the German Empire and Prime Minister of Prussia, and on June 6th, 1905, he was raised to the dignity of Prince, and received the order of the Golden Fleece from the King of Spain. He was somewhat seriously ill in 1906, but resumed control of affairs in October. He is married to Princess Maria Camporeale, step-daughter of a former Italian Minister, Mignetti. See GERMANY.

Burgin, George B., novelist and journalist, was b. at Croydon, Jan. 15th, 1856, his father being the late Mr. J. Burgin, barrister. He was ed. at Totteridge Park Public School. He accompanied Baker Pasha to Asia Minor as Secretary of the Reform Commission in Armenia. Returning to England in '85, he became sub-editor of the Idler, and afterwards of To-Day and the Bookseller. He has published a large number of novels since 1894, the more recent being "The Way Out," 1900; "A Son of Mammon," and "A Goddess of Gray's Inn," 1901; "A Wilful Woman," 1902; "The Shutters of Silence" and "The Ladies of the Manor," 1903; "The Land of Silence" and "The Hermit of Bonneville," 1904; "The Marble City" and "The Devil's Due," 1905; "The Only World" and "The Belles of Vaudroy," 1906. Senior hon. sec. New Vagabonds Club; sec. Authors' Club. Address, 2, Holly Terrace, West Hill, Highgate, N.

Burian, Baron Stephen, of Rajecz, appointed Imperial Finance Minister for Austria-Hungary and Administrator of Bosnia-Herzegovina, in succession to the late M. de Kallay, in 1904. He was b. Jan. 1851, and is a Hungarian of Slovak descent. Educated at the Oriental Academy, he entered the diplomatic service, and in '75 became Vice-Consul at Bucharest, in '82 Consul at Moscow, and in '86 at Sofia, receiving while there the rank of Consul-General and finally of Minister. In '95 he went into the Foreign Office at Vienna; Minister to Wurtemberg and to Greece, '97-1904.

Burnand, Sir F. C., was b. Nov. 1836. Ed. at Eton and Trin. Coll., Cambridge. Called to the bar '58, he practised for two years, then returned to the dramatic and literary work which he had commenced before he was called, principally devoting himself to burlesque, of which "Ixion" and "Black-eyed Susan" may be said to have inaugurated the era of "long runs." He joined the Punch staff in Feb. '63. Author of "Happy Thoughts" in Punch, which, republished separately, ran to thirty editions.

Was editor of Punch '80-1906. Later productions include "Very much Abroad," "Quite at Home," "Rather at Sea," which form part of the "Happy Thoughts Series"; the "Zigzag Guide to the Kent Coast," illustrated by Phil May, and several pieces written for Mr. Augustine Daly's theatres in London and New York, including "The Lady of Ostend." Knighted June 24th, 1902.

Butler, Lieut.-General Sir William F., G.C.B., was b. 1838, entered the 66th Regiment (now 2nd Batt. Welsh Regiment) in '58, served on special duty in Canada, Red River Expedition '70, Ashanti '74, Zululand '78-9, Egypt '82 and '84; commanded the troops at Alexandria '90-3, and the S.E. (Dover) District '93-'8. In '98 he was given the South African command, but was recalled in '99 to take up the command of the Western (Devonport) District. For a time he held the Aldershot command, and in Nov. 1901 he was President of a War Office Committee to deal with the question of reform in the different branches of the service. He also presided over the Commission appointed to consider the Army Supply Contracts in S. Africa, the report of which in June 1905 led to the appointment of the War Stores Commission. G.C.B. June 1906. He is a brilliant writer, and has published "The Great Lone Land," "The Wild North Land," "Far Out," and lives of Gordon, Sir Charles Napier, etc. Lady Butler is the famous painter of military pictures—"The Roll Call," "The Camel Corps," etc.

Butt, Clara (Mrs. Kennerley Rumford), was b. at Southwick, in Sussex, Feb. 1st, 1873. After studying at Bristol she gained a Royal College of Music scholarship, and in '92 appeared for the first time in London at the Albert Hall in the "Golden Legend," and directly afterwards at the Lyceum in the opera "Orfeo." Her success was at once assured, and she is now recognised as the first of our great contralto singers. Her marriage with Mr. Kennerley Rumford took place in Bristol Cathedral on June 26th, 1900. Address: Compton Lodge, South Hampstead, and St. Aubyn's Mansions, Hove, Sussex.

C

Caballero, Señor Perez, Spanish Statesman, was b. 1862, and entered on a diplomatic career. He was attached to the Spanish Embassies and Legations at Paris, Rome, Washington, and Tokio, and then served as Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs under three administrations. He was afterwards appointed to represent Spain at Brussels. At the Algeciras Conference, 1906, he assisted the late Duke of Almodovar, and succeeded him as Foreign Minister for a brief period in June.

Caine, Thomas Henry Hall, was b. of Manx parentage in 1853, and commenced his career as an architect in Liverpool; then joined the staff of the Liverpool Mercury, and wrote in the Academy and the Athenæum. Resided with Dante Rossetti in London till the poet's death in '82. Published "Sonnets of Three Centuries" ('82), and "Recollections of Rossetti." His novels include "The Shadow of a Crime" ('83), "A Son of Hagar" ('86), "The Deemster" ('87), "The Bondman" ('90), "The Scapegoat" ('91), "The Manxman" ('94), "The Christian" ('97), "The Eternal City" (1902), "The Prodigal Son," 1904, which was published in 9 different languages on the same day, and "Drink" (1906). Many of his later novels have been dramatised successfully. Mr. Hall Caine has travelled in Iceland ('90), in Russia ('92) on behalf of the persecuted Jews; and in '95 he visited the States and Canada, where he represented the Society of Authors. He was elected to the Manx House of Keys in 1901. He is a J.P. Address: Greeba Castle, Isle of Man.

Cambon, M. Pierre Paul, the French Ambassador in London, was born in 1843, and was trained as a barrister in early life. For some years he was engaged in Departmental administrative work, as Prefet de l'Aube in '72, du Toules in '76, du Nord in '77. He went as Resident to Tunis in '82, and there made his mark. In '86 he was appointed Ambassador to Spain, and was transferred to Constantinople in '91. Here he proved himself a very strong man. In '98 he succeeded Baron de Courcel at the French Embassy at Albert Gate, S.W. G.C.V.O. Hon. D.C.L. Oxford, Hon. LL.D. Cambridge and Edinburgh.

Campbell, Rev. R. J., M.A., was b. in London in 1867, and is the son and grandson of Nonconformist ministers. His childhood was spent near Belfast, in the north of Ireland, and he was educated in part privately, and in part at the Bolton High School, and University College, Nottingham. After some work as a teacher he entered Christ Church, Oxford, in '91, and took an honours degree in Modern History and Political Science. In '95 he became minister of Union Street Church, Brighton. He very soon filled the church, and migrated to Queen's Square Congregational Church, then without a pastor, thus forming a united church in a fine building. On Dr. Parker's death Mr. Campbell first undertook the Thursday morning services at the City Temple, and in March 1903 was chosen as the great preacher's successor. He has published a number of works of a theological character. Address: Hill Lodge, Enfield.

CANALS, BRITISH AND FOREIGN.

The Royal Commission.

In March 1906 a Royal Commission was appointed to inquire into the canals and inland navigations of the United Kingdom and to report on (1) Their present condition and financial position. (2) The causes which have operated to prevent the carrying out of improvements by private enterprise, and whether such causes are removable by legislation. (3) Facilities, improvements, and extensions desirable in order to complete a system of through communication by water between centres of commercial, industrial, or agricultural importance, and between such centres and the sea. (4) The prospect of benefit to the trade of the country compatible with a reasonable return on the probable cost. (5) The expediency of canals being made or acquired by public bodies or trusts and the methods by which funds for the purpose could be obtained and secured, and what should be the system of control and management of such bodies or trusts.

The Commission is thus constituted: Lord Shuttleworth (Chairman), Lord Kenyon, Lord Brassey, K.C.B., Lord Farrer, Sir John Dorington, Sir John Brunner, M.P., Sir Francis Hopwood, K.C.B., C.M.G., Messrs. W. J. Crossley, M.P., Russell Rea, M.P., J. F. Remnant, M.P., P. Snowdon, M.P., Henry Vivian, M.P., L. A. Waldron, M.P., R. C. H. Davison, C.E., J. P. Griffith, C.E., Dr. A. J. Herbertson, J. C. Inglis, C.E., H. F. Killick, John Wilson, and M. J. Minch. Secretary. Mr. W. B. Duffield, M.A., Royal Commissions House, Westminster.

The latest Board of Trade returns (1898) as to canals in the United Kingdom gave the following particulars:—

Mileage.

In the forty-ninth Report of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, for the year ended March 31st, 1906, the profits of canals are stated to have been assessed in 1895-6 at £3,561,088, and at £3,608,443 in 1904-5. In the ten years the highest figure reached was £3,626,481 in 1897-8, and the lowest was £3,235,943 in 1901-2.

A Public Trust Proposed.

The drawbacks to the existing system are many. Besides the divided ownership, there is an absence of uniformity in the width of channels and locks. Through traffic is thus subjected to great disadvantages, and necessitates either trans-shipment or the employment of barges too small for economical working.

At a meeting of the Association of Chambers of Commerce in March 1905 it was resolved:—

“That this Association recommends that the improvement and extension of the canal system of the United Kingdom shall be carried out by means of a public trust, and, if necessary, in combination with local or district public trusts, and aided by a Government guarantee; and that the executive council be requested to take all reasonable measures to secure early legislation upon the subject.”

In the 1905 Session a Canals Bill was introduced, under which it was proposed to constitute a Canals Trust to take over, at first, certain specified canals, and, later, other canals, and to improve and manage them. The Trust was to be appointed by 3 Government Departments, 4 port authorities, and 4 Commercial Associations. Three railway companies opposed the Bill, and owing to a technical failure to comply with the Standing Orders it had to be withdrawn.

Canals Abroad.

The total length of the Canals and other Navigable Waterways of Belgium is 1360 miles, about 85 per cent. of which are under the direct control of the State.

All rivers and canals in Germany are owned and maintained by Government, but are worked by private enterprise. The cost of transport per mile and ton has been reduced to something less than  $\frac{1}{4}$ d.

By an Imperial Decree of June 11th, 1901, Austria-Hungary is committed to works for new canals connecting the Danube, Oder, Moldau, Elbe, and Weichsel rivers, and improving existing waterways, at a total expenditure of £31,000,000. The bulk of this expenditure will take place after 1908, preliminary works being carried out in the interval.

France has the best canal system in Europe, and her total expenditure on new canals and improvements in waterways up to 1905 was about £100,000,000. In France canals are State-owned, and there are no tolls.

In Italy a Commission in 1903 recommended the establishment of a system of navigable watercourses, 212 miles in length, in the north of the country, connecting with 1677 miles of existing rivers and canals. The cost is estimated at £4,500,000.

Capital Punishment, Society for the Abolition of. Office, 31, London Road, Bromley, S.E.

Carnegie, Andrew, was b. at Dunfermline, Scotland, Nov. 25th, 1837, and went with his family to the United States in '48. Beginning life without the usual school education, and after working in various humble positions, as a telegraph messenger for instance, he got a footing in the railway world and became superintendent of telegraphs for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. The foundation of his great fortune was laid, however, when he took a leading share in the establishment of iron works at Pittsburgh, which eventually developed into the vast concern known as the Carnegie Steel Company, located at the Homestead Works. When the Company was amalgamated with others into one great trust, in Feb. 1901, Mr. Carnegie's interest in his Company was agreed at $400,000,000. He has long been known as a philanthropist, and has given millions to build free libraries, art galleries, and various other educational and charitable institutions, notably in Pittsburgh and Alleghany cities, and in Scotland. Hon. LL.D. Aberdeen 1906. Address: Skibo Castle, Sutherland, N.B.

Carruthers Hon. J. H. McNeil, Premier New South Wales, was b. in the colony 1857, ed. at Goulburn High School and Sydney Univ., and called to the Bar '79. He became M.L.A. '87, was Minister for Public Instruction '89, Lands '94, Treasurer '99, leader of the Opposition 1902-4, and Premier and Treasurer 1904. Ellesmere, Sans Souci, N.S.W.

C. D. Acts.—The English C. D. Acts were passed in the years 1864, 1866, and 1869. The 1869 Act applied the system of regulation to 18 military and naval stations, where it remained in force until 1883. It was then suspended, and finally repealed in 1886. The Annual Reports of the Army and Navy Medical Departments show that the admissions of cases to hospital for venereal diseases per 1000 soldiers, or sailors, since '83 have been:—

	Per 1000 soldiers.	Per 1000 sailors.	Per 1000 soldiers.	Per 1000 sailors.
1884 .	271	203	1894 .	182
1885 .	275	183	1895 .	174
1886 .	267	168	1896 .	158
1887 .	252	178	1897 .	140
1888 .	224	162	1898 .	133
1889 .	212	184	1899 .	122
1890 .	212	169	1900 .	93
1891 .	197	152	1901 .	105
1892 .	201	150	1902 .	123
1893 .	195	164	1903 .	125

It should be understood that the above figures are numbers of cases, not of men—i.e. the same men are often admitted several times in the course of a year. It is calculated that the average number of men per thousand at any one time in hospital on account of these diseases is about a tenth of the figures given above. The International Federation for the Abolition of State Regulation of Vice was founded in 1875, and has its headquarters in Geneva. The British Committee exists to promote its work in the British Empire. Hon. President, Mrs. Josephine Butler. Chairman, Mr. H. J. Wilson, M.P.; Hon. Sec., Prof. Stuart, M.P. Office, 17, Tophill Street, Westminster, S.W.

Chalmers, Mackenzie Dalzell, C.B., C.S.I., Permanent Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, is the second son of the late Rev. F. S. C. Chalmers, D.D., vicar of Nonington, Kent; b. 1847; ed. at King's Coll., London, and Trin. Coll., Oxford (B.A. '68, M.A. '71). He was called to the Bar, Inner Temple, '69, and served in the Bengal Civil Service '69-72. Appointed a Revising Barrister '81, Counsel to Board of Trade '82, County Court Judge '84; in '93 he was Chief Justice of Gibraltar, and in '95 Commissioner of Assize. He was Legal Member of the Council of the Governor-General of India '96-9, Assistant Parliamentary Counsel to the Treasury '99-1902, Parliamentary Counsel to the Treasury 1902-3, and in Aug. 1903 was appointed to succeed Sir Kenelm Digby at the Home Office. He is a member of the Statute Law Committee and a J.P. for Warwickshire. Address: 27, Grosvenor Road, S.W.

Chambers of Commerce Association of the United Kingdom. This Association was formed in 1860, and incorporated in '75, for the purpose of discussing and considering questions concerning trade, commerce, manufactures, and shipping; and for the collection and dissemination of information from time to time on matters affecting these subjects and the general commercial interests of the country. The Association holds an annual meeting early in the year in London, and an autumnal meeting in the provinces. The membership of the Association consists not of individuals, but of chambers of commerce, 108 of which are members and send delegates to the meetings of the Association. President, Sir William H. Holland, M.P.; Secretary, Sir E. W. Fithian. Offices, Parliament Mansions, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.

Chantrey Fund. This fund was established by the bequest of Sir Francis Chantrey, R.A., under which £105,000 was invested in Consols, the available income being about £2,100. The first purchases out of the fund were made in 1875, and the collection, which now numbers over 100 works, has since '97 been permanently housed in the Tate Gallery. In consequence of criticism as to the choice of pictures bought by the Trustees a Select Committee was appointed in 1904, and reported in that year recommending that all purchases should be made by a committee of three, consisting of the President, a R.A. appointed by the Council and an A.R.A. nominated by the Associates of the Royal Academy. The Royal Academy in 1905 proposed two or more sub-committees of the Council, each consisting of not more than three members of the Academy, and each consisting of painters or sculptors alone, to recommend works to the Council for purchase.

CHARITABLE SOCIETIES.

The following list includes most of the principal charitable and philanthropic institutions that have offices in London, and are either wholly or in part dependent upon voluntary contributions. The figures indicate the last reported annual receipts. The list does not include charities connected with the City of London (see LONDON PAROCHIAL CHARITIES). Hospitals and Dispensaries will be found in an article under that heading.

Actors' Benevolent Fund (£4787), C. I. Coltson, 8, Adam Street, Strand, W.C.

Additional Curates' Society (£47,116). Legacies (1905) £19,542. Canon Petit, M.A., 39, Victoria St., Westminster, S.W.

After-Care Association for Poor Persons discharged recovered from Asylums for the Insane (£1064), including a legacy of £200. H. Thornhill Roxby, Church House, Dean's Yard, Westminster, S.W.

Aged Pilgrims' Friend Society and Homes (£16,067), J. E. Hazelton, 83, Finsbury Pavement, E.C.

Charity Commissioners for England and Wales, The. The Charity Commission was created by the Charitable Trusts Act 1853 (16 & 17 Vict. c. 137). Four commissioners were appointed, three of them being paid; and two at least of these three (one of the two being the Chief Commissioner) must be barristers-at-law of not less than twelve years' standing at appointment. No paid commissioner can sit in the House of Commons during tenure of office. The Board are empowered, "from time to time, as they may see fit, to examine and inquire into all or any charities in England and Wales, and the nature and objects, administration, management, and results thereof, and the value, condition, management, and application of the estates, funds, property, and income belonging thereto," with certain large exceptions. The secretary to the Commission for the time being is a corporation sole, by the name of "The Official Trustee of Charity Lands," for taking and holding charity lands; and the Commissioners from time to time appoint, with the approval of the Treasury, "The Official Trustees of Charitable Funds," who must lay their accounts before Parliament yearly. The original jurisdiction of the Commissioners has been largely extended by the Charitable Trusts Act, passed in '60, and other Acts. In '74 the Endowed Schools Acts Amending Act transferred to them all the powers and duties of the Endowed Schools Commissioners. But under the Board of Education Act '99 Orders in Council were issued in 1900, 1901 and 1902, transferring to the Board of Education all powers conferred on the Charity Commissioners by the Endowed Schools Acts, the Charitable Trusts Acts, and other Acts specified, so far as those powers relate to endowments held solely for educational purposes, with reservation as to the powers relating to the vesting or transfer of lands or funds of endowments and the powers of appointing the official trustees of charitable funds. The Board of Education were also given equal and concurrent powers with the Charity Commissioners of inquiring into charities, etc. An account of their proceedings will be found in their annual reports, which give an analysis of the orders made by the Commissioners during each year. The present Commissioners are: C. A. Cook, Esq., Chief Commissioner; C. P. Trevelyan, Esq., M.P., and A. F. Leach, Esq. (unpaid), Secretary, Richard Durnford, Esq. Offices: Ryder Street, St. James's, S.W.

Charity Organisation Society, The, was established with the object of improving the condition of the poor—(1) by promoting co-operation among existing charities and between charities and the poor law; (2) by securing due investigation and fitting action in all cases; and (3) by repressing mendicancy. An annual "Charities Register and Digest" is published, containing detailed information respecting charities in or available for London (price 5s.). Organ, Charity Organisation Review (monthly, price 6d., or 7s. 6d. per annum). Secretary, C. S. Loch; Central Office, Denison House, Vauxhall Bridge Road, S.W.

Chesterton, Gilbert K., was b. at Kensington in 1874, ed. at St. Paul's School, studied for a time at the Slade School, and then began a literary career by writing reviews for the Bookman, the Speaker, etc. His column in the Daily News, his replies to Blatchford of the Clarion, and his brilliance as an essayist brought him a widespread fame, and in 1905 he was appointed to write "Our Note Book" in the Illustrated London News. His publications include "Twelve Types"; a volume in the Men of Letters series on Browning, "G. F. Watts," "The Napoleon of Notting Hill," "The Defendant," "The Wild Knight," "Heretics," and "Charles Dickens," 48, Overstrand Mansions, Battersea Park, S.W.

Cheyne, Rev. Thomas Kelly, D.Litt., D.D., was b. in London 1841. Ed. at Merchant Taylor's School and Worcester Coll., Oxford. Elected ('69) Fellow of Balliol Coll., and in '71 was appointed rector of Tendring, Essex. Hon. D.D. Edin. '83, and Glasgow '91. In '85 he became Oriel Professor of the Interpretation of Holy Scripture at Oxford, and a Canon of Rochester; in 1904 a member of the British Academy. Professor Cheyne is one of the most eminent authorities on Biblical exegesis. He was a member of the Old Testament Revision Company, and is the author of numerous works on the Old Testament, including "The Prophecies of Isaiah" (5th ed. '89), "Job and Solomon" ('87), "The Book of Psalms" ('88; re-written 1904); "Aids to the Devout Study of Criticism" ('92), "Founders of Old Testament Criticism" ('93), an "Introduction to the Book of Isaiah" ('95), a new Translation of the Book of Isaiah, a new edition of the Hebrew text of Isaiah ('97-8), "Jewish Religious Life" ('98), "Biblical Problems, and the New Material for their Solution" (1904). He was also co-editor with Dr. J. Sutherland Black of the now completed Encyclopædia Biblica. Address: South Elms, Oxford, and The Precincts, Rochester.

Children's Country Holidays Fund, The, organises holidays, never less than two weeks, for poor city children by boarding them with country cottagers, who are paid 5s. a week per child; and much good has resulted from the movement. The C.C.H.F. sends about 40,000 children annually. Treasurer, The Earl of Arran; Secretary, R. H. Tawney; Office, 18, Buckingham Street, Strand.

Children's Fresh-Air Mission, The, was established in '82 to provide change of air for poor children in London, specially in the Holborn, Clerkenwell, and St. Luke's districts. In 1905, 3167 children were thus sent out into the country for two or three weeks, making a total since '82 of 60,686 children. Treasurer, Mr. Walter Hazell; Secretary, Mrs. Percival; Office, St. Peter's Schools, Onslow Street, Clerkenwell Road, E.C.

CHILE.

A republic on the west coast of South America, bounded by Peru on the north and Argentina on the east, which declared itself independent of Spain on Sept. 18th, 1810. Under the Constitution voted in '33 it is governed by a President elected indirectly for five years by delegates nominated by ballot, who is not re-eligible, and to whom the executive power is confided, and a Senate and Chamber of Deputies forming the legislature. The Senate, of 32 members, is elected by the provinces for six years; the Chamber, of 94 members, by the departments for three years, by electors possessing a small property qualification. The President receives a salary of £2250.

The republic is divided into 23 provinces, and these are subdivided into 74 departments and one territory. These figures include the provinces of Antofagasta ceded by Bolivia in '84, and of Tarapaca and Tacna ceded by Peru in '84. The province of Tacna was ceded originally for ten years, with the understanding that at the end of that period a plebiscite should decide whether it should remain Chilean or revert to Peru. That plebiscite has never taken place, and negotiations for carrying it out fell through owing to revolutionary movements in Peru. Latterly Chile has moved in the direction of the view that Tacna should be retained in order to secure a scientific frontier, and has greatly strengthened her hold on the province. As to Antofagasta, Chile claimed that province not only under the '84 treaty of truce, but as having been hers before. By the treaty signed Oct. 17th, 1904, however, Bolivia definitely recognised the sovereignty of Chile over the province, Chile undertaking to pay the war claims. Boundary difficulties with Argentina were settled by arbitration in 1902.

President.

The President is Señor Pedro Montt, elected in 1906. His father, Manuel Montt, President 1831-61, laid the foundations for the development of the Republic. Señor Pedro Montt was b. 1848, and has been successively Deputy, Senator, Minister of State, diplomatist, and Vice-President of the Council of State. As Minister he held the portfolios of Justice, Finance and Industry, and has also been Premier. In 1901 he was a candidate for the presidency, but was defeated by Señor Riesco. He was elected for the period 1906-11 by a coalition of Nationalists, Liberals, and Radicals, joined even by some Conservatives.

Army and Navy.

The establishment of the active army is about 18,000 men, and the formations are: 10 regiments of infantry, 8 of cavalry, 20 batteries of field artillery, 1 mountain battery, 2 battalions of mounted infantry, and a corps of engineers. The war strength is stated to be 150,000 men, including a part of the national guard, while the remainder of that force numbers about 350,000 men, who have received very little training.

The Chilean navy and army are administered from the same office. All service for both army and navy is obtained by conscription. The officers and men on the naval active list are variously stated to number from 6000 to 8000. The strength in ships built is: battleships, 1; armoured cruisers, 1; protected cruisers, 5; torpedo vessels, 3; torpedo-boat destroyers, 6; torpedo boats, 6; submarine, 1. The principal dockyards are situated as follows: Talcahuano, one dock, takes large vessels; Valparaiso, two small floating docks, take cruisers. In 1906 the training-ship General Baquedano visited British and European ports.

Industries and Statistics.

The Roman Catholic is the State religion, but all others are tolerated; gratuitous education is given at the national charge, but is not compulsory. Wheat, wine, nitrate, copper, silver, iodine, etc., are the chief products of the country. Half the population are engaged in agriculture, but the mineral wealth of the country is considerable. The export of nitrate, in which industry a large amount of British capital is employed, in 1905 was 35,910,332 quintals. There are 3206 miles of railway, of which 1698 belong to the State. The capital is Santiago, pop. 334,538; and other chief towns are Valparaiso, 143,769; and Concepcion, 50,000. The Conversion Law of Feb. 11th, '95, changed the currency from paper to gold, at the rate of 18d. per peso or dollar.

An earthquake in August 1906 caused great damage at Valparaiso, Santiago, and other towns. See Earthquakes under SCIENTIFIC PROGRESS. A Bill providing £1,000,000 for the rebuilding of Valparaiso was approved by Congress (Nov. 15th).

Area, 290,829 sq. m.; pop. (1902) 3,300,000. Revenue, 1903, £5,881,231; 1904, £6,207,377; 1905, £8,750,000; expenditure, 1905, £8,437,000; debt, external, 1906, £21,200,000, including a £3,700,000 loan contracted in 1906 for the construction of the Arica-La Paz railway and drainage works: internal, 1905, £6,687,500; imports, 1901, £10,447,557, 1902, £9,932,115, 1903, £10,685,300, 1904, £11,786,406, 1905, £14,143,730; exports, 1901, £12,888,373, 1902, £13,940,997; 1903, £14,566,715, 1904, £16,199,835, 1905, £19,890,690. In 1905 the United Kingdom took 38·2 per cent. of the exports and Germany 27·8 per cent.; of the imports 37·71 per cent. were contributed by the United Kingdom and 25·23 per cent. by Germany.

CHINA, EMPIRE OF.

The most populous, and, excluding Siberia, the largest empire in Asia. China Proper is remarkable as the most compact nationality in the world, having an area estimated by the Chinese Government in 1902 at 1,532,420 sq. m., with a pop. of 407,253,029. The rest of the empire includes the dependencies of Manchuria, Mongolia, Tibet, and Turkestan, which cover an area of about 2,744,750 sq. m., and contain about 26,300,000 souls. See accounts of these on p. 99.

Ruler.

The Emperor, Tsai-Tien Kwang-Hsu, is the son of Prince Chun, and his mother, who died in 1896, was a sister of the present Empress-Dowager. Born in '72, at Peking, he ascended the throne on Jan. 22nd, '75. He married, in '89, his cousin, a daughter of Duke Kwei, who is a brother of the Empress-Dowager. During the early part of his reign the Empress-Dowager Tsu-Hsi, who was b. Nov. 17th, 1834, was supreme, though nominally the Emperor assumed full control of the Government in '89. He is himself in favour of progress, and in '98 he issued several edicts in favour of reforms; but the only effect was that in Sept. '98 the Empress-Dowager restored the Regency and relegated the Emperor to the background again. Each Emperor can appoint his successor from among those of his own family who belong to a younger generation than his own. A son was born to Prince Chun, the Emperor's brother, in Feb. 1906, and was by Imperial decree named Pu.

Government.

At the head of the Government is the Emperor, supreme priest and king, who nominally wields an autocratic power, though the Empress-Dowager, as is explained above, is actually the supreme ruler. The chief advisory body is the Grand Council, consisting of five members. Under this is the Government Council, including the members of the Grand Council and the chief members of the Grand Secretariat. The administration is carried on by the Wai-wu-pu or Board of Foreign Affairs, and nine other Boards—viz., Education, Civil Office, Commerce, Communications, Interior, Rites, Revenue, Punishments, War. By a decree of Nov. 7th, 1906, these Boards, which are practically Ministries, have only one President, instead of two as formerly, and no discrimination is shown between Manchus and Chinese. The Board of Censors is theoretically superior to the central administration, and in practice possesses considerable power, through the right of access to the sovereign which its members enjoy. The 18 provinces are administered by viceroys or governor-generals, who are assisted by governors of departments and districts, and by the "taotais" of the cities.

Army and Navy.

Certain measures are on foot to reorganise the Chinese Army in accordance with an instruction drawn up by Yuan-Shi-Kai in 1902. A law of military reorganisation was promulgated in January 1905. The Chinese army is henceforth to be national, and no longer to be composed of heterogeneous forces under provincial viceroys. There will be the active army, the first reserve, and the second reserve, of the Lu-chun or Imperial Land Forces. There will be infantry, cavalry, artillery, engineers, and army service troops, and the organisation will be in divisions of all arms. It is intended to constitute 36 of these divisions, and by the beginning of 1906 ten of these had been organised. Each division numbers 12,000 men, and includes forces of cavalry and artillery. In war the infantry will be doubled from the first reserve, but cavalry and special troops are maintained on a war footing. Men are carefully selected, opium smokers being refused, and entry is for three years, with optional well-paid service in the first reserve (three years) and the second reserve (four years). The reserve service was popular, and by Jan. 1st, 1906, it was estimated that 10,000 men would have been passed into it. The system has been introduced in Shantung, Huan, and Shansi.

Proposals are also on foot for the reorganisation of the various provincial organisations, such as the army of General Ma on the Mongolian border. The training is directed by Japanese officers, and the manoeuvres in Oct. 1906 raised doubts in the minds of some observers as to the permanence of the system they have instituted.

There was some agitation during 1906 for the reorganisation and enlargement of the Chinese Navy. The Government appear to be in earnest as regards this matter. There are Arsenals at Foochow, Taku, Kiangnan, Shanghai, and Whampao. There are 4 small cruisers, 4 torpedo craft, and a few other old vessels; the personnel is of small account.

Industries, etc.

The three chief religions established in the country are Confucianism, Buddhism, and Taoism, the Buddhists largely preponderating. The State religion, however, is Confucian. The Emperor is the sole high priest of the Empire in the worship of Heaven. Roman Catholic missions have about 1,000,000 professed followers, and Protestant missions have adherents estimated at about 150,000. Education is to a very large extent the monopoly of a special literary class of the population, and literary examinations are the chief gate to the public service, despite the Imperial Edict of 1902 which decreed that universities should be established in each province, colleges in each prefecture, and schools in each district. Something has been done in this direction, but it is of a very perfunctory character. An Imperial decree in Sept. 1905 established a new system on more modern lines, which has yet to be carried out, however. Agricultural pursuits occupy the majority of the people, the chief products being tea, silk, cereals, and sugar. About one-fourth of the world's supply of new silk comes from China. The land is freehold, and is held by families in small holdings, an annual land-tax of from 1s. to 6s. 6d. per acre being paid to the Government. There is much coal in all the provinces, and in the Lui-Yang district, in the province of Hu-nan, there is a vast coalfield, the area of which is about 21,000 sq. miles. The coal here is worked to some slight extent at present, and finds an outlet through Hankow, on the Yang-tse-Kiang. There are also large quantities of coal in the provinces of Chihli, Shantung, Sze-Chuan, Shansi and Honan. Iron ore is also plentiful in Shansi. Copper ore is plentiful in Yunnan. The greater part of the country is only very partially developed, and much benefit will accrue to native and foreign trade when a proper system of railways is established. Many concessions have been granted, and in 1905 there were, including Manchuria, about 3000 miles open.

The capital of China is Peking, with a population of 1,600,000. Other chief towns with their populations are: Siangnan, 1,000,000; Singan, 1,000,000; Canton, 900,000; Hankow, 870,000; Tientsin, 750,000; Shanghai, 651,000; Fuchow, 624,000; Chungking, 600,000; Suchow, 500,000; Hangchow, 300,000; Nanking, 270,000; and Ningpo, 260,000.

Various ports, called the treaty ports, which number 42 in all, have been thrown open to European trade, and about 19,000 Europeans reside in these ports, of whom over 5400 are British subjects. Shanghai is the great foreign centre, with a foreign population of 11,407, including 3713 British and 2157 Japanese, and a native population of about 600,000. The Imperial Customs dues on foreign trade are collected and the coast-lights are administered by the great service known as the Imperial Maritime Customs of China. Nearly 900 Europeans are engaged in its service, of whom about 500 are British.

Various districts have been "leased" to other powers: e.g., Wei-hai-Wei, and the Kowloon district opposite Hong Kong, to Great Britain;

Port Arthur and Talienwan to Russia, though Japan took these in 1905 (see JAPAN); Kiaochau to Germany; and the bay of Kwang-Chau-Wan, with two islands commanding the entrance to the bay, to France.

The coinage used by the people is the "cash," made of copper and zinc, 40 of which go to *1*d. and 9600 to a £. The currency of the country, other than this, is the "tael," or "liang," as the Chinese call it, which is a certain weight of silver. The weight and the fineness of the silver differ in different towns, but the Haikwan tael is that in which duties are paid to the Imperial Maritime Customs, and this is a weight of 583.3 grains of pure silver 1000 fine, the value of which is about 2s. 10d., though it varies. In 1905 it was 3s. By an Imperial decree of Nov. 29th, 1905, an Imperial tael of 0.96 tael pure silver and 0.10 tael copper was ordered to be minted as "equal to one Kuping tael of full touch."

Statistics and Diplomatic.

The revenue and expenditure are estimated at from £12,000,000 to £15,000,000. Imports, 1902, £39,118,115; 1903, £40,908,750; 1904, £49,279,514; 1905, £67,251,411; exports, 1902, £30,993,946; 1903, £31,124,900; 1904, £34,301,478; 1905, £34,278,183. The debt in 1900 amounted to about £55,755,000, including the loan to cover the war indemnity to Japan; and in 1901 China agreed to pay to the Powers, in 39 annual instalments, an indemnity of 450,000,000 taels (about £67,500,000 at 3s. per Hai-kuan tael), making the total debt £123,255,000. With the exception of a railway loan of £2,300,000, this debt is secured on the Imperial Maritime Customs.

Dependencies.

Manchuria (area 363,610 sq. m., pop. 16,000,000) was occupied by the Russians at the time of the Boxer outbreak, and though it should have been evacuated under the terms of the Manchurian Convention, signed April 8th, 1902, it remained under Russian control. This was the immediate cause of hostilities between Russia and Japan, which ended in 1905 in the Russian evacuation of the country (see JAPAN). The capital is Mukden; pop. 150,000. The country is well supplied with railways.

Mongolia (area 1,367,600 sq. m., pop. 2,580,000) lies between Manchuria and Chinese Turkistan, and is bounded on the north by Siberia. It includes the desert of Gobi, and is inhabited by nomadic Mongols and Kaimucks. The chief town is Urga.

Chinese Turkistan (area 550,340 sq. m., pop. 1,200,000), to the north of Tibet, and to the east of the Pamirs, contains the important towns of Kashgar, Yarkand and Khotan. British and Russian representatives are stationed at Kashgar, which is a large trading centre, but Russian influence is the ascendant.

Tibet (area 463,200 sq. m., pop. variously estimated at from 3,000,000 to 6,000,000) lies on the slopes of the Himalayas, between Kashmir and the Chinese province of Szechuen, with Chinese Turkistan on the north. The capital is Lhasa (estimated pop. 15,000). The country, by reason of its physical characteristics, its great mountains, and its height above the level of the sea, is of extreme interest, apart from the fact that it is the home of Buddhism. Gold is said to exist in considerable quantities. The Dalai Lama is the supreme ruler, but the Tashe Lama, at Tashe-Lhunpo, a great monastery near Shigatse, the second city of Tibet, was in Sept. 1904 appointed to succeed to the spiritual dignities of the Dalai Lama, by order of the Chinese Emperor. The Dalai Lama is assisted by a Council composed of a Prime Minister and 9 councillors, of whom 5 are priests and 4 laymen. The country is divided into 4 "lings," each governed by a lama. There is an Amban, or Chinese Resident, at Lhasa, who represents the Chinese Government in the country, China having assumed the suzerainty of the country early in the eighteenth century. The three great monasteries outside Lhasa really govern the country, through the Tzong-du or Great Assembly. By the Anglo-Tibetan Conventions of '90 and '93, Yatung, in the Chumbi valley, on the Indian-Tibet frontier, was opened for trade. The chief imports are cotton and woollen goods, metals, chinaware, indigo, matches, silk, and tobacco. The exports are mostly wool, musk and ponies being the only other items of note. A British mission under Col. Younghusband was despatched during 1903 by the Indian Government to secure the observance of these Conventions. The Mission was received with much hostility by the Tibetans, and fighting took place, but Lhasa was reached on Aug. 3rd, 1904. The Dalai Lama had fled, but the Amban was present, and after considerable negotiation a formal treaty was signed (Sept. 7th, 1904). The Regent left in charge affixed the Dalai Lama's seal, and the Council, the three great Monasteries and the National Assembly also sealed the treaty. Tibet agreed to establish markets at Gyangtse and Gartok, in addition to Yatung, for British and Tibetan trade, with Tibetan and British officials stationed thereat; and Great Britain agreed to alter by separate arrangement any objectionable features in the Convention of 1893. Tibet agreed to pay Great Britain an indemnity of £500,000 in 75 yearly instalments, commencing on Jan. 1st, 1906, Great Britain meanwhile continuing to occupy the Chumbi valley as security for the due payment of the indemnity and the performance of the conditions as to trading stations. It was provided that if the indemnity should not be paid, Great Britain should continue in occupation of Chumbi. Tibet agreed to demolish all forts between the Indian frontier and Gyantse on the trade routes. Tibet also agreed not to cede, sell, lease, or mortgage any Tibetan territory to any foreign Power, without the consent of Great Britain, and not to allow any foreign Power to intervene in Tibetan affairs, or to construct roads or railways or open mines in Tibet. Mr. Brodrick, on behalf of H.M. Government, subsequently decided that £166,666 should be the amount of the indemnity, and that the period of occupation of the Chumbi valley should cease after three annual instalments had been paid. The convention was confirmed by a separate convention between the United Kingdom and China signed April 27th, 1906, Great Britain engaging not to annex Tibetan territory or to interfere in its administration, and China undertaking not to permit any foreign State to interfere with the territory or internal administration of Tibet.

History, 1906.

The Times correspondent at Shanghai reported in Dec. 1905 that he found a strong effort being made to bring the Chinese military forces into a state of efficiency; a determination to grant no more concessions to foreigners, and to recover control of those already granted; the circulation of a good deal of mischievous anti-foreign literature; an agitation for the maintenance of China's sovereign rights against foreign aggression; and open obstruction of the proceedings of the treaty revision commission. A riot broke out at Shanghai (18th), and the British ships landed a naval force, while volunteers patrolled the foreign settlement till order was restored.

A convention was signed (22nd) at Peking between China and Japan. It confirmed the transfer by Russia to Japan of the lease of the Liao-tung Peninsula and the railway between Chang-chun and Port Arthur, in accordance with Articles V. and VI. of the Portsmouth Treaty. Provision was made for the opening up to trade of Feng-hwang-chenn, Liao-yang, Hsin-min-tun, Tieling, Tung-kwang-tsze, Fa-ku-men, Chang-chun, Kirin, Kharbin, Ninguta, Hun-chun, San-shin, Tsitsihar, Khailar, Aiju, and Manjuli.

The murder of six Catholic missionaries and of an English missionary and his family in Nanchang-fu during an uprising by a mob was reported (Feb. 26th). An indemnity was afterwards paid by the Government for the damage done, the murderers were punished, and the governor dismissed. The Times correspondent at Peking, discussing the situation (April 20th), said the disturbances at Shanghai and Nanchang were due to purely local causes. China, he said, had everything to gain by keeping at peace with foreigners, and knew it. The Government had no sympathy with anti-foreign tendencies, but the native Press, which was springing up in the treaty ports, was very inflammatory in character, and the weakness of the central Government failed to check inflammatory meetings in the central and southern provinces.

An Imperial edict was promulgated (May 9th) appointing Tieh-liang President of the Board of Revenue, and Tang Shao-yi Associate Minister with him. All the Chinese and foreigners employed at the various Customs offices were thus placed under Chinese control. Mr. Carnegie, British Chargé d'Affaires, at once demanded satisfactory assurances that the edict meant no interference with the existing administration of the Maritime Customs, and no departure from China's undertaking that the successor to Sir Robert Hart should be an Englishman so long as British trade was predominant. The diplomatic body in Peking supported the British protest against any change in the Customs administration. On June 2nd the Wai-wu-pu gave assurances that the Customs articles or loan agreements of '06 and '08 would be observed, under which the Government undertook that "the administration of the Imperial Maritime Customs service shall remain as at present constituted during the currency of the loan"—i.e. till 1943. It afterwards appeared, however, that these assurances were not officially communicated to Sir Robert Hart nor to the Chinese officials. Sir Robert Hart, who announced his early retirement in July, sent out a circular to his staff, dated Sept. 22nd, notifying them that he had been personally assured that the relations of the staff with the Inspector General would continue as before; that there would be no change; that the new Board would simply exercise the authority formerly vested in the Wai-wu-pu.

Early in the year a Commission was sent to Europe and America to study the political, financial, and administrative methods of Western nations. On its return conferences were held, and finally an Imperial decree was issued (Sept. 1st) promising Constitutional Government when the people should be fitted for it, with the introduction of administrative and financial reforms meanwhile. Another edict ordered the abolition of the use of opium, both native and foreign, within ten years (20th).

The Peking correspondent of the Times reported in July that a railway of 3 ft. 6 in. gauge had been constructed from the Hsin-min-tun terminus of the Northern Chinese railways to Mukden, a distance of 36 miles. The Japanese section of the Chinese Eastern railway was completed from Port Arthur to Szu-ping-tai, a distance of 395 miles, and was being extended to Kun-chu-ling (34 miles) and Kwan-ching-tsze (40 miles). The sections of the Shanghai-Nankin Railway to Su-chau and Wu-sieh (91 miles) were officially opened on July 16th. The first section of the Peking-Kalgan Railway, running for 32 miles to Nan-kau, near the Great Wall, was opened on Sept. 30th.

China Association. The, is a society of merchants and others interested in the Far East, having for its objects the representation of the interests of the British mercantile community in their relations with the Chinese and Japanese, and the promotion of trade and intercourse with China and Japan. Hon. Sec. and Treas., Joseph Welch; Office, 159, Cannon Street, E.C.

China League. The, was formed by Members of Parliament and others interested in the Far East in 1900. Hon. Secs., Messrs. A. R. Burkill and G. Jamieson, C.M.G.; Sec., Mr. E. G. Wall; Office, Dacre House, Victoria Street, S.W.

Choate, Joseph Hodges, American lawyer. B. at Salem, Massachusetts, Jan. 24th, '32, graduated at Harvard University, '52, and admitted to the American Bar in '55. In '98 he was president of the American Bar Association. He received the LL.D. degree from Amherst in '87, Harvard '88, Edinburgh '99, Cambridge 1901, Yale 1901, St. Andrews 1902, Glasgow 1904, and the D.C.L. from Oxford in 1902. He is a Republican, an admirable speaker, and has written addresses on Abraham Lincoln, Rufus Choate, Admiral Farragut, Education in America, Benjamin Franklin, and Alexander Hamilton. U.S. Ambassador to Great Britain '99-1905.

Christian Evidence Society. Founded in 1870 by the then Bishop of London, the late Earl of Harrowby, and others, Churchmen and Nonconformists, to counteract the progress of unbelief amongst various classes. President, Archbishop of Canterbury; Sec., Rev. R. V. F. Davies, M.A. Offices, 34, Craven Street, W.C.

Christie, Sir William H. Mahoney, K.C.B., D.Sc. (hon.), M.A., F.R.S., Astronomer Royal, was b. at Woolwich 1845, is a son of the late Prof. S. H. Christie, F.R.S., was ed. at King's Coll. School, London, and Trinity Coll., Camb., and became a Fellow of his college. Graduated B.A. ('68) as fourth wrangler. Appointed ('70) chief assistant at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich. On Sir G. B. Airy's retirement ('81) appointed Astronomer Royal. He contrived and introduced several valuable improvements in the scientific apparatus there in use, including new forms of spectroscope, of altazimuth, and of domes. He is the author of the "Manual of Elementary Astronomy" and various scientific papers. K.C.B. Nov. 9th, 1904. Address: Royal Observatory, Greenwich.

Cinque Ports, The. A group of seven ports (originally five, whence the name) situated on the south coast of England (in Sussex and Kent). Hastings, Romney, Hythe, Dover and Sandwich were the original ports, Winchelsea and Rye being added afterwards. The Lord Wardenship, of which H.R.H. the Prince of Wales is the present holder, is now only an honorary dignity.

City Churches Preservation Society, The, founded in 1894, considers that to destroy any of the beautiful City churches would be unnecessary. Chairman, Mr. Edwin Freshfield. Hon. Sec., Mr. Alfred Moore, 7, Leadenhall Street, E.C.

City of London College. Day and evening classes are held in the various branches of science, literature, art, and commerce, and higher and commercial day schools have been established. There are chemical, physical, biological and physiological laboratories, Art studios, a good library and a spacious reading-room. Principal, Sidney Humphries, B.A., LL.B.; Secretary, David Savage, F.C.I.S.

CIVIL SERVICE.

The British Civil Service comprises all those persons who serve the King in a civil capacity, as opposed to those employed in the military and naval services. The total number of persons so employed cannot be far short of half a million. The chief department of the Civil Service is the Treasury, which exercises a control over all other departments, and from whom alone authority is obtained for all expenditure. Perhaps next in importance is the Exchequer and Audit Department, which is charged with the audit of the accounts of all other departments. The Foreign Office (including the diplomatic service), the India Office and the Colonial Office, together with the Home Office, probably rank next. The three revenue departments—namely, the Post Office, Inland Revenue, and Customs—are of course important branches of the service; there are also, among what are known as the spending departments, the War Office, Admiralty, Board of Trade, Office of Works, Education Office, Privy Council Office, the Stationery Office, and many other smaller offices.

Most of the clerkships in the Civil Service are now thrown open to public competition, and the various offices are grouped into two grades. The recommendation of the Playfair Commission which sat in 1874 to inquire into the Civil Service—namely, that the Services should be divided into a Higher and a Lower Division, with a specified scale of salaries irrespective of office for each division—has never been fully carried out. Most of the better-class offices are grouped under Grade I., and the remainder under what was formerly known as Grade II.; in these latter, however, most of the vacancies are being filled up by the appointment of Lower Division clerks under the Playfair scheme. An official nomination is required for all situations not filled by open competition.

The Civil Service Commissioners conduct the examinations not only for home services, but also for Indian, military, naval, and colonial services. See also BRITISH EMPIRE (Indian Civil Service). Full particulars of all examinations for the Civil Services can be obtained of the Civil Service Commission, London, W.

Clarke, Sir Edward G., K.C., was b. in London, Feb. 15th, 1841. He was ed. at the City Commercial School, City of London Coll. and King's Coll., London; obtained a writership in the India Office '59, but retired '60; became Tancred Law Student '61; was called to the Bar, Lincoln's Inn, '64; created Q.C. '80; and elected a bencher of his Inn '82. Sir Edward was for some time a reporter in the House of Commons, and was on the literary staff of the Morning Herald and Standard. He was made Solicitor-General in Lord Salisbury's '86 Administration, and knighted. He declined to take office in '95 because of the regulations as to private practice imposed on the Solicitor-General and Attorney-General, and in '97 refused the offer of the appointment of Master of the Rolls. M.P. for Southwark '80, for Plymouth '80-1900, and for City of London Jan.-June 1906, retiring in the latter month on grounds of health. A speech delivered by him in the House on March 12th was severely criticised by the Tariff Reform section of his constituents. Address: Thorn-cote, Staines.

Clarke, Sir George Sydenham, G.C.M.G., F.R.S., Secretary of the Committee of Imperial Defence, was b. in 1843, and is the eldest son of the late Rev. W. J. Clarke of Folkestone. Ed. at Haileybury and Wimbledon, he passed first both into and out of the R.M.A., Woolwich, and entered the Royal Engineers '68. He was on the Staff of Cooper's Hill '71-80, served in Egypt and the Soudan '82 and '85, and then went to the War Office. For his services in organising Colonial Defence, '85-92, he was made a K.C.M.G. '93. He also acted as Secretary to the Royal Commission on Navy and Army Administration in '88, and was a member of the Committee appointed in 1900 to inquire into the organisation of the War Office. From '94 to 1901 he was Superintendent of the Royal Carriage Dept. at Woolwich. Governor of Victoria 1901-4, member War Office Reconstruction Committee 1904, and in the same year appointed to the post he now holds. G.C.M.G. 1906. He has published works on "Graphic Statics," "Pievna," "Imperial Defence," "Fortification," "Russia's Sea Power," etc.

Clemenceau, Georges, is one of the most striking personalities in French politics. The Bloc, or union of all Republican parties against all reactionaries, was created by him in the phrase: "La Révolution est un bloc dont on ne peut rien détacher, rien rejeter." B. in 1841 in Vendée, he obtained the degree of M.D., and was in practice in Paris when elected Mayor of Montmartre on the overthrow of the Second Empire (Sept. 4th, '71). Since that time he has always been concerned with politics, overthrowing Cabinets, raising up others, exercising the greatest influence, and yet not becoming a Minister until, in March 1906, he accepted the Portfolio of the Interior in the Sarrien Administration, of which he was the virtual head. On Oct. 23rd, when M. Sarrien resigned, he succeeded him as Premier. He was returned to the Chamber of Deputies in '76, and was regularly re-elected until '93. Always a friend of England, his defeat was due to no small extent to a cartoon widely disseminated, representing him juggling with "British gold." In 1902 he was returned as Senator for the Department of the Var. In the meantime he had taken up the journalist's pen, edited the Aurore, and eloquently and valiantly defended Captain (now Major) Dreyfus. Has written a play and several books. As an orator he is incisive, logical, and fearless. In 1906 he surpassed himself in an encounter with

M. Jaurès, the Socialist leader. His speech on that occasion was one of the most powerful heard in the Parliament of the Third Republic.

Clifford, Rev. John, was b. Oct. 16th, 1836, at Sawley. When a boy of eleven he was a "threeder" in a lace factory, and often worked from 4 a.m. on the Friday till 6 p.m. on the Saturday. In '55 he entered the General Baptist College, and in '58 accepted an invitation from the Praed Street church, Paddington. He graduated B.A. at London University in '61, B.Sc. with honours in Logic and Philosophy, and in Geology in '62, in '64 taking the degree of M.A. (bracketed first); and in '66 that of LL.B. with honours in the Principles of Legislation. Hon. D.D. Bates' College, U.S.A., '83; hon. LL.D. Colgate University, New York, 1906. His growing success at Praed Street led to the erection of Westbourne Park Chapel, which was opened Sept. '77, and in which he still continues to minister. He visited Australia and the States during '97. He was the protagonist of the Passive Resistance Movement directed against the 1902 Education Act. Angus Lecturer 1906. His works include the following: "Is Life worth Living?" "The Dawn of Manhood," "Daily Strength for Daily Living," "Christian Certainties," "The Inspiration and Authority of the Bible," "Typical Christian Leaders," "Social Worship," "God's Greater Britain," "The New Education Bill: What is at Stake," 1902, "The Secret of Jesus," 1903, and "The Ultimate Problems of Christianity," 1906. Address: 25, Sunderland Terrace, Westbourne Gardens, W.

Coal Smoke Abatement Society, 25, Victoria Street, S.W. President, Sir William Richmond, K.C.B., R.A.; Sec., L. W. Chubb.

Coast Erosion, Royal Commission on. A Royal Commission was appointed in July 1906 to inquire and report (1) As to the encroachment of the sea on various parts of the coast of the United Kingdom, and the damage which has been or is likely to be caused thereby; and what measures are desirable for the prevention of such damage. (2) Whether any further powers should be conferred upon local authorities and owners of property with a view to the adoption of effective and systematic schemes for the protection of the coast and the banks of tidal rivers. (3) Whether any alteration of the law is desirable as regards the management and control of the foreshore. (4) Whether further facilities should be given for the reclamation of tidal lands. The Commission is thus constituted: The Hon. Ivor C. Guest, M.P. (Chairman), Sir W. H. Browne folkes, Sir Leonard Lyell, Mr. W. Matthews, C.M.G., Mr. W. Phipson Beale, K.C., M.P., Commander G. C. Frederick, R.N., Mr. H. Rider Haggard, Mr. T. J. Jehu, M.A., Mr. A. L. Lever, M.P., Mr. R. B. Nicholson, Mr. Patrick O'Brien, M.P., Mr. T. Summerville, M.P., and Mr. A. Stanley Wilson, M.P. Secretary, Mr. C. H. Grimshaw, of the Board of Trade.

Cobden Club. Chairman of Committee, Lord Welby; Secretary, J. H. Murray Macdonald, M.P., Caxton House, Westminster.

Cocoa. The chief cocoa-producing countries are Ecuador, Brazil, the Portuguese island of St. Thomas in the Gulf of Guinea, Trinidad, San Domingo, Venezuela, Grenada, the Gold Coast colony, Cuba, Ceylon, etc. The world's cocoa production has been in recent years: 105,720 tons in 1901; 120,939 tons in 1902; 125,895 tons in 1903; 146,552 tons in 1904. The world's consumption is increasing in about the same ratio, the chief consuming countries being the United States, Germany, France, the United Kingdom, and Holland, in the order named. Cocoa is now no longer regarded as a luxury, but is becoming a staple article of food even among the working classes. Hamburg is the leading centre of the cocoa trade, other centres being Havre, New York, and London.

Cold Storage and Ice Association. Founded in 1809 to promote the interests of its industry, on the lines of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers and other engineering societies. Meetings are held to discuss scientific and other papers, which are published in the Association's "Proceedings." The annual subscription is one guinea, and half a guinea for associate members. There are over 100 members and associates. President, Sir Charles Petrie, J.P.; Hon. Treasurer, Mr. W. B. Esson, M.Inst.C.E., M.I.E.E.; Hon. Secretary, Mr. R. M. Leonard; Office, 3, Oxford Court, Cannon Street, E.C.

Coleridge-Taylor, Samuel, composer, was b. in London, 1875. His father, a West African, studied medicine at King's College, London; his mother was English. He greatly distinguished himself at the Royal College of Music. Several of his works attracted attention at the college students' concerts, but to the general public he first became known through the "Orchestral Ballade in A Minor," written for Gloucester (Three Choirs) Festival, '98. "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast," a "Solemn Prelude" for orchestra (Worcester), the overture to the "Hiawatha" trilogy (Norwich), and "The Death of Minnehaha" (Hanley) were produced in '99. The complete trilogy was performed several times in 1900. In Jan. 1902, his "Blind Girl of Castel Cuillé" and a Coronation March were published. In 1903 his cantata "The Atonement" was produced at the Hereford Festival. In 1904 he composed several works for the violin and a large number of songs. He has been for some years conductor of the Rochester Choral Society, and was recently appointed conductor of the Handel Society. 10, Upper Grove, S. Norwood, S.E.

COLOMBIA.

Colombia is a republic of South and Central America, bounded on the east by Venezuela, on the south by Brazil and Ecuador, on the west by the Pacific, and on the north by the Caribbean Sea. It is divided into 16 departments (besides the capital district and various territories), the governors of which are nominated by the President of the Republic, whose term of office is four years—though the present President is to hold office till 1914. The legislature consists of a Senate of 27 members and a House of 66 Representatives, elected for 4 years by universal suffrage.

Panama (q.v.) on Nov. 3rd, 1903, proclaimed its independence of the Republic.

A treaty was signed in Nov. 1904 submitting a boundary dispute with Ecuador to the arbitration of the German Emperor.

The national religion is Roman Catholicism, but other religions are tolerated. Primary education is free, but not compulsory. All able-bodied citizens are liable to military service, but the standing army only numbers 5000. Industries are chiefly confined to agriculture and the rearing of cattle. Coffee is grown, the department of Cundinamarca producing the famous Bogota coffee. Cocoa and bananas are also cultivated. The great attraction of Colombia is its mineral wealth. Rich mines of gold, silver, iron, copper, lead, etc., and emerald mines, which are the property of the Government, exist in the country. Railways, about 500 miles. Chief port, Barranquilla; pop. 40,115.

Area, 482,329 sq. miles; pop. estimated at between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000. Capital, Bogota (pop. 120,000). Estimated revenue, 1903-4, £852,062; estimated expenditure, £903,115. Imports '98-9, £2,216,605; exports, £3,831,557 (no later data available); foreign debt, 1905 (with unpaid interest to July 1st, 1905), £3,051,000.

A new Bank, the Banco Central, was established in 1905, with a capital of $3,000,000 gold, to receive and administer the product of the National Revenue and to remit the funds for the service of the External Debt. An agreement with the bondholders was made in April 1905, providing for the resumption of payment of full interest on the debt from July 1st, 1905; but the Sinking Fund was postponed for 4 years, in view of the disorganisation of the national finances. There seems reason to hope that President Reyes may greatly improve the condition of the country.

President, General Rafael Reyes, elected in 1904. His term of office was extended for a period of 10 years, until 1914, by resolution of a General Assembly in Mar. 1905.

Minister Plenipotentiary in England, Dr. Ignacio

Gutiérrez Ponce, 42, Holland Rd., Kensington, W.—Consul-General, Don Guillermo R. Calderón, 103, Newgate Street, E.C.—Vice-Consul, Mr. Leopold Schloss.

British Minister and Consul-General at Bogota, F. W. Stronge.

Colonial Conference, 1907. See FISCAL QUESTION.

Combes, Emile, French statesman; b. at Roquecourbe, Department of Tarn, Sept. 6th, 1835. He was ed. at a Catholic seminary, and took the degrees of M.D. and Doctor of Letters. He published a book on the "Psychology of St. Thomas Aquinas," and became a contributor to the Revue Contemporaine. Settling down at Pons, in the Charente, he became mayor and county councillor, and in '85 was elected Senator by his department. Whilst Vice-President of the Senate he was appointed in '95 Minister of Public Instruction, and recognised as a specialist in educational matters. He succeeded M. Waldeck-Rousseau in June 1902 as Président du Conseil des Ministres, under M. Loubet. The administration of the Associations Act was conducted by him with great vigour, all teaching by the Religious orders was suppressed, and he introduced a Bill for the separation of Church and State in Nov. 1904. His majority, however, dwindled, and he resigned office in Jan. 1905. See FRANCE.

Commercial Travellers' Association, Incorporated, was established in 1883, and has branches throughout the kingdom. In connection with it is the United Kingdom Commercial Travellers' Benefit Society (Secretary, H. G. King. Offices, 104, High Holborn, W.C.). The Association is managed by a Central Board, and holds an annual Conference. Monthly organ, On the Road. Hon. General Secretary, Fred Coysb, 42, Weston Park, Crouch End, London, N.

Commissionaires, Corps of. The members of this institution, which was founded in 1859 by the late Capt. Sir E. Walter, K.C.B., are retired soldiers and sailors of His Majesty's regular forces; their number now exceeds 3250. There are divisions in Belfast, Birmingham, Bristol, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Leeds, Liverpool, Manchester, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Nottingham, and Cardiff. The men are employed in every capacity where high qualifications are required, and thus may be engaged for permanent or temporary service. Office, 419, Strand, W.C.

Commons and Footpaths Preservation Society. Established 1865. In '99 the National Footpath Preservation Society was amalgamated with it. See also SCOTTISH RIGHTS OF WAY. It has a number of branches in England and Wales, and a large number of local authorities are affiliated to it. It is taking steps to schedule all public Rights of Way and Commons in the Home Counties, with a view to the publication of a series of maps showing the results of its investigations. The minimum subscription is 5s. per annum, while a ros. 6d. subscription entitles a member to legal advice gratis. Secretary, Mr. Lawrence W. Chubb. Offices, 25, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.

CONGO FREE STATE.

The Congo Free State was constituted and defined by the general Act of the International Congo Conference of Berlin, '85, and entered into treaties with all the great Powers, by which its status as a sovereign power, under Leopold II., King of Belgium, was recognised and its boundaries were settled. It was declared perpetually neutral, and freedom of trade was established in the basin of the Congo, while rules were laid down for the protection of the natives and the suppression of the slave trade. By a Convention made in '90, Belgium, to which King Leopold had bequeathed all his sovereign rights in the State, was given the right of annexing the State after a period of ten years. This Convention expired on June 3rd, 1901, and the Belgian Government, after considerable discussion, carried a bill suspending the payment of interest or capital in respect of the loans advanced by Belgium to the Congo Free State, with a view to their being wiped out eventually by the annexation of the State to Belgium. The Bill reaffirmed Belgium's right of option to annex the State, the understanding being that the King should choose the moment for annexation, his Majesty's will securing the State to Belgium in case of his death. The central Government is at Brussels, and consists of King Leopold, and three departmental chiefs, for Foreign Affairs, Finance, and the Interior, under a Secretary of State. At Boma there is a Governor-General, with a local government; and European Commissioners, assisted by civil and military officials, govern the fourteen administrative districts. Among the chief exports are rubber, ivory, nuts, palm oil. The bulk of the trade is with Belgium. Gold, copper, and other metals have been discovered. Districts are suitable for growing sugar, cotton, coffee, etc. The army consists of 16,183 natives commanded by European officers. The State has 9 steamboats on the Lower Congo and 32 on the Upper Congo, besides a small flotilla of sailing-boats. A railway some 250 miles long connects Matadi and Stanley Pool. Another line, from Stanleyville to Ponthierville in the Upper Congo, was opened in 1906. It is 127 kilometres in length. With the Congo River, and other lines to be built where the river is not navigable, it is designed to open a route between Boma and the Katanga district, on the confines of Rhodesia.

Statistics and Diplomatic.

The area is estimated at 900,000 sq. m., and the population at about 30,000,000. The European population in 1905 was 2511. The capital is Boma, on the Lower Congo. Revenue, 1906, £1,178,109; expenditure, £1,370,032; imports, 1904, £933,000; 1905, £803,000; exports, 1904, £2,075,000; 1905, £2,121,000; public debt, £6,800,000.

History, 1906.

An Agreement with the United Kingdom was signed May 9th, 1906, annulling the lease of the territories in the western basin of the Nile, granted by Great Britain to King Leopold on May 12th, '94. Those territories were the whole basin of the Nile west of the river and south of 10° N. lat., including the Bahr-el-Ghazal and the Lado Enclave; and King Leopold, by an agreement with France, signed Aug. 14th, '94, had renounced his rights in the northern part of the territory with the exception of the Lado Enclave. Great Britain was, however, no party to this agreement, and when in '99 France excluded herself from the Upper Nile, King Leopold sought to revive his rights to occupy the Bahr-el Ghazal under the agreement of May 12th, '94. He even sent Congo Free State troops there; but the British Government would not allow this, and finally the agreement of May 9th, 1906, was signed. Under this agreement King Leopold continues "during his reign" to occupy the Lado Enclave, but within six months thereafter it is to be handed over to the Soudan Government. The frontier between the Congo State and the Anglo-Egyptian Soudan was defined, starting from the intersection from the south of the meridian of 30° longitude east with the watershed between the Nile and the Congo, and following the line of the watershed north-west to the frontier between the Congo State and French Congo. A concession to an Anglo-Belgian Co. was arranged for the construction and working of a railway from the frontier of the Congo State to the Nile near Lado, on the understanding that when His Majesty's occupation of the Lado Enclave determines, the line shall be wholly subject to the Soudan Government.

A debate on the administration of the Congo State took place in the Belgian Chamber, and was concluded on March 2nd, 1906, by the adoption of the following motion, by 80 votes to 54 abstentions: "The Chamber, fully sensible of the ideals which prompted the creation of the Congo State and inspired the Act of Berlin, and confident that the reforms now being elaborated in accordance with the recommendations of the Commission of Inquiry will be faithfully carried out, passes to the order of the day, and will proceed to an early consideration of the Bill of 1901 for the administration of Belgium's colonial possessions." The recommendations of the Subsidiary Commission appointed to make recommendations based on the report of the 1905 Commission of Inquiry (see 1906 ed.) were published on June 9th, and, the King's signature having been affixed, became law. The Governor-General or District Commissary was directed to allot to each village a superficial area three times as large as that already occupied by such village; but the Government was given the right of determining what land was occupied by the natives. Regulations were made for the taxation payable by the natives, and in case of refusal of payment in kind power was given to detain the native, with forced labour, until he had worked off the amount. Power was also given to levy taxes collectively by grouping the population and assessing the amount payable by each group. The arming of native sentries was abolished, and the number of permits for rifles in European factories was limited to 25. The employment of firearms was prohibited except for self-defence or for the protection of persons or property menaced. Regulations were made as to police and military operations, and State inspectors were appointed to watch over the due execution of native laws.

Referring to these reforms, Sir Edward Grey said in the House of Commons (July 5th, that they were "in some material respects less than those that were recommended by the Commission of Inquiry," and that they were accompanied by a pronouncement "in which the Sovereign of the Congo spoke less as a governor, and more as if he were the owner of private property." There were treaty rights which might have to be considered, and the British Consuls would watch closely the application of the reforms, which might be of much benefit. But the system in the Congo State was wrong, because there the State was a trader, and there were private trading companies with administrative powers. He welcomed the interest the Belgian Parliament and people were taking in the matter, for the reform of the Congo State was the first business of Belgium.

Connaught and Strathearn, H.R.H. Prince Arthur William Patrick Albert, 1st Duke of (creat. 1874), Earl of Sussex, P.C., K.G., K.T., K.P., G.C.B., G.C.S.I., G.C.M.G., G.C.I.E., G.C.V.O., Field-Marshal, Inspector-General of the Forces and President of the Selection Board, Colonel of the Grenadier Guards, Colonel of the Army Service Corps, and Colonel-in-Chief of the 6th Dragoons, Highland Light Infantry, the Rifle Brigade, and the Royal Dublin Fusiliers, A.D.C., was b. 1850. The third son of H.M. Queen Victoria. Mar. the Princess Louise Margaret, youngest dau. of Prince Frederick Charles of Prussia (79). There are three children: Princess Margaret Victoria Augusta Charlotte Norah, married June 15th, 1905, to H.R.H. Prince Gustavus Adolphus, eldest son of the Crown Prince of Sweden and Norway; Prince Arthur Frederick Patrick Albert, K.G., G.C.V.O., Personal Aide-de-Camp to the King; and Princess Victoria Patricia Helena Elizabeth. Commanded 1st Brigade, 1st Division, in the Egyptian Expedition (82). Has been Commander-in-Chief at Bombay, and of the Southern District in England. In April '93 he was promoted to the rank of full General, was Commander-in-Chief at Aldershot '93-8, and was promoted Field-Marshal in June 1902. By the death of Prince Alfred of Saxe-Coburg in '99, he became the heir-apparent to the Duchy; but he and his heirs renounced their rights in favour of the young Duke of Albany, who succeeded in 1900. He was installed as Grand Master of Freemasons (July 17th, 1901), an office which was resigned by King Edward VII. on succeeding to the throne. He is also Grand Master of the Mark Masons. He headed the special mission to Madrid in May 1902, invested the King with the Order of the Garter, and himself received the Order of the Golden Fleece. The Duke and Duchess attended the Indian Coronation Durbar at Delhi on Jan. 1st, 1903, as representatives of the King and the Royal Family. H.R.H. was appointed Inspector-General of the Forces and President of the Selection Board as from May 1904. Early in 1906 the Duke and Duchess made a tour in South Africa; and in September H.R.H. attended the German Army Manœuvres and was made a Prussian Field-Marshal. Address: Bagshot Park, Surrey; Clarence House, St. James's, S.W.

CONSUMPTION, PREVENTION OF.

Consumption kills nearly 40,000 persons every year in this country alone. The death rates per million living from this cause since 1866 are as follows, in quinquennial periods:

National Association for the Prevention of Consumption and other forms of Tuberculosis. The object of the Association is the collection and diffusion of information as to the spread, treatment, and prevention of consumption. Organ, "The British Journal of Tuberculosis," edited by T. N. Kelynack, M.D., M.R.C.P. Secretary's office, 20, Hanover Square, W.

National Committee for the Establishment of Self-supporting Sanatoria for the Treatment of Consumption among the working classes. Includes delegates from the chief Friendly Societies and Trades Unions. Sec., E. Douglas White. Office, 19, South Molton Street, Bond Street, London, W.

A National Committee for the Establishment of Sanatoria for Workers suffering from Tuberculosis has been formed. The first Sanatorium is now being erected at Benenden, Kent, and when finished will accommodate 200 Patients. Cost of maintenance of a Bed for one year, £65. President, H.R.H. Princess Christian of Schleswig Holstein. Chairman, Mr. C. H. Garland. Secretary, Mr. W. G. Bunn. Offices, 54, Gray's Inn Road, W.C.

A Royal Commission is sitting to report with regard to Tuberculosis: (1) whether the disease in animals and in man is one and the same; (2) whether animals and man can be reciprocally infected with it; (3) under what conditions, if at all, transmission of the disease from animals to man takes place, and what are the circumstances favourable or unfavourable to such transmission. Members: Sir Michael Foster, K.C.B., F.R.S. (Chairman), German S. Woodhead, Esq., M.D., Sidney H. C. Martin, Esq., M.D., F.R.S., Sir John McFadyean, M.B., R. W. Boyce, Esq., M.D., F.R.S. An interim report was published in June 1904, stating that the Commissioners had found that tubercle of human origin can give rise in the bovine animal to tuberculosis identical with ordinary bovine tuberculosis; and therefore it would be most unwise to frame or modify legislative measures on the view that human and bovine tubercle bacilli were specifically different from each other. Secretary: Dr. E. J. Steegmann. Address: 5, Old Palace Yard, Westminster, S.W.

CO-OPERATION.

Distributive Societies.

Modern co-operation dates from the establishment of the Rochdale Pioneers' Society in 1844, on whose model all subsequent societies have based themselves. The primary object of a co-operative society is distribution, and it aims at saving for the members the shopkeeper's and, if possible, the wholesaler's profits. There is no limit to membership; any one may join. Each person joining must take up one or two £1 shares, paying generally 1s. on entrance, and the remainder, if he chooses, out of his accumulating dividends. The maximum share of capital which one person can hold by law is £200. Goods are sold at the ordinary retail prices, and each purchaser receives checks or vouchers corresponding to the amount of purchases. Half-yearly or quarterly these are paid into the store, and the surplus of receipts over cost is divided among the members at so much per pound of purchases. This is the rebate, or dividend as it is more familiarly called. Non-members may deal at the stores, and receive discount as a rule at half the members' rate. The rate of dividend is usually between 2s. and 3s., but runs up to 3s. 6d. or 4s. Four or five per cent. interest is generally paid on capital. The store is managed by a committee elected by the members, each member having one vote. The first department of a store is usually grocery and provisions. Many stores, even the smaller ones, bake their own bread, and find it most successful. Hardware, drapery, boots and shoes, coal, tailoring, and furnishing generally constitute branches of every large store. In 1905 there were, according to the Co-operative Union report, 1457 distributive societies, with 2,153,185 members, £26,077,174 share capital, £61,086,991 sales, and £9,559,238 profit. The distributive societies also carry on various productive departments—e.g. baking, corn-milling, cabinet-making, boot-making, tailoring, dressmaking, etc.; the total output in this direction being more than £5,000,000 annually.

The English Wholesale Society was started in 1863. It is a federation of co-operative societies, none other being allowed to become shareholders or purchasers. Each society takes up one £5 share for every 5 members. The Society is managed by a General Committee of 32 members, 16 of whom represent the Societies in the Manchester division and 8 each the divisions of London and Newcastle. In 1905 it had 1138 members, £3,301,429 share and loan capital, £20,785,469 sales, and £368,309 profit. It began the manufacture of boots at Leicester in 1873, and has since added soap, candles, biscuits, sweets, preserves, pickles, lard, underclothing, corsets, furniture, cocoa, chocolate, woollens, clothing, flannels, tobacco, hosiery, brushes, starch, printing, corn-milling, etc., to the various industries carried on in its large factories. The capital employed by this society in production is £1,564,236, its output of manufactures £3,543,501, profit thereon £98,543, and the number of persons employed 11,468. It owns 4 steamships, has numerous creameries in Ireland, has purchasing agencies in Canada, the United States, Denmark, Germany, France, Spain, Sweden, Greece, and Australia, and has its own tea plantations in Ceylon. It also does a banking business, its turnover exceeding £90,000,000.

The Scottish Wholesale Society was started in 1869 on lines similar to the English Society, but admitting its employees to collective membership on certain terms. In 1905 it had 281 society members and 528 shareholders amongst the employees; its share and loan capital was £2,372,904, its sales £6,939,738, and profits £267,564. It manufactures boots and shoes, tweeds, blankets, drapery, shirts, furniture, preserves, sweets, chemical sundries, soap, tobacco, etc., besides engaging in printing and corn-milling. In 1905 its productive capital was £685,678, output of manufactures £1,942,321, profit thereon £72,982, and productive employees 4599. The two wholesale societies act as agents for each other. Their business is done at nearly cost price, plus a commission to cover expenses. There are also 8 Corn Mills owned by federations of retail societies and consumers, which in 1905 had a capital of £347,071, sales £1,364,527, and profit £80,563; and 17 baking societies (also consumers' federations), with a total capital of £417,249, sales £624,967, and profits £74,340.

Productive Societies.

Apart from the production carried on by the distributive societies, there is great activity on the part of a large number of societies organised specially to carry on a variety of manufactures. See LABOUR COPARTNERSHIP ASSOCIATION.

The Co-operative Productive Federation is a business organisation to assist such societies. The Co-operative Union Report shows, in 1905, 114 productive societies (excluding wholesale, corn-milling, and baking societies) with £714,035 capital (in shares and loans), £1,186,565 sales, and £49,666 profit. About 40 per cent. of the capital is found by co-operative societies and trade unions, and 60 per cent. by employees. Probably the bulk of their trade is done with co-operative stores. Notable copartnership societies are Hebden Bridge Fustian, Burnley Self-Help, Leicester Equity Boot and Shoe, W. Thomson & Sons, Kettering Clothing, and Kettering Boot. Many distributive societies also give their employees a share of their profits. The copartnership principle is also adopted by some private firms and companies, notably the South Metropolitan Gas Company.

The Co-operative Union (General Secretary, J. C. Gray; offices, 2, Nicholas Croft, High Street, Manchester) is the organising and propagandist centre of the movement, and was formed 1869. The governing body is the Central Board, which meets at Congress time. Its members are appointed by the sectional boards of the seven districts into which the United Kingdom is divided. The work of the board throughout the year is conducted by committees — education, production, propaganda, defence, parliamentary, exhibitions, international, and the joint arbitration committee with trade unionists, being those for 1905. It devotes special efforts to inducing societies to devote a part of their profits to educational purposes, the amount voted in 1905 being £83,266. It also organises the annual Congress. The 1906 Congress was held at Birmingham, and was attended by 1320 delegates, representing Co-operative Societies in all parts of the United Kingdom. There were in 1905, 1230 societies members of the Union, contributing an income of £9450.

The Women's Co-operative Guild (England and Wales) was started in 1883, to educate women in co-operative principles, and increase their power and activity in the movement. It has 22,000 members in 430 branches. Its main lines of work have recently been in the spread of co-operation among the poor, the housing question, and anti-credit and citizenship campaign; it, too, holds an annual congress.

There is also a Women's Co-operative Guild in Scotland, with 91 branches and a membership of 8778.

Co-operation in Agriculture.—Seventy-three distributive (including wholesale) societies in 1905 farmed 8706 acres, with a capital of £209,287, and made a net aggregate profit of £4075 and a loss of £7889. Three farming societies with a capital of £3236 farmed 500 acres with a net aggregate profit of £128 and a loss of £7. In the article on AGRICULTURE, p. 10, full particulars are given as to the operations of the Agricultural Organisation Society and the Irish Agricultural Organisation Society, Ltd.; and in the article on BANKING, p. 36, details will be found as to Agricultural Credit Societies and Co-operative Credit Banks.

The Co-operative Insurance Society does a large business amongst societies in insurance against fire risks, the sums assured in 1905 being £22,247,423; it had also £328,913 fidelity assurance policies and £459,983 life. It makes a speciality of small policies for weekly payments. See also INSURANCE.

Press.—The Co-operative News and Millgate Monthly, issued by the Co-operative Newspaper Society, Manchester; the Wheatshaf, issued by the English Wholesale Society, Manchester; Labour Copartnership, issued by the Labour Copartnership Association, London; the Scotish Co-operator, published in Glasgow, and many local organs.

Co-operation on the Continent.

The International Co-operative Alliance (22, Red Lion Square, London, W.C.) now includes 559 societies and 15 individual members in Great Britain, Germany, France, Holland, Belgium, Denmark, Austria, Russia, Italy, Sweden, Spain, Switzerland, Servia, Australia, the United States, Bulgaria, Canada, Cyprus, Cape Colony, Greece, Hungary, India, Roumania, and the West Indies. Its object is to further the growth of co-operation, and it has held six congresses: in London 1895, Paris '96, Delft '97, Paris 1900, Manchester 1902, and Budapest 1904.

In France productive societies form the most vigorous part of the movement, and devote themselves chiefly to building, house-painting, and furniture-making. They received a State subsidy of 200,000 francs in 1904. The Famillière at Guise, founded by M. Godin as "a co-operative association of labour, capital, and ability," and the Maison Leclair at Paris, are among the best known of French institutions. There were at the close of 1905 just under 2000 distributive societies, including numerous baking societies, and 1038 co-operative credit associations, mostly agricultural, the larger proportion being of the Raiffeisen type.

In Germany there were on Jan. 1st, 1906, 15,108 credit societies, 1922 distributive societies, 714 building societies, 5683 agricultural societies, 925 industrial societies, and 300 other forms of co-operative societies. The chief propagandist body is the General Union of German Trade and Industrial Self-Help Co-operative Societies, which carries on the tradition of Schulze-Delitzsch. The distributive societies have established their own Co-operative Union, which includes 855 societies.

In Belgium the People's Banks are very numerous, and many co-operative distributive and productive societies form part of the Socialist movement, there being about 250 such, with collective sales amounting to 40,000,000 fr., the "Vooruit" Baking Society being well known; in the rural districts the clergy govern the societies.

In Denmark practically the whole agriculture of the country is organised on a co-operative basis in dairies, bacon-curing factories, egg export societies, etc.

In Switzerland and Holland, as also in the preceding countries, the Co-operative Societies have established "Unions" on the same lines as the British Co-operative Union for the purpose of better organisation and propaganda. In connection with these Unions annual congresses are held, at which representatives from other countries are present.

COPYRIGHT, BRITISH AND FOREIGN.

Before an English author has given his work to the world by publishing it, he can restrain any one else who may have had access to it from doing so without his authority by an action at common law. The very act of publication invests the author with statutory copyright without further formality on his part. But if he wishes to sue any one for infringing his right, he must first register his name as the proprietor of it at Stationers' Hall, and this registration need not precede an alleged infringement.

British Copyright, obtained by first publication in the United Kingdom, extends to every part of the British Dominions, now, or hereafter to be acquired, subject, in details, to the local laws of the territory in question.

British copyright in books endures from the date of first publication for the life of the author and seven years after his death, or for a period of forty-two years, whichever period shall be the longer. Copyright in posthumous works dates from publication. "Publication" is best defined as the making of a thing public by offering it for sale. Of every book published, and of every subsequent edition, which is not merely a reprint, a complete copy with everything appertaining thereto must be delivered within a month to the British Museum, and within twelve months to the following libraries on demand: Bodleian, Cambridge, Advocates' (Edinburgh), and Trinity College (Dublin).

Labels, charts, plans without literary additions, perforated cards and contrivances in cardboard, cannot be copyrighted as books, but may be protected under Patents, Engravings, or Trade Marks Acts.

Playright endures from the date of the first representation for forty-two years, or for life and seven years thereafter. To obtain copyright in a drama it must be first printed, and to obtain playright it must be first performed, within the United Kingdom. An English dramatist who produces his play for the first time in the United States may protect his work here either by giving a single copyright performance here or else by invoking the common law against infringers of his unpublished work.

As to music, the period of protection is the same as for books. A sheet of music in which the performing right is reserved must bear a notice to that effect. See Musical Copyright Act, 1906, under SESSION.

The right in lectures endures for twenty-eight years from the date of first publication. The delivery of a lecture to the public at large without restriction is taken as publication, and invests the author with the statutory right. The reporter of a public lecture delivered orally has copyright in his printed report as against the lecturer's right (to print) if the lecturer has no manuscript.

Copyright in paintings, drawings, and photographs endures for the life of the author and seven years after his death. To become invested with copyright the maker must be domiciled within the British Dominions, but the work may be executed anywhere. In order to sue he must register the work at Stationers' Hall, which registration must in these cases precede an infringement alleged. The author of a photograph is the "artist" taking it; his life furnishes the term of copyright, and by the assignment for valuable consideration implied in his salary, the firm employing him becomes the proprietor. On the same principle the purchaser of a photograph, i.e. the person commissioning it, becomes the owner of copyright in it, and in the absence of express agreement to the contrary, any one who pays for the taking of a photograph may reproduce it at will. The negative, however, is the property of the photographer. If he reproduce the photograph without the consent of the sitter he may be sued for breach of contract. Of photographs taken otherwise than for valuable consideration, that is, free to the sitter, the proprietors, his employers, are the owners of the copyright, and can reproduce it at will. See Copyright decision under LAW CASES, 1906. Copyright in prints endures for twenty-eight years, and action for infringement must be taken within six months of the alleged offence. The print must be designed and executed in Great Britain (the nationality of the author is disregarded), and publication alone in this country is not sufficient. The name of the proprietor and the date of first publication must appear on each print. The exhibition of a piece of sculpture, whether private or not, is held to be publication. The right endures for fourteen years from the date of first publication, with an extension for another fourteen years if the sculptor be still living at the termination of the first period. Registration is not necessary.

Foreign.—By the International Act of 1886 a literary or artistic work first produced in any part of the British Possessions obtains the benefit of the English copyright laws in the same manner as if it had been first produced in the United Kingdom, subject to the copyright laws, if any, of the particular colony. It follows that a work so produced obtains copyright in those foreign countries which are members of the Berne Convention of '87 (Great Britain and the British Dominions, Germany, Luxembourg, Austria-Hungary, Belgium, Denmark, France, Hayti, Italy, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Tunis), and such foreign countries enjoy the reciprocal right in the British Colonies. The following British Colonies have local copyright laws: India, Ceylon, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, the Cape, Natal, Hong Kong, Tasmania, Newfoundland. Of these Canada is the only one of importance as regards Imperial copyright.

Canadian copyright endures for twenty-eight years, with power of renewal for a term of fourteen years. A British author wishing to protect himself in Canada must register his work there before or simultaneously with its publication elsewhere, and print and publish there within a month of its publication elsewhere, otherwise cheap reprints of his books may be imported into Canada (under the Foreign Reprints Act).

Copyright in the United States of America endures for twenty-eight years from first publication, with an extension for a term of fourteen years on re-registration of the right within six months of the termination of the first period, and compliance in other respects with the terms of the Act. Copyright of a British book is secured in the United States by its simultaneous publication in both countries; but the United States edition must be manufactured in the United States and of American materials, excepting dramatic and musical pieces, and maps and charts, which may be manufactured in England. On or before the day of first publication of a work in the United States, the author must deliver to the Librarian of Congress at Washington a printed copy of the title of the work to be protected and two copies of the work itself (and one copy of every subsequent edition wherein any substantial change shall have been made).

COSTA RICA.

Costa Rica is the southernmost republic of Central America, lying between Nicaragua on the north and Colombia on the south. Capital, San José, with a population of 25,000. It is governed by a President elected for four years and a Chamber of 32 representatives, elected in the proportion of one member for every 8000 inhabitants, for four years by the "respectable" inhabitants, half of the deputies retiring every two years. Constitution promulgated in 1870, but frequently interrupted by pronunciamientos, and practically suspended from '70 to '82. Army 1000 strong, with militia of 5000. Education compulsory and free. There were 306 primary schools, with 17,716 scholars in 1902. All religions tolerated, but the Roman Catholic is the State religion. Chief exports coffee, cocoa, and bananas. Valuable metals exist in various parts of the country, and the gold mines are being steadily developed. Length of railways, about 350 miles.

Area, 23,000 sq. m.; pop., 1905, 334,297. Revenue, 1902, £510,590; 1903, £468,109; 1914, £502,951; 1905, £588,421; expenditure, 1902, £563,317; 1903, £418,145; 1904, £389,920; 1905, £557,019. Foreign debt, reduced in 1885 to £2,000,000; interest in arrear to April 1905, £600,000. Internal debt, 1906, £718,424. Imports, 1904, £1,228,601; 1905, £1,076,970; exports, 1904, £1,388,995; 1905, £1,672,796.

President, Señor Viquez; appointed April 1906.

Minister to France, Germany, Spain, and Belgium, Señor M. M. Peralta.

Consul-General in London, W. J. Le Lacheur, 58, Lombard Street, E.C.

British Minister, Lionel Carden; resides at Guatemala. Consul, F. N. Cox, at San José.

County Councils Association. Secretary, G. M. Harris. Office, Caxton House, Westminster, S.W.

Crane, Walter, poet and painter, was b. 1845, and first exhibited at the Royal Academy '62. He was elected a member of the Institute of Painters in Water Colours in '82, resigned later, and now belongs to the Old Society of Painters in Water Colours. He was the first President of the Arts and Crafts Exhibition Society, and was chairman of the committee for organising the Exhibition of British Arts and Crafts in the Art section of the St. Louis Exhibition, 1904. He has published "The Claims of Decorative Art," "Decorative Illustration of Books," "The Basis of Design," "Line and Form," and "Ideals in Art" (1905), besides a number of illustrated books. He was Art Director to the Manchester Municipal School of Art '93-6, Principal of the Royal College of Art '98-9, and is now a member of the Advisory Council on Art to the Board of Education. The Albert gold medal of the Society of Arts was awarded to him in 1904 for his work in connection with art and industry. Address: 13, Holland Street, Kensington, W.

Cremation. Crematoria have been established in this country at Woking, Golder's Green, Hendon, Manchester, Glasgow, Liverpool, Hull, Birmingham, Darlington, Leeds, Bradford, Ilford, and Sheffield. Others are in course of erection or in contemplation. Cremation societies have been instituted in every European country, and many of the States of America possess them also, and cremation in these States has become a regular practice. The cremation of an adult by either of the two processes employed is completed in about an hour and a half, and the ashes, which are perfectly white, weigh about 4 lb. The cost of reduction, were it to become common, would be less than 30s.; but at present it is more than treble this sum, owing to the necessity of heating the crematory every time for each cremation. There were 604 cremations in Great Britain, and 4351 in the United States and Canada, during 1905. By the Cremation Act, 1902, burial authorities are enabled to establish crematoria, and regulations were made by the Home Secretary in 1903, providing that no cremation of human remains shall take place except in a crematorium of the opening of which notice has been given to the Home Secretary; that it shall be illegal to cremate the remains of a person who is known to have left a direction to the contrary; that no cremation shall be allowed until after due registration of the death of the deceased, or a coroner's certificate as to the cause of death, etc.; and that no cremation shall take place unless on application signed and a statutory declaration as to the particulars made by an executor or the nearest surviving relative, or, on satisfactory grounds, some other person. Further, in all cases a certificate by the deceased's medical man and by a medical referee, or a post-mortem certificate, or a coroner's certificate, is required. Secretary of Cremation Society of England, Mr. G. A. Noble; Hon. Sec., J. C. Swinburne-Hanham, Esq., J.P. Office, 324, Regent Street, London, W.

CRETE.

Crete is an island in the Mediterranean, lying to the south of the Aegean Sea and Archipelago. Area about 3300 sq. m.; pop. 303,543. Chief cities, Candia (pop. 22,331); Canea (pop. 24,537); and Retimo (pop. 9311). There are about 33,000 Moslems and 269,000 Christians. The island was conquered by the Turks in 1669, but never really submitted, and continually rose in insurrection against them. The Powers intervened at the end of '95, but the reforms promised were not carried out, and early in '97 a Greek force landed in the island. The Powers then undertook to set up autonomy under the nominal suzerainty of the Sultan, the Greek force withdrew, and on Nov. 26th, '98, Prince George (second son of the King of Greece, b. June 24th, '69) was appointed as High Commissioner. A Constitution was adopted in April '99, under which an Assembly of 74 deputies, 4 of whom are Mahometans, is elected biennially. The executive power rests in the High Commissioner and a Council of three members, exclusive of the Prince's Financial Adviser. Since '90 systematic exploration has led to archaeological discoveries of surpassing interest, and the excavations at Knossos and Phaestos have revealed a wonderful picture of Mycenaean civilisation. The chief products are olive oil, fruits, tobacco, cotton, and silk, and trade is carried on chiefly with Greece and Turkey. Revenue and expenditure about £200,000. Imports, 1903, £580,174, 1904, £549,665, consisting chiefly of food-stuffs and textiles; exports, 1903, £439,167, 1904, £419,642, largely olives and olive oil. On Aug. 6th, 1901, the Ottoman Public Debt renounced all rights and privileges in the island in return for 1,500,000 fr. and the concession of the salt monopoly for twenty years.

A proclamation was issued, July 23rd, 1906, containing the decisions of the Powers as a result of the report of the Commissioners appointed by them to inquire into the situation. They resolved to reorganise the gendarmerie, and create a militia, in order to take the place of the international troops so soon as order and tranquillity were assured; to continue the 3 per cent. surtax, and to sanction a loan of £372,000 to pay indemnities to Cretans and Greeks, and to meet expenditure on public works; to extend the supervision of the Greek Financial Commission to Crete; to postpone till 1911 the payment of interest and the redemption of the £160,000 advanced by the Powers; to give instructions to the Ambassadors at Constantinople for the settlement of outstanding differences with Turkey; to enforce equal rights for Christians and Mussulmans, and appoint a mixed Commission to settle cases of land, mosques, etc., of which Mussulmans had been dispossessed; to set up an annual Budget and to establish a Financial Control Department. Prince George on this resigned, on the ground that he did not desire to retain his post under the new order of things, and King George of Greece was then asked to nominate a Greek subject as High Commissioner, and designated M. Zaimis, ex-Prime Minister of Greece, to hold office for five years. The Powers approved, and the Prince left the island on the Greek battleship Psara, Sept. 25th, some of his Cretan supporters coming into conflict with the international troops at Halepa. M. Zaimis arrived at Canea on Oct. 1st.

High Commissioner, M. Zaimis; appointed 1906.
British Consul-General at Canea, Esmé Howard, C.M.G., C.V.O.

CRIMINAL STATISTICS—UNITED KINGDOM.

1. England and Wales.

The number of indictable offences reported to the police, or otherwise coming within their cognisance, in 1904 was 92,907, or 275·17 per 100,000 of the population.

The annual average for 1900-1904 was 84,247, or 255 per 100,000 of the population. The figures for recent years are:

Year.	No. of crimes.	Proportion per 100,000.
1860-4 . . .	89,719	440'42
1865-9 . . .	95,936	412'56
1870-4 . . .	84,633	366'43
1875-9 . . .	88,264	357'35
1880-4 . . .	96,780	367'50
1885-9 . . .	86,903	312'29
1890-4 . . .	83,831	284'93
1895-9 . . .	79,459	255'02
1900-4 . . .	84,247	255'31

The number of persons tried, at Assizes and Quarter Sessions and Summarily, for indictable offences in 1904 was 59,960, or 177'59 per 100,000 of the population. The annual averages for recent years are:

Year.	Persons tried.	Per 100,000 population.
1860-4 . . .	57,107	280'33
1865-9 . . .	60,133	277'40
1870-4 . . .	53,608	232'10
1875-9 . . .	53,351	216'00
1880-4 . . .	60,999	231'63
1885-9 . . .	56,987	204'78
1890-4 . . .	56,211	191'05
1895-9 . . .	51,050	163'84
1900-4 . . .	56,911	172'47

There has been a continuous growth since '99 in the number of persons tried for indictable offences, which number is usually regarded as the best index to the fluctuations of crime. But it should be noted that the increase has not been exhibited in all classes of crime. Offences against the person have decreased. It is offences against property which are on the increase, and of these the increases in offences of simple larceny and minor larcenies exceed the total increase in the number of persons tried for indictable offences, comparing 1904 with 1903. The offences usually committed by habitual criminals have ceased to increase at the same rapid rate as formerly, e.g., burglary and housebreaking.

In respect of the total number of 92,907 offences reported to the police, 66,858 persons were prosecuted, 14,403 were discharged, including 7,736 who were tried summarily and acquitted; 39,649 were tried summarily and convicted; and 12,124 were sent for trial at Assizes and Quarter Sessions.

The different classes of crimes were as follows:—

	Offences reported.	Persons tried.
Against the person . . .	3,384	2,525
Against property with violence . . . . .	10,857	3,187
Against property without violence . . . . .	74,443	52,600
Malicious injuries to property . . . . .	582	433
Forgery and Currency offences . . . . .	560	310
Other offences . . . . .	3,079	905
	92,907	59,960

The number of persons tried for non-indictable offences (assaults, cruelty cases, thefts, drunkenness, vagrancy, etc.), was 747,179, an increase of 1927 as compared with 1903, the proportion to population falling from 2233 to 2213 per 100,000. These non-indictable offences are divided into two classes—criminal and non-criminal. Criminal offences are assaults, brothel-keeping, cruelty to children, malicious damage, unlawful possession, stealing and receiving stolen goods, and offences under the Vagrancy Acts. These offences numbered 89,254 in 1904, and have greatly decreased in recent years. Non-criminal offences numbered 657,925 in 1904, and are mainly contraventions of municipal regulations not involving violence or gross dishonesty, drunkenness, breaches of the Education Act, begging, gambling, etc. Minor offences of dishonesty have increased, drunkenness is stationary, and offences of the vagrancy class are growing rapidly.

The following figures show the numbers of the two classes of non-indictable offences in recent years:—

	Criminal.	Non-Criminal.	Total.
1860-4 . . .	117,180	240,074	357,254
1870-4 . . .	134,146	373,725	507,871
1880-4 . . .	122,044	502,477	624,521
1890-4 . . .	111,618	530,404	642,022
1900-4 . . .	94,288	641,159	735,447

Offences against the Highway Acts have risen from an average of 7406 in the period 1860-4 to 43,063 in 1900-4, and numbered 48,109 in 1904.

The Coroners' Returns are closely connected with the subject of crime. In 1904 there were 36,269 inquests held (66 per 1000 deaths), and only 4,888 deaths were ascribed to criminal violence or culpable neglect. Of these, 3,327 were cases of suicide. The number of suicides in recent years is given in the following table:

Year.	No. of suicides.	Proportion per 100,000.
1863 . . . . .	1,385	6'71
1873 . . . . .	1,481	6'33
1883 . . . . .	1,944	7'30
1893 . . . . .	2,566	8'62
1903 . . . . .	3,480	10'43
1904 . . . . .	3,327	9'85

The Returns from the Prisons show that the number of convicted prisoners received into prisons in 1904 was—189,445 from Courts of Summary Jurisdiction.

8,930 from Courts of Assize.	[tin.
758 from Courts Martial.

199,153.

There were 967 sentences of penal servitude, the remainder being sentences of imprisonment.

The number of persons other than convicted prisoners received in prisons in 1904 was nearly 35,000, including about 15,000 prisoners received on remand or committal for trial, and afterwards discharged or acquitted, 1,429 persons imprisoned in default of finding sureties, and 19,217 debtors.

The number of debtor prisoners has greatly increased in the last 4 years. The percentage of persons sentenced to pay fines who go to prison in default of payment steadily declined from 18'91 in '93 to 14'73 in 1900, and has since increased to 19'55 in 1904.

The number of criminal lunatics received into Asylums was 235.

There were 1129 children sent to Reformatory Schools.

There were 418 persons sent to Inebriate Reformatories, of whom 380 were women.

2. Scotland.

The number of persons charged with offences by the police in 1904 was 164,168. The different classes of crimes were:—

Against the person . . . . .	4,714
" property with violence . . . . .	1,676
" without violence . . . . .	14,798
Malicious injury to property . . . . .	4,507
Forgery, etc. . . . .	50
Other crimes . . . . .	360
Miscellaneous offences * . . . .	138,063
Total . . . . .	164,168

* Drunkenness, breaches of the peace, offences against Police Acts, vagrancy, etc.

The corresponding figures since 1883 are:—

1883 . . . . .	141,374	1900 . . . . .	179,821
1888 . . . . .	137,920	1901 . . . . .	186,595
1893 . . . . .	149,813	1902 . . . . .	182,599
1898 . . . . .	165,903	1903 . . . . .	166,180

Compared with 1897, it appears that crimes against the person and cases of malicious injury to property have fallen steadily, but crimes against property, housebreaking, robberies and theft, have increased steadily and considerably. The minor offences rose rapidly from '97 to 1901, and have since fallen as rapidly.

Of the total of 164,168 cases given above, 129,799 were disposed of by being tried summarily in the Police and Burgh Courts, Justice of Peace Courts and Sheriff Courts; 31,738 were discharged or the proceedings were dropped; and 2,631 disposed of after full committal by trial in the Sheriff Courts and the High Court of Justiciary.

Of the 129,799 tried summarily, 121,914 were convicted and 7,885 acquitted or otherwise disposed of.

Of the 2,631 committed for trial 2,208 were convicted, 20 outlawed and bail forfeited, 4 declared insane, 63 acquitted as "not guilty," 104 acquitted—"not proven," and 227 were discharged.

The number of persons received into prisons and police cells during 1904 was 56,517. There were 3 death sentences, of which 2 were commuted to penal servitude for life, 73 sentences of penal servitude, and 38 prisoners were removed to Asylums: 193 boys and girls were received into Reformatory Schools.

3. Ireland.

The number of indictable offences reported to the police in 1204 was 9728, or 221'52 per 100,000 of the population.

The annual average for '99-1904 was 9244, or 209'28 per 100,000 of the population. The figures for recent years as to the proportion of crimes reported to police per 100,000 of the population are:—

Year.	No. of Crimes.	Proportion per 100,000.
1886-90 . . . . .	9,557	198'79
1891-5 . . . . .	8,459	183'34
1896-1900 . . . . .	9,273	205'52
1901-5 . . . . .	9,244	209'28

The number of non-indictable offences disposed of summarily was 179,078, or 4016'1 per 100,000 of the population.

Analysing the various classes of offences, the figures are—

For offences against the person . . . . .	583
Against property with violence . . . . .	756
" without violence . . . . .	7,310
Malicious injuries to property . . . . .	518
Forgery, etc. . . . .	73
Other offences . . . . .	488
* Miscellaneous offences . . . . .	179,078
	188,806

* Assaults, thefts, vagrancy, drunkenness, etc.

The number of persons committed to prison in 1905 was 33,217. There were 83 sentences of penal servitude; 2,612 criminal and dangerous lunatics were detained in lunatic asylums, and 1,294 children in industrial schools.

CUBA.

Cuba is considerably the largest of the West India Islands, and lies between Florida and the Caribbean Sea. It was a Spanish possession from the time of its discovery till, by the Treaty of Paris, Dec. 10th, '98, after a war with the United States, it was relinquished by Spain and became an independent State under American suzerainty. A Constitutional Convention assembled in Nov. 1900, and adopted a constitution providing for a republican form of government, with a President, Vice-President, Senate, and House of Representatives. Thereupon the United States Congress authorised the transfer of the government to the people of Cuba on condition that (1) No treaty should be made with any other foreign Power impairing the independence of Cuba or allowing military or naval occupation of the island; (2) the United States should have the right to intervene for the discharge of her obligations under the Treaty of Paris; (3) the United States should have certain naval stations (at Bahia Honda and Guantanamo). These conditions were included in the Law of Constitution, and confirmed in the permanent treaty between Cuba and the United States, which was signed in May 1903.

The formal transfer of the Government to the Cuban authorities took place on May 20th, 1902. A reciprocity treaty with the United States was signed (Dec. 12th, 1902), and is to continue in force for five years. It allowed 20 per cent. reduction on all Cuban products, with a 20-per cent. preference to Cuba if similar treaties were made by the United States with other countries. An average reduction of 30 per cent. was made on American products entering Cuba.

Cuba is divided into six provinces. The capital is Havana, a splendid city (pop. 275,000). Other towns are Santiago, 46,000; Matanzas, 45,000; and Cienfuegos, 59,000. Education, neglected for years, was reorganised under the American administration, and is now compulsory. The chief products are sugar and tobacco. Timber and fruits also are increasingly exported, and there are valuable iron, manganese, and copper mines. There are 1500 miles of railway.

The area is about 44,000 sq. miles, and the population (1905) 1,786,207, of whom less than one-third are mulattoes or negroes. Revenue, 1902-3, £3,553,009; 1903-4, £3,458,000; expenditure, 1902-3, £3,067,970; 1903-4, £3,365,000; imports, 1903, £13,415,535; 1904, £16,567,130; 1905, £20,644,193; exports, 1903, £15,697,282; 1904, £17,995,628; 1905, £22,456,005. A loan of $35,000,000, redeemable in 30 years, was authorised by the House of Representatives (Aug. 14th, 1902), the issue price being 90 and the rate of interest 5 per cent.

Provisional Governor (under United States), C. E. Magoon, appointed by President of the United States Oct. 13th, 1906.

British Minister and Consul-General, A. C. Grant Duff. Consul at Santiago, R. Mason.

Cuban Minister in London, Señor Rafael Montoro, 3, Grosvenor Mansions, Victoria Street, S.W.

History, 1906.

A conspiracy against President Palma was discovered in August, in which several prominent Liberals were implicated. This developed into a revolutionary movement, and became so serious that on Sept. 11th the President issued a decree suspending the constitutional guarantees in the provinces of Pinar del Rio, Havana, and Santa Clara. The insurgents began to threaten Havana itself, and U.S. bluejackets were landed for the protection of the lives and property of Americans, but went on board again, leaving only a small guard at the Legation. Mr. Taft was sent by President Roosevelt to investigate the situation (10th), and interviewed the President and the revolutionary leaders; but the President and his supporters would not accept the suggested terms of peace, and resigned. As Congress was unable to elect another President, Mr. W. H. Taft was appointed Provisional Governor, but stated that when order was restored elections would be held to form a new Government (29th). The U.S. Government sent 6000 troops to the island, and the insurgents were disarmed. Mr. Magoon succeeded Mr. Taft as Provisional Governor on Oct. 13th.

Culme-Seymour, Admiral Sir Michael, Bart., G.C.B., G.C.V.O., appointed Vice-Admiral of the United Kingdom and Lieutenant of the Admiralty thereof in July 1901, is the 3rd Bart., and was b. March 13th, 1836. Ed. at Harrow, he entered the Navy in '50, and has seen active service in Burma '52, the Baltic '54, Black Sea '54-5, and China '58. He was private sec. to First Lord '74-76, and was first and principal A.D.C. to H.M. Queen Victoria '99-1901. Appointed Rear Admiral '82, Vice-Admiral '88, and Admiral '93, he commanded the Pacific Squadron '85-7, the Channel Squadron '90-92, the Mediterranean '93-97, and was made Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth '97. Address: Wadenhoe House, Oundle.

Cyclists' Touring Club. Founded 1878, in incorporated '87. Membership of about 40,000. Secures for members reduced rates at hotels and restaurants at home and abroad, and the right to take cycles free of duty into nearly all foreign countries. Subscription 5s. per annum. Organ, C.T.C. Gazette. Secretary, E. R. Shipton. Offices, 47, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W. Telegraphic Address: "Cosmopolitan, London."

Cymmrodorion, The Honourable Society of, 64, Chancery Lane. President, Viscount Tredegar; Sec., E. Vincent Evans.

D

Dante Society, 38, Conduit Street, W. Hon. Sec., L. Ricci.

Danube International Commission. "La Commission Européenne du Danube" was constituted by Article XVI. of the Treaty of Paris, 1856. In '71 it was prolonged for a further period of 12 years. By the Treaty of Berlin '78 Roumania was given representation on the Commission, the other Powers represented being Austria-Hungary, France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, Russia, and Turkey. The jurisdiction of the Commission was also extended as far as Galatz. Finally, by the Treaty of London '83, its jurisdiction was extended to Braila, and it was provided that it should exercise its powers for a period of 21 years from April 24th, 1883; and thereafter for successive terms of three years unless one of the contracting parties should notify one year before the expiration of the term the intention of proposing modifications in the constitution or in the powers of the Commission. The Commission regulates the navigation of the river as an international highway from Braila to the Black Sea, and has the right to prevent any works on the arms of the Danube which would interfere, directly or indirectly, with the navigation. The delegates meet twice a year in full session, an executive committee of the delegates present at Galatz transacting all current business. The office of the Commission is at Galatz, in Roumania, and the British delegate is Mr. Hamilton Browne.

Darwin, Sir George Howard, M.A., F.R.S., LL.D., D.Sc., is the 2nd son of the late Charles Darwin, and was b. July 9th, 1845; ed. privately and at Trin. Coll., Camb.; was 2nd Wrangler and Smith's Prizeman '68; Fellow of Trin. Coll. '68-78, and re-elected '84. He was called to the Bar in '74, but his chief work has been done in the field of mathematical science; and he has been Professor of Astronomy and Experimental Philosophy at Cambridge since '83. In 1905 he was President of the British Association, at the meetings of which he has frequently read valuable papers. Knighted Nov. 9th, 1905. Newnham Grange, Cambridge.

Deaf and Dumb, Association for Oral Instruction of. Includes a Training College for Teachers and a School for Children.

11, Fitzroy Square. Director, William Van Praagh.

Deaf, Training College for Teachers of the, Castle Bar Hill, Ealing, London, W., founded in 1878 by the "Society for Training Teachers of the Deaf and for the Diffusion of the 'German' System," for the purpose of supplying English teachers of the "German" or Pure Oral system of teaching the deaf. Lady Superintendent and Secretary, Mrs. Arthur Kinsey.

Deakin, Hon. Alfred, is a native of Victoria, to which colony his father went from England in the fifties. He was born Aug. 3rd, 1856, educated at the Church of England Grammar School, Melbourne, and Melbourne University, and was called to the Victoria Bar in '77. He was for some time on the staff of the Melbourne Age, and soon became a prominent politician. Elected as M.L.A. '79, he was Minister of Public Works in the Victoria Cabinet '83, Chief Secretary '86-90, Minister of Health '90, and afterwards Solicitor-General. He made a study of the irrigation question, and in '87 visited England as a Victorian representative at the Colonial Conference. He strongly advocated the Federation cause, and pursued his profession as a barrister with marked success. In 1900 he again visited England, representing Victoria during the passage of the Commonwealth Act, while he became Attorney-General in the first Commonwealth Ministry under Sir Edmund Barton as Premier. On the retirement of the latter to become a Judge of the High Court in 1903 Mr. Deakin succeeded him. His administration was defeated in April 1904, but he again became Premier in July 1905. Address: Llanarth, Walsh Street, South Yarra, Melbourne.

DEATH DUTIES.

Under the provisions of the Finance Act, 1894, estate duty is payable on all property, real or personal, settled or not settled, which passes on the death of any person dying after the Act came into force as follows:—

Value of the Estate.	Rate per cent. of Estate Duty.
£101 to £500	£1.
£501 „ £1,000	£2.
£1,001 „ £10,000	£3.
£10,001 „ £25,000	£4.
£25,001 „ £50,000	£4 10s.
£50,001 „ £75,000	£5.
£75,001 „ £100,000	£5 10s.
£100,001 „ £150,000	£6.
£150,001 „ £250,000	£6 10s.
£250,001 „ £500,000	£7.
£500,001 „ £1,000,000	£7 10s.
£1,000,001 and upwards.	£8.

To ascertain the percentage of duty payable, all the property passing on the death of its owner is to be aggregated so as to form an estate. By the Finance Act, '94, the principal value of any property liable to the new estate duty is to be estimated on the price which, in the opinion of the Commissioners, the property would realise if sold in the open market at the time of the death of the deceased; but, as regards agricultural property, the value is not to exceed twenty-five years' purchase of the property, as assessed under Schedule A of the Income Tax Acts, after deducting £5 per cent. for expenses of management. Disputes as to valuation of the property may be referred to the High Court, or to the County Court where the amount is less than £10,000. Duty on real property may be paid by eight yearly or sixteen half-yearly instalments. It is provided by the Finance Act, '96, that estate duty on annuities may be paid by four equal annual instalments. A few other minor amendments of the Finance Act of '94 have been since made, chiefly by the Finance Act 1900, with reference to the principle of "aggregation."

Legacy duty is payable on legacies and shares of residue under a will or intestacy, and is applicable to personal property, except leaseholds either within the United Kingdom or abroad of a person who died domiciled in the United Kingdom. The rate of this duty is as under viz.:—

Legacies to children, or father, mother, or lineal ancestors, £1 per cent. (but no legacy or succession duty is payable where the new estate duty is charged);

To brothers or sisters or their descendants, £3 per cent.;

To brothers and sisters of the father and mother of deceased, or any descendant of such brothers or sisters £5 per cent.;

To brothers and sisters of grandfather or grandmother, or any descendants of such brothers or sisters, £6 per cent.;

To persons of other degrees of consanguinity, or strangers in blood, £10 per cent.

Succession duty is payable on the interest that an individual takes as successor to a deceased person on real or leasehold property in the United Kingdom, or on legacies charged upon the proceeds of sale of real estate of a person who died domiciled in this country, irrespective of the situation of the property; also on personal property included in a settlement, whether that property was at home or abroad. The duty varies in a similar manner to the legacy duty.

See FINANCE, NATIONAL, for the produce of these duties in 1905-6.

Delcassé, Théophile, was b. at Pamiers, March 1st, 1852, educated at Paris, and began his career as a journalist. He was elected to the Chamber in '89 for Foix, in '93 became Under-Secretary for the Colonies under MM. Ribot and Dupuy, and Colonial Minister in the Dupuy Cabinet of May '94. He has always been a consistent advocate of colonial expansion. When M. Brisson formed his ministry in '98, he entrusted Foreign Affairs to M. Delcassé, and it fell to his lot to deal with the difficult position at Fashoda. He accomplished the task with great ability, and retained his portfolio in M. Dupuy's ministry, after the defeat of the Brisson administration. In '99 he negotiated the agreement with Great Britain as to the Nile Valley and Central Africa, and still remained Foreign Minister when M. Waldeck-Rousseau succeeded M. Dupuy, and when M. Combes in 1902 succeeded M. Waldeck-Rousseau. He brought about the rapprochement with Italy, visited England with the President in 1903, and with Lord Lansdowne prepared the Anglo-French Agreement signed April 8th, 1904. The difficulty with Germany about Morocco (see FRANCE) caused his retirement in 1905. He belongs to the moderate section of the Radical Republicans in domestic politics.

DENMARK.*Ruler.

King Frederik VIII. was b. June 3rd, 1843, and succeeded his father King Christian IX. on the death of the latter, Jan. 29th, 1906. He married, July 28th, '69, Princess Louisa, daughter of King Carl XV. of Sweden and Norway, and has seven children. The heir apparent is Prince Christian, b. Sept. 26th, '70, and married April 26th, '98, to Princess Alexandrine of Mecklenburg. The second son, Prince Karl, b. Aug. 3rd, '72, was married to H.R.H. Princess Maud of Great Britain, July 22nd, '96, and was in Nov. 1905 elected King of Norway as King Haakon VII. King Frederik is a brother of Queen Alexandra, of King George I. of Greece, and of the Dowager Empress of Russia. He has a Civil List of £55,555. On Nov. 9th, 1906, he was appointed Col.-in-Chief of the Buffs.

Government.

The kingdom of Denmark consists of Zealand, Funen, Laaland, and other islands in the Baltic, the peninsula of Jutland, and the Faeroe Islands or Sheep Islands in the North Atlantic. The constitution of the kingdom of Denmark was settled by the charter of 1849 (modified in '55, '63, '65, and '66). The executive power is vested in King and ministers, the legislative in the Rigsdag or Diet acting jointly with the sovereign. The Rigsdag is composed of the Landsting (or Upper House of 66 members—12 Crown nominees appointed for life, and 54 indirectly elected by electoral bodies, in which large taxpayers are well represented, for eight years), and the Folkething (or House of Commons of 114 members directly elected by universal suffrage for three years). Members of both houses are paid about 11s. a day while the Rigsdag is sitting and their travelling expenses. The Rigsdag must meet every October, and all money bills be submitted first to the Folkething.

For local government the country is divided into 18 counties, each under a governor, and these are subdivided into hundreds and parishes. The towns are administered by mayors.

Army and Navy.

Military service is obligatory on all able-bodied men who have reached the age of 22. The service in the first line of the army is 8 years and in the second line 8 years. There are now about 830 officers and 33,000 men on a peace footing, and 1250 officers and 50,000 men on a war footing. It is estimated that by the year 1910 Denmark will be able to mobilise 83,000 men, of whom 58,500 will be infantry, 5000 cavalry, 6800 field artillery, and 8600 fortress artillery. The really effective force would be about 70,000. At present the peace strength is 31 battalions, 15 squadrons, and 12 field batteries, with fortress artillery and engineers; but the number with the colours varies according to the period of the year, the men not being kept continuously under training.

The Minister of Marine is Rear-Admiral Jöhncke. The Navy numbers about 4000 of all ranks. The executive officers are divided as follows: 1 vice admiral, 2 rear-admirals, 16 captains, 38 commanders, 63 lieutenants, 33 sub-lieutenants, and 23 midshipmen. The strength in ships built is: battleships, 2, coast-defence vessels 3, protected cruisers 5, torpedo boats 16; 1 coast defence vessel building—the Peder Scram. At Copenhagen there are three small docks.

Industries, etc.

The State religion is Lutheran, and the King must be a member of that Church, but all others are tolerated, and there are no disabilities to dissenters. Education compulsory and free for children from 7 to 14 years of age, the public schools being maintained by communal rates. The chief newspapers are the Radical Aftenbladet, the Conservative National Tidende, the Independent Berlingske Tidende, the Politiken and the Dannebiog. Recent agricultural returns show that the foreign demand for Danish agricultural produce continues to increase. Cattle breeding is at the same time taking more and more the place of arable farming. Above all, dairy farming is being pursued with unparalleled skill and success. About five-sixths of the land is possessed by small freeholders and peasants. There are 21 agricultural or horticultural schools in the country, and a veterinary and agricultural college at Copenhagen, to which the State makes an annual grant of £21,110. The export of butter and other dairy produce is now the main source of the wealth of Denmark, and this was recognised by the formation of an Agricultural Department under a responsible Minister in May '96. Of the total exports given below, agricultural produce accounted for no less than £19,500,900 in 1905. Length of railways 1993 miles.

Colonies.

Greenland is an extensive region or island lying north-east of America, extending into the Polar regions. The interior is all ice, but parts of the south and west coast are habitable, with verdant pasturage, some shrubbery, and mossy valleys. Principal exports: oil of seals and whales, fox, seal, and reindeer skins, eider-down, feathers, and cryolite. The chief trade is with Denmark. Area of the colonised portion, 46,740 sq. m.; pop. 11,895, of whom 309 are Europeans and the rest natives.

Iceland is a large island, 130 m. east of Greenland, and 850 m. west of Norway. Area 39,756 sq. m.; pop. 80,000. Capital, Rejkkjavik (pop. 9000). The Legislature, called the Althing, consists of 34 members elected by popular suffrage, and 6 nominated by the King of Denmark. Under laws adopted in 1903, a Minister for Iceland, nominated by the King, resides at Rejkkjavik, and is responsible for the administration. Exports: wool, dried fish, mutton, ponies, and sheep. Manufactures domestic. Imports: 1902, £596,193; 1903, £670,443; 1904, £651,601; exports: 1902, £511,083; 1903, £627,332; 1904, £583,205.

It is governed, in connection with St. Thomas and St. John, by an officer appointed by the Crown. The negroes who make up the bulk of the population are chiefly engaged in the cultivation of the sugar-cane. Area, 118 sq. m.; pop. 35,156.

British Consul, H. McDougal, St. Thomas.

History, 1906.

King Christian IX. died suddenly (Jan. 20th), at the age of 87, and was succeeded by King Frederik VIII., who was proclaimed King from the Amalienborg Palace by the Premier, M. Christensen (30th). Queen Alexandra arrived at Copenhagen (Feb. 3rd). The lying in state of the body for three days brought enormous numbers of people to the Court Chapel. The body was then removed to the Cathedral of Roskilde (16th), and the funeral ceremony on the 18th was attended by King Frederik, the King of Greece, the German Emperor, the King of Norway, Queen Louisa, Queen Alexandra, the Empress Dowager of Russia, and other members of the Royal Family of Denmark, and representatives of foreign monarchs and states. Viscount Althorp represented King Edward. The elections in May resulted in the loss of the Government's majority over other parties, the Socialists and the Conservatives both strengthening their position. The Socialists secured 24 seats. The Moderates and Conservatives, however, announced that they would support the Government. The members of the Icelandic Parliament were officially welcomed at Copenhagen by the King (on whose initiative the visit took place), the Queen, and the members of the Danish Parliament (July 19th).

Devon and Cornwall Record Society. President, Earl of Mount Edgcumbe. Hon. Sec., H. Tapley-Soper, Royal Albert Memorial College, Exeter.

Dewar, Sir James, F.R.S., Fullerian Professor of Chemistry, Royal Institution, London, was b. at Kincardine, Sept. 20th, 1842; and ed. at Dollar Academy, and Edinburgh Univ.; M.A. and Hon. LL.D. Glasgow, St. Andrews, Aberdeen and Edinburgh; D.Sc. Oxford, Victoria, and Dublin; is Professorial Fellow of St. Peter's Coll., Camb. F.I.C., F.C.S., a Vice-President of the Royal Society and a Director of the Davy-Faraday Research Laboratory of the Royal Institution. With Sir Frederick Abel he invented cordite, and he has distinguished himself by his researches into the properties of matter at low temperatures, and into the nature and properties of atmospheric air. He was the first to liquefy and solidify hydrogen. Received French Academy's Lavoisier Gold Medal '94, and Matteucci Medal of Italian Society of Science 1906. Knighted June 24th, 1904. 21, Albemarle Street, W.; 21, Scrope Terrace, Cambridge.

Dibdin, Sir Lewis T., K.C., D.C.L., Dean and Official Principal of the Court of Arches, was b. in 1852, being a son of the late Rev. R. W. Dibdin, of London. He was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge, and graduated in '74 as senior optime in the Mathematical Tripos, afterwards going to the Bar. He gained a large Chancery practice, and was appointed official counsel to the Attorney-General in charity matters in '95. In 1901 he took silk. In '86 he was appointed Chancellor of Rochester, of Exeter in '88, and of Durham in 1891; and he has made himself known as one of the ablest ecclesiastical lawyers of the day. On the resignation of Sir Arthur Charles in 1903 he was appointed Dean of Arches, Auditor of the Chancery Court of York, Judge under the Public Worship Regulation Act, and Master of the Faculties, and afterwards knighted. First Church Estates Commissioner and an Ecclesiastical Commissioner 1905. Address, Nobles, Dormansland, E. Grinstead.

DISESTABLISHMENT.

The "Society for the Liberation of Religion from State Patronage and Control," popularly known as the Liberation Society, exists for the purpose of securing the freedom of all Churches. The objects of the Society, formally stated, are:—The abrogation of all laws and usages which inflict disability or confer privilege on ecclesiastical grounds; the discontinuance of all payments from public funds, and of all compulsory exactions, for religious purposes. After an equitable satisfaction of existing interests, the application of the national property now held in trust by the Established Churches of England and Wales and of Scotland to other and strictly national purposes; and, concurrently therewith, the liberation of those Churches from State control. The Society's present operations are educational, parliamentary, electoral, and legal. It holds numerous meetings, and by lantern-slide and other lectures carries on a vigorous propaganda in all parts of the country. It circulates large numbers of publications. Its monthly organ is The Liberator. The Liberation Society's chief office and depot for publications is 2, Serjeant's Inn, Fleet Street; Secretaries, Mr. John Fisher and Mr. Sydney Robjohns.

The Church Committee for Church Defence and Church Instruction is the organisation on the other side. Its object is to give instruction to the people in town and country in all matters connected with the history of the Church; to combine men and women of every shade of political and religious opinion in the maintenance and support of the Established Church; and generally to encourage the co-operation of the clergy and laity for the promotion of measures conducive to the welfare and efficiency of the Church. No question touching doctrine is entertained at its meetings. Secretary, Mr. T. Martin Tilby, Church House, Westminster.

The Church of England in Wales.

The Prime Minister, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, in a letter to Mr. S. T. Evans, M.P., March 12th, 1906, said: "I adhere to the statement made by me before the election to the Welsh members through Alfred Thomas and Lloyd-George, that Welsh disestablishment remains an integral part of the legislative programme of the Liberal party and will be dealt with at the first available opportunity."

In June 1906 a Royal Commission was appointed, "To inquire into the origin, nature, amount, and application of the temporalities, endowments, and other properties of the Church of England in Wales and Monmouthshire, and into the provision made and work done by the churches of all denominations in Wales and Monmouthshire for the spiritual welfare of the people, and the extent to which the people avail themselves of such provision, and to report thereon." The Commission is constituted as follows: Lord Justice Vaughan Williams (chairman), Lord Hugh Cecil, Sir John Williams, Mr. S. T. Evans, K.C., M.P., Mr. Frank Edwards, M.P., the Rev. A. M. Fairbairn, D.D., the Ven. Archdeacon Owen Evans (Carmarthen), Mr. J. E. Greaves (Lord Lieutenant of Carnarvonshire), and Prof. H. Jones (Professor of Moral Philosophy Glasgow University). Secretary, Mr. R. M. Thomas, Town Clerk, Carmarthen. The Commission began its sittings on Oct. 5th.

Distilleries, United Kingdom. In the year ended Sept. 30th, 1905, there were 188 distilleries at work in the United Kingdom—8 in England, 153 in Scotland, and 27 in Ireland. There were 49,214,165 proof gallons of home-made spirits distilled in 1905-6—12,750,749 in England, 23,812,839 in Scotland, and 12,650,577 in Ireland. Of these 32,486,958 proof gallons were retained for consumption in the United Kingdom, and 7,049,798 proof gallons were exported; while 8,228,435 proof gallons of Colonial and foreign spirits were imported, of which 1,197,181 gallons were re-exported. The consumption per head of the population in 1905-6 was '90 proof gallons. The materials used in distilleries in the year ended Sept. 30th, 1905, were 1,158,644 qrs. of malt; 1,081,541 qrs. of unmalted grain; 975,567 cwt. of molasses; 3443 cwt. of glucose; 656 cwt. of sugar; and 8394 cwt. of other materials. The spirit duty paid in 1905-6 was £17,765,352. The rate of duty has been 11s. per gallon since March 6th, 1900.

Dr. Barnardo's Homes: National Incorporated Association. The work of this Association was begun in the year 1866 by Dr. Barnardo, at that time a young medical student attached to the London Hospital. Dr. Barnardo died on Sept. 10th, 1905, at the age of 60, leaving the Homes to the management of a Council, by whom Mr. William Baker, M.A., LL.B., was subsequently elected as Honorary Director. From the first the central principle of the Institutions has been, as it is now: No destitute child, boy or girl, ever refused admission, irrespective of age, creed, nationality, or physical defects. There are 4 Mission Branches, and 140 distinct Homes, 5 in Canada, 1 in Jersey, 99 in the English counties, and the remainder in London. Industrial training is imparted to the older boys and girls, 900 young people being at all time under training in well-equipped workshops, etc. An Emigration agency furnishes an important adjunct to the work; 18,429 trained boys and girls have so far been emigrated. About 8000 boys and girls are at present under the care of the Institutions, and 61,332 young people, of all ages, from infancy to the threshold of adult age, have passed through the Homes. The daily cost for food alone amounts to £240.

The Homes were incorporated in April '90. Head Offices, 18 to 26, Stepney Causeway, London, E. Hon. Secretary, George Code, Esq.

Dog Licences. There were 1,550,290 dog licences issued in England in 1905-6 and 115,249 in Scotland. The numbers of certificates of exemption issued were 277,428 in England, and 69,611 in Scotland. No licence is required in Ireland. For Dogs Act, 1906, see SESSION.

Douglas, Lieut-Gen. G. W., C.B. Second Military Member of the Army Council and Adjutant-General to the Forces, was b. in 1850. He joined the 92nd Highlanders in '69, and served with them in the Afghan and Boer wars, taking part in the action of Charasiah and the march to Kandahar. He was D.A.A. and Q.M.G. during the Suakin expedition in '84, and then served at Aldershot, as brigadier-major, '93-5, and as Assistant Adjutant-General '95-8. He went out to South Africa on Sir R. Buller's staff as A.A.G., and was Chief Staff Officer to Lord Methuen, being mentioned in despatches for his part in the battle of Magersfontein. He was then given the command of the 9th Infantry Brigade, and subsequently commanded a column and was promoted major-general. Appointed to the command of the 1st Infantry Brigade at Aldershot in 1901, of the 2nd Division of the Aldershot Army Corps 1902, and Adjutant-General Feb. 13th, 1904. Address: 17, Basil Street, London, S.W.

Doumer, Paul, French politician, was b. at Aurillac, March 22nd, 1857. First a metal-worker, then an assistant-teacher, he drifted into journalism, took his degree of licencié en droit, and eventually made his début in politics in '83. As chef de cabinet to M. Floquet, when the latter was President of the Chamber, M. Doumer studied in a good school. His first office was Minister of Finance in the Bourgeois Cabinet ('90), when he introduced an income-tax scheme, which, however, failed. When the Cabinet fell he accepted the governorship of Indo-China from M. Méline. His good work in the French Asiatic colonies (on which he published an exhaustive book in 1904) is now admitted on all hands. He resigned to return to political life, and in 1902 was elected Deputy for the Aisne, became President of the Budget Commission, and was elected President of the Chamber in 1905. He was a candidate for the Presidency against M. Fallières in 1906. After his defeat he declined to stand for re-election as President of the Chamber.

Dowden, Edward, M.A., LL.D., D.C.L., Litt.D. Professor of English Literature at Dublin University. He was b. at Cork in 1843, and ed. privately and at Dublin Univ., and in '67 was appointed to the chair he now fills at that University. He was Clark Lecturer in English Literature at Trin. Coll., Cambridge, '93-6, Commissioner of National Education for Ireland '96-1901, and is a Trustee of the National Library of Ireland. His contributions to literature are numerous, and include "Shakespeare: his Mind and Art," an "Introduction to Shakespeare," "Studies in Literature," lives of Shelley and Southey, a "History of French Literature," and editions of many of the English classics. Highfield House, Rathgar, co. Dublin.

Doyle, Sir A. Conan, the grandson of John Doyle, the famous political caricaturist "H. B.," was b. at Edinburgh in 1859, and ed. at Stonyhurst and in Germany. In '76 he commenced to study medicine at the Edinburgh University, and remained there for five years.

From '82 till '90 he practised his profession at Southsea, writing all the while various short stories, some of which have been since published under the title of "The Captain of the Polestar." After "A Study in Scarlet," "Micah Clarke," and "The Sign of Four," came "The White Company," which led to the final abandonment of medicine for literature. "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," and "The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes," formed a brilliant series of detective stories. In '94 he wrote a short play, "A Story of Waterloo," successfully produced by Sir Henry Irving. "The Exploits of Brigadier Gerard," and "Rodney Stone," in '96, "Uncle Bernac" in '97, "The Tragedy of the Korosko," a volume of poems ("Songs of Action") in '98, "A Duet" in '99, "The Hound of the Baskervilles" in 1902, and "The Adventures of Gerard" in 1903. He volunteered for service in the Transvaal War, and in 1900 gave his medical services for some months in the hospitals there, afterwards publishing a history of the war, entitled "The Great Boer War." Knighted June 26th, 1902. Hon. I.L.D. Edin. 1905. Address: Undershaw, Hindhead, Surrey.

Drago Doctrine. See PAN AMERICAN CONFERENCE.

DRAMA, THE, 1906.

Comparatively few productions, save those of a musical character, enjoyed any remarkable popularity on the London stage in 1906. The chief theatrical success was won by the practised hand of Mr. A. W. Pinero, who, with "His House in Order" (St. James's), maintained his position as the leading dramatist of the day. Mr. H. A. Jones tried his luck with one venture, "The Heroic Stubbs" (Terry's), but this failed to please the critical public; another new play by him, "The Hypocrites," was produced in the autumn in New York, and met with great approval, but London theatre-goers had not the opportunity of seeing it. There were several interesting Shakespearian revivals, notably that of "The Winter's Tale" (His Majesty's), which was a superb production. During the Shakespeare birthday festival at his theatre, Mr. Tree gave attractive performances of "The Tempest," "King Henry IV." (Part I.), "Twelfth Night," "Hamlet," "The Merry Wives of Windsor," and "Julius Cæsar."

Miss Ellen Terry celebrated her stage jubilee on April 28th, by appearing in the afternoon at the Adelphi as Francesca in "Measure for Measure," and at night at the Court as Lady Cicely Waynflete in "Captain Brassbound's Conversion." The previous evening there was a special performance at His Majesty's of "The Merry Wives of Windsor," in which she took the part of Mistress Page. Her benefit at Drury Lane (June 12th) resulted in a profit of £5783.

Foreign Players in London.

The Royalty was reopened on Jan. 4th for a season of French plays performed by Parisian actresses and actors, the first piece being Pailleron's "La Souris," in which Madame Réjane appeared as Pepa. On May 25th Edmond Rostand's "Les Romanesques" was given by M. Coquelin and M. Jean Coquelin. Other interesting productions were Alphonse Daudet's "L'Arlésienne," June 4th; Sardou's "La Piste," June 28th; and Georges Henriot's "L'Enquête," July 23rd, in which M. Antoine made his farewell appearance in England as a professional actor.

Madame Jane Hading acted in several attractive pieces at the Coronet, notably in Maurice Donnay's "Le Retour de Jérusalem," June 15th.

At the Great Queen Street Theatre a number of interesting plays were performed by a company selected from some of the leading German theatres. These included many of Hermann Sudermann's popular dramas and Schiller's "Maria Stuart," which was revived March 9th.

Dublin, The Most Rev. J. F. Peacocke, Archbishop of, is the son of Mr. George Peacocke, M.D., and was b. in 1835. He was ed. at Trinity College, Dublin, where he graduated B.A. (Senior Moderator in History and English Literature) in '58, won the Regius Professor of Divinity's first premium, proceeded M.A. in '63, B.D. '77, and D.D. '83, and was ordained deacon '58 and priest '59. After holding several curacies he was appointed canon of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, in '75. He was incumbent of St. George, Dublin, '73-'78, and rector of Monkstown from '78 to '94. In '93 he was appointed Professor of Pastoral Theology in Trinity College, Dublin, and in the next year he was consecrated Bishop of Meath. On the death of Lord Plunket, in '97, he was elected by the Bench of Bishops to succeed him as Archbishop. The Palace, Dublin.

Dubost, Antonin, President of the French Senate, succeeded M. Fallières in that position in 1906, as M. Fallières formerly succeeded M. Loubet. B. at Abresle (Rhône), April 6th, 1844, he began his political career as a Republican journalist under the Second Empire. Since '71 he has occupied various official and political posts. Member of the Chamber of Deputies from '80-'97, M. Dubost then entered the Senate. He was Minister of Justice in the Casimir-Perier Cabinet '93-4. For many years he was rapporteur of the Finance Commission of the Senate, in which position he fought unceasingly for economy. M. Dubost, who in politics is a member of the Republican Union, was Vice-President of the Senate when the presidency of that assembly was vacated by M. Fallières.

Durand, Sir Henry Mortimer, G.C.M.G., K.C.S.I., K.C.I.E., H.M. Ambassador at Washington, was b. 1850, and is the second son of the late Major-Gen. Sir H. M. Durand, R.E. Ed. at Blackheath School and Eton House, Tonbridge, he entered the Indian Civil Service by examination in '70, and went out to Bengal as assistant-magistrate and collector '73. He was soon appointed to the Indian Foreign Department, and became assistant-secretary. In '79 he served through the Kabul campaign as Political Secretary to Lord Roberts; was appointed Under-Secretary of the Foreign Department '80, and Secretary '84-'94. In '93 he negotiated the "Durand Agreement" with the Ameer of Afghanistan on the frontier difficulties. British Minister to Persia, '94; Ambassador at Madrid, 1900. On the death of Sir Michael Herbert in 1903 he was selected to succeed him at Washington, but his approaching retirement was announced in Nov. 1906. In '75 Sir Mortimer married Ella, daughter of Mr. Teignmouth Sandys.

Duse, Eleonora, Italian actress of the first rank, was b. at Vigevano Oct. 3rd, 1859. She appeared about '80 on the Italian, chiefly Roman stage, as leading lady in the plays of Dumas and Sardou, but afterwards played parts of greater depth. She earned golden opinions by her combined force and gracefulness, in '92 appearing at Vienna and Berlin, in '93 at New York, and her recent visits to England have, by an unanimous accord, re-affirmed her triumphs. Although she appears chiefly in grave parts ("Magda," "Nora," "Adrienne Lecouvreur"), her versatility has also allowed her to please in the lighter vein of Dumas' "Francillon," and as the hostess in Goldoni's "Locandiera." More recently she has produced d'Annunzio's "Gioconda" and "Francesca da Rimini."

E

Earl Marshal, The, is one of the great officers of State, and takes precedence next after the Lord High Constable. The latter office ceased to be hereditary in 1521, since which it has been only temporarily revived for successive coronations. The Lord High Constable and the Earl Marshal were formerly judges of the ancient Court of Chivalry; but when the former office ceased to be hereditary, the sole jurisdiction in questions of honour and arms was vested in the Earl Marshal, who is head of the College of Arms. See p. 16. The office of Earl Marshal is hereditary in the family of the Duke of Norfolk.

Early Closing Association and Traders' Parliamentary Alliance. Secretary, James A. Stacey; Offices, 21, New Bridge St., E.C.

Ecclesiastical Commissioners, The, owe their origin to the Act 6 and 7 Will. IV., c. 77, which provided that the two Archbishops, the Bishop of London, the Lord Chancellor, Lord President, and First Lord of the Treasury for the time being, as well as a Secretary of State named by the sovereign, with three others therein named, should be of the commission. A subsequent Act added all the remaining bishops in England and Wales, the Chief Justice, and others. The function of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners is to make increased provision out of their common fund (arising from a readjustment of cathedral and episcopal revenues) for the cure of souls in necessitous parishes. The proceedings of the Commissioners are controlled by numerous Acts of Parliament, and various duties have from time to time been imposed upon them—e.g., the formation of new parishes and alteration of boundaries where required, the augmentation and endowment of poor benefices in populous places, the sale and leasing of glebe lands, etc., etc. Since 1840, when the common fund was first created, the Commissioners have augmented or endowed over 6000 benefices. The total increase in the incomes of benefices resulting from the operations of the Commissioners amounts to £1,124,405 per annum. The income for the year ended Oct. 31st, 1905, amounted to £1,571,000, the principal sources of revenue being rents of land, £265,000; rents of house property in London and suburbs, £158,000; tithe and corn rent-charges, £230,000; ground rents, £470,000; mining royalties, £393,000. The expenditure amounted to £284,000, including £62,000 for rates, land tax, etc., £46,000 for management charges, and £103,000 expended on farm buildings, new roads, etc. The balance of £1,288,000, together with the income of £297,000 from invested funds, made the total net revenue carried to the Common Fund £1,585,000. The following payments were made from the Fund:—

Annual payments to about 6000 benefices . . . . .	£ 779,000
Payments to the Bishops . . . . .	103,000
" chapters, vicars
choral, etc. . . . .	150,000
New buildings at Westminster, offices, etc. . . . .	55,000
Grants to meet benefactions and erect parsonage houses . . . . .	90,000
Capital passed to Common Fund to meet new annual charges . . . . .	308,000
Appropriation for endowment and augmentation of benefices . . . . .	300,000
	£1,785,000

Besides those named above the Commissioners are: Earls Brownlow, Egerton of Tatton and Cawdor, Viscount Halifax, Lord Burghclere, Rt. Hons. C. B. Stuart-Wortley, K.C., M.P., J. G. Talbot, M.P., and H. Hobhouse, Sir Lewis Dibdin, D.C.L., C. E. H. Hobhouse, M.P., and A. H. A. Morton. Secretary, Sir A. De Bock Porter, K.C.B. Office, Millbank, Westminster, S.W.

Economics and Political Science, The London School of, was established in 1895 to provide special courses of training suited to the needs of business men, civil and municipal servants, journalists, etc.; it also makes provision, in connection with the British Library of Political Science, for research in economics and political science, by the provision of courses of lectures on methods of investigation, and by the award of studentships varying in value from £25 to £200. The School prepares students for the degrees of B.Sc. and D.Sc. London. Full particulars may be obtained on application to the Secretary of the School, Clare Market, W.C.

ECUADOR.

Ecuador is a republic of equatorial South America, constituted in 1830 by separation from the original republic of Colombia. Under the Constitution of '84, modified in '87 and '97, it is governed by a President elected for four years, with the assistance of a Congress composed of a Senate of 32 members, elected for two years, representing the 16 provinces, and

Chamber of 42 Deputies, representing the people, which is elected every two years. The electors to both Chambers must be adults able to read and write, and holding the Roman Catholic faith. By a law of 1904 the Church and its property are under the control of the State. Primary education is free and obligatory. The foreign commerce centres in Guayaquil (pop. 51,000). The chief products are cocoa, indiarubber, hides, coffee, sugar, and cotton. Ecuador is the largest cocoa-producing country. Panama hats are now made almost exclusively in Ecuador. Gold and other minerals exist in considerable quantities, but the country badly needs opening up. Army about 4350 officers and men, with a National Guard which can be made up to 90,000. Between Ecuador, Peru, and Colombia there have been for some time boundary disputes, at present unsettled. But by a treaty between Ecuador and Colombia signed in Nov. 1904 the Ecuador-Colombia boundary is submitted to the arbitration of the German Emperor.

Area (including the Galapagos Islands, which have an area of 2400 sq. m., pop. 400), 120,000 sq. m.; pop. 1,280,000, of whom nearly 90,000 are Indians. Capital, Quito, pop. 80,000; Guayaquil has a pop. of 70,000. Revenue, 1900, £813,716; 1902, £853,428; 1904, £855,977; expenditure, 1900, £737,513; 1902, £685,426; 1904, £1,052,624; foreign debt (purchased by the Guayaquil and Quito Railway Co., amount outstanding July 31st, 1905, $9,315,000); imports, 1902, £1,444,300; 1903, £1,106,981; 1904, £1,533,817; 1905, £1,573,453; exports, 1902, £1,810,600; 1903, £1,862,635; 1904, £2,328,419; 1905, £1,856,566.

President: Señor Lizardo Garcia (1905-9). A revolution overthrew him, however, in Jan. 1906, and General Alfaro was proclaimed President.

Ministry: Premier, Señor Garcia.—Foreign Affairs, Señor Charles Tovar.—Interior, Señor Gonzalo Cordova.—Public Instruction, Señor Anjel Espinoza.—Finance, Señor Juan Francisco Game.—War, Señor Tomas Larrea.

Minister in Europe, Señor Don E. Dorn y de Alaua (Chargé d'Affaires), 9, Rue de la Bienfaisance, Paris.

Consul General in London, Celso Nevares, 12, Bishopsgate Street Within, E.C.

British Minister and Consul-General, W. N. Beauchlerk, Esq. (resident at Lima, Peru).—Consul at Quito, L. Söderström.—Consul at Guayaquil, Alfred Cartwright.

V. OPPOSITION TO THE EDUCATION ACT, 1902.

I. ENGLAND AND WALES.

Since April 1st, 1900, the central educational authority for England and Wales has been the Board of Education, established by the Board of Education Act, '99. This Board has also vested in it certain educational powers of the Charity Commissioners and of the Board of Agriculture. The Board of Education consists of a President, the Lord President of the Council, His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, the First Commissioner of His Majesty's Treasury, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer. The President is appointed by His Majesty and holds office during his pleasure. The cost of administration, including inspection and examination of schools, was during the financial year 1904-5, £417,370.

The principal officers of the Board are :

President, The Right Hon. Augustine Birrell, K.C., M.P.

Parliamentary Secretary, T. Lough, Esq., M.P.

Permanent Secretary, Robert L. Morant, Esq., C.B.

Accountant-General, John Bromley, Esq., C.B.

Principal Assistant-Secretaries :—Elementary Education Branch, H. M. Lindsell, Esq., C.B.; Secondary Schools Branch, Hon. W. N. Bruce, C.B.; Technology and Higher Education in Science and Art, F. G. Ogilvie, Esq.

Director of Special Inquiries and Reports, H. F. Heath, B.A., Ph.D.

Chief Inspector Elementary Schools, E. G. A. Holmes, Esq.

Chief Inspector Secondary Schools, W. C. Fletcher, Esq.

Chief Inspector Technical Institutes and Evening Schools, C. A. Buckmaster, Esq.

Chief Woman Inspector, The Hon. Maude Lawrence.

The 1902 Act set up 335 local education authorities in the place of 800 school attendance committees, and 2500 School Boards. A separate Act provided for London. See LONDON, ADMINISTRATION OF.

For 1906 Education Bill see SESSION, sect. 31.

Expenditure on Education.

A statement issued in 1906 gave the moneys expended under Parts I. and II. of the Education Act, 1902, by local education authorities for 1904-5, showing the amounts provided from Exchequer grants and from local rates respectively. The totals were as follows :—

1. Primary Education.

The Code for 1905 extended the grants to all scholars who, at the close of the school year, shall not be more than 16 years of age; and it also gave the Local Education Authorities discretion as to admitting or excluding children between the ages of three and five.

The Code for 1906 made important alterations in inspection and in regulations for special subjects, also in examinations for certificates of proficiency. The code also contained references to physical and moral instruction.

According to the latest published statistics (Nov. 1905) there were in England and Wales, under inspection—

14,083 Voluntary (now non-provided) and 6,145 Board (now provided or authority) schools—

Total, 20,285; the former with accommodation for 3,718,321, and the latter for 3,189,197 scholars—total, 6,907,518.

The average attendance was 5,143,277, or a percentage of 85.70 of the number on the register.

Grants to meet expenditure in respect of elementary education, £10,671,420. For education and training of pupil-teachers, £36,539. For training of teachers, £283,744. Allowances and pensions for teachers, £75,879.

Higher Elementary Schools.—According to the last published report there were 29 of these schools, and they received a total grant of £18,968. The number on the registers was 8620, the average attendance 8185. The total number of teachers was 374: viz., 327 certificated (of whom 63 were graduates), 7 uncertificated (but graduates), and 40 other teachers. New Regulations were set out in the 1905 Code. The Board advised that scholars should not be removed from the Elementary School to the Higher Elementary before the age of 12, and that the course in the latter should be 3, or in special cases 4 years.

Other Schools.—Of elementary schools certificated as efficient which do not claim grants, 109 were examined, the average attendance at which was 4061, with 49 certificated and 60 uncertificated teachers. Examinations in drawing and manual instruction were held by the Board of Education in a number of elementary schools not aided by grants.

Physical training for both boys and girls is now an integral part of the curriculum. A Syllabus of Physical Exercises has been drawn up, which is gradually to take the place of the Model Course issued in September 1902, and is expected to be of greater educational value than that which it replaced.

Blind, Deaf, Defective and Epileptic Children.—Under the Elementary Education (Blind and Deaf Children) Act, '93, there were 39 schools and institutions for blind and 54 for deaf children, with accommodation for 1885 blind and 3381 deaf children. The numbers on the books were 1683 and 3248 respectively. Under the Elementary Education (Defective and Epileptic Children) Act, '99, there were 119 day schools and institutions, with accommodation for 5404 children, and 5672 children on the books. In London, Bristol, Birmingham, and Nottingham, voluntary after-care committees have been established, the members of which take over the blind, deaf, and defective children as they leave school, find them work, and generally supervise their welfare.

Teachers and Training Colleges.

Under the provisions of an Order in Council, March 3rd, 1902, a Teachers' Registration Council was constituted for the registration of teachers in two columns, A and B. Those in column A are certificated elementary teachers, and those in column B are teachers (not being elementary teachers) who have obtained a university or equivalent degree or diploma, have had a year's training in pedagogy, have passed an examination in the theory of teaching, and have spent a year as teacher at a recognised school (not being an elementary school). According to the latest returns, about 85,000 names have been entered in column A during the year; and under column B 3289 applications were received, and 3165 teachers registered. Up to October 1905, 20 teachers had been registered in column B under regulation 5(2), which permits of the registration of persons who have proved themselves to be exceptionally qualified teachers, but do not fulfil all the conditions of registration. The Education Bill of 1906, however, proposed to abolish the Council and the registration.

Teaching Staff.—In 1904, in the schools under inspection, there were at work 74,720 certificated teachers (one to every 68'83 children in average attendance), 24,813 pupil-teachers, 40,713 assistant or provisional assistant teachers, and 18,241 additional women teachers.

Training Colleges.—There are 66 training colleges for elementary school teachers under inspection by the Board of Education and in receipt of Government grants: viz., 20 for men, 32 for women, and 14 for both men and women; 47 colleges are residential, and 19 day training colleges. Of the 47 residential colleges 32 are connected with the Church of England; 11 (including one for blind students) undenominational, 2 Wesleyan, and 5 Roman Catholic. The number of resident students was 4695, and of day students 2392. The grant paid for training of teachers was £283,744.

National Union of Teachers.

The National Union of Teachers was founded 1870. Objects: (1) to promote the spread of education; (2) to bring practical knowledge to bear on educational legislation; (3) to unite the school teachers in a strong professional organisation; (4) to watch the interests and advance the welfare of schools and teachers. The Union provides legal advice, defence, and assistance for its members, professional advice and protection against unjust management or inspection of schools. Its organ is the Schoolmaster. Conferences are annually held at Easter. The thirty-seventh annual conference was held at Scarborough, April 16th to 19th, 1906, the President being Mr. T. P. Sykes, M.A. There are now 486 local associations in England and Wales, with 57,586 members. The N.U.T. Examinations Board conducts commercial examinations annually, and issues teachers' diplomas in various subjects. There are Provident Society, Benevolent Fund, Orphan Fund, and Orphan Homes in connection with the Union. Over £20,000 is raised yearly for benevolent purposes. Sec., J. H. Yoxall, M.P. Office, 67 and 71, Russell Square, W.C.

Societies.

National Education Association, established in '89 to promote a system of national education which shall be efficient, progressive, unsectarian, and under popular control. Its constitution and policy are controlled by a council of 300 members, which is elected annually by the subscribers, branches, and affiliated bodies. President, Rt. Hon. A. H. D. Acland; Treasurer, Rt. Hon. Lord Stanley of Alderley; Chairman of Executive Committee, Mr. J. Massie, M.P.; Secretaries, Mr. A. J. Mundella and Mr. T. E. Minshall. Offices, Surrey House, Victoria Embankment, W.C.

National Society for Promoting the Education of the Poor in the Principles of the Established Church, instituted in 1811 and incorporated in 1817. The income for 1905 was £18,666. President, The Archbishop of Canterbury; Secretary, Mr. Talbot Baines. Offices, 19 and 21, Great Peter Street, Westminster.

British and Foreign School Society, instituted in 1808. The income for 1905 was £43,789. President, Rt. Hon. A. H. D. Acland; Secretary, Mr. Alfred Bourne, B.A. Offices, 114, Temple Chambers, Temple Avenue, E.C.

2. Secondary Education.

See PUBLIC SCHOOLS, UNIVERSITIES, and WOMEN, HIGHER EDUCATION OF.

The Regulations for Secondary Schools define a Secondary School eligible to receive grants as one that offers to its scholars, up to and beyond the age of 16, "a general education, physical, mental, and moral, given through a complete graded course of instruction, of wider scope and more advanced degree than that given in Elementary Schools." The curriculum must extend over at least four years, and the pupils must not begin the course under the age of 12. Each school must be under a body of governors, and may not be conducted for private profit. Grants can be earned by each scholar on the scale of 40s., 60s., 80s., and 100s. for the first, second, third, and fourth years of the course respectively, besides special grants for special courses, science and art. The instruction must be "such as gives a reasonable degree of exercise and development to the whole of the faculties, and does not confine this development to a particular channel . . . or to that kind of acquirement which is directed simply at fitting a boy or girl to enter business in a subordinate capacity with some previous knowledge of what he or she will be set to do." The course must be complete—that is, must lead up to a definite standard of acquirement in the various branches of instruction. The minimum provision of instruction recognised by the Board is the four-years' course.

In the Regulations for 1905-6 some important changes are introduced with the view of securing to schools a greater degree of elasticity in framing and working their organisation and curriculum.

Under the Welsh Intermediate Education Act, '89, in the year ending March 31st, 1904, the Treasury grant was claimed by 93 County Schools. Two other schools, not entitled to a grant, were inspected and examined, making a total of 95 schools inspected and examined under the direction of the Central Welsh Board, and comprising 18 schools for boys, 21 for girls, 47 dual and 9 mixed schools. The Education Act, 1902, does not affect the schemes made under the Welsh Intermediate Education Act, except by providing that the new Local Education Authority shall, in the case of each county and county borough, be substituted for the County Governing Body constituted by the scheme.

Inspection of Schools.—The number of schools inspected under the Board of Education Act, '99, in 1904 was 100, as compared with 135 in the previous year. Of these 17 were proprietary schools, 21 private schools, 59 schools for boys, 27 schools for girls, 14 for boys and girls, 67 schools receiving grants under regulations of the Board for Secondary Schools. Similar inspections, under arrangements sanctioned by the Treasury, and beginning Aug. 1st, 1904, were carried out in 62 other schools.

Associations and Societies.

For many years, the only professional body for expressing the ideas of educationists was the College of Preceptors. There have since been founded:

Head Masters' Conference (1870), representing the chief endowed schools of the country—Sec., W. A. Evans, 12, King's Bench Walk, Temple, E.C.

Incorporated Association of Head Masters—Sec., H. Bendall, M.A., 37, Norfolk Street, Strand, W.C.

Incorporated Association of Assistant Masters in Secondary Schools—Sec., J. G. Lamb, M.A., 27, Great James Street, W.C.

Association of Head Mistresses (incorporated '96)—Sec., Miss Ruth Young, 92, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.

Incorporated Association of Assistant Mistresses in Public Secondary Schools ('84)—Sec., ———, 22, Berners Street, W.

Teachers' Guild ('85)—Gen. Sec., H. B. Garrod, M.A., 74, Gower Street, W.C.

Private Schools Association, Incorporated—Gen. Sec., H. R. Beasley, 9, Bedford Court Mansions, Bloomsbury Street, W.C.

Association of University Women Teachers—Sec., Miss Gruner, 9, Blandford Street, Portman Square, W.; and other similar associations.

Froebel Society—Sec., Mrs. McArthur, 4, Bloomsbury Square, W.C.

Workers' Educational Association (founded August 1903), to promote the higher education of working people primarily by the extension of University teaching. Gen. Sec., Albert Mansbridge, 198, Windsor Road, Ilford, Essex.

Société d'Etude des Professeurs de Français en Angleterre, for promoting Study of the French Language and Literature, 8, Barnard Inn, Holborn, E.C. For Governesses, "Maison des Institutrices Françaises," 18, Lancaster Gate, W. Directrice, Mlle. Lauraint.

National Association for the Promotion of Technical and Secondary Education, 10, Queen Anne's Gate, S.W. Hon. Sec., Sir H. E. Roscoe, F.R.S.; Sec., Frederick Oldman.

3. Technology and Higher Education in Science and Art (including Evening Schools).

The institutions under this head comprise:—

(i.) Secondary Day Schools, Division A (formerly called Schools of Science).

(ii.) Secondary Day Schools, Division B (formerly called Secondary Day Schools simply).

(iii.) Science Classes.

(iv.) Schools of Art; and (v.) Art Classes.

In Division A there were, when the latest statistics were issued, 229 schools, with 32,625 students under instruction. In Division B there were 253 schools. Day science classes in Science and Art were held in 489 schools, with 45,910 scholars, earning a grant of £40,859. Science Examinations were held at 1325 centres, and 18,606 candidates passed first class, 31,015 second class, and 1051 pass. Art Examinations were held in 1334 centres; 53,583 candidates were successful, out of 88,527. Ten Royal Exhibitions (Art), 7 ditto (Science), 6 National Scholarships (Art), 4 Whitworth Scholarships, 30 Whitworth Exhibitions, 16 Royal College of Art Scholarships, 22 National Scholarships (Science), 2 Studentships in Training (Art), 57 ditto (Science), 15 Free Studentships (Art), 6 ditto (Science), and 2 Princess of Wales Scholarships, were awarded.

There were 230 Schools of Art, in which 52,631 students were under instruction; and the number of students attending the annual examinations was 20,774. The total grants to Schools of Art amounted to £55,481.

Evening Schools.

According to the latest report published, the Evening Schools (inspected under the minute of July 1901), which earned a grant in 1904, numbered 5,579; masters, 18,362; mistresses, 7,135—total, 25,517; boys and men, 422,478; girls and women, 274,404—total, 696,882, of whom 283,819 males and 185,867 females received grants. The number who obtained free instruction was 151,258. The subjects taught were very numerous, including all kinds of manual training, elementary science, French and German, political and domestic economy, horticulture, agriculture, etc., etc. A large number of the scholars took only one subject each, and others only two or three subjects. Of the students more than half were between the ages of 15 and 21. The total grant paid by the Board was £304,962, or an average of 12s. 11d. per scholar.

Museums, Colleges, etc.

Considerable progress has been made with the new Museum buildings. 313 students attended the Royal College of Science, of whom 170 were free Government students. Chemistry was studied by 121; mathematics, 114; Mechanics, 81; Biology, 24; Geology, 86; Metallurgy, 48; and Mining, 45. In the Royal College of Art the students numbered 117 men and 52 women—total, 169.

Commercial Education.

The Oxford and Cambridge Schools Examination Board, after conferring with representatives of the Chambers of Commerce, have adopted a scheme under which certificates are granted for proficiency in commercial knowledge preparatory to entering upon a mercantile career. A scheme for junior and higher commercial education has been drafted by the committee of the London Chamber. All information in connection with future examinations, past papers, etc., can now be obtained at the offices of the London Chamber of Commerce (q.v.), Botolph House, Eastcheap, E.C. The Society of Arts (John Street, Adelphi, W.C.) conducts commercial examinations annually in more than 300 London and provincial centres. At King's College, the City of London School, the Central Foundation Schools (under the control of the Charity Commissioners), the Y.M.C.A. (Aldersgate Street branch), and the Polytechnic Y.M.C.I., among other institutions in London, special provision has been made for a course of education in accordance with the scheme of the London Chamber. A faculty of Economics (including commerce and industry) has been established in the University of London, and a new development has been given to the courses in higher commercial subjects at the London School of Economics. A special commercial department has been established at University College School. The curriculum of the school extends over three years, and is specially designed to fit pupils for a commercial life.

II. SCOTLAND.

In Scotland, education is under the control of a Committee of Council on Education consisting of—

- The Lord President of the Council.
- The Right Hon. John Sinclair, M.P., Secretary for Scotland (Vice-President).
- The First Lord of the Treasury.
- The Secretary of State for the Colonies.
- The Secretary of State for War.
- The Chief Secretary for Ireland.
- The Right Hon. Thomas Shaw, K.C., M.P. (Lord Advocate).
- The Right Hon. Lord Reay, G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E.
- Secretary, J. Struthers, Esq., C.B., LL.D.
- Assistant Secretaries, G. Todd, I.S.O., and G. Macdonald, LL.D. (in Edinburgh), Esqs.
- Senior Chief Inspector, A. E. Scougal.
- Office, Dover House, Whitehall, Edinburgh.

1. Elementary and Higher Grade Schools.

During the year ending August 31st, 1905, in the Elementary and Higher Grade Schools there were 804,162 scholars on the register, being a percentage of 17·21 to the population. The number of day schools receiving grants was 3189, of which 2882 were public schools, 20 Church of Scotland, 6 Free Church, 66 Episcopal, 201 Roman Catholic, and 69 undenominational and other schools. Of the scholars on the register 14,065 were between 14 and 15, and 8350 above 15. These figures include 14,420 scholars in 121 Higher Grade Schools or Departments, of whom 5053 were under 15 and 4431 between 15 and 17, while 944 were over 17. The average attendance for the whole number was 86·60 per cent., and for the Higher Grade Schools taken separately, 89·15. The Higher Grade Schools provide a regularly organised course of instruction extending over at least three years, and possess a correspondingly more numerous staff and special equipment. The average attendance at first year's course was 7937, at second year's course 4340, and at courses beyond second year 2231. Instruction supplementary to the day school is now provided under the Continuation Class Code. (see below, Secondary Education).

The amount of Parliamentary grants to day schools under inspection was £845,595; and the total cost of maintenance per child in average attendance was £3 3s. 11½d. in public schools, and £2 10s. 9½d. in voluntary schools. Savings banks exist in 118 schools, and school libraries in 1278.

The staff employed in teaching the 696,381 children in the ordinary day schools consisted of 13,506 certificated teachers, 2718 male and 172 female assistant and 4191 pupil-teachers, and 12 monitors, besides 98 provisionally certificated teachers—total 20,697. The supply of teachers is drawn mainly from 8 Training Colleges, 3 of which are connected with the Church of Scotland, 3 United Free Church, 1 Episcopal and 1 Roman Catholic. In these training colleges there were 1395 students, of whom 414 were taking advantage of the arrangement by which they might—at the expense of the colleges—attend certain university classes as a part of their curriculum. There is also provision made for a class of students called "King's Students," who receive the chief part of their instruction at the universities. The total number of King's Students in 1905 was 333.

Under the Education of Blind and Deaf-mute Children (Scotland) Act, '90, the school boards pay from £10 to £20 each for the instruction of deaf-mute, blind, and both blind and deaf-mute children. Fourteen institutions not otherwise on the grant list, and 17 ordinary annual-grant schools, with special provision for the instruction of such children, are under inspection in various parts of Scotland. Grants were paid at the rate of £3 3s. in each case for 858 ordinary scholars, and a further grant of £2 2s. each for 857 scholars who had made satisfactory progress in manual instruction. Grants paid for blind and deaf-mute children, £3,931. Grants were also paid, amounting to £931, for 343 defective and epileptic children in 8 schools.

On account of the difficulties in the administration of the Education Acts in the Highlands and the Islands, extra grants, amounting to £10,852, have been paid to 673 out of 701 schools inspected.

2. Secondary and Technical Education.

The number of secondary schools now under inspection is 109, of which 32 are Higher-class Public Schools, 24 Endowed Schools, and 53 schools under voluntary managers who have invited the inspection of the Department. In connection with the inspection of higher schools an important feature is the Leaving Certificate Examination, which is accepted by a large number of university and professional authorities in lieu of preliminary examinations held under their directions. In 1905, the number of candidates for Leaving Certificates was 13,577, and the total of papers taken was 49,809. The cost of inspection of higher-class schools and of the Leaving Certificate Examination is mainly met from the money available under the Education and Local Taxation Account (Scotland) Acts, from which also large grants are made to Higher-class Secondary and Technical Schools, and to Agricultural Education.

The Continuation Class Code now supersedes the Code for Evening Continuation Schools and the Science and Art Directory, and takes cognisance of all forms of specialised instruction. The separate centres were 761 in 1904-5, and 743 in 1905-6. One-fourth of the expenditure for Continuation Classes has to be provided locally, and is derived from the residue allotted to town and county councils under the Local Taxation (Customs and Excise) Acts.

Grants were made to the Agricultural Department of Aberdeen University, the Edinburgh East of Scotland College, and the West of Scotland Agricultural College, for the purpose of fostering the scientific study of agriculture by a select body of students, and also of ensuring the making of the results of scientific research known as widely as possible.

Improvements have been made in the Edinburgh Museum of Science and Art, which is now called the Royal Scottish Museum. The staff has been increased, the entrance fee abolished, and the museum is now opened for three hours on Sunday afternoons. Additions have also been made to the museum library.

III. IRELAND.

In Ireland, elementary education is under the control of twenty Commissioners of National Education, with an office in Dublin. Mr. W. J. M. Starkie, M.A., Litt.D., is Resident Commissioner, and Messrs. P. E. Lemass, I.S.O., and W. J. Dilworth are Secretaries. Chief Inspectors, A. Purser and J. J. Hynes.

For secondary education there are the Intermediate Education Board and the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction.

1. Elementary Education.

The Commissioners of National Education in Ireland, in the 72nd report, state that in 1905 there were 8659 schools in operation, with an average of 742,457 pupils on the register, and an average daily attendance of 500,897, of whom 19,628 were above 15 years of age. The daily attendance showed an average of 67.4 per cent. of the number on the register. The religious denominations of the pupils were: Roman Catholics, 549,234, or 74.5 per cent.; the late Established Church, 88,617, or 12 per cent.; Presbyterians, 83,557, or 11.3 per cent.; Methodists, 9591, or 1.3 per cent.; other denominations, 6753, or 0.9 per cent. In 1907 schools under Roman Catholic teachers exclusively, 5.3 per cent. of the pupils are Protestants; in 823 schools under Protestant teachers exclusively, 8.7 per cent. of the pupils are Catholics; and in 32 schools under Roman Catholic and Protestant teachers conjointly, 69.5 of the pupils are Roman Catholics and 30.5 per cent. Protestants. There are 5889 schools attended solely by one denomination; 4328 schools with 386,383 pupils being Roman Catholic, and 1561 schools with 120,623 pupils Protestant. Exclusive of Model and Poor-Law Union Schools (where the management is official), there are 7552 under clerical management and 884 under lay management. Besides the ordinary schools, there are 30 model schools, with an average of 9256 pupils on the rolls and a daily attendance of 6863. Convent and Monastery Schools number 382, with an average of 111,670 pupils on the rolls and an average daily attendance of 79,799 or 71.5 per cent. of the number on the rolls. 134 Workhouse Schools were in operation, with 4188 on the rolls and an average attendance of 3437. Grants were made to 631 Evening Schools, in which most of the pupils are over 14 years of age, and many are adults.

The gross total of teachers was 13,610, of whom 8189 were principals, 4338 assistants, and the rest junior, manual, and industrial teachers. This number does not include convent and monastery teachers, and the teachers of workhouse schools. The percentage of trained teachers to the total was 60.3. There are 7 Training Colleges receiving grants.

The aggregate expenditure on the schools from all sources was £1,417,338, giving an average of £2 19s. 2d. for each child in attendance. Of this amount, £112,563 was received from local sources. The grants to training colleges amounted to £63,051.

As the residue under the Local Taxation Act is not available for technical education, the Board of Education for England and Wales continues to allow the Irish science and art schools and classes to participate in the national competition and examinations in science and art under the Board. Local authorities also make grants out of rates under the Technical Instruction Act, '89, and the Public Libraries Acts.

2. Secondary Education.

A Board of twenty Commissioners of Education (ten appointed by the Lord Lieutenant and ten by Local Boards of Education) administer certain educational endowments producing a total annual revenue of £7838. This sum is variously apportioned to eleven secondary schools, with a total accommodation of 1232 and a total number on the rolls of 679—a decrease of 2 on that of the previous year.

The Intermediate Education Board is an examination Board, administering a large original endowment and an annual income derived from Local Taxation Duties. During 1905, 7018 boys and 2659 girls—total 9677—presented themselves for examination held at 259 centres. There passed 4942 boys and 1723 girls—total 6665: a percentage of 70.4 boys 64.8 girls, 68.9 boys and girls. Among the subjects in which the pupils were examined were Greek, Latin, English Composition and Literature, History and Geography, French, German, Irish, Italian, Spanish, Mathematics, Book-keeping, Shorthand, Music, Experimental Science, Drawing, etc. The cost of administration was £4557, of examinations £13,479, rewards £10,227, school grant £54,271.

IV. REFORMATORY AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS.

Great Britain.

There are, according to the 49th annual report, for 1905, of H.M. Inspector of Reformatory and Industrial Schools for Great Britain, 215 such schools—viz., 44 reformatory, 135 industrial, 14 truant and 23 day industrial schools, of which 2 are reformatory, and 8 industrial school ships. Of the industrial schools, 20 are managed by county or borough authorities. The rest, as well as the reformatories, except the Glasgow Girls' Reformatory, are under voluntary management. The truant and all the day industrial schools are under the new education authorities. There were 25,833 (21,072 boys and 4761 girls) under sentence of detention in reformatories and industrial schools at the close of 1905, or a decrease of 775 boys and of 54 girls as compared with 1904. In addition there were 3305 children—128 fewer than in 1904—attending day industrial schools, and 236 children on licence from those schools. The amount expended on day industrial schools in 1905 was £39,919, as against £38,759 in 1904; on reformatory schools £128,779, as against £127,287 in 1904; and on industrial schools (including truant schools) £440,951, as against £437,475 in 1904. The amount recovered from parents, and in Scotland from parents and parochial boards, during the year for reformatory schools was £7341, a decrease of £154 on previous year, and for industrial schools £21,366, a decrease of £409 on previous year. The figures show that the number of children in ordinary industrial schools remains almost stationary, but the number of children in truant schools shows a downward tendency.

Ireland.

In Ireland there are 2 reformatory schools for Roman Catholic boys, 2 for Roman Catholic girls, and 1 for Protestant boys (none for girls). There were under detention in these schools, at the end of 1905, 572, showing an increase of 13 boys and a decrease of 3 girls, as compared with 1904. Of these 408 were Roman Catholic boys, 39 Roman Catholic girls, and 125 Protestant boys. The number committed to reformatory schools during the year was 171, an increase of 42 over the previous year. The total cost, covered by Treasury grants, local rates, other sources, and industrial profits, was £14,391, an increase of £117. There are in Ireland 68 industrial schools, with a total number of children in detention of 8323, of whom 3293 are Roman Catholic boys, 4099 Roman Catholic girls, 562 Protestant boys, and 369 Protestant girls. The cost of these industrial schools during 1905 was £159,518, a decrease of £3691. The income is derived from Treasury grants, local rates, other sources, and industrial profits. Among "other sources" were contributions from parents, £484 to reformatory and £1139 to industrial schools.

VI. OPPOSITION TO THE EDUCATION ACT, 1902.

Passive Resistance Movement.

Many Nonconformists who opposed the Education Act of 1902 decided, after it was carried, to refuse to pay that part of the rate which was more or less definitely allocated to the support of denominational schools. They were given the name of Passive Resisters. The statistics of the movement up to Nov. 1906 are as follows:—Summonses (provinces) 73,112, (London) 5130; sales (provinces) 2417, (London) 79; leagues, 648; imprisonments, once, 171; twice, 47; thrice, 14; four times, 6; five times, 4; and there are those who have been imprisoned six, eight, and nine times.

The National Passive Resistance Committee is established to protect the legal interests of Passive Resisters and to extend the movement. Chairman, Rev. John Clifford, M.A., D.D., B.Sc.; Treasurers, Mr. J. Johnston Haye, and Dr. John Massie, M.A.; Secretary, Mr. James Everett. Office, 33, Memorial Hall, Farringdon Street, E.C.

The West Riding Judgment, delivered by the Court of Appeal on Aug. 8th, 1906, attracted universal attention. The circumstances were as follows: Since the passing of the Education Act, 1902, the West Riding County Council, taking the view that it was not obliged under that Act to make any contribution out of the rates towards the cost of giving denominational instruction in non-provided schools, has deducted from the salaries which it would otherwise have paid to the teachers in such schools a sum which, in its opinion, corresponded to the value of the teachers' services whilst engaged in giving such instruction. An order was obtained in the King's Bench Division directing, at the instance of the Board of Education, the issue of a writ of mandamus to the County Council, ordering them to pay the sums they had thus deducted. The County Council appealed; and the judgment of the Court of Appeal, given by the Master of the Rolls and Lord Justice Farwell, Lord Justice Moulton dissenting, was that the appeal must be allowed. On Oct. 15th, 1906, it was announced that the Government had decided to carry the case to the House of Lords in order definitely to clear up the legal situation, and to settle the numerous points of difficulty arising from the decision of the Court of Appeal.

EDWARD VII.

Edward VII., "by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India," was b. at Buckingham Palace, Nov. 9th, 1841; created Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester on Dec. 4th, 1841; baptised at St. George's Chapel, Windsor Castle, Jan. 25th, '42. Ed. at Christ Church, Oxford (D.C.L. '68), and at Trin. Coll., Camb. (LL.D.), and Edin. Univ. (LL.D.); also LL.D. Dublin ('68), and Calcutta ('74). Admitted to the Middle Temple, called to the bar and to the bench of that Society (Oct. 31st, '61). His Majesty was an Elder Brother of Trinity House; also Grand Master of the United Grand Lodge of Freemasons of England ('74-1901); President of the Society of Arts and of St. Bartholomew's Hospital.

He married (March 10th, '63) H.R.H. the Princess Alexandra Caroline Mary Charlotte Louisa Julia, eldest daughter of Christian IX., King of Denmark, and sister of the ex-Empress of Russia and the King of Greece. On her marriage the House of Commons voted her an annual allowance of £10,000, and £30,000 in the event of her surviving the Prince. The King and Queen celebrated their silver wedding, '88. There have been six children born of the marriage—the Duke of Clarence and Prince Alexander, who have both died, the Duke of Cornwall and York, now Prince of Wales, who is the heir-apparent to the throne, Princess Louise, Duchess of Fife (who was given the title of Princess Royal in 1905), Princess Victoria, and Princess Maud, married in '96 to Prince Karl of Denmark (now King of Norway).

In the winter of '71, while staying with his family at his country seat, Sandringham, Norfolk, His Majesty was attacked with typhoid fever, which it was feared would prove fatal, but after several weeks' prostration he recovered, and on Feb. 27th, '72, he attended a public thanksgiving in St. Paul's Cathedral. He visited Canada and the United States in '60, and the Holy Land in '62, and went on a tour through India in '75-6. In company with the Queen he made a tour through Ireland ('85), and met with a cordial reception. He evinced an active interest in the promotion of the series of Exhibitions held at South Kensington, and succeeded in establishing the Imperial Institute. In '93 he became a member of the Poor Law Commission; and in '94 did important service to his country at St. Petersburg, whither he went on the death of the Czar in November. During '96 His Majesty won the Derby and the St. Leger, the former victory exciting a scene of unparalleled enthusiasm at Epsom. In the Jubilee Celebrations of '97 His Majesty took a prominent part, especially in regard to the Prince of Wales's Hospital Fund for London. A young man named Sipido shot at His Majesty as he was leaving the Nord Station at Brussels (April 4th, 1900), en route for Denmark. Fortunately the bullet missed the King.

On the death of H.M. Queen Victoria (Jan. 22nd, 1901), His Majesty ascended the throne as King Edward VII., took the oath (23rd), and was proclaimed with the usual ceremonies (24th). The Coronation Service was fixed for June 26th, 1902, but on Tuesday, June 24th, it was announced that the King was suffering from perityphlitis, and an operation was immediately performed. On his recovery the Coronation Service took place on Aug. 9th in Westminster Abbey. A Royal Progress through London on Oct. 25th was followed by a Thanksgiving Service at St. Paul's on the 28th. The year 1903 was one of Royal visits. The King was entertained as the guest of King Carlos at Lisbon, of the King of Italy at Rome, of the President of the French Republic at Paris, and of the Emperor of Austria-Hungary at Vienna. Return visits were made by President Loubet and the King and Queen of Italy. Scotland and Ireland were also visited. A Levée and a Court were held at Holyrood for the first time in more than eighty years. On June 5th, 1905, the King of Spain arrived on a visit to the King, which lasted till the 10th. In November H.M. entertained the King of Greece on a State visit at Windsor. In December H.M. invited Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman to form an Administration on the resignation of Mr. Balfour.

The King's Civil List was settled by the Civil List Act, 1901. The details of the Civil List and of the annuities paid to members of the Royal Family are given under FINANCE, NATIONAL, on p. 156. The Queen receives £33,000 as her share of the Privy Purse. The contingent annuity of £30,000 formerly provided for Her Majesty the Queen Consort in the event of her surviving His present Majesty was increased to £70,000; and a contingent annuity of £30,000 was provided for H.R.H. the Princess of Wales in the event of her surviving H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. The King, in addition to his Civil List, receives the revenues of the Duchy of Lancaster (£63,000 in 1905), and the heir apparent those of the Duchy of Cornwall (£72,393 in 1903). Balmoral and Osborne were bequeathed to the King by the late Queen, and His Majesty owns Sandringham. Balmoral and Sandringham are maintained out of the Privy Purse, but Osborne (Osborne House was given by the King to the nation in 1902) is charged upon the Civil List. His Majesty pays income tax on the Privy Purse, as did the late Queen.

Efficiency League, founded 1903, "to raise the standard of duty among public servants."

President, Mr. Arnold White; Hon. Sec., Mr. W. H. Charnley; Office, Board-room, Lancaster Avenue, Manchester.

EGYPT.

Ruler.

Abbas Hilmi, eldest son of the late Tewfik Pasha, succeeded his father as the seventh Viceroy and third Khedive of Egypt Jan. 7th, 1892. He was b. July 14th, '74, and at the time of his father's death was studying at the Theresianum Academy at Vienna, where he had been for five years. He married Princess Ikbal Hanem, and has issue by her four daughters, a son and heir, Prince Mohammed Abdul Mouneim, born Feb. 20th, '99, and another son. His brother, Mohamed Ali, was born in '75. He has an annual allowance of £100,000. Received the "Royal Victoria Chain," June 14th, 1905.

Government.

Egypt is nominally dependent on Turkey. From '79 to '83 the country was under the dual control of France and Great Britain, but in the latter year Great Britain intervened after Arabi Pasha's rebellion, and since then has practically governed the country. The British occupation, at first regarded as temporary, has by force of circumstances become firmly established, and the predominant position of Great Britain was formally recognised by France by the Anglo-French Agreement (signed April 8th, 1904). The French Government also assented to very considerable modifications in the international arrangements established in Egypt for the protection of foreign bondholders, the modifications being contained in a draft Khedivial Decree annexed to the Agreement. H.M. Government declared their adhesion to the Treaty of 1888 providing for the neutrality of the Suez Canal in time of war. The Agreement was made binding for thirty years, with a provision for the extension of the period for five years at a time, unless this stipulation should be expressly denounced at least one year in advance. Germany and other Powers, including Austria-Hungary, Italy, and Russia, formally approved the Khedivial Decrees, and undertook not to obstruct the action of Great Britain in Egypt; while H.M. Government gave an assurance to those Powers that their commerce with Egypt should enjoy most-favoured-nation treatment for thirty years.

The Earl of Cromer is H.M. Agent at Cairo, and has a seat in the Council of Ministers, in which, with the Khedive, rests the real legislative authority. There are, however, provincial boards for local affairs, and a General Assembly and Legislative Council for national affairs, but with limited powers. The General Assembly consists of the Ministry, the Legislative Council, and 46 popularly elected members; its consent is required to new taxes, and it must be summoned every two years. The Legislative Council consists of 30 members, of whom 14 are nominated, and its powers are chiefly consultative. The judicial system is somewhat complex. The Consular Courts try cases of crime brought against foreigners; the Native Courts, instituted '84-9, are occupied with civil actions between natives, and crimes by natives; and there are also courts of religious law for Mahometans. The Mixed Tribunals were instituted in '75 as a substitute for the Capitulations, under which each country transacted its legal business in its own Consulate. They deal with civil actions between persons of different nationalities, or between natives and foreigners, and to some extent with criminal offences of foreigners. They were set up for a period of five years, and ever since have been renewed periodically for periods of five years, the present term ending in 1910. In his Annual Report issued in 1906 Lord Cromer set out important proposals for dealing with the question of the Capitulations, and for providing effective legislative machinery with the necessary safeguards for the protection of the interests of foreigners in Egypt. The chief religion is that of Islam, the Moslems numbering nearly 9,000,000, but there are about 730,000 Christians, of whom 608,000 are Copts with the Patriarch of Alexandria at their head. In '07 only 5.8 per cent. of the population over 7 years of age could read and write. The remainder were illiterate, but progress is being made. There are many Government Coptic and Mahometan schools.

Egyptian Irrigation.

The history and description of the great Assiout barrage and Assouan dam and of the Ziftah barrage have been given in previous editions. Lord Cromer's report for 1905, issued in 1906, stated that during the year in June and July the river levels were the lowest ever recorded, and that it was impossible to overestimate the benefits derived from the Assouan reservoir. The province of Keneh had benefited less than the others, and it had been decided to erect a barrage at Esneh at an estimated cost of £1,000,000. On the projects of the Upper Nile Lord Cromer referred to a special report by Sir Wm. Garstin. The Soudan-Egyptian Irrigation Service was formed in Dec. 1904. Mr. Dupuis was placed at the head of it, and a vote of £24,000 was placed to its credit in the estimates of 1905. So far the work has not proceeded much beyond organisation, but Sir Wm. Garstin thought an excellent start had been made. From the work done in the Gezireh Mr. Dupuis concluded that a great canal for irrigation there is a feasible undertaking. During the year a valuable book, "The Physiography of the River Nile and its Basin," by Captain H. G. Lyons, Director of the Egyptian Survey Department, was published at Cairo.

Suez Canal.

This waterway is the property of an Egyptian company, authorised by the Viceroy in 1856, and confirmed by the Sultan ten years later, the concession having been granted to the late M. de Lesseps for 99 years from Nov. 1869. The general management is conducted from Paris, and the statutes are framed in accordance with French Company Law. In 1875 the British Government purchased the Khedive's shares for nearly £4,000,000 sterling. The affairs of the Canal are carried on by an Administrative Council of 32 members, of whom 10 are British, 3 of the latter being nominated by the Government. At a meeting of the Company at Paris on June 11th, 1906, the dividend on the ordinary shares was declared at 141 fr. net (£5 12s. 9d.), being the same as the previous year) or about 28 per cent. on the 500-fr. shares. The sum of 3,000,000 fr. (£120,000) was added to the reserve fund. During 1905, 4116 vessels of all classes passed through the Canal, against 4237 in 1904. The percentage of British vessels and their net tonnage decreased in 1905, being 60.4 and 63.6 against 63.2 and 65.9 in 1904. The percentage of German vessels and their net tonnage was 14.6 and 16.1 respectively, as compared with 12.8 and 14.7 in 1904; while the percentage of net tonnage of the other maritime nations was practically stationary.

Army.

All the inhabitants are liable for service in the Egyptian army—6 years in the army, 5 in the police, and 4 in the reserve, and there are always about 150,000 young men on the rolls for conscription; but the burden is very light, and the men are all selected. The peace strength is about 9000 officers and men. The cavalry are recruited from the fellahen of the Delta. The arm is the Martini-Henry. In the Soudanese battalions the service is voluntary. The artillery is the force that shows most markedly the impress of the European training. The horse battery has Syrian horses and light Krupp guns. The field batteries have Krupp mountain guns carried by mules, with a second line of camels. There is also a battalion of garrison artillery. The command of all the troops is vested in Major-Gen. Sir Reginald Wingate, with the title of Sirdar. The Intelligence Department reports the strength to be 18,273, including: cavalry, 780; camel corps, 629; Arab battalions, 206; artillery, 1258; infantry, 10,280.

The British force in Egypt was reduced, and, on the estimate of 1906-7, numbers 121 cavalry, 1 garrison battery, 1 company Royal Engineers, 3 infantry battalions and other details—total number of officers and men in Egypt (including Crete) 4008. Owing to the frontier difficulty and internal dangers the garrison has since been increased. The Egyptian Government contributed £100,000 towards the maintenance of the British troops in 1906-7.

Industries, etc.

Length of railways in Egypt proper 2183 miles. Principal products, cotton, sugar, and cereals, about two-thirds of the population being engaged in agriculture. The fellahen, or small cultivators, receive advances from the Agricultural Bank up to £307 10s., or in a few cases to £512 10s., the loans being limited to 50 per cent. of the selling value of the land on which the advance is made. The Government guarantees interest at the rate of 3 per cent. on the Bank's capital, and the Bank charges 9 per cent. interest on its advances to the cultivators. The Bank takes all responsibility, but the Government through its tax-gatherers collects the money due to the Bank with the land tax. The development of the country's commerce and industry in recent years has been most marked, and her prosperity is steadily increasing. But the cultivated area can never extend beyond the region which is capable of being watered by the Nile.

Statistics and Diplomatic.

Area of Egypt (excluding the provinces conquered in the Soudan), 400,000 sq. m., of which about 12,976 sq. m. are settled. Pop. about 9,750,000, including about 113,000 foreigners, of whom 38,000 are Greeks, 24,000 Italians, 20,000 British, and 14,000 French. Cairo has a population of 570,000, and Alexandria of 320,000.

Revenue, 1904, £E13,690,560, 1905, £E14,813,346; expenditure, 1904, £E10,588,473, 1905, £E12,124,822; exports, 1904, £E20,811,040, 1905, £E20,360,285; imports, 1904, £E20,559,588, 1905, £E21,564,076; public debt, £E96,232,280 (£E1 = £1 os. 6½d.). The United Kingdom's share of the import trade was in 1902 36·7 per cent., in 1903 35·3 per cent., in 1904 34 per cent., and in 1905 32·4 per cent.

History, 1906.

Early in the year, after making complaints that the Egyptian troops had occupied ports within Turkish territory in the Sinai peninsula, Taba and other points in Egyptian territory were definitely occupied by Turkish troops, and the British Ambassador at Constantinople demanded that they should be withdrawn. The question was complicated by the fact that the frontier line between the Sinai peninsula and the Turkish vilayets adjoining had not been delimited; but, under a provisional arrangement made in 1892, Taba was clearly Egyptian. The Porte, to gain time, opened negotiations with the Khedive, still keeping its troops at the points named. Finally the British Government demanded that the frontier should be delimited on the basis of the arrangement made in 1892, and that, pending delimitation, Taba should be evacuated (May 3rd). The Turkish Government were given 10 days to comply with the demand, and the Sultan ordered his troops to leave Taba and all other places within Egyptian territory (12th). It was agreed that a mixed commission should settle the frontier line "from Rafah, near El-Arish, towards the south-east in an approximately straight line as far as a point on the Gulf of Akaba, at least 3 miles distant from Akaba." Some excitement was caused amongst the Moslem population of Egypt by this question, their religious sympathies naturally being with the Sultan. One result of it was that the British garrison in Egypt was increased. The frontier agreement was signed (Oct. 1st), the only serious deviation from a straight line between Rafah and Akaba being a small concession to Turkey near Akaba.

An attack on British officers was made by some villagers near Tanta (June 13th). Capt. S. C. Bull was killed and others were injured. An inquiry followed, and a number of natives were tried by a special tribunal, which condemned four of the ringleaders to death and passed sentences of penal servitude and imprisonment on others (27th). Sir Edward Grey, referring to the subject in the House of Commons (July 5th), said that a fanatical feeling had been on the increase in Egypt and in North Africa during the year. He said deliberately, with a full sense of responsibility, that if the House of Commons did anything at that moment to weaken or destroy the authority of the Government in Egypt, they would be face to face with a very serious situation. Matters quieted down considerably late in the year.

The Egyptian Soudan.

By the '96, '97, '98, and '99 campaigns the Government re-established its authority over the provinces in the Soudan, temporarily abandoned in '82 and '83, and during the rule of the Mahdi and the Khalifa. A convention between the British and Egyptian Governments, settling the details for the administration of the Soudan, was signed (Jan. 19th, '99). The supreme military and civil command is vested in a Governor-General appointed by the Khedive with the consent of H.M. Government. The importation and exportation of slaves is absolutely prohibited, and special attention is paid to the enforcement of the Brussels Act of '90 as to the import, sale and manufacture of firearms and distilled or spirituous liquors. Import duties on entering the Soudan are not payable on goods coming from Egyptian territory, but such duties may be levied on goods coming from elsewhere than Egyptian territory, in the case of goods entering the Soudan at Suakin or any other port on the Red Sea littoral, not exceeding the corresponding duties for the time being leviable on goods entering Egypt from abroad. The Soudan has been divided into thirteen provinces—viz., Khartoum, Blue Nile, Dongola, Berber, Senaar, Kassala, Kordofan, White Nile, Bahr-el-Ghazal, Wady Halfa, Suakin, Upper Nile, and Mongalla—each under a Governor who is a British officer of the Egyptian Army. The provinces are divided into districts under Egyptian officers. The civil and criminal codes in force are based on those of India, and a Judicial Commissioner sits at Khartoum, to whom an appeal lies from the provincial tribunals. An educational system is being built up, and there are training colleges for teachers at Khartoum (Gordon Memorial College opened Nov. 1902), Omdurman, and Suakin.

Area estimated at 950,000 sq. m., pop. at 2,000,000. Khartoum has a population of 14,023 and Omdurman 40,000.

The Nile—Red Sea Railway, 331 miles long and 3½ ft. gauge, has been built from Port Sudan, 30 miles north of Suakin, through the province in a south-westerly direction, reaching the mouth of the Atbara River about twenty miles south of Berber, which is on the Nile.

Here it joins the existing line to Khartoum. The new route from Khartoum to the sea is 900 miles shorter than the old route. The work was completed between Aug. 1904 and Jan. 1906, and the cost was £1,375,000. The line was formally opened by Lord Cromer on Jan. 27th, 1906. On March 8th the Sirdar, Sir R. Wingate, opened the Karima—Abu Hamed Railway, 138 miles in length, which opens the Dongola province to the Red Sea and runs east from the Nile to Abu Hamed, where it joins the railway to Berber and Khartoum. This line took 8 months to construct, and cost £250,000 sterling.

Egypt Exploration Fund, The. Founded 1882, for the purpose of historical investigation in Egypt. The work is conducted on the principle of careful examination of all details, and preservation of the objects found in the course of the excavations. The minor antiquities afford valuable evidence as to the history of civilisation by illustrating the influences of Egypt, Assyria, Asia Minor, Syria, Greece, and the peoples of the Mediterranean coasts and islands on one another. After the claims of the National Museum of Egypt have been satisfied, the portable antiquities found are divided between the British Museum and various public collections in Great Britain, America, and the Colonies. The distribution depends mainly on the amount of support contributed by the several districts represented by the museums. Annual illustrated volumes are published, giving the results of each season's work. During the season 1904-5 Prof. W. M. Flinders Petrie excavated at Sinai. The results of his work were exhibited at University College, London, during July. In 1905-6 M. Naville and Mr. H. R. Hall continued excavating the Temple of Mentu-hetep at Deir el Bahri. Early in 1906 the discovery of a Shrine of Hathor was announced. Mr. N. de G. Davies continued his task of copying sculptures and paintings at El Amarna; while Messrs. B. P. Grenfell and A. S. Hunt again went out to Behnesa to search for Greek papyri. In '97 the Society started a Græco-Roman Branch, for the discovery and publication of the remains of classical antiquity and early Christianity in Egypt. There has since appeared the first volume of the Oxyrhynchus Papyri, including a third-century fragment of St. Matthew's Gospel, a poem by Sappho, considerable portions of known and unknown Greek literature, and a long series of official and private documents. A second volume contains historical documents of the first century A.D.; and a third volume deals with the Fayoum Towns and their papyri. Four further volumes have been issued—one on the Tebtunis papyri, two more volumes of the Oxyrhynchus papyri, and one on the Hibeh papyri. In addition to its work of exploration, the Society commenced in '90 an Archæological Survey of Egypt. The object of this survey is to map, plan, photograph, and copy all the most important sites, sculptures, paintings, and inscriptions in the valley of the Nile between Cairo and Assuan. Up to the present time its work has been devoted to the celebrated XIIth-dynasty tombs of Beni Hasan and El Bersheh, to the Old Kingdom tombs at Sheikh Said and El Gebrawi, and to the XVIIIth-dynasty tombs of El Amarna. Fifteen memoirs—viz. Beni Hasan I., II., III. and IV., El Bersheh I. and II., Hieroglyphs, and the Mastaba of Ptah-hetep

I. and II., Sheikh Said, and Deir el Gebrawi I. and II., and El Amarna I., II. and III. have been issued to annual subscribers to the Survey. For the last thirteen years the Fund has also published, under the editorship of Mr. F. Ll. Griffith, an annual Archæological Report on Egypt and Egyptology, containing not only an account of the progress of Egyptology and reports by the Society's explorers, but also papers by experts on Coptic and Græco-Roman research, and full bibliographies. The Report is illustrated, and contains maps and plans. A volume of Coptic Ostraca by Mr. W. E. Crum, and the "Logia Jesou," or Sayings of Christ, and "New Sayings," have also been issued. The Offices of the Fund are at 37, Great Russell Street, W.C. (opposite the British Museum). There is also an office at Pierce Building, Copley Square, Boston, Mass., U.S.A. President, F. G. Hilton Price, Esq.; Secretary, Miss Emily Paterson.

Eisteddfod. The name of an annual bardic congress in Wales, having for its objects the preservation of the music and the general literature of the Principality, the maintenance of the Welsh language and ancient national customs, and the cultivation of a spirit of patriotism among the people. Its origin is lost in antiquity, but it is certain that three such congresses were held in the reign of Edward III., one of them being under the patronage of Earl Mortimer. For history see ed. '88. A Gorsedd (this word means throne, but in an Eisteddfodic sense it signifies the four-and-twenty stones of the Druidic circle, whence a year and a day beforehand the Eisteddfod is proclaimed "in the face of the sun, the eye of light," and where bardic and musical degrees are conferred), is held at the conclusion of each Eisteddfod, and the place of the next festival is announced. The 1906 festival was held at Carnarvon, and was attended by the Lord Mayor of London, Sir Vaughan Morgan, and the Sheriffs, and the Lord Mayor of Dublin, Mr. Nannetti, M.P. Secretary to the National Eisteddfod Association, Mr. E. Vincent Evans, 63, Chancery Lane, W.C.

Elgar, Sir Edward, hon. Mus. D. Oxford, Cantab., Durham, Oxford and Yale; hon. LL.D. (Leeds and Aberdeen); is a son of the late W. H. Elgar, organist, and was b. 1857 at Broadheath, Worcestershire. He was ed. privately, and after some months in a solicitor's office he followed his true bent and devoted himself to music, becoming organist of St. George's Catholic Church, Worcester. He began his work as a composer with "The Black Knight" in '02; in '06 he produced "Lux Christi" and "King Olaf"; "The Banner of St. George" in '07, "Caractacus" in '08; in 1900 "The Dream of Gerontius," and in 1903 "The Apostles." This work and "The Dream of Gerontius" were performed at the Lower Rhine Festivals in 1902 and 1904. His oratorio, "The Kingdom," was produced at the Birmingham Festival Oct. 1906. In '89 he married the only daughter of the late Gen. Sir Henry Roberts, K.C.B. An "Elgar Festival" was held at Covent Garden in March 1904. Knighted June 24th, 1904. Address: Plas Gwyn, Hereford.

EMIGRATION AND IMMIGRATION.

The Emigrants' Information Office was established in 1886 to supply intending emigrants with information respecting emigration, chiefly to the British colonies, and is under the direction of the Colonial Office. The classes most required in the colonies are generally farm labourers and others connected with the land, female domestic servants, farmers with £200 capital, and, to a limited extent, competent mechanics and miners with a little money. New South Wales, Western Australia, Queensland, New Zealand, Cape Colony, Natal, Transvaal, and Orange River Colony give assisted or reduced passages to certain classes of emigrants to a limited extent. There was a decrease in the number of British and Irish emigrants in 1905, as compared with 1904. Printed particulars, which are revised quarterly, are exhibited at every post-office, and at more than 1100 public libraries, urban district councils, and institutions; and free circulars and penny and other handbooks of all the principal colonies, and some foreign countries, with maps and full details, can be obtained post free, or on personal application, from the Chief Clerk, at 31, Broadway, Westminster, S.W.; the circulars can also be obtained at any of the above libraries, urban district councils, and institutions. Letters to the office need not be stamped. A professional handbook, price 3d., is issued for barristers, solicitors, medical men, police, teachers, nurses, railwaymen, etc. A monthly report is also compiled by this Office for the Labour Gazette, published by the Labour Department of the Board of Trade. Editor of Publications, Mr. Walter Paton, M.A.

Self-Help Emigration Society, for benefiting the underpaid and unemployed in Great Britain, by assisting applicants whose character and fitness are assured to emigrate. Introductions are furnished to the Society's correspondents, who are men of position resident in Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania, and South Africa, and work is usually provided for the emigrants on their arrival. During twenty-one years ending 1905 8803 persons have been thus located, at a cost of £51,596 for ocean and rail fares. A large proportion of this cost has been contributed by the emigrants and their friends. In 1905 the emigrants assisted numbered 860. The income of the Society was £6207. Secretary, Mr. Edward Wilson Gates. Office, Memorial Hall Buildings, Farringdon Street, London, E.C.

Emigration Statistics.

The following statistics were issued during 1906 relating to emigration from the United Kingdom during the ten preceding years:—

No. of emigrants in	Total, including Foreigners.	Emigrants of British and Irish Origin only.
1905	459,662	262,077
" 1904	453,877	271,435
" 1903	449,006	259,950
" 1902	386,779	205,662
" 1901	302,575	171,717
" 1900	298,561	168,825
" '99	240,696	146,362
" '98	205,171	140,644
" '97	213,280	146,460
" '96	241,952	161,925

The following details as to emigration and immigration appeared in a Parliamentary Paper issued by the Board of Trade during 1906:—

	1905.	1904.	1903.
To and from countries out of Europe:	No.	No.	No.
Outward . . .	459,662	453,877	449,006
Inward . . .	205,193	241,896	199,685
Balance Outward	254,469	211,981	249,321
To and from European countries:—
Outward . . .	742,830	718,560	699,901
Inward . . .	850,563	802,949	814,441
Balance Inward . .	107,733	84,389	114,540
Net Balance Outward	146,736	127,592	134,781

These figures include both emigrants and immigrants, in the strict sense of the words, and travellers.

Of the 459,662 emigrants to countries out of Europe, 169,205 or 37 per cent. went to places within the British Empire, and 290,457 or 63 per cent. went to foreign countries, including 276,636 to the United States.

There were 262,077 emigrants to countries out of Europe of British and Irish origin, 188,422 of foreign origin, and 9163 whose nationality was not known.

Alien Immigration.

An Aliens Bill and a Criminal Aliens Bill were introduced in the 1904 Session, but were not carried. In 1905, however, the Aliens Act was passed into law. Full details of the Act were given in the 1906 edition. It provided for the exclusion of undesirable immigrants, an immigrant being considered such—(a) if he cannot show that he has in his possession, or is in a position to obtain, the means of decently supporting himself and his dependants (if any); or (b) if he is a lunatic or idiot, or owing to any disease or infirmity appears likely to become a charge upon the rates or otherwise a detriment to the public; or (c) if he has been sentenced in a foreign country with which there is an extradition treaty for a crime, not being an offence of a political character, which is, as respects that country, an extradition crime within the meaning of the Extradition Act, 1870; or (d) if an expulsion order under this Act has been made in his case. There was a proviso as to political and religious refugees, who may not be refused on the ground merely of want of means, or the probability of their becoming a charge on the rates. The Act empowers the Secretary of State, if he thinks fit, to make an expulsion order requiring an alien, convicted of crime or without means of subsistence, to leave the United Kingdom within a fixed time, and thereafter to remain out of the kingdom.

According to the 1901 Census the total alien population of the United Kingdom was 286,925 in 1901, as compared with 219,523 in 1891, which represents an average annual increase of 6740. The percentage of aliens to the total population is 69 per cent., as compared with 138 per cent. in Germany, and 266 in France.

The following table shows for 1905 and the two previous years the nationalities of alien immigrants (other than seamen) not described in the Alien Lists to be en route to other countries:—

Nationalities.	1905.	1904.	1903.
Russians and Poles .	37,922	46,095	30,046
Norwegians, Swedes, and Danes . . .	4,925	4,827	4,702
Germans . . .	6,932	7,084	7,502
Dutch . . .	4,787	4,082	3,761
French . . .	6,261	6,564	6,495
Austrians and Hun- garians . . .	2,262	2,199	4,005
Italians . . .	6,055	6,300	7,045
Roumanians . . .	411	513	565
Other nationalities .	4,831	5,181	5,047
Total . . .	74,386	82,845	69,168

The Russians and Poles and Roumanians consist principally of Jews. Of the former, 28,780, or 76 per cent., and of the latter 243, or 59 per cent., arrived in London.

Many of these immigrants from Russia, Poland, and Roumania, who were not stated in the Alien Lists to be en route to other countries, subsequently left the United Kingdom within the year; and deducting those who were thus known to have left the country, the figures were reduced to 65,946 for 1905, 75,148 for 1904, 59,429 for 1903, and 58,488 in 1902.

The Board of Trade Return says, however, that "these figures are very far from representing the number of alien immigrants who actually settled in the country." Referring to more complete figures for the first quarter of 1906, issued under the Aliens Act 1905, and applying the proportions deducible therefrom, the Return says: "If we were to apply these proportions to the total numbers recorded in the Alien Lists in 1905 we should arrive at a maximum number of about 32,000 instead of 66,000 persons who might have been intending to reside permanently or temporarily in the United Kingdom. Even this figure (32,000) is greater than the net addition to the alien population of the United Kingdom in the course of the year, as it takes no account of emigration which may have taken place subsequently, or of the emigration of aliens who may have arrived in this country in earlier years. . . . All these facts therefore clearly indicate that the Alien Lists hitherto available cannot be considered as affording any definite information as to the number or nationality of the alien immigrants who actually settled in this country."

The total number of alien passengers landed in the United Kingdom from ports in Europe and the Mediterranean Sea for the nine months ended Sept. 30th, 1906, was 373,627. There were 215 expulsion orders during the same period.

The number of aliens naturalised in the United Kingdom in recent years is—

'06 . . .	736	1901 . . .	542
'07 . . .	606	1902 . . .	788
'08 . . .	634	1903 . . .	890
'09 . . .	608	1904 . . .	974
1900 . . .	581	1905 . . .	684

The number of aliens relieved by Poor Law Authorities in London was 3234 in 1902, 3681 in 1903, 4762 in 1904, and 4595 in 1905.

Empire Day Movement. Although "Empire Day" had been observed for a few years in some of the provinces of the Dominion of Canada, May 24th, the anniversary of the birthday of the late Queen Victoria, was first kept as an Imperial celebration, outside Canada, on May 24th, 1904. In 1902 and 1903 the Earl of Meath inaugurated a movement for the annual celebration of the day throughout the British Empire, with a view to the introduction into all schools of a moral form of training which should have for its aim the inculcation of the virtues which conduce to the creation of good citizens. The movement has spread with marvellous rapidity. It has received the official sanction of all the self-governing Colonies and of twenty-seven Crown Colonies and dependencies; and on May 24th, 1906, Empire Day was observed in 38,338 schools throughout the Empire and by some 8,000,000 of the subjects of King Edward VII. In the United Kingdom the movement has been officially adopted by the education committees of 22 counties, 77 boroughs, 24 urban districts, 10 training schools, 169 secondary schools, and over 670 elementary schools and institutions unconnected with the above,—in all, about 8890 schools, exclusive of those in the Colonies. The movement is directed from the Earl of Meath's town residence, 83, Lancaster Gate, W.

Empire Educational League. Instituted 1901; reorganised 1906. Objects: To help maintain and increase the pre-eminence of the British Empire; and to promote its political, economic, and commercial development by popularising knowledge concerning the Empire. Hon. Sec., F. E. Tillemont-Thomason, Copenhagen Street, Worcester.

Engineering Standards Committee. The Committee is supported by the Institutions of Civil, Mechanical and Electrical Engineers, the Institution of Naval Architects, and the Iron and Steel Institute. Under the Main Committee are 12 sectional committees, and under these 24 sub-committees. Standard rolled sections for constructional work, a standard specification for steel used in the hulls of ships, a specification for marine boiler steel, a specification for steel used in bridges and in general building construction, standard specifications for locomotive parts, standard screw threads, standard pipe threads, standard series of limits for running fits, standard pipe flanges, specifications for cast-iron pipes, standard rail-sections for railways, tramways, electrical plant standards, etc., have been or are being prepared by the committees. The necessary funds are provided by the sale of the Committee's publications, and the Committee are further supported by the railway companies, the leading engineering firms, and by a grant from H.M. Government. Chairman, Sir John Wolfe Barry, K.C.B., F.R.S. Secretary, Mr. Leslie S. Robertson, M.Inst.C.E. Offices, 28, Victoria Street, S.W.

ENGINEERING SCHEMES.

Below will be found, arranged in alphabetical order, descriptions of the chief industrial engineering schemes recently completed or in progress in this country and abroad.

Adam's Bridge Railway and Canal.—See former eds.

Aden-Dihala Railway.—A report from Paris in March 1905 stated that Messrs. Cowasjee, Dinshaw, & Co., a wealthy Indian firm, had decided to apply for a concession to construct a railway in the Aden hinterland of about 120 kilometres in length. (See last ed.)

African Transcontinental Telegraph.

—We have given accounts of the progress of this line in previous editions. In Oct. 1903 the wire was reported to be in good working order up to Ujiji, Lake Tanganyika. It is understood that it is not intended to continue the extension northwards for the present. This is one of the undertakings which will benefit under the late Mr. Alfred Beit's will.

Antwerp Port Improvement.—On May 15th, 1905, the Communal Council passed the Government proposals for a large scheme, which will increase the present shipping accommodation fourfold, and make Antwerp the first port in the world. The project, adopted after years of discussion, consists of the diversion of the river bed and the construction of a canal to run parallel to it. This canal will be five miles long, with an average width of 1000 ft., and will be lined with docks and basins, thus forming ad interim a suitable approach to the city. The canal will take about ten years to construct, and the work of excavating the new river bed, which will be six miles long, will not be begun until after its completion. The total cost of the work, which is estimated at £10,000,000, is guaranteed by the State. The proposed improvement was accompanied by an enlarged scheme of military defence, and the whole matter was referred by the Belgian Chamber to a Commission of Inquiry. The Port of Antwerp Bill, including both the commercial and the military sections, was voted by the Chamber on Jan. 24th, 1906, and became law.

Bagdad Railway.—In previous editions we have given an account of the revival of the idea to connect the Mediterranean with the Persian Gulf, and the success of the Germans, who control the Anatolian system, including the line to Konieh. A Berlin telegram of Nov. 16th, 1903, announced the conclusion of a new financial agreement, which admitted of the participation of Austrian, Swiss, Italian and Ottoman financiers. The German group, represented by the Deutsche Bank, were, thereunder, to control 40 per cent. of the capital, the Imperial Ottoman Bank, acting on behalf of the French group, 30 per cent., the remaining interested countries jointly 20 per cent., and the Anatolian Railway Co. 10 per cent. The first meeting of the board of a new company formed for the construction of the Konieh-Eregli-Bugurlu line (the first section of the Bagdad Railway) was held on Dec. 30th, 1903, at Frankfurt. The contract for the laying of the section, 200 kilometres in length, was approved. This was completed in 1904 and opened on the Sultan's birthday, Oct. 25th. The British Consular report from Constantinople for 1905, published in March 1906, stated that since the opening of this first section no further progress had been made with the work of construction. The cost of the work done was reported at £3500 per kilometre, or a total of £700,000; this yielded a handsome profit to the underwriters, and a reserve fund was set aside. The next section, which will cross the Taurus Mountains and bring the railway down to Adana, was described as an extremely difficult and costly piece of work. According to the Frankfurter Zeitung's Constantinople correspondent (Berlin, Aug. 13th) the Porte issued an Irade renewing the Concession of the Smyrna-Aidin Railway to a British Company, but refused a further concession extending the line to the Egedir Lake. The British Embassy pressed for this extension, and also for concessions for branch lines, one running north from Diner and the other south to the Gulf of Adalia. The Porte declined to grant the demands, on the ground that they would be injurious to the interests of the Bagdad Railway.

Behring Strait Tunnel.—A scheme to connect Alaska with the extreme north-eastern portion of Russian Asia by a tunnel under Behring Strait, which had fallen into the background during the war with Japan, was revived in the spring of 1905. M. Loicq de Lobel, who originated the project, laid the views of an American syndicate before a representative audience at the Naval and Military Club at St. Petersburg. It was shown, as the result of a close examination, that the strait is about 38½ miles in width and 167 ft. in depth, and that, as there are two islands in the strait, it would be possible to divide the tunnel into three sections each about 12½ miles in length, which corresponds with the length of the Simplon Tunnel (q.v.). Among the proposals of M. de Lobel were the following: The syndicate demands no guarantee of interest from the Russian Government, and this would mean a yearly saving to Russia of £2,000,000. The syndicate would give the Russian iron industry orders to the amount of £12,000,000. The syndicate pledges itself to employ only Russian engineers and workmen. The syndicate would make no experiments to colonise the adjacent regions with foreign settlers; on the contrary, it would assist the Russian Government to attract settlers to the Siberian district. The Government are to have the option of buying the railway after 30 years, when any lands acquired by the syndicate would be handed over. The syndicate also undertakes to construct a telegraph line which would be under Russian control, and to establish a Siberian Land Bank to encourage settlers. In return a land grant was demanded, giving the syndicate plots 7½ miles in length on either side of the railway to alternate with similar parcels held by the Government. According to a statement in the Neue Freie Presse the cost of the enterprise is estimated at £47,000,000 sterling; the Asiatic end of the line would be at Kansk, on the Trans-Siberian Railway (see Russia, q.v.), and the American portion would eventually link with the Canadian Pacific line. A telegram from Trenton, New Jersey (Oct. 25th), stated that a Company had been incorporated with a capital of £1,200,000.

Berlin Underground Railway.—A scheme for connecting the northern and southern suburbs of this city—both of which are mainly populated by the working classes—by a suspension railway was, in Sept. 1905, referred to the municipality by a board of experts who had been considering it. It was announced later that the Corporation had decided upon an underground railway. The length of the new municipal line will be about 5½ miles, a distance which it is proposed to cover in 18 minutes. The construction is to be completed in four years, the estimated cost being a little over £2,550,000. There will be 14 stations.

Birmingham Water Supply.—See 1905 ed. In their report for the year ending March 31st, 1906, presented to the meeting of the Corporation on May 22nd, the water committee stated that they had made an exhaustive estimate of the cost of completing the works at present undertaken. These included works at Hagley for the protection of the G.W.R., a new filtered water pool with a capacity of 7,500,000 gals. at Frankley, and certain adjuncts in the Elan Valley. Up to March 31st the amount expended had been £5,665,895, and the further outlay would not cause the estimate of £5,884,918, made in 1902, to be exceeded.

Black Sea and Baltic Ship Canal.—On April 28th, 1905, the Russian Minister of Finance obtained the sanction of the Tsar for the appointment of a special commission to consider this scheme. Several projects, some of which have been dealt with in previous editions, have been brought forward from time to time. The plan mentioned in connection with the above report was elaborated by a Belgian engineer, M. Gustave Defosse, in which Mr. C. Innes Baillie, of the United States, and Messrs. J. King & Co., of London, were interested. The entrances would be at Kherson and Riga, and the canal would be about 1000 miles long, the passage at eight-knots speed being accomplished in five days. The rivers Dwina and Dnieper would be utilised for most of the distance, but a canal about 100 miles in length would have to be cut to connect these streams at Orscha and Vitebsk. The depth throughout was given at over 28 ft., and the width 72 yards 8 in. at the surface, and 39 yards at bottom. The estimated cost was £40,000,000, and no Government guarantee appeared to be demanded. In his report for 1905 (received at the Foreign Office in July 1905), the British Consul at Riga said that the project had been once more under discussion, an "American syndicate" having moved in the matter. The new idea was to dredge right through and to establish a light river service for goods and produce.

Bombay Dock Scheme.—In Feb. 1903 particulars were published of a scheme of dock improvement involving an estimated expenditure of three crores of rupees. The scheme included the construction of a new dock, with a water area of about 495 acres, between Ballard Pier and the existing docks, having a depth of 33½ ft. and an entrance lock 600 ft. long; a dry dock of 800 ft. to 850 ft. length; and a dock-head pier, 1250 ft. long, where mail boats can moor, the passengers stepping from the vessel to the train. In 1904 the tender of Messrs. Price, Wills and Reeves was accepted for Rs.18,561,015, the date for completion being June 1st, 1911. The Prince of Wales laid the foundation-stone Nov. 13th, 1905. In a report of progress published at the beginning of 1906 it was stated that the new dock was being made of 35½ ft. depth. As a record of the development of the port it was added that thirty-five years ago Bombay had only one dock of 3½ acres, and the tonnage amounted to about 700,000 tons; the dock area will cover about 93 acres when the new dock is completed; and the returns gave the tonnage at 2,750,000 tons. Bombay now claims, with several other ports, to rank only after London and Liverpool, and to be the third largest of the British Possessions in the value of the trade.

Bristol Port Improvement.—See last edition.

Bruges Ship Canal.—This canal and the new port at Bruges form two sections of a scheme an important feature in which is still incomplete. This will be represented by the port of call at Zeebrugge, a point on the Belgian coast north of Ostend and Blankenberge. Here is being constructed a combined pier and break-water, having a total length of about 2700 yards, but so curved that the extremity will be parallel with the coast and 930 yards distant from it. The main idea is that Transatlantic and other steamers will call here for express or perishable cargo or for passengers, when they find it practicable to do so, in preference to steaming 60 miles up the Scheldt to Antwerp. Of quay space about 27 acres will be available. Admission to the new ship canal is through an outer basin, a lock, and an inner basin, which are all protected by the pier; and the ship canal runs in a perfectly straight line for a distance of about 7½ miles to the new docks and warehouses at Bruges. It has a depth of 26 ft. of water throughout, and a width on the water-level of 230 ft., sufficient to allow of two ordinary cargo-boats passing one another. The total cost of the works is estimated at £2,200,000. Messrs. Coiseau & Cousin are the contractors, the Compagnie des Installations Maritimes de Bruges are to hold the concession for 75 years, and the work is being done under Government supervision. The canal was informally inaugurated on May 29th, 1905, by the Continental fleet of the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway running from Goole and Hull. During the summer of 1905 the route proved so successful that a bi-weekly service was maintained to the end of September. After that date a weekly service between Hull and Antwerp, calling at Zeebrugge, was continued. In October it was reported that there remained only two caissons to be laid to complete the pier, and when these were put in the pier-head, formed of concrete blocks 53 ft. in diameter, would be built.

Cairo New Bridges.—The three new bridges across the Nile at Cairo are the joint work of Messrs. W. Arrol & Co. and Messrs. Head, Wrightson & Co. They replace the well-known bridge road which, beginning opposite the Boulevard de Koubyr, crosses to the island of Boulak and continues by the Pont des Anglais to the western shore. The new bridges are in a more southerly position. The one lesser bridge crosses from near the Hospital Kasr-el-Din, opposite the northern end of Rodah, to the island, and is 67 mètres long. The second structure crosses from the Old Cairo Road, opposite the southern end of Rodah, to the island, and is 83 mètres long. The chief structure is 535 mètres (1760 ft.) in length, and spans the Nile from Rodah to Ghizeh, being, in fact, a continuation of the second bridge. At Ghizeh the new roadway leads on to join the tramways westward, and on to the Pyramids. The largest bridge is 65 ft. 7 in. wide, carries a double tramway line, and has a swinging portion, allowing two clear waterways of 65 ft. each. It is expected that the work will be completed about June 1907.

Cape to Cairo Railway.—The progress of the Cape to Cairo line, with its growing network of feeders, was fully described and illustrated by a specially drawn map in our 1903 edition. As the crow flies, the distance between Cairo and Cape Town is about 5700 miles; and while from the north, and allowing for the river gap between Assouan and Wady Halfa, railhead has reached Khartoum, roughly 1400 miles, from the south the iron road on June 11th, 1906, had reached Broken Hill, 2016 miles from Cape Town. The later portion of the work involved the construction of a bridge of 13 spans, each of 100 ft., across the Kafue River, the structure being the longest in South Africa. In an interview on Aug. 5th, Sir C. Metcalfe, the engineer of the scheme, made the following interesting statement: "At Broken Hill the direct Cape to Cairo line will probably branch off. It will go to the south end of Tanganyika. The Germans in German East Africa seem to be making a move with their railway, and if we can get our own Government to see that the best business policy is to join up what is called the Uganda Railway with Khartoum, the Germans making the 600 miles through their territory, the Cape to Cairo scheme will be practically complete. My idea is that from Broken Hill a line should go north through the Congo Free State, over the high and rich lands, and turning north-west past Lake Tchad, traverse the French territories and come out at Algiers, or some other port in the Mediterranean. These will form the two great railway arteries of Africa, one to Cairo, the other to Algiers, and from them will stretch the many branches of East and West Africa." The great Victoria Falls Bridge over the Zambesi was linked up on April 1st, 1905. It is described as the highest bridge in the world. It was designed by Mr. G. A. Hobson, M.Inst.C.E., partner of Sir Douglas Fox, and is 287½ ft. above sea level. The bridge, which will take two lines of rails, is 650 ft. long, with a central span of 500 ft. in the form of a great arch of light girder work having a rise of 90 ft.; the spans on the sides are 87½ ft. and 62½ ft. respectively. The height above water level is 400 ft. The Cleveland Bridge Company were the contractors for the bridge. The future "harnessing" of the Victoria Falls promises to be full of interest, for they are more than twice as high as Niagara (q.v.) and half as wide again.

Chamonix-Argentiére Railway.—The extension of the St. Gervais Le Fayet to Chamonix electric line from the latter place to Argentiére was officially declared open during the summer of 1906. It forms another link in the connection that is ultimately to be made between the ordinary P.L.M. system, which terminates at St. Gervais Le-Fayet, and the Jura-Simplon line in the Rhone Valley. There are two stations on the new line—namely, Les Praz, about a mile and a half from Chamonix, and Les Tines, at the foot of the Mer de Glace, about halfway between Les Praz and Argentiére. Argentiére is 4100 ft. above sea-level, and over 600 ft. higher than Chamonix. It was intended to open the portion of the line from Chatelard to Vernayaz at the same time, but some delay arose through the non-arrival of suitable cars. See Mont Blanc.

Channel Ferry Scheme.—A revival of this project was witnessed during the Parliamentary Session of 1905 in the introduction of a bill to establish a route between Dover and Calais. The proposals were essentially the same as those of Sir John Fowler, which failed to pass both Houses in 1870 and '72, except that the French port would be Calais instead of a harbour at Andreelces. On July 24th the bill was withdrawn owing to a blocking notice of the Admiralty on the ground, it appeared, that the situation chosen by the promoters for the erection of their station at Dover would cause an obstruction. The bill was reintroduced for the 1906 Session, and passed third reading in the Lords on May 21st. On this occasion

Lord Tweedmouth (First Lord of the Admiralty) said that they were not opposing any legitimate improvement in Channel traffic between this country and France. At the same time the Admiralty reserved to themselves most complete powers over Dover Harbour.

Channel Tunnel.—The revived interest in this project was evinced in various ways in 1906. The French Ambassador, presiding at the annual dinner of the French Chamber of Commerce in London on May 2nd, referred to the scheme as one of those calculated to improve the entente between the two countries. At the annual meeting of the Channel Tunnel Company on June 7th the chairman (Baron Emile D'Erlanger) foreshadowed another Parliamentary Bill, and said that M. Sartiaux, chief engineer of the Northern Railway of France, had written an exhaustive pamphlet on the subject. M. Sartiaux subsequently published an article in the Revue Politique et Parlementaire in which he said that a double-track tunnel could be completed in five years, and then London and Paris would be only five hours apart. On Oct. 25th it was stated that the directors had decided to deposit plans at once, in view of a Bill being promoted in the 1907 Session.

Croton Great Dam.—It was announced early in 1906 that this great work for the supply of water to New York was practically finished, the cost, exclusive of land and the laying out of some 15 miles of highways, being estimated at £1,600,000. The dam is 300 ft. high from the lowest point in the foundations to the crest. It forms a reservoir 18 miles long, and impounds about 32,000,000,000 gallons of water. It is built of solid granite ashlar and rubble, except that the south extension is backed by cyclopean concrete, and it has a spillway 1000 ft. long at right angles to the axis of the dam and 16 ft. below its crest, and contains altogether about 855,000 yards of masonry.

Colombo Harbour Works.—See last ed.

Dee Improvement.—At the request of the Flint and Denbigh County Councils and the Chester City Council, Messrs. D. & C. Stevenson, of Edinburgh, in 1905 formulated a scheme for improving the channel of the river Dee so as to admit vessels of larger draught. They recommended the carrying out of works involving an outlay of £389,153. The suggestions are that the sandstone bar running across the river a little below Connah's Quay should be excavated, that the training-wall should be extended seawards, and that dredging should be carried out, and the river banks repaired, at a total cost of £220,770. They further recommended that the Bagillt bank should be cut through, so as to get a direct course down to Mostyn Deep, and that the river should be prevented from straying by an extension of the northern training-wall and by dredging. This work, together with lighting and buoys, is estimated to cost £160,383. The effect of this project, it was hoped, would be to secure 20 ft. of water up to Saltney and Chester. The matter was further discussed by the Dee Conservancy Board in 1906, and on August and Mr. A. C. Williams, Acting Conservator, gave evidence before the Royal Commission on Canals and Waterways. He said that all that had been done hitherto was in the way of reclamation of the land.

Derwent Valley Water Scheme.—This project (referred to in previous editions under the heading "Midland"), which formed one of the features of Private Bill legislation in '99, brought into existence the Derwent Valley Water Board. The scheme is for the supply of water to the towns of Leicester, Derby, Sheffield, and Nottingham, and to the counties of Derby and Notts. It includes the construction of (1) five reservoirs for impounding the rivers Derwent and Ashop; (2) about 100 miles of aqueduct for distributing the water to various authorities; (3) about 20 acres of filter-beds at Bamford; and (4) a service reservoir at Ambergate. There will be three reservoirs on the river Derwent, called the Howden, Derwent, and Bamford reservoirs, and two on the river Ashop—the Haglee and Ashopton reservoirs. The main aqueduct extends from Howden to Ambergate reservoir, 30 miles. The ultimate supply of water to each authority will be approximately as follows:—Leicester, 9·8 million gallons per day, Derby 6·8, Sheffield 6·8, Nottingham 3·9, Derby County 5·0, Notts County—until 1930—1·0: total, 33·3 million gallons per day. During 1905 the work, which included the laying of railway lines and the building of huts, etc., was carried on rapidly, no less than 235,000 tons of stone being despatched from the Board's quarries to the works in the twelvemonth. From a later report, covering the period March 15th to June 14th, 1906, it appeared that 1633 workmen were employed, 1206 being in the direct employment of the Board. The net expenditure to the latter date amounted to £1,151,861.

Detroit River Tunnel.—In the autumn of 1906 it was announced that the contract for this considerable undertaking had been let to a New York firm, and it is to be completed by the middle of 1909. There are to be two parallel tubes resting on the bottom of the river, 65 ft. below the surface, which will provide for the traffic of the Michigan Central and Canadian Southern railways. The tunnels will be of 20 ft. internal diameter, and the under-river portion will be 2625 ft. long. The work will be completed by 3200 ft. of tunnel and 3500 ft. of approach on the east side, and on the west by 2135 ft. of tunnel and 1540 ft. of approach. The steel tubes will rest on concrete beds and steel girders, and will be protected by concrete flanking-walls and filling. It is intended to float sections of the tubes into position, sink them, and rivet them together under water. The tubes are of  $\frac{3}{8}$  in. plate steel, stiffened with webs on the outside, 12 ft. apart. They will be placed in position in lengths of 263 ft.

Dover Harbour.—Work on the great National Harbour at Dover was actually commenced at the end of '97. The plan consisted of (1) an extension of the existing Admiralty Pier in an east-south-east direction for a distance of 2000 ft.; (2) the erection of an east arm extending seaward in a south-westerly direction for a length of 3320 ft. from the foot of the headland; (3) the construction of a breakwater 4200 ft. long, which, at a distance of about three-quarters of a mile from the shore, will form on the south the outer sheltering arm of the harbour; and (4) the building of a sea-wall, 3850 ft. in length, extending from the Castle Jetty at the eastern end of East Cliff Terrace to the root of the proposed east arm. The total area inclosed will be 685 acres. On Jan. 10th, 1901, the first block of the eastern arm was laid. At that date the sea wall was reported complete. According to the Naval Works statement issued in 1906 the total cost of the National Harbour was given at £3,500,000, and it was expected to be completed in 1908-9. The expenditure to March 31st was about £2,686,000; the Admiralty Pier extension, the east arm and the east reclamation were all completed except the above-water-mark work at the extremities of the breakwaters. Of the south breakwater about 1950 ft. were up to water level. In the western corner of the National Harbour is inclosed the Commercial Harbour, the memorial stone of which was laid in July '93. It was originally intended that this harbour should inclose 56 acres, but the area will now be increased to about 75 acres. The Prince of Wales's Pier, the shore end of which consists of an open-work iron viaduct 1200 ft. long, forms the eastern arm of this harbour. On July 1st, 1904, this pier was used for the first time for transatlantic traffic. At special meetings of the South-Eastern and Chatham Railway Companies on July 17th, 1906, it was agreed to approve a Bill of the Dover Harbour Board to widen the Admiralty Pier, to reclaim land from the Commercial Harbour, and to make landing-stages on the pier extension, the widening of the pier at the land end to be used for a new marine station. All these works were necessary for the ocean and passenger traffic. In July it was reported that the Hamburg-America line had decided to remove their port of call for trans-Atlantic ships to Southampton for the present, owing to difficulties arising from the naval harbour works. The Engineer of Aug. 10th published an article which stated that the Admiralty were studying the question of tidal influence, in view of the completion of the breakwaters. On Nov. 7th the Companies' Bill passed a Commons Committee after amendment.

Folkestone Harbour Extension.—See last ed.

Fishguard Route to Ireland.—Great developments are still being carried out at Fishguard Bay, on the Pembrokeshire coast, by the Great Western Railway Company in connection with their new route to Ireland, and in order to establish a new port of call for Atlantic liners. The bay is surrounded on three sides by hills, six miles separating the two headlands. Between these has been created an entirely new port on an area of 27 acres, while a sea-wall, originally designed to be 2000 ft. in length, is now being carried another 500 ft., thus increasing by 40 per cent. the sheltered water area of 500 acres. The Irish port is Rosslare, on the Wexford coast, where similar work has been done. From here a new line 38 miles long has been constructed to Waterford, and in its course crosses the River Barrow by a bridge 2131 ft. long between abutments, consisting of 13 fixed spans, with a swing span giving a passage of 80 ft. clear on each side of the centre dolphin. From Paddington to the new Fishguard station the distance is 262 miles, and the channel journey is given at 54 nautical miles; turbine steamers have been built for the service. The cost of the undertaking has been estimated at £2,000,000 sterling. The new route was inaugurated on Aug. 30th, 1906.

Galveston's Reclamation.—Following the swamping of this port by the sea in 1900, it was decided to erect a sea wall, and to accept the proposal of Mr. Lindon Bates, of New York, to raise about one-fourth of the entire city. In the annual report of the British Consul, dated April 20th, 1906, it was stated that, while the portion of the sea-wall constructed by the county was finished in July 1904 (see last ed.), a continuation erected for the protection of Government property had now been completed. The total length of the wall is 4.37 miles, and it extends all round the town facing the Gulf of Mexico. It measures 16 ft. thick at the base, 5 ft. at the top, and is 17 ft. high, there is an apron of rip-rap stone 27 ft. wide, besides a row of sheet piling driven to a depth of 24 ft. The raising of the level of the protected district was at the date of the despatch a quarter finished; it starts with a level of 17 ft. at the wall, the grade coming down gradually to the normal at about half a mile from the Gulf. The programme included the lifting of about 2156 buildings, mostly residences. Later on it was stated that a project for the construction of a causeway to the mainland was under consideration. The plans show a length of 10,850 ft., the causeway being 140 ft. wide, providing for three steam railways, two electric tracks, space for a water main, a 30-ft. roadway, and a 10-ft. side-walk, the cost being estimated at £250,000 to £300,000.

Gibraltar Naval Works (see former editions). The Naval Works statement issued in 1906 gave as the total estimate for the dockyard extension, under the Act of 1905, £2,809,000, of which £2,416,000 had been expended by March 31st, 1906. The date of completion was to be in the financial year 1907-8; three graving docks were already in use. The estimate for the Harbour Works was £1,109,000, and up to March 31st some £1,201,000 had been spent, the date of completion being 1908-7. The commercial mole was practically finished at the end of March, £645,000 having been spent to that date out of an estimate of £669,000.

Grangemouth New Docks.—This work, which had been in progress since '98 and has cost £1,500,000, was completed, and came into use on Oct. 8th, 1906. In order to avoid a tortuous course of two miles in length up the river Carron, the company secured 500 acres of land and cut a direct channel. The area of the docks is 116 acres, with a basin of 10 acres, the entrance lock being 525 ft. long, 80 ft. wide, and 32 ft. deep at high water.

Grimsby (Immingham) New Dock.—The first sod of this undertaking was cut by Lady Henderson, the wife of the chairman of the Great Central Railway, on July 12th, 1906. The site is five miles from Grimsby, and the following are the dimensions of the new works: The dock is to be 1100 ft. square, with an arm 1250 ft. long by 375 ft. wide. The main dock and south-west arm will have a deep-water area of 38½ acres. The land acquired is 616 acres, and there is to be 6760 ft. of quays. The dock is to have a depth of 35½ ft. below high-water ordinary spring tides, or 32 ft. below high-water ordinary neap tides. The entrance lock is to be 850 ft. long by 90 ft. wide, and 47½ ft. deep at high-water ordinary spring tides.

Hudson River Tunnels.—On Sept. 12th, 1906, one of the two tubes for the tunnel under the North River was so far completed that a party of engineers passed through it; the longer section, under the East River, it was stated, would not be completed for another two years. The whole undertaking, which is being carried out by the Pennsylvania Railroad Co.

at an estimated cost of £20,000,000, is to connect New Jersey with New York City and Long Island. The work under the North River is let to American contractors, and that of the East River (comprising four tubes) to Messrs. Pearson & Son; but (as explained in the Daily Chronicle of Oct. 8th) the whole of the operations are under the superintendence of British engineers. In former editions some account has been given of previous attempts to tunnel the river.

Indian Irrigation.—From Calcutta, Jan. 10th, 1905, it was reported that the Secretary of State had sanctioned the construction of three huge canals in the Punjab, one on the Upper Jhelum, another on the Upper Chenab, and the third in the Lower Bari Doab, the whole at an estimated cost of £5,213,000. The total length of the three canals will be 2714 miles.

Loch Leven Utilisation.—This is a scheme for the utilisation for electrical power purposes of the waters of Loch Leven, in Argyllshire. The plans, as modified, include a concrete dam 80 ft. in height and over half a mile in length, to be constructed at the head of the river Leven, the west end of the Blackwater Lochs; thence a concrete conduit of a length of about 3½ miles will lead to a penstock chamber situated at over 900 ft. above sea level. To the flat ground close to sea level the water is led down by lines of steel pipes on massive concrete foundations. Here the power-house is to be constructed, the place being called Kinlochbeg. The engineers are Messrs. P. W. Meik and M. A. Pollard-Urquhart, of London and Edinburgh.

London Electric Lines.—See article under LONDON.

Loetschberg Tunnel.—At a meeting of the Grand Preliminary Committee, appointed to consider the question of the piercing of the Alps, held at Berne on June 4th, 1906, it was decided by 54 votes to 3 to recommend the cantonal authorities to adopt this scheme as advocated by a select committee. The work, which is estimated to cost £3,000,000, and is being financed by French capitalists, is to be completed in 5½ years. According to a report by the American Consul at Berne, the new railway in all will be 35 miles long, the tunnel being eight miles in length. The road that has to be constructed will commence at Frutigen, a town near Spiez, a few miles from the lake of Thun, which is in direct communication with the towns of Thun and Pontarlier and with the cities of Berne and Basel. It will merge into the Simplon (q.v.) at Brieg, and will virtually form the completion of that great work. In addition to its value as an international trunk line, it will prove of vast commercial importance to central Switzerland, and particularly to the canton and city of Berne, by affording a direct line with the south.

Manchester Ship Canal. (See previous eds.)—This great undertaking, the first of its kind completed in this country, is 35½ miles long, average width 172 ft., and at bottom 120 ft. (but much wider between Barton and Manchester), depth 26 ft., which has now been increased to 28 ft. There are four locks between the entrance at Eastham (opposite Garston, on the Mersey estuary) and the city, the total rise of the four steps being about 60 ft. The canal is mainly tidal up to the first locks, a distance of 21 miles; but the entrance itself is through locks, so that the necessary depth of water is always retained in the whole canal. The works were commenced at Eastham in Nov. '87, and the waterway was opened to public traffic from Eastham to Manchester on Jan. 1st, '94. Queen Victoria declared it open on May 21st. On July 15th, 1905, the King and Queen opened the new dock (No. 9), constructed on the old racecourse. The area is 15½ acres, and the depth 28 ft. For the half-year ending Dec. 1905 the balance of net revenue was £132,620, and after paying interest on the first and second mortgage debentures and other charges £69,300 was handed over to the City Corporation for debenture interest (making £123,643 for 1905 out of the £160,000 due for the year). At the meeting on Feb. 15th, 1906, the chairman, Mr. J. K. Bythell, said the rate of working expenses had fallen from 71 per cent. in 1901 to 55 per cent. The accounts for the half-year ending June showed an available profit of £119,030, and the sum paid to the Corporation was £54,160.

Manhattan Suspension Bridge.—The plans of this new bridge, to be constructed across the East River between Brooklyn and Manhattan Island, were issued on April 10th, 1906. The length of the bridge from anchorage to anchorage, and excluding the approaches, is to be 2920 ft., the central span being 1470 ft. between the masonry piers already in position in the river. The width of the bridge from rail to rail is 120 ft. The central roadway is 40 ft. wide, and on each side are railway tracks and a 12-ft. pathway. The railway tracks are on two decks, there being eight lines in all, designed for either overhead or underground electric traction. The height of the two steel towers is 291 ft. above the masonry. The lower deck is 95½ ft. above the piers, which are themselves 31 ft. above the high-water datum. The work is to be completed within 3½ years.

Mecca, Railway to.—In the spring of 1900 it was reported that the Sultan had decided to construct a railway from Damascus to Mecca, chiefly for the benefit of pilgrims, and now known as the Hedjaz Railway. By September 1904 the line had reached Ma'an, a distance of 514 kilometres. Replying to a question in the House of Commons on May 8th, 1906, Sir Edward Grey said: "We understand that the line has been completed as far south as Medawara, and that the next section to Thabouk, 120 kilometres, is expected to be in working order in the course of this year. The branch from Medawara to Akaba has been surveyed, but the construction is believed to have been temporarily suspended." The Times correspondent at Paris (Aug. 12th) reported that the main line had reached Thabouk station, making 692 kilometres in all. He added: "The earthworks have been advanced some 30 kilometres farther; but it is estimated that it will take three years more before the line can be completed as far as Medina. Meanwhile, the line from Haifa inland, of which only 104 kilometres were constructed this time last year, was completed up to Dera for the Sultan's name-day; indeed, some trains have already begun to run on this section. Furthermore, a large railway station is being built at Haifa, and is now almost finished."

Mont Blanc Railway.—In August 1904 a concession was granted by the Department of the Haute Savoie to Messrs. Couvreaux & Durand for a rack electric railway from Le Fayet, on the Paris, Lyons and Mediterranean line, to the summit, 11½ miles. Following the southern slopes of the mountain, it will in the first place have its terminus at the Aiguille du Gouter, at a point 12,590 ft. above sea-level. The work is mainly in the open, and the traffic is expected to reach ten trains per day each way during the three summer months. See Chamonix-Argentière.

Morocco (Dakar-Ceuta) Railway.—In the spring of 1906 some attention was given to a scheme which, if carried out, would shorten considerably the route between Europe and South America. The Duke of Almodovar referred to the matter with approval towards the end of the Spanish Session. In brief, it is to construct a railway from Ceuta, viâ Tetuan, through Southern Morocco to Marakesh, then following the western coast-line viâ Agadir, and still keeping to the coast-line, to join the existing railway at St. Louis, in French Senegal, which runs down to Dakar. This African port enjoys (with Bathurst) the distinction of being the nearest to Pernambuco, the north-eastern extremity of South America. It is calculated that by this route the journey from a European centre like Hamburg to the South American port could be accomplished in seven or eight days, including three days' sea trip from Dakar to Pernambuco. The project was described and illustrated in the Daily Chronicle of April 26th.

New York Rapid Transit.—The first portion of this great undertaking, which has been described as the greatest engineering feat of the kind ever attempted, was opened on Oct. 27th, 1904, the trains running as far as 154th Street. The section in question is 9 miles long, and work on the others was then described as in active progress. The ceremony of cutting the first sod took place on March 24th, 1901. There are many new features in the section, which is largely a subway, as distinct from a tunnel, for in the daytime artificial light is not required in the stations, which in most cases are approached by short straight staircases. Arcades have been constructed leading to the great stores, etc., and the names of the stations are emphasised by illustrations. Electricity is the motive power. Up to the date of the opening several modifications had been made in the original plan, the length of the whole line being then given at 20 miles, and the number of stations 49. It is intended to continue the system under the Harlem River in one direction and to Long Island in the other. From New York, Feb. 14th, 1906, it was stated that work on new subways to cost about £40,000,000 would be begun towards the end of the year. In vol. iv. of the Report of the Royal Commission on London Traffic (g. 2) an historical account is given of the New York Rapid Transit Board.

Newport (Mon.) Transporter Bridge.—On Sept. 12th, 1906, this new bridge was opened by Lord Tredegar. It was erected by M. Arnodin, who designed a similar bridge across the Seine at Rouen. The dimensions of the Newport bridge are: Span, centre to centre of towers, 645 ft.; clear opening between faces of piers, 592 ft.; clear headway from high water to underside of span, 177 ft.; height of towers above level of approach roads, 242 ft. The towers are of open lattice steel work. The travelling platform is provided with central roadway space and two footways, the latter being roofed in.

Niagara Utilisation.—This great work has been described in our previous editions.

The total energy of the Falls is calculated at 7,000,000 horse-power. Professor Unwin, in the course of a technical account of the work done and projected on both the American and Canadian shores, in the Times Supplement of April 26th, 1905, said the mean flow of the Niagara River was 222,000 cubic ft. per second. If 650,000 horse-power were utilised, the demand would be  $21\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. of the mean or 30 per cent. of the minimum flow, and the alteration in the appearance of the Falls would be very perceptible. In Cassier's Magazine for March Mr. A. D. Adams calculated that the total diversion of water for power and canal purposes would before long reach 41 per cent. of the minimum flow of the river. A Washington telegram of March 25th, 1906, stated that the report of the American members of the International Commission for the preservation of the Falls recommended legislation based on a treaty between America and Canada, to prevent further depletion of the water, to maintain the present scenic effects, and to regulate the electrical supply companies which are using the Falls for power. It was proposed to limit the diversion of the waters on the American side to 28,500 c. ft. a second, and the diversion on the Canadian side to 36,000 c. ft. Speaking in the Dominion House of Commons on March 26th, Sir W. Laurier, the Premier, said that no attempt was being made through the British Ambassador at Washington to settle the question of the diversion of the water of Niagara. Sir Wilfrid Laurier added that negotiations were, however, in progress to secure the conclusion of international regulations with regard to the fishing in contiguous waters. Later on, Mr. Roosevelt, in a Message to Congress, recommended the passing of a Bill to preserve Niagara Falls without waiting for any treaty with Canada to be made. From Toronto, May 4th, it was reported that a Joint International Commission had come to an agreement regarding the Niagara Falls and the rapids on the Sault St. Marie, subject to a treaty between the United States and Great Britain. In the case of the Sault St. Marie river the power was divided equally. In the case of Niagara Falls the allotments of water were on the lines as above stated. In July it was announced that the American Bill had passed both Houses. As finally agreed upon, the Bill increased the amount of water which may be diverted from the American side of the river to 15,600 c. ft. per second, in addition to what is already being taken, but further provides that the Secretary of War shall issue no revokable permits for the subtraction of water until the limit of 15,600 c. ft. has been tried for at least six months. It was reported in October that the Ontario Power Co. had commenced the installation of three additional generators and turbines on the Canadian side. They have a capacity of 12,000 horse-power each, and will bring up the strength of the Company's plant to 66,000 of the proposed development of 200,000 horse-power.

Panama Canal.—In former editions the recent history of this scheme was traced and that of its rival, the proposed ship canal through Nicaragua. On Nov. 3rd, 1903, a revolution broke out, and Panama separated from Colombia. On Nov. 18th the Hay-Bunau-Varilla Treaty was signed at Washington, providing for the construction and control of the canal. Panama granted the use in perpetuity of a zone 10 miles wide, and the exclusive control for police, judicial, and other purposes; ceded territory for subsidiary canals and the coast-line within the zone; while as to the cities of Panama and Colon, if police and other matters prove unsatisfactory, the United States may undertake them. The canal is to be neutral, and open to the world's commerce. For these grants the United States were to pay $10,000,000 on the ratification of the treaty, and $250,000 yearly, beginning after nine years. The sovereignty of Panama over all her territory was recognised. The treaty was signed at Panama on Dec. 2nd, and President Roosevelt dealt with the matter in his Message to Congress on Dec. 7th. Previously the United States had agreed to pay the existing company £8,000,000 for all their works and rights, and a warrant for that sum was signed May 8th, 1904. (For proceedings in 1905 see last ed.). In a report by the British Consul (Mr. Mallet, C.M.G.) it was stated that 10,000 men were at work on Jan. 31st, 1906, in the engineering and construction departments, a number which, according to a correspondent of the Evening Standard (June 5th), had reached 27,000 by May, of whom 21,000 were coloured. With regard to this question, it was reported by the Washington correspondent of the Daily Chronicle (Aug. 13th) that Chinese labour was to be tried, an experimental batch of 2500 to be drafted to the work: this gave rise to threats of an anti-Chinese agitation. A Washington telegram of June 21st announced the final decision in favour of a lock type canal. (The recommendation of the consulting engineers, recorded in our last ed., was in favour of a sea-level.) The Senate approved of the lock type by 36 votes to 31, and as the House of Representatives had already voted for this type, and President Roosevelt was in favour of it, the matter was thus concluded. In July the United States Treasury issued $30,000,000 in Two Per Cent. Panama Canal Bonds dated Aug. 1st. In October the important decision was announced that the canal should be completed by contract. The bidding was not limited to Americans, but it was stipulated that each bidder, or firm, must have £1,000,000 capital and deposit a £600,000 bond, the personnel of the Canal Commission to be unchanged. The United States Government promised protection to Chinese coolies engaged on the work.

Paris Metropolitan Railways.—Early in '08 it was announced that the Government and the Paris Municipal Council had agreed to a normal-gauge system to be worked by electricity. The railway east to west from Vincennes to the Porte Maillot was opened on July 19th, 1900, and the branch from the Place de l'Étoile to the Trocadéro was opened on Oct. 2nd. The completion of the second section was announced in Oct. 1902: it runs from the Arc de Triomphe to the Place d'Anvers, at the foot of Montmartre. The third section, from Avenue Villiers to the Place Gambetta, was opened as far as Père Lachaise on Oct. 17th, 1904. It includes a station in the Place de l'Opéra, right in front of the Opera House. It was announced in Feb. 1906 that the north and south line, connecting the Gare Montparnasse with the Mairie of the 18 Arrondissement, rather over two miles, will have the following stations besides the termini: Rues Notre-Dame-des-Champs, de Sèvres, du Bac, and de l'Université, Place de la Concorde, Madeleine, Gare Saint-Lazare, and Place des Abbesses.

This line will cross the Seine at the Pont de la Concorde, but under the river bed in two tubes, 5 metres (= 16 ft.) in diameter, one for each pair of rails. The cost is put, in round numbers, at 30,000,000 fr., or £1,200,000. The Financial News of May 30th gave the following figures as to the progress of construction of "the Metropolitan," the figures indicating the average number of kilometres open in each year and the net receipts per kilometre:

	Kilos.	Francs.
1900 . . . . .	5'135 . . . . .	143 741
1901 . . . . .	13'329 . . . . .	130'580
1902 . . . . .	14'272 . . . . .	109'769
1903 . . . . .	23'442 . . . . .	185 819
1904 . . . . .	26'037 . . . . .	200'104
1905 . . . . .	31'754 . . . . .	202'927

The disposable profit for 1905 amounted to 5,322,085 fr., against 6,794,171 for 1904, and the working ratio 42'34 per cent. against 42'49.

Peshawar Frontier Railway.—In June 1906 it was stated that progress was being made with this line, which was described as of a strategic character. It actually commences at Kachi Garhi, near the existing Jamrud railway, and the projected terminus is between the Kabul River and Lundi Kotal. A mountain tunnel is in the programme.

Prussian Canal Schemes.—This project was finally passed by the Prussian Diet in April 1905, and is a considerable modification of the great Rhine-Elbe scheme of 1901. The following works are to be undertaken. From the Rhine, somewhere below Ruhrort, the canal is to go east for about 25 miles along the Emscher valley to the neighbourhood of Herne, on the completed Dortmund-Ems Canal; a canal feeder, bringing water from the Lippe, is to enter this latter canal at Datteln, and the Lippe is to be regularised. At Bevergern the new canal is to branch off the Dortmund-Ems Canal and go east, across the Weser, as far as Hanover, a distance of 173 kilometres (108 miles), there to stop. In the eastern section Berlin is to be joined by a canal, 66 miles in length, to Hohen Saathen, on the Oder, which is to be regularised; the Warthe and Netze, and the new improvements of the old Bromberg Canal, will then continue the waterway over to the Vistula. The great canals will probably be constructed for vessels of 1000 tons. The estimated cost of the whole work is about £17,000,000. During 1905 the weight carried on the Dortmund-Ems Canal came to about 1,600,000 tons, an increase of eightfold in seven years. On June 9th, 1906, the German Emperor opened the Teltow Canal, connecting the Spree and the Havel, which had been constructed at a cost of £2,000,000.

Rigoroso Tunnel.—In order to further the development of Genoa, a commission appointed by the Italian Government reported in favour of the construction of a new railway connecting the port with Tortona, and details of the scheme were published in March 1905. The line will be 38 miles long, 12'22 miles of which will be the Rigoroso Tunnel, connecting Secca with that town. The tunnel is to have one opening at each end, with a double track, not in parallel duplicate like the Simplon (q.v.), and there will be five air-shafts and galleries used to begin with in the excavation work, which it was arranged should also be carried on from each end—at twelve faces in all. The cost of the tunnel, permanent way, etc., was estimated at £3,100,000.

River Barrow Viaduct.—See Fishguard.
Rotherhithe - Ratcliff Tunnel.—On April 25th, '99, the London County Council decided to adopt a recommendation of the Bridges Committee to construct a tunnel under the Thames between Rotherhithe and Ratcliff. The total length of the tunnel and approaches, from Union Road on the south to Commercial Road East on the north, will be about 1½ mile, and the dimensions will be slightly larger than the Blackwall Tunnel—30 ft. diameter external measurement, sufficient to obtain a carriage-way of 16 or 17 ft. and two footways of over 4 ft. each. During the session of 1900 Committees of both Houses passed the bill. At the meeting on Feb. 9th, 1904, the contract was let at £1,088,484, and the work is proceeding, the engineer-in-chief being Mr. M. Fitzmaurice, C.M.G., M.Inst.C.E.

Sahara Telegraph Line.—It was announced in Sept. 1905 that M. Etiennot, inspector of posts and telegraphs in Algeria, had completed his surveys for the Trans-Saharan telegraph. The project was the outcome of an arrangement between the Governors-General of Algeria and French West Africa, and the total length of the line will be 2500 miles: Timbuctoo will be linked up with Algiers, and the system will eventually reach Lake Tchad.

St. Lawrence (Québec) Bridge.—The length of this bridge will be 3220 ft., and the width 80 ft., there being provision for two railway tracks, two roadways, and two side-walks. But the chief feature is the great central span of 1800 ft., which will be the largest yet built. There are also two approach spans of 210 ft. each, and two shore arms of 500 ft. each. Good progress had been made, the approaches being finished and work on the bridge structure commenced by the autumn of 1905, when operations had to be suspended for the winter. Operations were recommenced on April 17th, 1906, and the erection of the main cantilever span was begun during the summer.

Sihl (Switzerland) Reservoir.—In the summer of 1906 it was reported that one of the largest storage reservoirs in the world for electric power purposes was in course of construction on the river Sihl, in the canton of Schwytz. A dam, 90 ft. high and 350 ft. long, will impound the water in a lake with a surface area of two square miles. The capacity of the reservoir will be 25,360,000,000 gals. The generating plant will be upon the shore of Lake Zurich, and will be operated under a head of 1575 ft. It is estimated that a continuous supply for 20,000 horse-power will be afforded, or for 45,000 horse-power if operated only ten hours per day.

Simplon Tunnel. (See former eds.) The actual piercing of this great tunnel was completed on Feb. 24th, 1905—that is to say the two headings from north and south met. The official inauguration by the King of Italy took place on May 10th, 1906, at Brieg, in the presence of the President of the Swiss Confederation. The formal opening was celebrated on May 30th. Electrification had by that time been decided upon, and some of the installation had been put in. The summer traffic proved so successful that it was announced in August that the Swiss Government contemplated enlarging the second tunnel to the full dimensions. Another reason for this step was the proposed construction of the Loetschberg Tunnel (q.v.). An official examination made in October showed that everything was in perfect order. The Simplon tunnel is about  $12\frac{1}{2}$  miles in length, and is the longest in the world, the next being the St. Gothard, about  $9\frac{1}{2}$ , Mont Cenis  $7\frac{1}{2}$ , and the Arlberg  $6\frac{1}{2}$  miles. It consists actually of two parallel tunnels, each for a single line of rails placed some 52 ft. apart from centre to centre; only one of these has been arched, the other is 10 ft. wide and 6 ft. or 7 ft. in height, and exists at present for ventilation purposes, but it will be completed for traffic when required. One terminus is at Brieg, in the Rhône valley. The Italian end is at Iselle.

Swansea's New Dock.—On July 20th, 1904, the King laid the foundation stone of "The King's Dock" at Swansea. At first the dock will have an area of 66 acres, which may be easily increased when required to 107 acres. The entrance for vessels will be through a lock situated near the end of the east pier. This lock will be made 875 ft. long between the sills of the inner and outer gates, and the width at the coping level will be 90 ft. The depth of water on the outer sill will be 40 ft. at high water of ordinary spring tides. To protect the entrance the west pier will be extended 1400 ft., and a new east pier will be built with an approach jetty extending from it to the lock, and alongside of this vessels will be brought to rest before entering the lock. Considerable progress was made with the work during 1906, the site of the dock having been drained, and the passage to the Prince of Wales Dock being completed. The cost, with equipments, was estimated at £1,750,000. At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Harbour Trust held in November, it was agreed to carry out an extension of the new King's Dock at its western end, the approximate cost being £30,000.

Trans-Andine Railway.—A feature of this line is a spiral tunnel made for the purpose of carrying the railway through the summit on the Andes range. It will have a very steep gradient—viz. 1 in  $12\frac{1}{2}$ —and traffic will be worked on the Abt rack system. To insure additional security, the rack will be trebled. The distance covered by the tunnel will be about 5 miles, but its actual length will be nearly double. The first section of the railway to Juncal was inaugurated on Feb. 12th, 1906; it is 32 miles long. It was reported in June that the work in the two other sections was in a forward state. It is hoped that the whole undertaking will be completed in Sept. 1908.

Transcaspien Railways.—See RUSSIA.

Trans-Pyrenean Railways.—In Aug. 1904 it was announced that the French Minister of Foreign Affairs and the Spanish Ambassador to France had signed an important railway convention affecting the two countries. It was for the construction of three lines of railway across the Pyrenees, to run from Ax-les-Thermes to Ripoli, from Oloron to Quera, and from St. Giron to Lerida. All three routes—two of which involve long tunnelling—will affect Toulouse as a centre. It was proposed to take them all in hand simultaneously. On March 8th, 1905, an additional protocol was signed at Paris, by which the Spanish Government bound itself to construct within the next ten years the Spanish section of the line between Lerida and St. Giron.

Tyne New High-Level Bridge. This structure, which was opened by the King, who was accompanied by the Queen, on July 10th, 1906, is to be known as King Edward's Bridge. It has been erected by the North-Eastern Railway Company, is the largest engineering work of the kind, after the Forth Bridge, undertaken in this country, and stands about half a mile distant from Stephenson's old high-level bridge, which for many years connected Newcastle and Gateshead. The superstructure is of steel lattice-girders, and the girder-spans are four in number, the first, starting from the Newcastle side, being nearly 240 ft. long, the next two 300 ft. each, and that on the Gateshead side 191 ft. long, the total length between abutments being 1150 ft. There is a clear headway for river traffic at high water of 83 ft. The bridge carries four lines of rails, and trains going north and south are now enabled to run right through without having to run into the Central Station and back out again. Mr. C. A. Harrison, M.Inst.C.E., was responsible for the design, and the contractors were the Cleveland Bridge and Engineering Co. (Darlington). The cost was nearly half a million sterling.

Vauxhall New Bridge.—This bridge, which had been  $7\frac{1}{2}$  years in course of construction, was formally opened on May 26th, 1906, by Mr. Evan Spicer, chairman of the London County Council. The cost was £437,000, including acquisition of property and the outlay (£40,000) on a temporary bridge. It carries a tram line, the first to cross any bridge in London. The total length of the bridge is nearly 760 ft. This distance is divided into five spans, which include one central opening of 149 ft. 7 in. in width, flanked on both sides by a span of 144 ft.  $4\frac{3}{4}$  in., and having two shore spans of 130 ft.  $5\frac{1}{4}$  in. The superstructure consists of five segmentally shaped steel arches. The roadway has a width of 50 ft., and the two footpaths of 15 ft. Over all to the outer edge of the parapet copings the extreme width is 82 ft.  $8\frac{1}{2}$  in. The bridge has been constructed from the designs of Mr. Maurice Fitzmaurice, C.M.G., M.Inst.C.E., chief engineer to the London County Council. Mr. W. E. Riley, F.R.I.B.A., was associated with Mr. Fitzmaurice as regards the ornamental features of the superstructure. Messrs. Pethick Bros., of Plymouth, were the contractors for the substructure, and Messrs. C. Wall, Ltd., for the steel work.

ENGLAND AND WALES, LOCAL GOVERNMENT OF.

It is only within a comparatively recent period that a complete system of Local Government administration in England and Wales has been established. A sketch of the gradual evolution of the existing system, through the Municipal Corporations Acts of 1835 and '82, the Public Health Acts of '48, '72 and '75, the Local Government Acts of '58, '88 and '04, will be found in the 1900 edition. See also LONDON, ADMINISTRATION OF.

The Lord Lieutenant of each county represents the Crown, but the position is mainly an honorary one. In each county there is also a Sheriff, "pricked" or appointed annually by the Crown, and a Clerk of the Peace (who is generally the Clerk of the County Council).

Local Government Board.

This department was established by the Local Government Board Act, '71, and superseded the Poor Law Board, which had dealt only with Poor Law matters, and had existed since '47, when it took the place of the Poor Law Commissioners. The Local Government Board became the central department for Poor Law, Public Health, and other Local Government matters, and many duties were transferred to it that had previously been carried out by departments of the Home Office and the Privy Council. The year after the Board was established considerable changes were made by the Public Health Act, '72, and new duties of a very extensive character were imposed on the department. From that date to the present no session has passed without further additions being made to its work, so that there is not a local authority of any kind whatever that is not now to some extent subject to its control.

The Board has an extensive control over Boards of Guardians; it regulates and directs their procedure by orders which do not require confirmation by Parliament; and its sanction is necessary to most of their acts, including the appointment and dismissal of the more important officers. Over the other authorities its power is not so complete, but County Councils, Town Councils, Urban and Rural District Councils, as well as Parish Councils, all have to obtain the Board's sanction to their proposals to borrow money, to make bye-laws, and to do many other things. The power of sanctioning loans enables the Board to impose conditions and see that the various works proposed by the Councils, such as works of sewerage, water supply, and housing, are properly carried out. It has power to enforce the performance of certain duties by local authorities—such as the provision of a proper water supply or a system of sewerage. The Board has extensive powers of altering boundaries and areas; it can issue Provisional Orders for various local purposes which, when confirmed, have the effect of an Act of Parliament; and it reports to the Parliamentary Committees on the proposals of Local Authorities in Private Bills. In connection with County and County Borough Councils the Board performs an important work in managing the Local Taxation Account.

Under the Burial Act, 1901, many powers and duties previously belonging to the Home Office were transferred to the Board, and by the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1903, provision is made for the transfer to the Board of the remaining powers of the Home Office as regards the housing of the working classes, and under the Local Authorities (Treasury Powers) Act, 1906, certain powers of the Treasury in regard to dealing with property and loans of local authorities are transferred to the Board.

The Local Government Board exercises most important functions as regards the country at large. It takes active precautions to prevent the introduction or spread of any specially dangerous diseases, such as plague or smallpox, and can prohibit the importation of infected articles. The Board also has some control over the Metropolitan Water Board, the authority for the supplying of water to London and the surrounding area.

The Board is represented throughout the country by a large staff of General Inspectors, who attend meetings of Boards of Guardians and inspect all Poor Law institutions; by Engineering Inspectors, who inquire into all proposals for sewage disposal works, water supply schemes, street improvements, and other undertakings that involve the raising of loans; by Medical Inspectors, who visit districts in which any epidemic disease breaks out, and report upon it and advise as to the steps needed to prevent its recurrence, and who inspect vaccination work; by Poor Law Medical Inspectors, whose duties extend to the medical supervision of workhouses, infirmaries, and Poor Law schools; and by County and District Auditors, who audit the accounts of practically all local authorities other than Municipal Corporations, and have power to disallow and surcharge against individual members all items of expenditure which in their opinion are illegal. An appeal can be made to the Board against any disallowance or surcharge, and it has power to grant remission. Under the Education Act, 1902, the Education accounts of Town Councils are subject to this audit.

There has of late been a demand from various quarters that the Local Government Board should be raised to the rank of a Secretary of State's office, and a committee in 1904 considered the question of the Board's status. A bill was introduced by the Government in the session of 1905 making the president of this office a Secretary of State, but it did not reach second reading.

The Board consists of a President (who is a Cabinet Minister), the five principal Secretaries of State, the Lord President of the Council, the Lord Privy Seal, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer; but the whole of the functions of the Board are vested in the President. Everything that the Board does is done in his name, and he is responsible to Parliament for all its acts. The Department is also represented in Parliament by a Parliamentary Secretary. The usual functions of the Board are, however, exercised by the Permanent Secretary and five Assistant Secretaries. The staff of the Department numbers over 600.

President: Rt. Hon. John Burns, M.P.

Parliamentary Secretary: W. Runciman, M.P.

Permanent Secretary: Sir S. B. Provis, K.C.B.

Assistant Secretary and Chief General Inspector: J. S. Davy, C.B.

Police of England and Wales (Counties and Boroughs).

The authorised strength of county and borough police was for the year ended Sept. 29th, 1905, 29,242. Out of this number there were 1432 in the Liverpool force, exclusive of 496 appointed at private cost. The Manchester force contained 1157 men, exclusive of 17 appointed at private cost; Birmingham 880, exclusive of 17 appointed at private cost; Leeds 578; Bristol 550, exclusive of 16 at private cost; and Sheffield 515, exclusive of 33 appointed at private cost. All these cities and boroughs and a few others of the more populous towns have a more or less efficient detective police service. Those for Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, Leeds, and Bristol appear to be very good.

Local Administrative Bodies.

The various local administrative bodies that now exist in England and Wales are as follows:—

County Councils for administrative counties, Municipal Corporations for county boroughs and non-county boroughs,

Urban District Councils for urban districts other than boroughs,

Rural District Councils for rural districts,

Parish Councils for parishes having a population of 300, or if with a less population by special grant from the County Council, and Parish Meetings for every rural parish—that is, for every parish not comprised in an urban district or borough.

Besides these, there are the Boards of Guardians for Poor Law Unions.

The elections of all these bodies are now conducted by ballot and in similar manner to Parliamentary elections. Elections are held either triennially or annually (for a third of the body). The next triennial elections take place in the spring of 1907. Elections of Guardians, Urban and Rural District Councils, and Parish Councillors, are regulated by special rules issued by the Local Government Board. Parochial Electors, i.e., persons on the parliamentary or local government register, are entitled to vote at these elections. The qualification for election as Guardian, District or Parish Councillor, consists in either being a Parochial Elector or having resided within the parish or district during the whole of the twelve months preceding the election. Town Councillors are elected by the burgesses, and the qualification for election consists in being a burgess and possessing or occupying property in the borough of a certain value. The qualification for a County Councillor is similar to that of a Town Councillor, but, in addition, peers owning property in the county, and persons registered as ownership voters for parliamentary elections, are qualified.

Other Poor Law authorities, who exercise power in relation to the relief of the poor, are (1) The Metropolitan Asylums Board, who are the managers of the Metropolitan Asylums District, constituted under the Metropolitan Poor Act ('67) for the reception and relief of fever and small-pox patients; (2) The Managers of two Metropolitan Sick Asylum Districts, constituted under the same Act; and (3) The Managers of School Districts formed under the Poor Law Amendment Act ('44) for the maintenance of district schools, to which children are sent by certain boards of guardians instead of being maintained in the workhouses or in schools provided by the guardians.

Rating Powers.

The most generally levied rate is the Poor Rate, which is raised in every parish outside London by the Overseers of the Poor. It was instituted by the statute of 43 Elizabeth, and for over two centuries it was practically raised for and limited to the maintenance of poor persons unable through sickness or otherwise to maintain themselves or their families; but by degrees it became convenient to graft upon it other charges; and now County Councils, Boards of Guardians, Municipal Corporations as regards their expenditure under the Municipal Corporations Act, and as Local Education Authorities, Rural District Councils, Parish Councils and Parish Meetings raise their funds for their various purposes out of this rate, either indirectly or by precept addressed to the Overseers. Thus County Councils levy a county rate upon Boards of Guardians of the various Unions in the county. These Boards in their turn raise the money which they require for Poor Law purposes, and for the purpose of meeting the county-rate precepts, by issuing contribution orders on the Overseers for the sums to be raised by means of the Poor Rate.

A different mode of raising money is, however, prescribed in respect of moneys required by Municipal Corporations when acting as sanitary authorities under the Public Health Act and by Urban District Councils. In both these cases a special rate called the General District Rate is levied, and this is assessed at a lower rate upon land than that which is charged on buildings and other properties. Rural District Councils have power to raise moneys for expenses chargeable to any particular parish by requiring the Overseers to levy a special sanitary rate; and Parish Councils have power by means of precepts upon the Overseers to require special rates to be raised for lighting and for public libraries.

For the purpose of preparing the Poor Rate a valuation list is made for each parish, containing particulars as to the gross rental and rateable value of all properties in the parish liable to be rated. These valuation lists are the basis for practically all the local rates. In London the Borough Councils act as Overseers and raise one rate for all purposes, called the General Rate.

The total amount raised by the Poor Rates during the year ended Lady Day, 1905, was £25,116,041. There is no fixed limit to the amount of the rate which may be raised by a local authority.

Local Taxation Account.

This is an Account kept at the Bank of England into which certain Imperial Revenues are paid for distribution by the Local Government Board to County and County Borough Councils in aid of Local Taxation. It was established under the Local Government Act, '88, when the system of direct grants by Parliament in aid of special services ceased. The Commissioners of Inland Revenue pay into the Account the proceeds of the duties on certain specified licences (beer, spirits, game, tobacco, etc.), called local taxation licences; and the amount of these licences ascertained to have been collected in each county is paid out of the Local Taxation Account to the council of such county. The Commissioners also pay into the Account 80 per cent. of half the proceeds of the Estate Duty; this grant is distributed among the counties in proportion to the share which the Local Government Board certified to have been received by each county during the financial year '87-8 out of the grants previously made in aid of local rates, and is used in relief of local taxation. In addition, there is paid into the Account 80 per cent. of the amount raised by certain Beer and Spirit Duties—viz., 3d. a barrel on beer and 6d. a gallon on spirits. The sums paid into the Account for the year ended Lady Day, 1905, were as follows:—

Local Taxation Licences	£3,727,678
Estate Duty	2,154,438
Beer and Spirit Duties	1,121,189
Total	£7,003,305

Out of this amount £839,321 went to defray the cost of the Metropolitan Police, and £300,000 more was used for Police Superannuation, half going to the metropolitan district, and half to the rest of the country. Practically all the rest was distributed among the County Councils in aid of local taxation. The sums thus distributed represent relief to the extent of 7·06d. in the £ to London, 8·8d. in the £ to other counties, and 7·9d. in the £ to county boroughs.

There are separate Local Taxation Accounts for Scotland (q.v.) and Ireland (q.v.). The Local Taxation Accounts of the three countries also receive the amount of the Agricultural Grants allotted to them. See FINANCE, NATIONAL.

Land Rating (Agricultural).

By the Agricultural Rates Act, '96, occupiers of agricultural land in England and Wales were exempted from payment of one-half of the rates otherwise payable on land during the five years ending March 31st, 1902. The period was extended in 1901 for four years—i.e. to 1906, and by an Act passed in 1905 to 1910. This exemption does not apply in respect of rates to which land is already assessed at only one-half or less than one-half its rateable value, such as the General District Rate in urban districts and the Special Expenses Rate in rural districts; nor does it apply to rates levied in respect of works primarily for the benefit of the land, such as drainage, walls, and embankments; but it operates as regards all the other important rates, including the Poor Rate, County Rate, Borough Rate, etc. Agricultural land is "any land used as arable, meadow or pasture land only; cottage gardens exceeding a quarter of an acre, market gardens, nursery grounds, orchards, or allotments, but does not include land occupied together with a house, as a park, gardens other than as aforesaid, pleasure grounds, any land kept or preserved mainly or exclusively for purposes of sport or recreation, or land used as a racecourse." To meet the deficiency thus arising, and to prevent a greater burden being placed on occupiers of other property, grants-in-aid are made by the Local Government Board to "spending authorities" out of the Local Taxation Account, the Inland Revenue Commissioners paying the annual sum required into the Account out of the proceeds of Estate Duty on personal property. The "spending authorities" are the Councils of Counties, Boroughs, and Urban and Rural Districts, Boards of Guardians, and the Receiver of the Metropolitan Police District. The total rateable value of agricultural land in England and Wales in July '96, was £24,565,058; at Lady-day 1904 it had fallen to £23,768,029. The total rateable value of all property had risen from £165,412,266 in '96 to £199,355,590 in 1904, and £202,835,295 in 1905. The assessable value for the purposes of the Agricultural Rates Act was £190,967,001. The total amount of the grants paid to authorities in England and Wales during 1905-6 was £1,326,924. Of this £433,851 went to County Councils, £354,417 to Rural District Councils, and £499,473 to Boards of Guardians. These grants represent an average rate of about 1s. 1d. in the £ on the total rateable value of agricultural land.

Local Taxation Statistics.

Local authorities are required to make annual returns of their receipts and expenditure to the Local Government Board, who in due course publish the information thus obtained in summary form. The latest complete returns are for the year 1903-4. These include summaries of the accounts of about 27,700 local authorities, including 62 County Councils, 69 County Boroughs, 250 other Municipal Boroughs, 812 Urban District Councils for districts other than boroughs, 672 Rural District Councils, 6531 Parish Councils, 390 Parish Meetings, 657 Boards of Guardians, and 2553 School Boards, besides a host of other authorities, such as Hospital Boards, Harbour Boards, Commissioners of Sewers, Burial Authorities, etc.

The total receipts of local authorities in England and Wales during the year amounted to £133,658,000, and the total expenditure to £129,224,170. (This latter amount does not include the sums expended by School Boards not in London or County Boroughs; but in the previous year these sums amounted to £3,962,080).

(1) The receipts comprised the following items:

Public rates	£	52,941,665
Grants out of moneys raised by the Imperial Government	15,613,892
Rents and profits of property	2,656,221
Revenue (gross) of local undertakings, such as gasworks, waterworks, tramways, &c.	24,284,400
Loans	31,279,470

The amount raised by rates represented the following average per pound of valuation, viz.—

in 1879-80 it was	3	3	5
1903-4	5	9	5
and per head of population
in 1879-80 it was	17	4
1903-4	31	9

Of the receipts, 39·5 per cent. came from public rates, 11·1 per cent. from Imperial grants, 14·2 per cent. from revenue from local undertakings, and 23·7 per cent. from loans.

(2) The expenditure comprised the following items:—

Highways, bridges and ferries	£	15,376,302
Poor relief and maintenance of pauper lunatics	14,959,902
Education	13,693,957
Higher Education	2,056,924
Police	6,007,050
Sewerage and sewage disposal	4,404,875
Gasworks, waterworks and other local undertakings	27,205,120

To show the rapid rise of the expenditure of local authorities it may be stated that in 1874-5 the total receipts were	£	42,735,932

1894-5	75,937,586
and 1903-4	133,658,000

The amount raised each year by loans has increased greatly of late. Thus the amount raised in 1874-5 was	£	11,917,288

1894-5	15,481,230
and 1903-4	31,279,470

This last figure represents a decrease of about £4,000,000 on the amount borrowed in the previous year.

The total amount of outstanding loans has risen every year since 1874-5, when the total was

£	92,820,100
---	------------

In 1894-5 it had risen to £	235,335,049

while in 1903-4 it was.

£	393,882,146

Of the total sum outstanding, upwards of £187,100,454, or 47·5 per cent., has been borrowed for undertakings which are or may be reproductive.

The local debt of England and Wales was thus over 49 per cent. of the National debt, which at the end of the year 1903-4 amounted to £794,498,099.

This local debt represents £2 os. 5d. on every pound of rateable value for the whole of England and Wales, and £11 16s. per head of population. In 1874-5 the average was 16s. per pound of rateable value and £3 18s. 3d. per head of population.

The rateable value of property in England has risen each year since 1874, when the total was

In 1884 it had risen to . . .	£115,646,631
In 1894 to . . .	145,527,944
In 1894 to . . .	161,139,575
and in 1905 it was . . .	202,835,295

The total rateable value in 1874 represented an average of £4 17s. 6d. per head of population, while in 1905 the average was £5 18s. 9d.

1906 Departmental Committee.

The President of the Local Government Board in Jan. 1906 appointed a Departmental Committee to inquire and report with regard to: (1) The systems on which the accounts of local authorities in England and Wales are at present kept; (2) Generally as to the system on which the accounts of the various local authorities in England and Wales should be kept, and in particular whether such accounts should be prepared on a system requiring the entries of receipts and payments to be confined as far as possible to actual receipts and payments of money or not; and (3) The regulations which should be made on the subject, regard being had to the necessity for showing accurately the amounts raised by local taxation and the purposes for which they are applied. The committee consists of Mr. Walter Runciman, M.P. (Chairman), Mr. J. Bromley, C.B., Mr. T. Pitts, C.B., Mr. R. Barrow, Mr. E. P. Burd, Mr. J. J. Burnley, Mr. J. Gane, and Mr. F. Merrifield. Secretary, Mr. G. R. Snowden, of the Local Government Board.

Poor Law Statistics.

The total number of paupers of all classes in England and Wales in receipt of relief on Jan. 1st, 1906, was 927,747, or approximately 1 in 37, or 2·7 per cent. of the population. This was a decrease of 5526 on the total for Jan. 1st, 1905. This number included 108,629 insane paupers. Of the ordinary paupers 218,127 were men, 344,038 women, and 239,903 children under 16. The total number of indoor paupers was 279,037, while the number of those receiving outdoor relief was 562,662. Of the pauper children about one-quarter were relieved in workhouses, schools and other institutions. The total number of paupers on Jan. 1st, 1906, was actually higher than in any of the last 25 years, except the year 1905, but the proportion of pauperism to the total population has shown a decline: thus in 1881 the total number was 3 per cent. compared with the 2·7 per cent. in 1906. The number of able-bodied paupers in 1906 was 116,583, as compared with 105,000 in 1881.

The total expenditure on the relief of the poor in England and Wales for the year ended Lady Day, 1905 (other than expenditure defrayed out of loans), was £13,851,981, a larger sum than that recorded in any previous year. It represented an average charge of 8s. 2½d. per head on the estimated population, and, compared with the previous year, showed an increase of 2½d. per head. In London the expenditure came to £3,685,533, and the total cost per pauper was £27 17s. 10d., as compared with £13 7s. 9d. outside London. The total cost per pauper for the year in question was £15 13s. 3d. and per each outdoor pauper £5 19s. 5d.

Royal Commission on Poor Law.

On Nov. 20th, 1905, the appointment was announced of a Royal Commission to inquire: (1) into the working of the laws relating to the relief of poor persons in the United Kingdom; (2) into the various means which have been adopted outside of the Poor Laws for meeting distress arising from want of employment, particularly during periods of severe industrial depression; and to consider and report whether any, and if so what, modification of the Poor Laws or changes in their administration, or fresh legislation for dealing with distress are advisable. The Commissioners are: Lord George Hamilton, M.P. (chairman), the R.C. Bishop of Ross, Sir H. A. Robinson, K.C.B., Mr. Charles Booth, F.R.S., Sir Samuel Provis, K.C.B., Mr. F. H. Benthams, Dr. A. Downes, Rev. T. Gage Gardiner, Mr. George Lansbury, Mr. C. S. Loch, Mr. J. Patten Macdougall, Mr. T. Hancock Nunn, Rev. L. S. Phelps, Professor William Smart, Rev. H. Russell Wakefield, Mrs. Bernard Bosanquet, Mrs. Sidney Webb, and Miss Octavia Hill. Office, 68, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.

ESPERANTO.

The British Esperanto Association was established in October 1904 as a national centre for the promotion of the use of Esperanto as an international medium of communication. This neutral auxiliary language is the invention of Dr. Zamenhof, of Warsaw, who was born at Bielo-stok, in Poland, in 1859, and in '87 published his brochure "An International Language, by Dr. Esperanto." For the first ten years little apparent success rewarded him, but since '97 its progress has been rapid and uninterrupted. There are now about 300 groups, situated in all parts of the world, and forming centres of active propaganda. Of these 70 are within the British Empire.

Its own journals and magazines number more than twenty, and circulate in every civilised country. The chief of these "Gazetoj" are Lingvo Internacia, a bi-monthly; Internacia Scienca Revuo; La Revuo; Tra la Mondo (illustrated), monthlies, published in France. In England The British Esperantist is the official organ of the Association, and in Germany La Germana Esperantisto.

The merits and uses of Esperanto have appealed to all sections of the community. Educationists, scientists, tourists, commercial men, etc., are rapidly recognising its practical and valuable nature. The French Physical Society, the International Association of Electricians, the Touring Club de France, Sir William Ramsay, Profs. Becquerel, Berthelot, Carlo Bourlet, Dr. Lloyd of Liverpool University, Major-Gen. Geo. Cox, Mr. W. T. Stead, Mr. Felix Moscheles, and many other well-known men and institutions are according it their active support. In France it has already been added to the curriculum of many lycées and gymnasia, and is taught in the secondary schools. Examinations are held by the London Chamber of Commerce, the National Union of Teachers, etc., and it is taught in evening schools under the London Education Committee and others in the provinces. Esperantists of all nations meet in Congress every year, the first having occurred at Boulogne in 1905, and the second at Geneva. The third will meet in England in August 1907.

The chief characteristics of Esperanto are its simplicity of construction, the facility with which it may be acquired, and the practical ease and euphony of its pronunciation. Its grammar is strictly scientific, its rules having been reduced to essentials, and being subject to no exceptions or irregularities. Its vocabulary consists of some three thousand root-forms, which have been selected from the most familiar languages, so that they may be easily acquired by any person of average education and intelligence. By co-ordination of these roots, by scientific modification by inflexion, and by an ingenious system of a few suffixes and prefixes, it is possible to convey in the exactest manner every shade of meaning. Its alphabet consists of 28 letters, each letter having an invariable sound, so that it is understandable as a spoken language by every nationality. In all these respects—in sound, in construction, in practicability and in adherents—it stands without a rival, and provides at once an actual and proved instrument of communication with all who differ in their national forms of speech.

President, British Esperanto Association, John Pollen, Esq., C.I.E., LL.D., Lieut.-Col. B.V.R., V.D.; Hon. Secretary, Mr. Sidney Nicoll, 13, Arundel Street, Strand, London, W.C.

ETHICAL SOCIETIES.

Ethical Societies are associations for promoting ethical culture. Their objects are: (a) by purely natural and human means to help men to love, know, and do the right; (b) to emphasise the moral factor in all personal, social, political, national, and international relations; (c) to affirm that moral ideas and the moral life are independent of beliefs as to the ultimate nature of things and as to a life after death; (d) to assist in developing the science of ethics. The ethical movement in America was initiated by Dr. Felix Adler of New York, and has spread to Philadelphia, Chicago, and St. Louis; also to Germany, Switzerland, Austria, Italy, and New Zealand. An International Committee exists.

The following Societies are established in London: South Place Ethical Society, South Place Chapel, Finsbury, E.C.; West London Ethical Society, which meets at Kensington Town Hall; East London Ethical Society, Bromley Public Hall, E.; South London Ethical Society, Surrey Masonic Hall, S.E.; St. Pancras Ethical Society, Spencer Hall, 19, Dartmouth Park Hill, N.W.; Battersea Ethical Society, Upper Town Hall, Lavender Hill; Hampstead Ethical Institute, Hampstead Conservatoire, Swiss Cottage; Ethical Religion Society, Steinway Hall, near Portmaa Square, W., Lecturer, Dr. Washington Sullivan; Wimbledon Ethical Society, Trinity Hall, Southey Road, Wimbledon; Forest Gate Ethical Church, Earlsdon Hall, Earlsdon Grove; Wood Green Ethical Society, Fairfax Hall, Harringay, N.; Greenwich Ethical Society, Royal Hill Council School; North Kensington Ethical Society, Cornwall Hall, Notting Hill; East Ham Ethical Fellowship, Wakefield Hall; Plumstead Ethical Society, Conway Road Council School; Fulham Ethical Society, Fulham Palace Road Council School; Holloway Ethical Society, Hornsey Road Schools, N.W.

There are also Societies at Croydon (Hon.

Sec., Mr. Roland A. Richards, "Fellside," Hook Hill, Sanderstead), Belfast (York Street Lecture Hall, Hon. Sec., Mr. T. H. Gilliland, 40, St. Ives Gardens, Stranmillis Road, Belfast), Chesterfield (Hon. Sec., Mr. Dentith, Avenue Road, Whittington Moor, near Chesterfield), Sheffield (Organising Sec., Mr. H. R. Gillespie, 106, Townhead Road, Sheffield), Nelson (Gen. Sec., Mr. J. H. Husband, 22, Clifford Street, Nelson), Liverpool (Hon. Sec., Mr. R. D. Brown, 40, Somerville Road, Waterloo, Liverpool), Merthyr, S. Wales (Hon. Sec., Mr. R. Davies, 17, Awelrryn, Penydarren, Merthyr), Cardiff, S. Wales (Hon. Sec., Mr. Stanley Jenkins, 129, Mackintosh Place, Cardiff), Neath, S. Wales (Hon. Sec., Mr. J. H. Murrin, 12, Geoffrey Street, Neath), Brighton (Hon. Sec., Mr. R. Dimsdale Stocker, Athenæum Hall).

Many of the above societies are federated into a Union of Ethical Societies. Central Office, 19, Buckingham Street, Strand, W.C.; Secretary, Mr. H. Snell.

Ethological Society. A society for the systematic study of human character. Its proceedings are published in the "Ethological Journal." Hon. Sec., A. Flindell Brady; Office, 35A, Welbeck Street, Cavendish Square, W.

Evans, Hon. John William, Premier of Tasmania, was b. in Liverpool 1855, and went out with his parents to Tasmania in '59. He chose a seaman's life, and commanded several ships under the Tasmanian Steam Navigation Co. In '94 he was appointed manager of Huddart, Parker Proprietary's branch office at Hobart. M.L.A. '96; Premier July 1904.

Extradition. Extradition is the surrender of a prisoner accused of a crime by the Government in whose territories he has taken refuge to the Government of which he is a subject, so that he may be punished or dealt with according to its laws for an offence committed within its jurisdiction. In the absence of treaty stipulations there is no obligation according to international law for the asylum state to surrender and deliver to the demanding state persons who have committed crimes within the dominion of the latter country; yet, as a matter of courtesy and comity between nations, fugitives from justice have sometimes been surrendered to friendly nations without treaty. In 1904 there were 71 applications for extradition received in this country from foreign Governments, including 23 from France and 14 from Germany. In 38 cases the accused person was extradited. The English Government made 15 applications for extradition, of which 6 were addressed to the United States. Consult "The Law and Practice of Extradition" (Stevens & Sons), by Messrs. H. C. Biron and K. E. Chalmers.

FACTORY AND WORKSHOP REGULATIONS.

For a complete summary of the Factory and Workshop Act 1901, which amended and consolidated all previous legislation having for its object the regulation of factories and workshops, see eds. 1902 and 1903.

According to the annual report of the Chief Inspector of Factories and Workshops for 1905, at the end of the year there were upon the registers 107,193 factories and 144,619 workshops, including laundries, but not men's workshops, docks, warehouses, or (in general) domestic workshops. Although the registration of men's workshops is still incomplete, there were 21,883 entries of these, a net increase of 2,387 in 1905. The number of persons employed in factories is (approximately) 4,150,000, in workshops (excluding men's workshops) 700,000, and in laundries 100,000.

The inspection of factories and workshops is carried out under the control of the Home Office, which employs for the work a special staff of 165 inspectors (including assistants), of whom 13 are women. These inspectors have full powers of entry to any factory, workshop, laundry, dock, wharf or other premises under the Act, or school where factory children are educated. They may call for any registers or documents kept in accordance with the Act, and may conduct proceedings connected with their office before a magistrate. The Act prescribes limits of the hours in which women (of 18 years and upwards), young persons (from 14 to 18), and children (12 to 14) may be employed; also intervals for meals, certain holidays, and a weekly short day. When a person enters upon the occupation of a factory or workshop he must serve on the inspector for the district a written notice containing a description of the place, its machinery, and the work to be carried on there. Various prescribed notices must be affixed at the entrance to the factory or workshop, and a register kept in which to record particulars as to the children and young persons employed, accidents, cleaning, and other matters dealt with in the Act. Periodical returns of the number, age, sex and occupation of persons employed are required from the occupiers of factories and workshops. The chief inspector appoints certifying surgeons, whose duty it is to investigate accidents and to examine young persons and children employed in factories and give certificates of fitness for employment. In the case of certain dangerous trades under Special Rules, a periodical examination by the certifying surgeon is required.

Workshops, workplaces, and (to a limited extent) factories are subject to the provisions of the law relating to public health. Local authorities, accordingly, are charged with the duty of seeing that such places are kept in a clean and sanitary condition, properly ventilated, and not overcrowded. They have special powers with regard to bakehouses. They are responsible for insuring that factories and workshops are provided with means of escape in case of fire. They must keep a register of outworkers, and see that the places where they work are not unwholesome.

The Truck Acts of '31, '87, and '96, the main objects of which are (1) to insure the payment of wages to workpeople in current coin of the realm, without imposing upon them any obligation to spend any part of such wages in any particular way or at any particular shop; and (2) to prevent fines or deductions being imposed unreasonably or without due notice to the worker, are, so far as factories and workshops are concerned, administered by the Factory Inspectors, who for this purpose have the same powers as under the Factory Acts. A Committee of Inquiry into the working of the Truck Acts was appointed by the Home Secretary in April 1901. It is to report what amendments of these Acts, or changes in their administration, are desirable; particularly whether fines and deductions from wages should be prohibited; and whether the practice of shop assistants and certain classes of workpeople being lodged and boarded by their employers gives rise to abuses needing remedy. Chairman, Rt. Hon. T. Shaw, M.P. Sec., T. E. Bettany, Home Office, S.W.

See LABOUR MOVEMENT for statistics.
Chief Inspector, Dr. B. A. Whitelegge, C.B., Home Office.

Deputy Chief Inspector, Mr. W. D. Cramp, I.S.O., Home Office.

Fairbairn, Rev. A. M., M.A., D.Litt. (Oxon.), D.D. (Edin. and Yale), LL.D. (Aberdeen), D.Litt. (Leeds), Principal of Mansfield College, Oxford, was b. 1838, near Edinburgh, and ed. at Edinburgh and Berlin universities. Commenced ministry ('60) at Bathgate, Linlithgowshire, removing in '72 to Aberdeen. In '77 he became Principal of Airedale College, Bradford. For five years he lectured at his alma mater, Edinburgh University, on "The Comparative History of Religions," and in '92-4 was Gifford Lecturer at Aberdeen University. In '83 he was elected Chairman of the Congregational Union of England and Wales.

In '86 he was appointed Principal of Mansfield College. He is one of the constituent Fellows of the British Academy. He has visited and lectured in America at Yale University, at the University of Chicago (the Haskell lectures on Comparative Religion in India for '98-9), and at Union Seminary, New York. Edited the Hibbert Lectures, '88, of the late Dr. Hatch. He has written "Studies in the Philosophy of Religion and History," "Studies in the Life of Christ," "Religion in History and in Modern Life," "Christ in Modern Theology," "Christ in the Centuries," "Catholicism, Roman and Anglican" ('99) and "The Philosophy of the Christian Religion" (1902).

- V. THE BUDGET.

I. THE REVENUE.

The revenue of the State collected by Imperial officers is paid part into the Exchequer and part to the Local Taxation Accounts. The aggregate revenue so raised amounted in 1904-5 to £153,183,000, and in 1905-6 to £153,879,000; and in the latter year £143,978,000 was paid into the Exchequer (see TABLE A), and £9,901,000 (in round figures) into the Local Taxation Accounts.

The figures given below under the headings of Customs, Excise, etc., show the net receipts under the heads of duties; the total net produce, and the amount paid into the Exchequer, and in the case of Customs, Excise, and Estate Duties into the Local Taxation Accounts also. There is frequently a little variation between the total receipts and the total payments, a little being sometimes left in hand which may go to augment the payments in the next year.

Land Tax, House Duty, Income Tax, Miscellaneous.

The items Land Tax and House Duty speak for themselves. In regard to the Property and Income Tax, which was at the rate of 1s. in the £, an approximate appropriation of the net receipts under the different schedules, if based on the statistics of assessments for 1904-5, would be:

Schedule A, Lands, Tenements, etc., £7,948,867;

Schedule B, Occupation of Lands, Tenements, etc., £219,063;

Schedule C, Annuities, Dividends, etc., £2,065,453;

Schedule D, Professions, Trades, etc., £18,526,493;

Schedule E, Public Offices, Annuities from Public Revenues, etc., £2,534,875.

See also separate article INCOME TAX.

The gross Post Office receipts were: postage stamps sold (£17,547,554), postage collected in cash (£465,255), postage from foreign and colonial offices (£191,561), commission on money orders (£150,498), commission on postal orders (£428,863), and certain miscellaneous receipts amounting to £45,104—total £18,828,833. The payments made out of these receipts include £577,800 to Inland Revenue department, £1,025,499 to railway companies on account of Parcel Post, and £373,012 postage collected for credit of foreign and colonial offices—the total of all such payments being £2,005,000, leaving the net receipts £16,823,000.

Under the heading of Crown Lands comes the produce of the Woods, Forests, and Land Revenues of the Crown, which was paid into the Exchequer and consolidated with the rest of the public revenue in return for the Royal Civil List (see below). The interest and dividend received in the year on 170,959 ordinary Suez Canal Shares amounted to £1,023,208, and there was also received £30,115 dividend for the same period on 6018 "actions de jouissance." Up to March 31st, 1905, 6018 ordinary shares had been drawn and paid off, and 425 were drawn and paid off in 1905-6. There was also received in respect of loans, including Greek, Fiji, and from the Wuchang Viceroy, a total sum of £45,271.

"Miscellaneous" contains many items of interest. Small branches of the Hereditary Revenue brought in £68,302; and in other receipts are included £335 conscience money, £35,569 seignorage on silver purchased for coinage, and £78,402 profit on bronze coinage. A large item under the head of Miscellaneous is £990,564 Fee and Patent Stamps. Among the sums in this last total are Companies' Registration, £72,447; County Courts, Ireland, £21,106; District Audit, £52,828; Judicature, England, £362,532; Judicature, Ireland, £33,638; Patents for Inventions, £261,253; Newspaper Registration, £302; Edinburgh Gazette, £3396; London Gazette, £6646. Nor should mention be omitted from the list of miscellaneous items of a sum of £187,018 paid by the Bank of England, and consisting almost entirely of the sum payable by the Bank out of the profits of issue for the year; and a sum of £3841 towards registration of money lenders.

II. GRANTS IN AID OF LOCAL TAXATION.

The portion of the Revenue paid into the Local Taxation Accounts for local services consists of Licence Duties, a share of the Estate Duty, an additional beer duty of 3d., an extra spirit duty of 6d., and a further share of the Estate Duty for the Agricultural Rating, etc., grants. In this particular financial year (1905-6) the sums paid to the Local Taxation Accounts of England, Scotland, and Ireland from those sources amounted to an aggregate of £9,901,000. To this should be added

£1,157,000, payments from the Consolidated Fund—a grand total of £11,058,000.

The sum of £11,058,000 does not, however, represent the total amount of the subventions or aids from state revenues to local taxation. There still remain upon the Civil Service estimates, which are met by issues from the Exchequer, many charges transferred from local to Imperial funds, and certain other expenditure of a local character amounting to a considerable aggregate. These grants amounted in 1905-6 to £3,417,467, and are estimated to amount in 1906-7 to £3,431,950. Aggregating the figures therefore for 1905-6:—

The sums paid to the Local Taxation Accounts, £9,901,000.

Payments from the Consolidated Fund, £1,157,000.

From estimates, £3,417,467.

The total relief to local burdens from State funds amounted in 1905-6 to £14,475,467.

III. PUBLIC EXPENDITURE.

Civil List, Annuities, and Pensions.

Turning to the Expenditure for National and Imperial purposes for 1905-6, some references to National Debt Charges and to the capital of the Debt will be found in Part IV.

Analysing the item "Other Consolidated Fund Services," there is first the sum of £470,000 issued on account of the Civil List under the Act 1 Edw. VII. c. 4, the items being as follows:

Class I. Their Majesties' Privy Purse	£110,000
„ II. Salaries of H.M. Household and Retired Allowances	125,800
„ III. Expenses of H.M. Household	193,000
„ IV. Works	20,000
„ V. Royal Bounty, Alms, and Special Services	13,200
„ VI. Unappropriated	8,000
	£470,000

Annuities to the Royal Family were also paid on the following scale:

H.R.H. George, Prince of Wales	£20,000
H.R.H. the Princess of Wales	10,000
H.R.H. Princess Christian	6,000
H.R.H. Princess Louise (Duchess of Argyll)	6,000
H.R.H. Duke of Connaught	25,000
H.R.H. Duchess of Saxe-Coburg	6,000
H.R.H. Duchess of Albany	6,000
H.R.H. Princess Beatrice (Princess Henry of Battenberg)	6,000
H.R.H. Princess Augusta (Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz)	3,000
The Trustees for H.M. Daughters	18,000

Total . . . . . £106,000

Civil List pensions, new grants being as before limited to £1200 per annum, were paid to the amount of £25,231.

Retired allowances, etc., to members of her late Majesty's Household were paid to the amount of £19,378, and certain small pensions were paid to persons formerly on the Civil Lists of George IV. and William IV.

The following is a list of pensions for naval and military services, paid out of the Consolidated Fund in 1905-6, the amount and duration of the grants being: Lord Rodney (and all and every the heirs male to whom the title shall descend), £2000; Earl Nelson (and to whom the title shall descend), £5000; Lord Seaton (for life of present baron), £2000; Viscount Hardinge (present viscount), £3000; Viscount Gough (to present viscount), £2000; Lord Raglan (for life), £2000; Lord Napier of Magdala (to present baron), £2000; and the heirs of the Duke of Schomberg, in perpetuity, £720: total, £18,720. The recipients of Pensions for political and civil services were the Countess of Mayo, widow of a Governor-General of India, £1000; Viscount Peel, late Speaker of the House of Commons, £4000; Sir C. L. Ryan, late Comptroller and Auditor-General, £1333; Viscount Cross, £2000; Lord George Hamilton, £2000; Mr. Chaplin, £1200; Viscount St. Aldwyn to Nov. 30th, 1905—pension resigned—£1083; Sir John Gorst, £1200; and Lord Balfour of Burleigh, £1200. Viscount Selby, late Speaker, at the rate of £4000 from June 8th, 1905; Mr. Gerald Balfour, at the rate of £1200 from Dec. 11th, 1905.

Pensions for judicial services (England) amounted to £32,889; among the recipients being Lord Field, Sir Edward Fry, Sir Arthur Charles, Lord Brampton, Sir J. C. Day, Sir Gainsford Bruce, and Sir Ford North, retired judges, each at the rate of £3500 from the date of their retirement; and several retired county court judges—who received £1000 each. A large sum is paid by way of compensation, some amounts being still issued to persons formerly attached to the old Courts of Requests, the Marshalsea, and the Ecclesiastical and Prerogative Courts. Other sums were paid as judicial pensions to retired judges in Scotland and Ireland.

Salaries, Allowances, etc.

The salaries and allowances comprise the sums of £5000 paid to the Speaker of the House of Commons, £20,000 to the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland; the salaries of the judges, the Lords of Appeal in Ordinary receiving £6000 per annum each, the judges of the Court of Appeal, of the Chancery Division, and of the King's Bench Division receiving £5000 each, with the exceptions of the Master of the Rolls (£6000), and the Lord Chief Justice (£8000); two members of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council at the rate of £400 each; the salaries of the county court judges £1500; the salaries of the Metropolitan police magistrates, one at £1800 and twenty-four at £1500 per annum; the salaries of the Scotch judges, sheriffs and sheriffs' substitutes, and of the Irish judges. Miscellaneous services charged on the Consolidated Fund include £16,216 paid to the Receiver-General of the Duchy of Cornwall, compensation for loss of duties on the coinage of tin; and £215,000 annuity under the Indian Army Pension Deficiency Act, '85. The cost of the Army and Navy will be found under those headings.

Civil Service Estimates.

The Civil Service Votes granted in the session of 1905, with the net estimates for 1906-7, are subjoined.

The net total of the Estimates for 1906-7 is £29,316,620. The original estimates for 1905-6 amounted to £28,614,221. The increase is therefore £702,408, of which £651,117 arises under Class IV. (Education, Science, and Art). In the following abstract and throughout the detailed estimates, comparison is made, according to the usual practice, with the total grants made for the service of the year 1905-6 in the session of 1905. Thus the figures for 1905-6 comprise, in addition to the original estimates for the year, supplementary estimates to the amount of £51,752, which were voted in the summer of 1905. The result (allowing for a reduction of £100 made in Committee of Supply in the vote for the Irish Land Commission) is a net total for 1905-6 of £28,665,873. On this basis of comparison the estimates for 1906-7 show an increase of £650,756.

(Increase, £28,688.)

The principal increase is on the estimate for the Irish Land Commission, where £60,900 more is required, of which £45,000 is for additional provision for dividends and sinking fund on guaranteed  $\frac{2}{3}$  per cent. stock for the Land Purchase Aid Fund under Section 47 (2) of the Irish Land Act, 1903, and the remainder (apart from increments, etc.) is for increase of staff to meet further developments. Under Prisons, England and the Colonies, there is a decrease of £22,188, owing to the completion of new works at Brixton and Maidstone, which admits of a reduction of £16,293, and to a slight decrease in the estimated average number of prisoners. Under Broadmoor Criminal Lunatic Asylum there is an increase of £3,315, owing to the necessity for providing additional accommodation. Following on reductions of £52,394 in 1904-5 and £40,195 in 1905-6, the estimate for the Royal Irish Constabulary shows an increase of £10,625.

(Increase, £5,822.)

Under Home Office there is an increase of £15,456, of which £14,950 is for salaries and expenses in connection with the administration of the Aliens Act, 1905. Under Privy Council Office a net increase of £1,920 is accounted for by the provision of salary for the Lord President of the Council, that office being now held as a separate office.

The increase under Beard of Education is £490,224, of which £371,224 is mainly automatic in character, and is due, as in the previous year, to anticipated growth in the number of scholars in average attendance, and to the larger number of teachers for whose training provision is made by the State. The remainder is in respect of provision to the extent of £32,000 for increased grants towards the expenses of Pupil Teachers under instruction, and of £87,000 for increased grants to Secondary Schools. Of the increase (£154,838) under Public Education, Scotland, £100,000 is a re-vote, included in the estimate as an exceptional arrangement, in respect of unspent balances on the grants for the two previous years under the General Aid Grant; the remainder is automatic in character. The principal increase—namely, £36,223—in the Annual Grant is due in part to the normal growth of the average attendance generally, and in part to the larger number of scholars earning grants at the highest rates in consequence of the Education (Scotland) Act, 1901, which, for the time being, caused an abnormal increase in the attendance of children over twelve. In the estimate for Scientific Investigations, etc., the grant in aid of equipment for the National Physical Laboratory has been increased from £5,000 to £10,000, and a new grant of £2,000 has been included in the Universities and Colleges estimate in aid of Sheffield University.

Under Colonial Services there is a net decrease of £68,751, the principal decreases being £50,000 on the grant in aid of British East Africa and £34,000 on the grant in aid of Somaliland, while no grant is required this year to supplement the general revenues of the West Indian Islands, for which £17,000 was voted in 1905-6. A grant of £10,000 is included in this estimate in aid of the expenses of representing the United Kingdom at the International Exhibition to be opened at Christchurch, New Zealand, in November 1906. Under Telegraph Subsidies and Pacific Cable there is a net increase of £2,852. The subsidy to the African Direct Telegraph Company lapses in September 1906. The saving under this head is, however, counterbalanced by increased expenditure on the establishment of offices in Australia in connection with the Pacific Cable. For Cyprus a grant in aid of £28,000 is proposed as against one of £16,000 in 1905-6.

Revenue Departments.

(Increase, £523,466.)

The Estimate for Customs shows a net increase of £28,100, of which £5044 is due to increased charges for superannuations, £2000 to increased provision for construction of vessels, and the remainder, apart from normal increments, to improvements of pay, etc., given in 1905 to the lower ranks of the Waterguard and the non-established staff. The Inland Revenue Estimate shows a net increase of £23,500, which is accounted for partly by growth of business and the necessity of making further provision to meet it, and partly by improvements of pay recently granted to the subordinate staff in the Warehousing and Stamping Departments.

Following the recommendations of the Public Accounts Committee of last Session, the Estimates for the Post Office, Packet Services and Telegraphs have been amalgamated, and the Estimate for 1906-7 (Vote III.) covers the three services. Compared with the vote for the current year, the grand total shows a net increase of £471,866, made up as follows:—

Postal Services . . . . .	£
Packet Services . . . . .	Increase 372,547
Telegraph Services . . . . .	Decrease 50,696
	Increase 150,015

Net Increase . . . . .	£471,866
------------------------	----------

As regards Packet Services the decrease is chiefly due to the cessation of the contracts for the West Indian and Canadian Pacific Services. There is, on the other hand, a considerable reduction in appropriations in aid, due to the cessation of the contributions formerly made by various colonies towards the cost of the above services. Of the increase under Telegraph Services, £70,536 is on account of the terminable annuities issued in repayment of sums borrowed on Telephone Capital Account, the balance being mainly due to increments in salaries and wages, growth of staff, and the rapid development of the telephone system. As the result of fresh statistics the Telegraph proportion of the expenses common to the Postal and Telegraph Services has been further reduced to 23½ per cent. as against 24 per cent. in the previous year.

Supplementary Estimates, 1905-6.

These, which were granted before March 31st, 1906, amounted to a total of £84,480, among the items being £54,683, payment to the French Government in pursuance of Article 3 of the Anglo-French Convention of April 8th, 1904, under the Act 4 Edw. VII., c. 33, of the amount awarded by the Arbitral Tribunal as an indemnity to French citizens engaged in fishing or the preparation of fish on the treaty shore of Newfoundland, who were obliged either to abandon their establishments or to give up their occupation in consequence of the modification introduced by the Convention into the existing state of affairs, £8,567 in settlement of claims arising out of the military action of Great Britain and the United States of America in Samoa in 1899, and £10,000 grant in aid of the expenses of the British Section at the International Exhibition at Milan in 1906, to celebrate the opening of the Simplon tunnel.

Supplementary Estimates, 1906-7.

The Supplementary Civil Service Estimates granted for the current financial year amount to £443,558, of which £1000 is for the Re-valuation of Dublin; £200,000 for special grants to certain Local Education Authorities; £14,600 Treasury Fund, the estimated sum to make good the net loss on the transactions of the year 1905-6, principally in connection with the raising of funds in China; £22,958 repayments to the Civil Contingencies Fund (including £6260 for expenditure incurred in connection with the visit of the King of Spain, £6397 for expenditure incurred in connection with the King of the Hellenes, £34 for expenditure incurred by British representatives in connection with fugitive slaves, £52 further expenditure in connection with the Antarctic Relief Expedition, etc.); £5,000 grant in aid of the expenses of the reception of Members of the Inter-Parliamentary Union during their visit to London in 1906; and £20,000, contributions in aid of expenses under the Unemployed Workmen Act, 1905.

Gross National Expenditure.

Finally, in order to show the entire expenditure for which the State was responsible in 1905-6, there have to be added—(1) the expenditure to which the Public Revenue assigned to relieve Local Taxation is applied, and (2) the expenditure chargeable to Capital Account. These additions are made in the following statement:—

I. Expenditure chargeable against Exchequer Revenue . . .	£ 140,512,000

The main figures as given above will be found in Table A, and the estimated revenue and expenditure on the same basis for 1906-7 in Table C.

IV. THE NATIONAL DEBT.

The National Debt is made up of (1) Funded Debt, (2) Terminable Annuities, (3) Unfunded Debt. The table shows the amount of each on March 31st, 1905 and 1906.

(1) This consists of the various stocks, and of the debts to the Banks of England and Ireland.

(2) These are annuities in which the payment is made for lives or terms of years, after which it ceases altogether. In estimating the amount of the Debt, these annuities are capitalised.

(3) This consisted in the year under review of War Stock and War Bonds, Exchequer Bonds, and Treasury Bills. The total charge for the service of the Debt has ranged, according to circumstances, from £32,457,000 in '16, to £23,000,000 in '99-1900, and in 1901-2, without Sinking Fund, to £18,319,000. It now stands at £28,500,000. (See Part V., Budget.)

The National Debt may be regarded from two points of view: that of the dead-weight debt, for which there is nothing to show, and which on March 31st, 1906, amounted to £743,219,977, and that of the gross liabilities of the State, which at the same date stood at £788,990,187. The total gross liabilities of the State are found by adding to the dead-weight debt certain other capital liabilities, the nature of which has varied from time to time, and against these were and are set certain estimated assets, and also the Exchequer balances at the Banks of England and Ireland. The difference between Actual Debt and Gross Liabilities was for several years comparatively small, but in recent years considerable new capital liabilities have been incurred, which have materially changed the proportionate relations of the totals to each other. Parliament enacts that certain specified sums may be borrowed from the National Debt Commissioners in such amounts as may be required from time to time for the execution of certain works, some of which may be reproductive, the repayments of principal and interest being charged on the estimates and extended over a period of years. The system is quite outside the Debt system proper and its fixed charge.

* In addition to the liabilities given here, there are sundry contingent liabilities which the State is not likely to be called upon, to any material extent, to discharge.

It is the capital liabilities still involved in these undertakings, which are set out in Table B, including those for naval and military works, which are gradually increasing the gross liabilities of the State. In the appended columns the figures are similar to some of those shown in Table B, only that they run back to earlier dates, column No. 1 showing the aggregate of the Funded Debt, the estimated value of the Terminable Annuities and the amount of the Unfunded Debt; No. 2 the Gross Liabilities of the State, and No. 3 the amount of the Local Loans outstanding until the separate stock was created.

V. THE BUDGET.

Mr. Asquith presented his first Budget to the House on April 30th, 1906. He reminded the Committee that in 1905-6 a revenue of £142,454,000 was estimated for, and an expenditure of £142,032,000, leaving a margin of £422,000. That estimate had been falsified on both sides of the account, but in a favourable way, as thus:

Actual Revenue, 1905-6	£143,978,000	£
Estimated „ „	£142,454,000
Excess . . . . .	1,524,000
Actual Expenditure, 1905-6	£140,512,000
Estimated „ „	£142,032,000
Decrease . . . . .	1,520,000
	£3,044,000

The difference between the actual revenue and expenditure gave him a realised surplus of £3,466,000.

The diminution in expenditure had been entirely due to savings in the Supply Services, the War Office being responsible for £963,000. Explaining how it had come about that the Revenue had exceeded his predecessor's calculations by so large an amount, he pointed to the fact that 1905 was a year of steadily growing prosperity. That was proved by the rise in freights, the growth in the goods receipts of our principal railways, and in the clearances of London Bankers, and the fall in the percentage of unemployment.

Customs and Excise supplied the best index to the consuming powers of the people. His predecessor had estimated for a decrease from Customs of £1,680,000. The actual decrease had been £1,255,000, a difference to the good of £425,000. The chief cause of the decrease was the reduction of the tea duty, the yield of the duty falling from £8,272,000 to £6,830,000. But the consumption had increased by 10,000,000 lb. The principal increase was in sugar, which had exceeded the estimate by £465,000.

Regarding the absence of elasticity in the receipts from Excise, Mr. Asquith pointed out that it was due to the steady decrease in the yield from the duties on alcohol. There had been a steady and progressive diminution of consumption since 1900; and last year, as compared with the year before, there was a decline under all heads. He questioned whether it would be safe to base any wide generalisation upon a change of habits in the people, which had taken place in years that were marked by a great war, an enormous increase in the burden of taxation, and the curtailment of the spending powers of the population, but it was clear that we could not count on alcohol as a source of expanding revenue.

Post Office and Telegraph Services yielded an excess of nearly half a million on the Budget estimates, which was no doubt accounted for by some special causes, such as the General Election and the fashion of sending picture postcards.

Regarding the financial year 1906-7, Mr. Asquith estimated the Expenditure at	£141,786,000,

the Revenue at	£144,860,000,
giving a surplus of	£3,074,000.

He drew attention to the great growth of expenditure in recent years, and to the magnitude of the indebtedness of the State. Second only to the duty of reducing expenditure was the duty of making more adequate provision for the reduction of the Debt. He condemned the policy of borrowing for capital expenditure, which he regarded as a most unhappy feature of our national finance; and he announced that, as far as naval and military works were concerned, he was determined to put an end to the system at the earliest possible date. In future new works would not be begun with borrowed money.

The amount of the floating debt filled him with disquietude, and its reduction was urgently needed. He estimated that there might be a balance of £9,000,000 available for the reduction of the capital of the Debt. The realised surplus of 1905-6 was £3,466,000; therefore the total provision for the year was £12,500,000. He thought, however, that a substantial addition ought to be made to the provision for reduction, and proposed to draw upon his estimated surplus for this year to the extent of £500,000, and to apply to the same object £500,000 taken from the Chinese Indemnity. The total provision in 1906-7 for the reduction of the dead-weight debt would, therefore, be £13,500,000, and the reduction in the gross liabilities ought to be nearly £9,000,000.

Regarding the estimated surplus of £3,074,000 for 1906-7, he proposed to put aside £135,000 in aid of necessitous school districts, and £105,000 for improvements in the Postal service, including a revision of the upper scale of the parcel post with a view to the requirements of small agriculturists, an enlargement of the postal and telegraph facilities in rural districts, etc. Thus he was left with a surplus of £2,000,000 to apply in relief of taxation. While not able to give the income-tax relief, he proposed to clear the ground for future changes, by moving the appointment of a Select Committee to inquire as to the practicability of gradation and differentiation. With the taxes on beer and alcohol he did not intend to interfere, but he should introduce legislation to facilitate the use of alcohol for industrial purposes.

The duty on stripped tobacco would be reduced to 3s. 0½d., leaving a difference of 3d. between leaf and strips. There would be no appreciable loss to the revenue. Regarding the continuance of the export duty on coal as indefensible, he asked the Committee to repeal it from Nov. 1st,

THE FISCAL QUESTION.

In the 1904-5-6 editions of the ANNUAL a full historical account is given of the movement in favour of Fiscal Reform, which Mr. Chamberlain initiated by his speech at Birmingham on May 15th, 1903, and by subsequent speeches in the House of Commons. It must suffice here to give a brief sketch of the development of the movement and to refer readers for fuller details to the earlier editions which have been named. The proposals made by Mr. Chamberlain, and more or less endorsed by Mr. Balfour, evoked the deepest interest in the United Kingdom and throughout the Empire. The Government, it was soon made clear, were not unanimous on the matter. Mr. Ritchie, then Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, his predecessor, expressed strong objections to Mr. Chamberlain's proposals, and Lord Goschen and the Duke of Devonshire took the same view. Many other members of the Government, however—as for instance Lord Lansdowne and Mr. Long, and many supporters of the Government, of course including Mr. Chaplin, Sir Howard Vincent, and others—welcomed the policy outlined by Mr. Chamberlain. So also did several Liberals, including the Duke of Sutherland, Mr. T. A. Brassey, and others. The Liberal Party from the first condemned and resisted it.

On Sept. 18th, 1903, the resignations of Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Ritchie, and Lord George Hamilton were announced, and of Lord Balfour of Burleigh and Mr. Arthur Elliot (21st), while the Duke of Devonshire followed suit (Oct. 6th). It transpired subsequently that Mr. Chamberlain had written to Mr. Balfour on Sept. 9th in anticipation of the Cabinet meeting, saying that he (Mr. Chamberlain) would resign in order to devote himself to explaining and popularising the cause he had at heart; and that Mr. Ritchie and Lord George Hamilton did not know when they resigned of the existence of the above letter from Mr. Chamberlain, which was not communicated to the Cabinet at its meeting on Sept. 14th.

On Oct. 1st, 1903, Mr. Balfour spoke at Sheffield at the annual meeting of the National Union of Conservative Associations, and declared that while he was opposed to the taxation of food, it was only because it was not within the limits of practical politics, and he did not think public opinion was ripe for it. He was in favour of Retaliation, however. He desired "to reverse the fiscal tradition which has prevailed during the last two generations" by asking the country "to reverse, to annul and delete altogether from the maxims of public conduct the doctrine that you must never put on taxation except for revenue purposes. . . . This country should again have what every other country in the world possesses, and that of which no other country in the world would think of depriving itself, the liberty to negotiate and something to negotiate with."

Mr. Chamberlain's Proposals.

On Oct. 6th 1903, Mr. Chamberlain, freed from the responsibilities of office, opened his campaign at Glasgow. The proposals made by him at Glasgow and in subsequent speeches may be thus summarised:—

New Duties.

On foreign corn and flour . . . 2s. per qr.
On foreign meat and dairy produce 5 %
Foreign manufactured goods 10 %*

Maize and bacon, however, should be excluded from taxation, as the latter forms the food of some of the poorest of the population; while maize is a raw material to the farmers, who feed their stock with it.

The Colonies should have a preference by exemption from the above duties; and a substantial preference should also be given to them upon Colonial wines, and also perhaps upon Colonial fruits.

Duties Removed.

These new duties are to be accompanied by the following remissions of duty:—

Tea . . . . .	3 1/2 of duty †
Sugar . . . . .	2 " "
Coffee and Cocoa . . . . .	2 " "

On Jan. 11th, 1904, letters which had passed between the Duke of Devonshire and Mr. Chamberlain appeared in the public press. The correspondence had reference to the position of the Liberal Unionist Association in regard to the Fiscal Question, and was very fully summarised on p. 200 of the 1905 ANNUAL. At the annual meeting of the Liberal Unionist Council, held May 18th, 1904, at the Westminster Palace Hotel, formal resolutions were carried for the reconstitution of the Council on the basis of a fuller popular representation of the party, and the adoption of new rules which, the Duke pointed out, would "create a new political organisation," not merely to oppose Home Rule, but to take such a line as it might think fit upon any political questions that may be raised." The local associations were then invited to take the necessary steps to constitute an organisation on the lines indicated; and the meeting of the new Council was held in the Imperial Theatre, Westminster, July 14th, 1904, Mr. Chamberlain being in the chair. The representatives of 278 associations were present. The Fiscal Question was dealt with as follows: "That this Council, believing that the time has come for a complete reform of our fiscal system, approves of the demand made by the Prime Minister for increased powers to deal with hostile tariffs and the practice of dumping, and further expresses its earnest hope that the ties of sympathy which already unite the British Empire may be strengthened by a commercial union with the Colonies, based on preferential arrangements between them and the mother country." "That the officers of this Association be instructed to assist as heretofore all Liberal Unionist candidates and Liberal Unionist associations that are prepared to support the Unionist Government, without regard to their opinions upon the question of fiscal reform."

* To be applied to foreign nations enforcing high duties on British manufactures, and to average 10 %, being arranged according to the amount of labour expended on the manufactured goods.

Mr. Balfour's Views.

Mr. Balfour, speaking in Manchester, Jan. 26th, 1905, on the occasion of his annual address to his constituents, in answer to a challenge made by Mr. Morley shortly before that date, placed the essence and outline of his views on Fiscal Reform on half a sheet of notepaper thus. "First, I desire such an alteration of our fiscal system as will give us a freedom of action impossible while we hold ourselves bound by the maxim that no taxation should be imposed except for revenue. I desire this freedom in the main for three reasons. It will strengthen our hands in any negotiations by which we may hope to lower foreign hostile tariffs. It may enable us to protect the fiscal independence of those Colonies which desire to give us preferential treatment. It may be useful where we wish to check the importation of those foreign goods which, because they are bounty-fed or tariff-protected abroad, are sold below cost price here. Such importations are ultimately as injurious to the consumer as they are immediately ruinous to the producer.

"Secondly, I desire closer commercial union with the Colonies, and I do so because I desire closer union in all its best modes, and because this particular mode is intrinsically of greater importance and has received much colonial support. I also think it might produce great and growing commercial advantages, both to the Colonies and the mother country, by promoting freer trade between them. No doubt such commercial union is beset with many difficulties. Those can best be dealt with by a Colonial Conference, provided its objects are permitted to be discussed unhampered by limiting instructions.

"Thirdly, I recommend, therefore, that the subject shall be referred to a conference on those terms.

"Fourthly, and lastly, I do not desire to raise home prices for the purpose of aiding home productions."

Mr. Balfour, speaking at Newcastle on Nov. 14th, 1905, asked if there was on the Fiscal Question a practical policy on which all Unionists could agree and on which a Unionist Government could be formed? He said there was, though he did not mean that on every economic subject the whole Tory party was agreed. The policy he described as (1) Retaliation, to remove the restrictions in foreign markets on our industries; (2) the calling of a free Conference and the attempt to deal in a permanent and satisfactory fashion with a closer commercial union of the various members of the Empire. He added: "I have never been, and am not, on the Protectionist side," and described the doctrine of laissez-faire as an antiquated and illusory doctrine.

The Unionist Free Traders.

The Duke of Devonshire, on Dec. 30th, 1905, approved a resolution carried by the Unionist Free Trade Club's Executive, to the effect that it was the duty of all Unionist Free Traders to use their utmost exertions to prevent the adoption of a fiscal policy involving a general protective tariff and the preferential taxation of food, either by the country or by the Unionist party. In doing so he pointed out that the duties advocated by the Tariff Reform League and the preferential taxation of food were not advocated only for purposes of negotiation, and as a means of establishing a closer commercial union with the Colonies, but with the avowed object of protecting home manufacturers and workmen against foreign competition. He also drew attention to the fact that Mr. Balfour had given no assent to this policy, though he had said it was not inconsistent with his own scheme. So far as its protective character was concerned, Mr. Balfour had declared that it was to the Free Trade and not to the Protectionist wing of his party that he belonged.

The Balfour-Chamberlain Correspondence, 1906.

After the election a great deal of discussion took place as to the attitude of the Unionist party to Tariff Reform; and on Feb. 6th, 1906, Mr. Chamberlain defined his position in a letter to Lord Ridley. Referring to the suggestion that had been made that he should become the leader of the Unionist party, he absolutely declined to place himself in competition with Mr. Balfour. He denied that any ultimatum had been presented to Mr. Balfour by him or any one else. But he had asked for a meeting of the party in order that there might be frank and friendly discussion of the policy to be adopted by the party in the future. He discussed the differences between Mr. Balfour's position and that of "more advanced Tariff Reformers," and hoped that Mr. Balfour would be able to approach more closely to the point of view of the latter. He believed that the great majority of the Unionist members of the New House of Commons were ready to accept Mr. Balfour's general leadership, but would welcome a declaration by him which would show clearly that Tariff Reform was not to be dropped, and would indicate a definite and unmistakable programme for the future to which they could all give their hearty support. If the free-traders were in the majority the Tariff Reform minority would have to reconsider their position, and might constitute a Parliamentary group.

On Feb. 15th, 1906, the following correspondence between Mr. Balfour and Mr. Chamberlain was published:—

"4, Carlton Gardens, S.W.,

"Feb. 14th, 1906.

"My dear Chamberlain,—The controversy aroused by the fiscal question has produced, not unnaturally, an impression, which I have constantly combated, that the practical differences between fiscal reformers are much deeper than is in fact the case. The exchange of views which has recently taken place between us leads me to hope that this misconception may be removed, and with it much friction which has proved injurious to the party.

"My own opinion, which I believe is shared by the great majority of the Unionist party, may be briefly summarised as follows:—

"I hold that fiscal reform is, and must remain, the first constructive work of the Unionist party;

"That the objects of such reform are to secure more equal terms of competition for British trade and closer commercial union with the Colonies;

"That, while it is at present unnecessary to prescribe the exact methods by which these objects are to be attained, and inexpedient to permit differences of opinion as to these methods to divide the party, though other means may be possible, the establishment of a moderate general tariff on manufactured goods, not imposed for the purpose of raising prices or giving artificial protection against legitimate competition, and the imposition of a small duty on foreign corn are not in principle objectionable, and should be adopted if shown to be necessary for the attainment of the ends in view or for purposes of revenue.

"Believe me, yours sincerely,

"ARTHUR JAMES BALFOUR."

"40, Princes Gardens, S.W.,

"Feb. 14th, 1906.

"My dear Balfour,—I cordially welcome your letter of to-day, in which you have summarised the conclusions that we have reached during our recent discussion.

"I entirely agree with your description of the objects which we both have in view, and gladly accept the policy which you indicate as the wise and desirable one for the Unionist party to adopt.

"In endeavouring to give effect to this policy, and in defending all Unionist principles, any services that I can render will be entirely at your disposal. I am, yours very truly,

"J. CHAMBERLAIN."

Speaking to the Unionist Free Trade Club on March 6th, 1906, the Duke of Devonshire said that, out of the 156 Unionist M.P.'s returned at the General Election, 102 were classed as Tariff Reformers, 36 as followers of Mr. Balfour, and only 16 as Free Traders. He did not think, for reasons which he gave, that that really represented Unionist opinion throughout the country on the fiscal question. Dealing with the above correspondence between Mr. Balfour and Mr. Chamberlain, he said that the qualifications contained in Mr. Balfour's letter did not substantially alter his view that Mr. Balfour was in substantial, if not in complete, agreement with Mr. Chamberlain on the subject of Tariff Reform. Lord George Hamilton moved, the Hon. Arthur Elliot seconded, and the meeting unanimously carried, a resolution, "that in view of the joint declaration of policy contained in the correspondence between Mr. Balfour and Mr. Chamberlain, this meeting of the Unionist Free Trade Club deems it necessary to reassert its full adherence to the principles of Free Trade, and its opposition to any departure from those principles, either by the adoption of a general tariff or by a tax on corn."

The Colonial Conference, 1907.

In the House of Commons on Aug. 1st, 1904, Mr. Chamberlain urged the Government to call a Conference to ascertain what the Colonies really desired, and what they were prepared to do. Mr. Balfour at first proposed to take no action, but on Oct. 3rd, 1904, at Edinburgh, he stated that the only way out of the impasse in which they found themselves was to have a free conference with the self-governing Colonies and with India; and on Jan. 26th, 1905, at Manchester, he said the Conference should be "unhampered by limiting instructions." On Aug. 8th, 1905, Mr. Balfour said that representatives of the Indian Government would not be invited to attend the Conference. As a result of communications with the Colonies it was decided by Mr. Balfour's Government to hold the Conference in 1907, not in 1906, since it was not possible for the Prime Ministers of Australia and New Zealand to attend a Conference in 1906 if it was held later than in the spring of that year. On Feb. 22nd, 1906, Lord Elgin, Colonial Secretary in the Liberal Government, proposed that the Conference should meet early in 1907—the date was afterwards fixed for April 15th—and sent out invitations to the Prime Ministers of the self-governing Colonies accordingly, asking that each Colonial Government should send by Sept. 1st, 1906, a statement as to any subjects which they desired to be discussed, and as to any resolutions which they wished to submit to the Conference.

At the sixth Congress of Chambers of Commerce of the Empire, held in London in July 1906, the following resolution was carried by 105 Chambers to 41, 21 being neutral:—

"That this Congress urges upon H.M. Governments in the United Kingdom and in the various Colonies and Dependencies, the granting of preferential treatment in their respective markets on a reciprocal basis, each to the other, believing that thereby the bonds of union will be strengthened, and the British Empire largely freed from dependence on foreign countries for food and other supplies. And that this Congress further urges upon the Governments of the Empire that they treat this matter as of present practical importance, and that each organisation represented at this Congress pledges itself to press their respective Governments to take such action at the Colonial Conference of 1907 as will give effect to the principle advocated in this resolution."

The Association of Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom on Sept. 12th, 1906, adopted a resolution declaring that while in warm sympathy with the desire for larger Imperial trade, this meeting cannot recommend a departure from the home policy of Free Trade in the absence of practical proposals; but would welcome the gathering of an Imperial Conference for the official and responsible consideration of the matter.

The Tariff Commission.

Speaking at Leeds on Dec. 16th, 1903, Mr. Chamberlain announced that a Tariff Commission would be formed, and on Dec. 18th the work, scope and composition of the Commission were announced. Sir Robert Herbert (since deceased) was the appointed Chairman, and the present members are:—

Vice-Chairman, Mr. C. A. Pearson.
Secretary, Mr. W. A. S. Hewins.
Assist. Sec., Mr. Percy A. Hurd.
Office, 7, Victoria Street, London, S.W.

The Commission was established to examine Mr. Chamberlain's fiscal proposals, and to report on (a) their probable effect on present conditions; (b) whether any (and if so, what) modifications are desirable; (c) the best way in which conflicting interests, should there be such, can be harmonised; and (d) what duties if any should be recommended. Large numbers of manufacturers, merchants and agriculturists were added to the various committees, which were formed at the outset, in order to represent more completely the trades or branches of trades which were dealt with. The first meeting of the Commission was held on Jan. 15th, 1904, and by Sept. 1906 over 14,000 firms and associations had filled up the forms sent them by the Commission, and 383 witnesses had been heard in regard to every substantial industry in the country, including Agriculture. Reports on the Iron and Steel Trade and on the Cotton Industry have been published, and were given in the 1906 ed. of the ANNUAL, also a Report on Agriculture in Nov. 1906, and volumes of evidence on the various Textile Trades (namely, wool and worsted, flax, hemp and jute, silk, hosiery, lace and carpets). Reports on the other chief industries are to follow in due course.

The following Memoranda have been published: "The New German Commercial Treaties and the New German Tariff" (April 1905); "Tariff Systems of Europe and America" (July 1905); "Preference in Relation to the Trade between the United Kingdom and Canada" (Jan. 1906); "The New Continental Tariffs" (March 1906).

Fiscal Associations and Organisations.

A number of associations have been formed, both for promoting and for opposing Mr. Chamberlain's policy. The following is a list of the more important of them.

For Mr. Chamberlain's Proposals.

Foreign Bondholders, The Corporation of, was founded in 1868, and was incorporated by Act of Parliament in '98. The Council of the Corporation consists of 21 members, 6 of whom are nominated by the Central Association of Bankers, 6 by the London Chamber of Commerce, and 9 are co-opted by the Council as a whole. The principal object of the Corporation is the protection of the interests of the holders of foreign securities. It keeps elaborate records regarding the economic and financial condition of the various States with whose debts it is called upon to deal. The Council appoints the British representative on the Council of Administration of the Ottoman Public Debt. As a general rule the Council acts through the various Bondholders' Committees associated with it. There are usually from fifteen to twenty separate Bondholders' Committees affiliated to the Corporation. The Council finds the Committees house-room, supplies them with skilled assistance, and advances such sums as may be required to defray the necessary expenses connected with the negotiations. The ordinary expenditure of the Corporation averages between £8000 and £9000 a year. The President receives £1000, the Vice-President £500, and the other members of the Council £100 each. The Corporation has been concerned in the settlement of debts aggregating not much short of £1,000,000,000. President, Lord Avebury; Vice-President, Sir C. W. Fremantle, K.C.B.; Secretary, J. P. Cooper; Office, 17, Moorgate Street, E.C.

FOREIGN OFFICE.

This is the department of Government which conducts official intercourse with other States. By constitutional law the authority of the Sovereign is supreme; but by constitutional custom he may only act by the advice and on the responsibility of a Minister—the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. Constitutional practice requires the sanction of the Sovereign to matters of foreign policy. The Foreign Secretary conducts general negotiations, prepares or supervises despatches, and periodically gives receptions to the representatives of Foreign Powers. But questions of importance come before the Prime Minister or are discussed by the whole Cabinet under his presidency. The requisite continuity of general policy, amidst shifting political parties, is maintained by means of the permanent Staff of the Department.

Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, the Rt. Hon. Sir Edward Grey, Bart., M.P.

Permanent Under-Secretary, Rt. Hon. Sir Charles Hardinge, G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., C.B., I.S.O.

Assistant Under-Secretaries, Sir Francis A. Campbell, K.C.M.G., C.B.; Sir Eldon Gorst, K.C.B.; Hon. Sir Eric E. Barrington, K.C.B.

Parliamentary Under-Secretary, Lord Fitzmaurice.

The representatives of the Crown abroad are members either of the Diplomatic Service or of the Consular Service, the duties of the former body being, generally speaking, political and ceremonial, of the latter, commercial and legal; though in the less important posts diplomatists undertake consular work, and occasionally consuls act in a diplomatic capacity.

The Diplomatic Service.

The Diplomatic Service consists of (a) Ambassadors, (b) Ministers Plenipotentiary and Ministers Resident, (c) Chargés d'Affaires.

The Ambassador, according to historical theory, represents the very person of his Sovereign, and so can claim direct access to the Sovereign to whom he is accredited. Further, he takes first rank in order of precedence.

The Minister is regarded as a mere agent of the Sovereign, and therefore holds an inferior position, though otherwise he has powers and duties similar to those of an Ambassador.

The Chargé d'Affaires, unlike the two former, is accredited not to the Sovereign, but to the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the State in which he resides. Usually he is appointed to act temporarily, in the absence of the Ambassador or Minister.

Councillors and Secretaries are attached to the Embassies and Legations, and often Military and Naval Attachés. The appointment, in recent years, of Commercial Attachés in the Diplomatic Service is a symptom that the sphere of the diplomatist is extending.

The Consular Service.

The Consular Service consists of (a) Consuls-general, (b) Consuls, (c) Vice-Consuls, and (d) Consular Agents. A Consul, in addition to giving general assistance to British subjects abroad, has in particular to deal with numerous matters connected with shipping; to issue periodical reports on the trade of the place where he resides; to celebrate or register marriages where one of the parties is British; to register the births of British subjects; to take oaths and declarations, and perform other notarial functions. Besides this, in some countries, such as Turkey and China, he administers justice, where a British subject is concerned, either in his own court, or in conjunction with the native tribunal.

The salaries are as follows: 1st grade, Consuls-General, salary £1000 to £1200; 2nd grade, Consuls-General (2nd class) and Consuls (1st class), salary £800; and 3rd grade, Consuls (2nd class), salary £600. Vice-Consuls, £350, rising by £15 to £450.

The names of the British Diplomatic and chief Consular representatives abroad are given in the articles on the countries to which they are accredited, or where they are stationed.

Passports.

Foreign Office Passports are granted only to (1) natural-born British subjects, (2) the wives and widows of such persons, and (3) persons naturalised in the United Kingdom, the Colonies, or India. Passports are only granted to such persons as are known to the Secretary of State, or are recommended to him by some person who is known to him; or to natural-born British subjects or persons naturalised in the United Kingdom, who produce a Declaration in a form obtainable at the Foreign Office, verified by some banking firm, mayor, magistrate, justice of the peace, minister of religion, barrister, physician, surgeon, solicitor, or notary resident in the United Kingdom. In the case of persons naturalised in the Colonies a Letter of Recommendation from the Colonial Office, or in the case of natives from British India, or persons naturalised therein, a similar letter from the India Office, is required. In all cases of naturalised British subjects the Certificate of Naturalisation must accompany the Declaration or Letters of Recommendation.

All applications for Foreign Office Passports must be made on a printed form obtainable from the Passport Department, Foreign Office, London, S.W. The charge for a Passport is 2s. Persons abroad must apply to the nearest British Mission or Consulate. The bearer of every Passport must sign it as soon as he receives it, or its validity may be questioned and the visa refused.

Travellers intending to visit Russia, Turkey, Roumania, Persia, Venezuela, Hayti, or Erythrea must get their Passports visés at the Consulates General in London or one of the other Consulates in the United Kingdom of the countries named. In the case of other countries this formality is not necessary except as an additional precaution, which is recommended in the case of Passports of old date. The Foreign Office advise British subjects travelling abroad to furnish themselves with Passports, for even in those countries where they are no longer obligatory, they are useful as affording a ready means of identification in case of need. British subjects intending to reside in Germany or in Switzerland (where a Permit must be obtained from the authorities) should provide themselves with Passports.

FORESTRY.

In Jan. 1903 a Departmental Committee (Mr. R. C. Munro Fergusson, chairman; Mr. R. H. Hooker, of the Board of Agriculture, secretary) issued a valuable report on forestry in this country. They said that the area of waste, heather, and rough pasture or land out of cultivation in the United Kingdom on which afforestation could be profitably undertaken is 21,000,000 acres, and that afforestation would furnish remunerative labour to an increased rural population, land under forests requiring more labour than the same area under sheep. The world is approaching a dearth in its supply of coniferous timber, which constitutes between 80 and 90 per cent. of the total British timber imports, and which can be grown in these islands, and the question is therefore a matter of grave national concern.

A book on "Forestry in the United Kingdom," by W. Schlich, Ph.D., C.B., F.R.S. (2s. net, Bradbury, Agnew & Co., Ltd., 18, Bouverie Street, E.C.), published in 1904, gives some valuable information on the subject. Dr. Schlich estimates the home production of timber in this country at 2,000,000 tons per annum, and says the British import of timber is rather more than 10,000,000 tons per annum. Of the quantity imported about 90 per cent. is pine and fir and oak, which could be grown in this country. Omitting furniture and hard woods, our imports of timber in 1905 were valued at £21,285,163. Dr. Schlich points out further, that Europe has not been able, for a good many years, to supply from within its own borders the timber it requires. The two great exporting countries outside Europe are the United States and Canada. But the United States are working with a heavy deficit as compared with production. They have, therefore, organised a Bureau of Forestry, and are, in steadily increasing quantities, drawing on Canada. Dr. Schlich urges that 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 acres of the waste land in this country should gradually be afforested. This he estimates would require an expenditure on labour of about £2 per acre for planting. After the forests are established, every acre would require about 5 days' labour a year. This, with the transport and working up the timber, would find profitable employment for a large number of people.

Woodland Areas of Great Britain.

A specially detailed inquiry into the Woodland Areas of Great Britain was made in 1905, on the recommendation of the recent Departmental Committee on British Forestry. The woodland area is returned under three categories:

(1) Coppice—i.e. woods that are entirely cut over periodically and reproduce themselves naturally by stout shoots.

(2) Plantations—i.e. land planted or replanted within the last ten years.

(3) Other Woods—i.e. all land not returned as coppice or plantation, used altogether or mainly for the growth of wood, other than orchards.

The figures are as follows, details for each county being given in "Agricultural Statistics, 1905" (Cd. 3061, price 1s. 6d.) :—

	Eng- land.	Scot- land.	Wales.	Great Britain.
	Acres.	Acres	Acres	Acres.
Coppice . . .	538,123	23,015	15,733	576,871
Plantations (since 1895) .	59,647	35,407	8,629	103,683
Other Woods .	1,117,703	809,987	159,999	2,087,689
Total Wood- lands . . .	1,715,473	868,409	184,361	2,768,243

The 1905 totals compare with the 1895 figures thus:—

	1895.	1905.	Increase or decrease.
	Acres.	Acres.	Acres.
England . .	1,665,741	1,715,473	+ 49,732
Scotland . .	878,765	868,409	- 10,356
Wales . . .	181,610	184,361	+ 2,751
Great Britain	2,726,116	2,768,243	+ 42,127

Adding to the 1905 figures for Great Britain, those for Ireland and the Isle of Man, the result for the United Kingdom is:—

Great Britain . .	2,768,243 acres.
Ireland . . . .	301,000 „
Isle of Man . . .	1,000 „
United Kingdom . .	3,070,243 „

The return shows approximately that planting was carried on in Great Britain at the rate of 10,368 acres per annum in the period 1895-1905, as compared with 8228 acres during 1891-5, and 9894 acres during 1881-91.

The woodlands are about 4 per cent. of the total area of the United Kingdom, and about 67,000 acres of the total belong to the Crown.

Facilities for Forestry Instruction.

In Jan. 1904 the Commissioners of Woods and Forests established a School of Forestry in the Forest of Dean, at Coleford, with Mr. C. D. Hanson, of the Indian Forest Department, as Instructor. The school is for working youths and men only, between the ages of 16 and 21, and aims at giving them practical and theoretical instruction in forestry as a profession. The course of instruction extends over 2 years, beginning in November each year, and only 10 students can be admitted each year, preference being given to young men in the Crown employ. These get the same pay per day as they are already receiving, but students from private estates are paid from 2s. to 2s. 6d. a day for 4 working days, the other two days each week being devoted to school work. The subjects taught include silviculture, the protection and management of woodlands, preparation of plans, measurement of timber, felled and standing, forest botany, surveying and accounts. Certificates are granted by the Commissioners of Woods and Forests to all who satisfy the examiners. The work is carried on by the Instructor under the orders of Mr. Philip Baylis, Deputy Surveyor of the Forest of Dean, to whom all applications for admission, or for trained men from the school, should be sent, addressed to him at the Whitemead Park, Parkend, near Coleford, Gloucestershire.

A complete course of instruction in scientific and practical forestry is given at Oxford University, which grants a diploma in forestry to successful students. The instructors are Professors Schlich and W. R. Fisher. The course is recognised by the Secretary of State for India.

The Board of Agriculture granted £500 in 1905 for the establishment of two lectureships in forestry at the University College of North Wales, Bangor, and Armstrong College, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, which offer special advantages as centres of instruction in forestry. There is a school for woodmen at Newcastle.

Forestry branches have been added to the Agricultural Colleges at Cirencester and Wye. Forestry instruction is also given at Edinburgh University.

The Royal English Arboricultural Society has a membership of over 800, representing the landowners, land agents, and foresters of the United Kingdom. President, H. J. Elwes, F.R.S. Secretary and Treasurer, John Davidson, Haydon Bridge, Northumberland.

Royal Scottish Arboricultural Society (instituted 1854). Any person interested in forestry and desirous of promoting the objects of the Society is eligible for election as a member. Secretary and Treasurer, Mr. Robert Galloway, S.S.C., 19, Castle Street, Edinburgh. Offices, 5, St. Andrew Square, Edinburgh.

The Midland Reafforestation Association, of which Sir Oliver Lodge is president, aims at planting waste places, and especially pit mounds in "the Black Country," where it is estimated that 14,000 out of 30,000 acres of waste could be profitably afforested. Secretary, Mr. P. E. Martineau, 55, Newhall Street, Birmingham.

Forrer, Emil, Swiss statesman, was b. at Winterthur, Feb. 9th, 1845, and began his career in the law; but after being returned to the Federal Council in '77 devoted himself to politics, and soon became a leading member of the Radical Democratic party. For nearly twenty years his influence was pre-eminent, but in 1900 a referendum of the Swiss nation threw out his scheme for the insurance of workmen against accidents or sickness, although it had been almost unanimously adopted by Parliament. M. Forrer thereupon left the Federal Council to become Director of Railways. Two years later, however, he accepted office as Minister of Commerce and Agriculture. He was President of the Swiss Confederation in 1906. For his physical characteristics, M. Forrer is popularly known as the "Lion of Winterthur."

FRANCE.

France, since the overthrow of Napoleon III. in 1870, has been a Republic governed by a President and two Chambers under the constitution of '71, revised in '75, '84, '85, and '89.

President.

M. Armand Fallières, elected to the presidency Jan. 17th, 1906, in succession to M. Loubet, was b. at Mezin (Lot-et-Garonne), Nov. 6th, 1841. M. Fallières, like his predecessor, is a man of simple habits, great bonhomie, and uprightness. He and M. Loubet have many other points in common, and both come of peasant stock. M. Fallières' great delight is to supervise work on his vineyards, the Loupillon estate, in his native district. His father was a clerk of the peace at Mézin. After studying the law, the future President was called to the Bar at Nérac, of which town he successively became Mayor and Deputy ('76) as a member of the Republican Left party. Re-elected in '77, he became Under-Secretary for the Interior ('80), Minister of the Interior ('82), Prime Minister (March 29th, '83), his Cabinet falling 11 months later, when the Senate rejected the Bill dealing with pretenders to the throne of France. After this he was twice Minister of Public Education, twice Minister of Justice, and again Minister of the Interior, until in '99 he succeeded M. Loubet as President of the Senate, having been elected a member of that assembly in '90. M. Fallières is a man of culture and an orator. He loves books, and has written verse both in French and in the Languedocian dialect. He married Mlle Besson, daughter of a solicitor, and has two children—a son who is a barrister, and an unmarried daughter.

Government.

The legislature consists of the Assembly, sitting in two houses: viz., the Senate of 300 members, indirectly elected for 9 years (one-third retiring every 3 years) by delegates chosen by the Municipal Councils and the Senators, Deputies, Councillors-General, and District Councillors of the Departments; there are a number of Senators originally elected for life by the two Chambers, but as these die the vacancies are filled up by the election of Senators for a period of 9 years only); and the Chamber of Deputies of 594 members, elected for 4 years by universal suffrage. The method of election is by scrutin d'arrondissement. Each Department is divided into arrondissements returning one Deputy, though where the population of the arrondissement exceeds 100,000, it is divided into two or more constituencies. Each elector votes for one Deputy only. Candidates are compelled to declare for which constituency they will stand. Voters are required to be over 21 and to have a 6-months' residential qualification. Both Houses can initiate and frame laws, except in the case of financial laws, which must first be presented to and voted by the Chamber of Deputies. Deputies and Senators are both paid at the rate of 9000 fr. a year. The Presidents of the two Chambers each receive in addition 72,000 fr. a year for the expense of entertainment. Members of both Chambers travel free on all railways on making a small annual payment.

The executive power is confided to the President, who is elected for seven years by the two Houses united in National Assembly, and receives 600,000 fr. a year, and a further allowance of 600,000 fr. for expenses. He appoints the Ministers and makes all civil and military appointments. War can be declared by the President only with consent of the two Houses, and his every act must be countersigned by a Minister.

The Conseil d'État is a special body, composed of Councillors, Maitres de Requêtes and Auditors, all appointed by the President, and presided over by the Minister of Justice. Its function is to give advice upon administrative points submitted to it by the Government.

The colonies are looked upon as being politically part of France, and are represented in the Senate by 4 Senators and in the Chamber by 10 Deputies.

The Army.

In 1906 a Conseil Supérieur de la Défense Nationale was constituted, to ensure unity of action between the Ministers of War, of Marine, of the Colonies, and of Finance, under the control of the President. Its sittings are attended by the chiefs of the General Staffs of the Army and Navy, and by the president of the Consultative Committee for Colonial Defence.

The French army is administered by the War Department, or Ministry of War, with Gen. Picquart at its head, assisted by a Military Cabinet and the chiefs of various bureaux. The chief of the general staff of the army is responsible to the Minister, and controls the directors of infantry, cavalry, engineers, artillery, finance, etc.

In 1906 the active army numbers: 352,081 infantry, 64,172 cavalry, 72,456 artillery, 14,209 engineers, 9863 military train, 14,419 administrative troops, and 4195 auxiliary, giving a total of 531,395, with 129,511 horses. The Active Army is constituted as follows: 562 battalions of infantry, 30 battalions of Chasseurs, 8 Foreign, 20 Zouaves, 24 Algerian Tirailleurs, 1 Saharan Tirailleurs, and 5 African Light Infantry: total, 650 battalions. The Cavalry form 31 regiments of Dragoons, 21 of Chasseurs, 14 of Hussars, 13 of Cuirassiers, 6 of Chasseurs d'Afrique, and 4 of Spahis (all of 5 squadrons). Artillery: Field batteries, 442; Horse batteries, 52; Mountain batteries, 22; Foot (or Fortress) batteries, 112: in all, 628. Engineers: 7 regiments, 26 battalions, and 3 Railway companies with telegraphists, ballooning troops, etc.; the Military Train has 20 squadrons (comprising 72 companies).

The strength by arms is:—

	France.	Algiers and Tunis.
Infantry .. ..	368,954	43,200
Cavalry .. ..	16,764	8,450
Artillery .. ..	74,936	3,875
Engineers .. ..	12,250	1,118
Train .. ..	8,560	1,850

In addition are 2500 non-commissioned officers and 13,000 men in the administrative troops, 4000 officers unattached, 420 officers and 3220 men in the military schools, and 2400 officers and 480 men supernumerary.

The forces are organised in 20 army corps, exclusive of the Paris garrison and Tunis; their headquarters being at Lille, Amiens, Rouen, Le Mans, Orleans, Châlons-sur-Marne, Besançon, Bourges, Tours, Rennes, Nantes, Limoges, Clermont-Ferrand, Lyons, Marseilles, Montpellier, Toulouse, Bordeaux, Algiers, Nancy.

The Army is at present in process of transformation, owing to the introduction of a period of two years' service, which was definitely authorised by the Senate, March 17th, 1905. Until now every Frenchman has served three years in the Active Army, ten years in the Reserve of the Active Army, six years in the Territorial Army and six years in the Reserve of the Territorial Army. For administration, training and mobilisation, the units of the Territorial Army, as well as the Active Reserve, are attached to the corresponding units of the Active Army. The new short service will apply to the whole population, without exceptions, save for physical incapacity. The Reserve of the Active Army includes about 1,320,000 men, and the Territorial Army and its Reserve about 2,270,000. It has been estimated that the French Army, with its various Reserve and Territorial forces, includes 3,500,000 trained men on a war footing, and that 4,000,000 untrained might be embodied.

Commander-in-chief, General Hagron.

The Navy.

The French Navy has for its head the Minister of Marine, who is only responsible to the Chambers. Subordinate to the Minister are the Chief of the Staff, a naval officer, and the Heads or Directors of the four main branches of business—Personnel, Matériel, Ordnance, and Account. In April 1905 a Comité Technique was formed, in place of other committees which were abolished, and subdivided into 3 departments dealing with (1) bâtiments de haute mer; (2) bâtiments de défense, and (3) matériel et effectifs.

Minister of Marine, M. Gaston Thomson.

Chief of the General Staff, Rear-Admiral M. J. C. Aubert.

Comptroller, L. Chatelain.

Director of Construction, M. A. R. Dudebout.

Director of Ordnance, Col. H. C. Gossot.

Accountant-General, M. N. Rouchon-Mazerat.

Director of Works, M. L. Renaud.

Director Medical Department, M. L. Devinck.

Hydrographer, M. F. I. Hanusse.

The French Naval Estimates proposed for the year 1907 a total of £12,736,000, or £265,480 less than in the previous year. There is to be expended a sum of 53,366,048 fr. on battleships, 21,729,780 fr. on armoured cruisers, 13,155,470 fr. on destroyers, 16,770,796 fr. on submarines, and 1,724,085 fr. on torpedo boats. The number of vessels named is 41, but many are actually completed. No more torpedo boats are to be built.

The French Navy is manned partly by conscription and partly by voluntary enlistment. The Inscription Maritime, dating back to 1683, contains the names of all male individuals devoted to a seafaring life from the 18th to the 50th year of age. Young men liable to service in the Army may, however, volunteer for service in the Navy. For administrative purposes France is divided into five divisions maritimes, and subdivided into twelve arrondissements maritimes.

The number of officers and men on the active list of the French Navy in 1906 was 53,247, and the number in Reserve 49,340. The executive officers are:—15 vice-admirals, 30 rear-admirals, 125 captains, 215 commanders, 754 lieutenants, 420 sub-lieutenants, 170 midshipmen.

The number of ships built, building, and projected for the French Navy on Oct. 31st, 1906, was:—

	Built.	Building.	Projected.
Battleships, 1st class . . . . .	21	4	6
do. 2nd class . . . . .	9	—	—
do. 3rd class . . . . .	1	—	—
Coast defence ships . . . . .	9	—	—
Armoured cruisers . . . . .	19	5	—
Protected cruisers—
1st class . . . . .	7	—	—
2nd class . . . . .	14	—	—
3rd class . . . . .	16	—	—
Unprotected cruisers . . . . .	1	—	—
Torpedo vessels . . . . .	15	—	—
Torpedo-boat destroyers . . . . .	31	24	9
Torpedo boats . . . . .	255	52	10
Submarines . . . . .	39	50	20

The Government dockyards are situated as follows:—Cherbourg: one dock, takes battleships 14,000 tons; seven smaller. Brest: one dock takes battleships; others very small. Lorient: one dock takes battleships 14,000 tons, one takes small cruisers. Rochefort: three docks, take small vessels only. Toulon: three docks take battleships 14,000 tons, six others take cruisers.

The 6 battleships of 18,000 tons provided for in the 1906 Budget, which it is intended to complete in four years, will be vigorously pushed forward during 1907. These ships will bear the names of Danton, Mirabeau, Voltaire,

Vergniaud, Condorcet, and Diderot. Owing to the large sums to be spent upon these ships, only 6 destroyers and 10 submarines will be constructed in 1907. There is a considerable increase in the grants for gunnery practice, and a special school for naval gunnery practice has been established on board the armoured cruiser Latouche Tréville. Part of the grant will be applied to the training of gunners. Special attention has been paid to the reserve of ammunition, in which there was a considerable deficiency. This has been partly made up in the course of this year, and a vigorous effort will be made in 1907 to provide what is still wanting. There has been an increase of 32,000 tons in the reserve of coal, which now amounts in all to 585,000 tons. In a circular dated Sept. 15th, 1906, the Minister of Marine instructed the port authorities to ascertain and report to him what vessels there are at present lying in the port that have no longer sufficient fighting value to justify the expense of their upkeep. These will be struck from the list of fighting units or classed in a special reserve.

During 1906 the armoured cruiser Ernest Renan was launched April 9th, the torpedo-boat destroyers Mortier and Rochefort in March, and the Omega, the largest of the French submarines, in November. The battleship Patrie passed her trials, and the République was completed. The armoured cruiser Jules Ferry began her trials, but is still completing. The following ships were removed from the effective lists: the Tage (removed to sale list), Bugeaud, Coetlogon, and Suchet; the gunboats Aspic, Bouchier, and Cimelière, and the torpedo boat Déroulede. On Oct. 16th the submarine Lutin was lost in the waters off Bizerta. Assistance was despatched by the British naval authorities at Malta, and the ill-fated vessel was located, and afterwards towed into port. She had developed serious leaks, and her crew of two officers and fourteen men were all drowned. Orders were given for the construction of six destroyers, to be named Hussard, Voltigeur, Tirailleur, Chasseur, Spahi, and Carabinier.

Local Government, Education, etc.

As to local government, the unit is the commune, governed by a municipal council and a mayor. The communes are combined into cantons, containing on an average 12 communes, and the cantons into arrondissements, governed by elective arrondissement councils and sub-prefects, these arrondissements again forming the Departments, of which there are 86, each with a Departmental Council, besides the territory of Belfort. Prefects, with large powers, represent the Executive, and control the Departments, and Sub-Prefects the Arrondissements.

By a law passed in Dec. 1905 (see History below), the Churches were separated from all connection with the State, which now recognises no religion officially. Formerly the Roman Catholic Church, the Reformed Church, the Augsburg Confession and the Jews were so recognised, and salaries were paid to ministers of the different Churches by the State. Roman Catholics form the large majority of the population.

Primary education, which was reorganised in '78 and '86, is free and obligatory for children from 6 to 13 years of age, and admirably organised. All teachers are laymen, and are paid by the State, except in the towns which number more than 150,000 inhabitants. Secondary education is given in the State lycées and communal colleges, in private establishments, and in ecclesiastical seminaries; there are also facilities, including lycées, colleges, and courses of secondary instruction, for over 30,000 girls. Numerous technical and special schools, besides 15 universities, complete the educational system.

The legal system comprises for civil cases the Justices of the Peace, and above them the 26 Appeal Courts and the Courts of Cassation. Criminal cases, except petty offences which are dealt with at the Police Courts, come before the Police Correctional Courts, consisting of three judges, but no jury. An examining magistrate, the juge d'instruction, makes a preliminary inquiry, and may dismiss the case or send it for trial. Above these courts are the Assize Courts, assisted by twelve jurors, the Courts of Appeal and the Criminal Court of Cassation. Tribunals of commerce and councils of experts deal with commercial cases.

Newspapers.

France has more than 300 daily papers. Many of them, however, are small sheets without political or news value. All the papers of any importance have made great progress of late years. The leading Paris organs now use special wires and special correspondents, and are as well informed as any other papers in the world. Following the example of the Matin, which by arrangement uses the Times service of news, several papers now work hand in hand with papers in London. The number of papers sending a resident correspondent to London is increasing every year. Among the principal Parisian papers are the following:—

Matin (editor, M. Stéphane Lauzanze; London correspondent, M. J. Hedeman).

Petit Parisien—largest circulation of any paper in the world (editor, M. Touchard; London correspondent, M. G. Dussol, 176, Fleet Street).

Journal (London correspondent, M. E. Palmié, 190, Fleet Street).

Petit Journal, the circulation of which exceeds 1,000,000.

Echo de Paris, which uses the Daily Telegraph service of news.

Petite République, which has a working arrangement with the Tribune (London office, 34, Burnt Ash Hill).

Eclair.

In the case of the following, the small news value is balanced by political importance:—Radical, Aurore, Humanité, Lanterne, Siècle, République Française, Libre Parole, Soleil, and Univers.

The Figaro (editor, M. Gaston Calmette; London correspondent, M. J. Coudurier, 8, New Coventry Street, W.) and the Gaulois form a class apart, and may be described as society papers.

Evening papers include the Temps (editor, M. Adrien Hébrard), which is certainly the most important and influential paper in France; Journal des Débats (editor, M. de Nalèche), founded more than a century ago; Liberté; Intransigeant (leader-writer, M. Henri Rochefort); Presse; and Patrie.

The number of illustrated papers is on the increase. The principal are the Monde Illustré, Illustration, and Vie Illustrée.

Some provincial papers have more than a local circulation and reputation. The Dépêche de Toulouse has great political influence. The Petit Var (Toulon) and the Phare de la Loire (Nantes) are prominent shipping and naval organs.

Industries and Statistics.

At the end of 1905 there were 24,743 miles of first-class railways being worked, and 3345 miles of local lines. Large advances, accounting for a considerable proportion of the public debt, have been made by the country to the railways, which will ultimately revert to the State. There were 3012 miles of canals used for internal navigation, and 4665 miles of rivers similarly used. The chief exports are textiles, wine, raw silk, wool, etc., leather, skins and furs, and small ware. Manufactures accounted for £101,480,000 of the exports in 1904, raw materials for £48,840,000, and food products for £27,720,000. The chief imports are wool, silk, coal, cotton, oil seeds, timber, hides, cereals, textiles, machinery, wine, food products. Raw materials accounted for £114,120,000 of the imports in 1904, food products for £32,680,000, and manufactures for £33,280,000. Agricultural operations engage nearly half the population, and include not only the growing of cereals, wheat principally, but roots, cattle, sugar, silk, wine, vegetables, and poultry and eggs. Coal and iron mines exist, and there is a considerable fishing industry, besides the ordinary manufacturing pursuits. See TEXTILE INDUSTRIES as to cotton manufactures. See AFRICA for details as to the trade of France with the African Continent.

Corsica, an island in the Mediterranean, separated from Sardinia by the Strait of Bonifacio, is a French Department. Area, 3376 sq. m.; pop. 276,829. Chief town, Ajaccio. There is a French torpedo-station there. British Consul, W. J. Holmes.

Area, 207,218 sq. m.; pop., 1901, 38,961,945. The birth rate is very low, and consequently the rate of increase is very slow: 1904, births, 818,229; deaths, 761,203. The population of Paris is 2,731,728 (1906). Other principal towns are Marseilles (pop. 491,161), Lyons (pop. 459,099), Bordeaux (pop. 257,471), and Lille (pop. 210,696). Estimated revenue, 1905, £144,923,000; 1906, £148,370,000; expenditure, 1905, £144,922,000; 1906, £148,368,000; public debt, 1905, £1,163,770,000, funded debt; £74,738,093, floating debt; imports ("special"), 1904, £181,458,000; 1905, £186,950,000; exports ("special"), 1904, £179,020,000; 1905, £190,460,000. Imports from the United Kingdom, 1904, £21,119,600; 1905, £22,423; exports to the United Kingdom, 1904, £48,774,000; 1905, £48,520,000.

Political Parties.

A few years ago the two main groups in politics might have been roughly, but accurately, defined as Republicans and Reactionaries, the latter including the Royalists—followers of the Duc d'Orléans (q.v.), and Imperialists—(followers of Prince Napoleon Victor) (q.v.). Now, however, the only division is between the Government Republicans and the Opposition, an Opposition embracing the most diverse elements. The general election, on April 27th, 1902, resulted as follows: 111 Government Republicans, 99 Progressist Republicans (Mélínists), 129 Radical Republicans, 90 Socialist Radicals, 59 Nationalists, 50 Conservatives (anti-Republicans), 43 Socialists, and 6 Guesdist Socialists. The Progressists lost heavily in the election, and the Nationalists gained ground only in Paris. After the election a new Cabinet under M. Combes succeeded M. Waldeck-Rousseau's Administration in June 1902, the latter having held office since June '90. In 1904 a split took place amongst the Radical Socialists, a large number of the group forming a new party called the Radical Socialist Left. In Feb. 1905 M. Rouvier succeeded as Prime Minister, and formed a Cabinet containing 6 Radicals and Radical Socialists, and 5 Republicans of the Left. M. Rouvier took up the greater part of the programme of his predecessor as to the Education question and the separation of Church and State, but declared that he would carry out the programme in a more conciliatory way. In June 1905 M. Delcassé resigned his post as Foreign Minister, the Moroccan affair being the apparent cause of his retirement, and M. Rouvier took over his portfolio himself. The Cabinet was further modified in November owing to the resignation of M. Berteaux, Minister for War. In March 1906 M. Rouvier was succeeded by M. Sarrien, and the General Election in May resulted in the return of the Bloc to power with a gain of 56 seats, the Bloc being a coalition between the various Radical Republican groups and the Socialists. There were returned 246 Radicals and Socialist Radicals, 77 Radical Republicans, 7 dissident Radicals, 22 Independent Socialists, 53 Unified Socialists, 64 Progressists or Mélínists, and 117 Royalists, Bonapartists and Nationalists. Only a minority of the Socialists favour the Collectivist programme. M. Guesde leads the extremists, and M. Jaurès the Parliamentary or opportunist Socialists. In October M. Clemenceau succeeded M. Sarrien as Premier.

History, 1906.

Following on the publication of the Yellow Book on Morocco M. Rouvier made a statement in the Chamber (Dec. 16th, 1905). He said that the Conference at Algeiras would take place in January, and claimed that the Yellow Book afforded proof to every impartial mind of the moderation and the legitimacy of the Government's action. France had never sought to introduce into Morocco a régime similar to that in Tunis, and had never invoked, in dealing with the Maghzen, an alleged European mandate. It would be her duty, however, to make plain at the Conference the special character of her rights and the importance of her interests in Morocco. She had the right to demand in Morocco an authority able to secure obedience and to prevent any menace to French interests in Algeria. The development of French trade in Morocco and the amount of French capital invested there also had to be considered, and together these created a special situation which was acknowledged by the Powers most interested. Rights so legitimate and intentions so moderate as those of France could not meet on any side with uncompromising opposition. This declaration was received by the Chamber with practically unanimous approval. See MOROCCO.

M. Doumer was elected President of the Chamber (Jan. 9th), and M. Fallières President of the Senate (11th)—M. Dubost succeeding him when he was afterwards elected President of the Republic. The Senate and Chamber assembled in congress in the Hall of the National Assembly at Versailles (17th), and proceeded to elect a President of the Republic. M. Fallières was elected by 449 votes against 371 given for M. Doumer; 18 other votes were given to other people. M. Loubet retained office until Feb. 18th, and on the 17th the Corps Diplomatique were received at a farewell reception. M. Fallières was installed at the Elysée on Feb. 18th, and took over from M. Loubet the Presidential office and powers. M. Loubet in his speech on the occasion referred especially to the strengthening of the friendly relations between France and other nations which had taken place during his period of office.

The Briand Bill, defining the conditions of the Separation of Church and State, was carried by the Senate (Dec. 6th, 1905), and the measure in due course became law. The legal formality of taking inventories of Church property throughout the country was commenced in January, and in Paris the police and the Republican Guards had to be called in in force to overcome the organised resistance at some of the churches. An Encyclical by the Pope addressed to the episcopate, clergy, and people of France, dated Feb. 11th, was published, protesting against the character of the new law and the way in which it was passed, and promising to issue practical instructions for their guidance under the new conditions. The opposition to the taking of inventories of church property led to serious disturbances at Sangres, in the Haute Loire and other parts of the country in March. Public opinion was greatly stirred, and a debate took place in the Chamber on various interpellations brought forward by Deputies. Some of the Centre party, led by M. Ribot, opposed the Government because bloodshed had taken place, and some of the Left because the Government had been too weak in not prosecuting Royalist agitators. On a division the Government were defeated by 267 votes to 234, and M. Rouvier and his colleagues resigned (Mar. 7th). It was then agreed to suspend the taking of inventories till the formation of a new Cabinet, which was successfully undertaken by M. Sarrien, who included M. Clemenceau as Minister of the Interior (12th). In their declaration of policy the new Ministry said they would firmly administer the Separation Law and continue the foreign policy of their predecessors. The Chamber gave them a substantial majority.

The general election (May 6th) resulted in the return of a big Republican majority supporting the Government. When the second ballots had been taken (20th) no doubt remained as to the country's approval of the Separation Law, and the Nationalists were badly beaten. The Chamber met (June 1st) and elected M. Brisson President, M. Dubost being re-elected President of the Senate. The Government proposed a general amnesty by way of inaugurating the new Parliament and celebrating the accession of M. Fallières. To meet the excess of expenditure, property, and income tax bills would be introduced. The Separation Law would be applied firmly, but without rancour.

The Pope's Encyclical on the Separation Law was published (Aug. 14th). It declared that the religious associations provided for by that law were inadmissible without violating the sacred rights pertaining to the very life of the Church; and that no other sort of association could be permitted, unless it were established legally "that the divine constitution of the Church, the immutable rights of the Roman Pontiff and of the Bishops, and their authority over the necessary property of the Church, particularly over the sacred edifices, shall be irrevocably vested in the said associations in full security." M. Briand, the Minister of Public Worship, pointed out that the first effect of the failure to constitute public worship associations would be the sequestration of lands, houses, securities, and other forms of Church property by the automatic action of the law. No forcible attempt would be made to close the churches.

An explosion of fire damp in the Courrières les Lens Collieries caused the death of from 1200 to 1500 miners (March 10th). Thirteen of the men were rescued on the 30th. The Chamber voted £20,000 for the relief of the widows and orphans, and subscriptions from outside flowed in freely. A salvage corps of miners from Westphalia rendered invaluable aid with their life-saving apparatus. A strike followed at Courrières and in other coal-fields, till 85,000 miners were involved. M. Clemenceau, Minister of the Interior, went unattended to one of the men's unions, and the companies agreed to an increase in wages, and accepted the proposals made by the Government for bringing the strike to an end. Serious disturbances occurred in the Lens and Valenciennes districts amongst the strikers, who came into conflict with the troops drafted into the districts to preserve order. The men who were out endeavoured to enforce a general suspension of work by violence. The Government, however, at once took measures to repress disorder, and the men gradually resumed work.

As a result of two years' revision of the evidence in the Dreyfus case in the light of new facts, ordered by the Court of Cassation, the Rennes verdict was quashed (July 12th), and the innocence of Captain Dreyfus was definitely and legally confirmed. The Court declared that there was no foundation for the charges against Captain Dreyfus—that the bordereau was the work of Esterhazy. Bills restoring Captain Dreyfus and Colonel Picquart to the active list, with the rank of chef d'escadron and brigadier-general respectively, were carried (13th), and another provided for the translation of M. Zola's remains to the Panthéon.

A deputation of the Westminster City Council visited Paris in January, and in February the London County Council paid its return visit to the Municipal Council of Paris, and was most cordially received. H.M. King Edward paid his first visit to President Fallières when he passed through Paris en route for Biarritz on March 4th, and saw him again on his return journey. Other evidences of the entente cordiale were the official welcome given to the representatives of French universities and other academic bodies visiting London in June, and their reception by the King and Queen at Windsor; and the special invitation given to Lieut. General Sir John French and other British officers to attend the French Army manoeuvres in September. In October the Lord Mayor of London and other members of the Corporation were enthusiastically received in Paris on their return visit to the Municipal Council.

A Ministerial crisis arose in October, owing largely to the ill-health of the Premier, M. Sarrien, who resigned (19th), his colleagues at once following his example. M. Clemenceau was then commissioned to form a new Cabinet, and included several of his colleagues in the former Administration. The most notable new appointments were of General Picquart as Minister of War and M. Pichon as Foreign Minister. The Government's statement (Nov. 5th) announced various military reforms, including the suppression of courts-martial, the completion of the work of laicising the schools by the abrogation of the Falloux Law, the firm application of the Separation Act, the introduction of a working-class pensions Bill, a Bill for a ten hours' day, and another extending to agricultural labourers the law concerning accidents to workmen, measures extending the powers of trades unions and giving State employes the right to combine, the purchase of the western railway lines, and the development of the State railway system, and a progressive income-tax Bill. The Chamber carried a vote of confidence by 395 votes to 96. Dealing with the Separation Law, M. Briand explained (9th) that the Separation Law had abrogated the Concordat and suppressed the religious worship estimates, save for the pensions and allowances provided for under the law. The Church, however, unlike the Protestants and the Jews, had not accepted the provisions as to the formation of public worship associations. Therefore the common law applied, and the churches would be left open for the free exercise of worship. Church property would remain in sequestration for a year from Dec. 11th, 1906, a proposal to which a section of the Radicals strongly objected. The House, however, by a large majority, carried a vote of confidence in the Government.

FRANCE, COLONIES AND DEPENDENCIES.

The total area of the colonies and dependencies of France is about 4,000,000 sq. m., with a population of about 57,000,000. The Minister of the Colonies controls their administration, and those which are not directly represented in the Senate and Chamber of Deputies, by the 4 Senators and 10 Deputies sent from the colonies, are for the most part represented on the Conseil Supérieur des Colonies, which consists of colonial senators and deputies, colonial delegates, and other officials appointed to it.

The Budgets of recent years, have been as follows:—

	Revenue.	Expenditure.
1903 . . . .	£655,690	£4,455,000
1904 . . . .	663,465	4,414,324
1905 . . . .	717,500	4,451,708

Colonies in North Africa.

Algeria. One of the Barbary States of North Africa, now a French province, administered by a Governor-General assisted by a consultative Council. There is also a Conseil Supérieur, partly elected, which, with the Financial Delegates, considers the Budget annually. The country is divided into the three departments of Oran, Constantine, and Algiers, capital cities of same names, each sending one senator and two deputies to the National Assembly. There are 2375 miles of railway. The products of the country include esparto and halfa grass, barley, wine, oil, tobacco, wool, iron and zinc ores, etc. Workable beds of phosphates have lately been discovered in the region between Oran and Tunis. The French forces maintained in Algeria consist of an army corps numbering 60,000 men, and the expenditure for military and naval purposes is borne by France. Area, 184,474 sq. m.; pop. (1901), 4,790,000. Inhabitants of Algeria proper include, besides the natives, about 765,000 French and European settlers, and about 57,000 Jews. The population of Algiers is about 123,000. Revenue, 1904, £2,603,901; expenditure, £2,602,122. Exports, 1904, £10,887,900; 1905, £9,150,520; imports, 1904, £16,014,500; 1905, £15,355,500.

The Algerian Sahara was in 1905 reorganised in four territories. It is under the Governor-General in regard to civil affairs, but has a distinct Budget, and is financially aided by France. Its area is estimated at 123,500 sq. m., and population at about 50,000.

Governor-General, M. Jonnart.

British Consul-General, F. Hay Newton, M.V.O. — Vice-Consul, Hon. H. C. Dundas, Algiers.

Tunis lies east of Algeria, and is bounded on the north and east by the Mediterranean, and on the south by the Sahara. Made a French protectorate '82. A French Resident-General, under the direction of the French Foreign Office, controls the administration, and the military maintained in the country number 10,500 men, the cost falling upon France. The Bey is Mohamed El Nasr, who succeeded his father in May 1906. Chief products are wheat, barley, wine, olive oil, zinc ore, phosphate of lime, dates, and esparto grass. There are about 583 miles of railway. Area, 51,000 sq. miles; pop. 1,906,000, including 60,000 Jews and 96,060 Europeans. Capital, Tunis, pop. 250,000. Bedouin Arabs and Kabyles form the majority of the population, the French numbering about 38,000 and the Italians about 67,000. Revenue, 1905, £1,204,990; expenditure, £1,200,925; public debt, £8,447,500. Imports, 1903, £3,344,515 (£1,845,086 from France); 1904, £3,335,377 (£1,856,811 from France); exports, 1903, £2,855,946 (£1,652,772 to France); 1904, £3,073,271 (£1,679,780 from France).

Bey, H.H. Mohamed El Nasr.

Prime Minister, Mohamed el Aziz Bou Attour. French Resident-General, Baron d'Anthouard de Wasservas. — Secretary-General, M. Roy. — Finance, M. Dubordieu. — Public Works, M. de Fages de Latour.

British Consul-General at Tunis, E. J. L. Berkeley, C.B. — Vice-Consul, P. Wilkinson.

French Somaliland is a wedge of territory on the coast of the Gulf of Aden, which includes the two ports of Obok and Jibutil, and the town of Tajura on the bay of the same name. The colony lies between the British Somali Coast Protectorate on the east and the Italian colony of Erythrea on the north-west. From Jibutil a railway has been built inland to Diré-Daoub, in order to open up trade with Abyssinia. (For details see ABYSSINIA.) Coffee, gold, ivory, musk, and skins are the chief exports. The country is administered by a Governor, and the capital is Jibutil (pop. 15,000). The area is about 12,000 sq. m., and population about 50,000. Imports, 1905, £477,200; exports, £728,760.

Colonies in the Indian Ocean.

Comoro Islands, The. A group of volcanic islands in the Mozambique Channel. Area, 620 sq. m.; pop. 71,000. The group consists of four small elevated islands—Great Comoro (pop. 50,000), Mohilla, or Little Comoro (pop. 9000), Anjuan, erroneously called Johanna (pop. 12,000), and others. Mayotte (area 143 sq. m., pop. 11,640) has been a French possession since '43, and the other islands became French protectorates in '86. They are all under the Governor of Réunion, who appoints an Administrator for Mayotte and Residents for Great Comoro and for Mohilla and Anjuan. Sugar and vanilla are cultivated. Commercially the most important is Mohilla, which carries on a brisk trade with Madagascar, Zanzibar, Mozambique, and the rest of the mainland. The people are Mohammedans, speak Arabic, and are akin to the mixed races of Zanzibar.

Madagascar. A French colony since '95. There are (1906) 3847 French troops in the island, and 8833 native troops. An Administrative Council has been established at Tananarive. There are Administrators in all the provinces, and education has been made obligatory on all children from 8 to 14. The Hovas, of Malay origin, are the predominant tribe. A great deal of missionary work has been done in the island, principally by the London Missionary Society, and a large majority of the natives were adherents of the Society till '95. Since then, however, it is alleged that the whole weight of French influence has been thrown on the side of the Catholic missions. Cattle herding and agriculture are the principal occupations. The island has rich deposits of gold, copper, iron and lead, and magnificent forests of valuable timber. Coal is found in the north-west; rice, cattle, hides, gum, indiarubber, wax, cotton, sugar, vanilla, lard, and coffee are exported to Mauritius, Réunion, and Europe. British trade with the island has been greatly diminished by the operation of the tariff instituted in '97. Revenue, 1904, £994,612; expenditure, £897,357. Imports, 1902, £1,601,561; 1903, £1,324,287; 1904, £1,056,775; 1905, £1,247,936; exports, 1902, £525,777; 1903, £658,845; 1904, £774,293; 1905, £902,160. Area, 228,500 sq. m., pop. 2,505,237, including 15,524 Europeans. Capital, Tananarive, a striking and well-built town (pop. 55,000, or with district, 260,000) upon a lofty hill about two hundred miles inland. Ports are Tamatave, pop. 11,000, on E.; Majunga, on N.W., pop. 6000. A railway is being built by the French authorities between Aniverano, which is accessible to boats of not more than 3 ft. 4 in. draught, and Tananarive, a distance of 180 miles. A section of 92 miles is open for traffic. Nossi Bé, a small island on the N.W. coast, held by France since 1843, and a flourishing trade-port, is a dependency of Madagascar. St. Marie, a small island on the north coast, taken by France in 1643, and Diego-Suarez, a French colony since '85, are also dependencies.

Governor, M. Augagneur (appointed 1905).
British Consuls: T. P. Porter, Tamatave; A. Sauzier, Tananarive.

Réunion. An island 420 miles east of Madagascar, occupied by the French since 1638, under a Governor and a Council-General, elected by the inhabitants, and represented at Paris by a Senator and 2 Deputies. The capital and chief centre is St. Denis (pop. 32,850). Sugar is the staple product, but vanilla, ruin, perfumes, and tapioca are also exported. Imports, 1905, £727,400; exports, £388,240. The bulk of the trade is with France. A railway connects the chief port, Pointe-des-Galets, with St. Benoit and St. Pierre. Area, 970 sq. m.; pop., 173,315.

British Consul: E. G. B. Maxse, C.M.G.

Colonies in French Central Africa.

French Congo is situated in Western and Central Africa, and bounded on the north-west by the Cameroons, on the north by Wadai, one of the Central Soudan States, on the east by the Bahr-el-Ghazal, on the south-east by the Congo Free State, and on the west by the Atlantic. Area about 550,000 sq. m.; population from 8,000,000 to 15,000,000. It is under the control of a Commissioner-General of the Congo, assisted by a Council of Government. It was in 1906 divided into three colonies—viz. the Gabun Colony, capital Libreville (pop. 3000), the Middle Congo Colony, capital Brazzaville, and the Ubangi-Shari-Chad Colony, capital Fort de Possel. The Middle Congo Colony has an Administrator-in-Chief; the other Colonies have a Lieut.-Governor, and all three have an Administrative Council. The military forces number about 1700. The colony entails a heavy burden on the French Colonial Budget. A railway between Libreville and the Congo is projected, and a telegraph line to connect Brazzaville with Stanley Pool in the Congo State is being laid. The exports (ivory, ebony and other woods, rubber, and palm nuts and oil) were £485,400 in 1904, and the imports £362,320.

British Consul: At Boma, A. Nightingale.

The states of Bagirmi, Wadai, and Kanem were recognised as French by the Anglo-French agreement of March 21st, '99. Wadai, which extends from Darfur to Kanem, and from French Congo to the Sahara, is the strongest native state in the Soudan. It has an estimated area of about 150,000 sq. miles, and a population of about 2,000,000. The Mabas, a Mahometan negro race, are the ruling tribe; but there are many Arabs also, and these carry on a wide commerce. The population profess adherence to the Mahdi-es-Senussi, the head of a sect which is by-far the most powerful in Africa, and has its headquarters at the oasis of Kufrah, on the caravan route between Wadai and Benghazi. Kanem is a vassal state lying north-west of Wadai and north of Lake Chad, with an area of about 30,000 sq. m. and a pop. of about 100,000. Bagirmi, which lies south-west of Wadai, and to the south-east of Lake Chad, has an area of about 65,000 sq. m., and a pop. of about 1,000,000 Mahometan negroes. At the capital, Massenia, a French Resident is stationed.

Colonies in French West Africa.

French West Africa includes Senegal, French Guinea, the Ivory Coast, Dahomey, the Upper Senegal-Niger Colony, and the civil territory of Mauritania, of which accounts are given separately. French territory stretches inland from the coast to the Upper and Middle Niger, thence eastwards to Barrawa, on Lake Chad, north to Tunis and Algeria, and is bounded on the west by the Spanish Coast territory of Rio de Oro and Adrar. The supreme local power with regard to all French West African colonies is placed in the hands of a Governor-General, resident at Dakar, having as his auxiliary a Commandant-General of all the military forces in French West Africa, a Secretary, and a Council. Subordinate to him are the Lieut.-Governors of the Colonies. The cost of the services common to all the colonies is met out of funds provided by their customs and shipping dues. The military forces consist of about 9500 men, of whom 7000 are natives. A uniform system of education was established in 1903. Imports, 1904, £3,636,536; exports, 1904, £2,601,555.

Separate accounts of the constituent colonies of French West Africa are given below. There is also a Territory of Mauritania, including the districts of Trarza, Brakna, Gorgol, and Guidimaka, on the right bank of the Senegal river, administered by a Commissioner.

Governor-General, M. Roume, at Dakar.

British Consul-General at Dakar: Captain C. F. Cromie, C.M.G.

Dahomey lies between Lagos and Northern Nigeria on the east and Togoland on the west, and extends inland to the Military Territories. It was taken by the French in '92, and is administered by a Lieut.-Governor with an Administrative Council. It is self-supporting, and receives no subsidy from the Home Government. The area of the country is about 60,000 sq. m., and the population about 1,000,000. The capital is Porto Novo (pop. 50,000). The old capital was Abomey, 70 miles north of Whydah. The chief products of the country are palm oil and palm kernels, while various manufactures are also springing up. The chief port is Kotonou, and a railway has been built thence inland to Paonignan. Imports, 1904, £427,250; 1905, £429,320; exports, 1904, £446,240; 1905, £305,360. The bulk of the trade is with France, Germany, and the United Kingdom, the latter having much the largest share.

French Guinea lies on the coast, between Portuguese Guinea, which forms the boundary on the north, and Sierra Leone on the south; but it extends inland to the Niger. By the Anglo-French Agreement, 1904, the Los Islands, with a population of 1422, were transferred from Sierra Leone and made part of French Guinea. The colony is administered by a

Lieut.-Governor. Area about 95,000 sq. m.; pop. estimated at about 2,000,000. The capital and only important centre is Konakry, which is said to be supplanting Sierra Leone in the West Coast trade. A road has been built from Konakry to the Niger, and a railway from Konakry to Kouroussa on the Upper Niger has been definitely taken in hand. The first section of 94 miles, to Kindria, was opened for traffic in 1904. The colony is practically self-supporting. The chief products of the whole region are indiarubber, palm oil, sesame, and gum, but there has been a great decrease in the exports of rubber. In 1904 the imports were £680,333, exports £568,332. Great Britain takes most of the exports and sends the largest proportion of imports.

Ivory Coast, The, was organised as a separate colony in 1893. It lies between Liberia and the Gold Coast, and towards the interior adjoins the French Soudan. It is administered by a Lieut.-Governor, and is self-supporting. Bingerville is the capital, and Grand Bassam and Assinie are the other chief towns. Bonduku is becoming a centre of trade between the French Soudan and the coast. Area estimated at 200,000 sq. m., and pop. at 3,000,000. A railway has been built from Abidjan to Ery Macongué, a distance of 49½ miles. The chief exports are rubber, palm-oil, ivory, coffee, and mahogany. Imports, 1905, £555,880; exports, £305,440.

Senegal. The colony consists of the four municipal communes of St. Louis, Dakar, Rufisque, and Goree; native territories directly administered; and the Senegal protectorate. It is represented at Paris by a deputy, elected by the four communes, but is administered by a Lieut.-Governor. Area about 806,000 sq. m., pop. about 4,523,000. Capital, St. Louis (pop. 24,000); Dakar has a pop. of 19,000. Chief exports (£1,372,413 in 1904, mainly to France) are gum, indiarubber, nuts, and skins; imports, 1904, £2,296,509. The Senegal is navigable 750 miles up. A railway 163 miles long connects Dakar, on the coast, St. Louis, at the mouth of the Senegal river, and Rufisque.

Upper Senegal-Niger Colony, formed in 1904 from the Senegambia and Niger Territories. It extends on the north to the French Algerian territory, on the west to French Guinea, on the south by the Ivory Coast, Gold Coast, Togoland, and Dahomey, and on the east by a line running north from Lake Chad. It includes part of the Sahara and the upper Senegal. The Colony includes also the Military Territory of the Niger, divided into two districts, Timbuctoo and Zinder, and administered by military authorities under the authority of the Lieut.-Governor, who resides at Kayes for the present. Bamako, on the Niger, has, however, been chosen as the capital. A railway has been built from Kayes to Kulikoro, a distance of 349 miles. Population estimated at over 3,000,000.

Colonies in America and West Indies.

French Guiana is in South America, on the Atlantic coast, and is bounded by Dutch Guiana on the west and by Brazil on the south. Area about 30,500 sq. m., population 32,908, capital Cayenne (pop. 12,612). The colony is used as a penal settlement, the penal population in 1903 being about 6500; and is under a Governor with a Council-General of 16 members. It is represented at Paris by a deputy. The climate is unhealthy. Gold forms practically the sole export, though there are valuable forests in the interior. Imports, 1903, £501,445; exports, £493,216. The delimitation of the frontier between the colony and Dutch Guiana was agreed upon during 1905.

British Consul, J. R. W. Pigott, at Paramaribo, Surinam.

Guadeloupe consists of two islands, Basse-terre and Grandetère, separated by a narrow salt-water river, with five smaller dependent islands, all situated in the Leeward group of the Lesser Antilles. Capital, Basse-Terre (pop. 7838); chief town, Pointe-à-Pitre (pop. 18,942). Products: sugar, rum, coffee, cotton, cacao, bananas, etc. The colony is represented at Paris by a senator and two deputies, and has an area of about 680 sq. m., and a total population of 182,112. It is administered by a Governor with an elected Council. Imports, 1905, £537,520; exports, £625,483.

Martinique is a West Indian island of the Windward group. It is administered by a Governor with a General Council. It is represented at Paris by a senator and two deputies. Area, 390 sq. m.; pop. (1905) 182,024. Fort Royal, or Fort de France (pop. 22,164), is the seat of government, and St. Pierre was the chief town till the volcanic eruptions from Mont Pelée in 1902, by which the town was completely destroyed, and a great part of the island was overwhelmed. The chief products are sugar, logwood, and cocoa. Imports, 1904, £616,788; 1905, £596,294; exports, 1904, £527,051; 1905, £725,460.

British Consul, H. J. Meagher.

St. Pierre and Miquelon are the chief islands of two groups near the south coast of Newfoundland, acquired by France in 1635. They are administered by a Governor with a Council-General and municipal councils. Capital, St. Pierre. The chief industry is codfishing. Area of groups, 93 sq. m.; pop. 6484 in Nov. 1902. Imports, 1903, £332,245; 1904, £249,227; 1905, £217,600; exports, 1903, £382,110; 1904, £306,415; 1905, £284,760.

British Consul, A. W. Woodhouse.

Colonies in Asia.

French India consists of Pondicherry and other towns, in a district the area of which is about 196 sq. miles, and the population 273,748. Population of Pondicherry (1902) 47,754. The colony is divided into ten communes, with municipal government. A Governor, who is assisted by an elective general council, resides at Pondicherry, and a senator and a deputy represent the colony in Paris. The chief exports are oil seeds. Imports, 1905, £254,240; exports, £1,087,440.

British Consul, Lieut.-Col. A. de C. Rennick.

Indo-China is the name given to the French possessions in the Annamese peninsula. They include Cochin China, Annam, Cambodia, Tonquin, and Laos. In 1900 the Kwang-Chau-Wan territory, and the islands ceded with it to France by China in '99 (area 190 sq. m.; pop. about 150,000), were placed under the Government of Indo-China. The Governor-General, who is supreme over French Indo-China, has his seat at Hanoi, in Tonquin. A Superior Council, consisting of the administrative heads of the subordinate colonies, with the military and naval commanders in chief and representatives of commerce and agriculture, etc., controls financial affairs, both general and local, and advises as to all local legislation. The colony is one of the most prosperous of French colonies. The army consisted in 1906 of 14,400 French and 18,500 native soldiers. A strong naval force is stationed there also. Agriculture is the chief industry. The chief products exported are rice, pepper, cotton, coals, tea, sugar, silk, salt, copra, hides, etc. Several important railway projects are in course of execution, or completed. One line, which was opened on Feb. 1st, 1906, runs from Haiphong to Viétri (93 miles), and thence to Laokai on the frontier (140 miles), while a company will further extend it from Laokai to Yunnanfu (285 miles), and work the whole line, when completed, with capital of 101,000,000 fr., including a subvention of 12,500,000 fr. from the Indo-China Government, which also guarantees the interest for 75 years on 76,000,000 fr. debentures. There are also lines from Saigon to Mytho, from Saigon to Khan-hwa, and from Tourane to Hué. Altogether there are about 1000 miles of railway completed, and all belong to the Government. Area about 256,500 sq. m.; population, 18,500,000, mostly Annamese. Revenue, 1903, £1,080,300; expenditure, £2,079,600. Imports, 1904, £7,399,826; 1905, £8,957,766; exports, 1904, £6,256,392; 1905, £5,525,661.

Governor-General, M. Beau.

British Consul, T. F. Carlisle, at Hanoi.

Annam became a French protectorate in '84. Area, 52,000 sq. m.; pop. 6,400,000. Capital, Hué (pop. 50,000), near the coast, garrisoned by French troops. Coal and iron have been discovered in abundance, and there are coal mines at Turane. There is a King named Thanh-Tai, but the government is under French control. The various peoples belong to the Indo-Chinese race, a link between Chinese and Malays. Religion chiefly Buddhism. Polygamy prevails generally.

Cambodia has been a French protectorate since '63. Capital, Pnompenh (pop. 50,000), on the Mekong. The reigning sovereign is King Sisowath, but there is a French Resident at Pnompenh (pop. 50,000), and each of the subordinate provinces is under a French Resident. The cotton industry is growing steadily. Area, 37,500 sq. m.; pop. about 1,500,000, of which 250,000 are foreign Asiatics.

Cochin-China comprises the whole of the Mekong delta. Area, 20,000 sq. m.; pop. 2,968,529. Capital, Saigon (pop. 47,577). The country is divided into 21 districts, each administered by a French officer, and is represented by one deputy at Paris. The French population numbers 4323, and there is an army of occupation of 2536 French troops, besides 2667 Annamese soldiers. The chief export is rice.

British Vice-Consul, J. L. O'Connell.

Tonquin was made a French colony in '84. It lies north of Annam, east of the Shan States of Burmah, and south of the Chinese province of Yunnan. Area, 46,400 sq. m.; pop. estimated at 10,000,000. Capital, Hanoi, on the Hanoi or Song-koi river, pop. 150,000. Principal port and chief seat of trade, Haiphong. The chief export is rice. At Hongay, near Hai-phong, and at Kebao, there are coal mines worked by French companies. Copper and iron are also mined.

The Laos Territory, taken from Siam in 93, has an estimated area of 98,000 sq. m., with a pop. of about 650,000. Capital, Vientiane. The Territory includes the three protected states of Luang Prabang, Bassae, and Muong Sing. The cost of administering the Laos territory is shared between all the colonies making up French Indo-China.

Colonies in Oceania.

New Caledonia is an island in the South Pacific, lying to the south-west of the New Hebrides. Area, 7650 sq. m.; pop. about 51,000. The Loyalty Islands (area 800 sq. m., pop. 14,800) to the east of it are grouped with it as a dependency. Other dependencies are the Isle of Pines (area 58 sq. m., pop. 600), the Huon Islands, the Chesterfield Islands, and the Wallis Archipelago (area 40 sq. m., pop. 4500), north-east of Fiji. New Caledonia is governed by a Governor with an elective Council-General. The penal population is about 1000, but since '98 no convicts have been sent out. The capital is Noumea (pop. 7000). Ores and minerals (nickel, chrome and cobalt) are worked and exported. Agriculture and cattle-breeding are also carried on successfully, and coffee is an increasing export. Imports, 1904, £498,147; 1905, £429,080; exports, 1904, £441,656; 1905, £442,800.

British Consul at Noumea, A. G. Brophy.

Other Islands in Oceania belonging to France are the Society Islands, including Tahiti (area 600 sq. m., pop. 11,000, chief town, Papeete, imports, 1905, £119,927; exports, £114,133, consisting chiefly of copra, mother-of-pearl shell, and vanilla); and Moorea (area 50 sq. m., pop. 1600); the Leeward Islands, the Tubuai, and Raiavoe Islands (area 100 sq. m. pop. 1700); the Tuamotu Islands (pop. 5000); the Gambier (area 6 sq. m., pop. 600) and Marquesas (area 480 sq. m., pop. 4280) Islands. They are all administered by a Governor and an elective Council-General of 11 members. Total area about 1500 sq. m.; pop. about 30,000. See also NEW HEBRIDES.

British Consul at Tahiti, R. T. Simons.

Francis Ferdinand of Austria, Archduke, son of the late Archduke Charles Louis, by his second marriage with the Princess Maria Annonciata, daughter of Ferdinand II., King of the two Sicilies, was b. at Gratz, Dec. 18th, 1863. He has never made any great figure in Austrian society, and, of course, holds aloof from politics because of his position. By the death of the Crown Prince Rudolph and the abdication of his father, who died in '96, he became the heir apparent to the Austrian throne. On July 1st, 1900, he contracted a morganatic marriage with Countess Sophia Chotek, a member of one of the noblest Austrian families, and formally declared that neither his wife nor any children of the marriage could have the rights of equal birth or any claim to succeed to the throne. Before the ceremony the Emperor made the bride Princess von Hohenberg. The second child of the marriage, born Sept. 29th, 1902, is a boy.

Free Church Boys' Camps (intended for boys at the great public schools and grammar schools, and conducted by University men). Secretary, Mr. C. B. Young, Mansfield College, Oxford.

FREEMASONRY.

The United Grand Lodge of England acknowledges only two species of Freemasonry—the Craft and the Royal Arch. Scotch, Irish, American and Continental jurisdictions acknowledge other degrees; but these, with the exception of the Mark Degree, are not universal—that is, they are Christian degrees, and the Jew, the Turk, the Mohammedan and the Parsee will not join them. The roll of the Grand Lodge to Sept. 1905 showed a total of 3136 warrants for lodges under the English constitution; but this does not represent the actual number of lodges now subject to Grand Lodge, as out of this total some 446 lodges have ceased to exist since '63, while some have gone under the jurisdiction of Colonial Grand Lodges. The Duke of Connaught was elected, March 6th, 1901, as Grand Master (in succession to King Edward VII., who resigned the office on his accession, after holding it for twenty-six years), and his installation took place on July 17th.

A committee of charity was formed in connection with the Grand Lodge in 1725. This committee is now called The Board of Benevolence, its province being to administer the Fund of Benevolence. To this Fund every one initiated in a lodge under the English constitution contributes; as long as he is a subscriber to a lodge in London 4s. a year is paid by his lodge for him to this fund, and 2s. if he subscribe to a country lodge, another 2s. going to the fund of his province (though this sum varies in different provinces). In 1788 Chevalier Ruspini, surgeon-dentist to George III., established the Freemasons' Girls' School, now known as The Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, and ten years later the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys was started. The Institution for the Aged is the youngest of the three, the Institution for the Men not having been established till 1842, and for the Widows not till '49. The Girls' School boards, clothes and educates 285 girls, and the Boys' School 435 boys; while the Benevolent Institution grants annuities to 589 persons—£40 a year to men and £32 a year to widows; there being now 251 men and 338 widows on the funds. It is also paying about £660 a year to widows of deceased annuitants. The total receipts of these three institutions in 1905 were: Benevolent Institution, £41,672; Boys' School, £38,794; Girls' School, £35,398.

The Grand Secretary of United Grand Lodge is Sir Edward Letchworth, F.S.A., Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen Street, London.

The Mark Masons established their Grand Lodge in 1856. It has 600 lodges in England and Wales and the colonies, with 52,013 registered Mark Masons subject to its authority; has a large Benevolent Fund, an Educational Fund, and out of the interest of its annuity funds grants £26 a year to each of seven decayed Mark Masons and £21 a year to each of twelve widows.

The Grand Secretary is Mr. C. F. Matier, Mark Masons' Hall, Great Queen St., London.

Knights Templar. The Offices of the Great Priory of the Order of the Temple are at Mark Masons' Hall, Great Queen Street, W.C. Though it is not strictly Masonic, none but Freemasons are now admitted as members of the Order.

Consult Mackay's "Lexicon of Freemasonry"; Kenning's "Cyclopaedia of Freemasonry"; Gould's "History of Freemasonry" (6 vols.). English Freemasonry has two London weekly newspapers devoted to its interests—the Freemason and the Freemasons' Chronicle—and one monthly, the Masonic Illustrated.

Fremantle, Admiral the Hon. Sir Edmund R., G.C.B., C.M.G., was appointed Rear-

Admiral of the United Kingdom and of the Admiralty thereof on July 25th, 1901. He was b. June 15th, 1836, and is a son of the 1st Baron Cottesloe. Ed. at Cheam School, he entered the Navy in '49, and has seen active service in the Burmese War '52, New Zealand '64-6, Ashanti '73-4, and East Africa '88-9. He attained the rank of Captain '67, Rear-Admiral '85, Vice-Admiral '90, and Admiral '96, and has commanded on the East Indies and China stations, and at Plymouth. He holds four life-saving medals, won the Royal United Service Institution's Gold Medal for the best Essay on Naval Tactics in '80, and has written lives of Hawke and Boscawen. 44, Lower Sloane St., S.W. United Service Club.

French, Lieut.-General Sir John D. P., K.C.B., K.C.M.G., is the son of Captain French, R.N., and was b. 1852. He entered the Navy in '66, but afterwards left it and obtained a commission in the 8th Hussars in '74. Fifteen years later he had risen to be Colonel of the 10th (Prince of Wales's Own) Hussars. He served with the regiment in the Egyptian campaign, '84-5, at Abu Klea and at Metemneh. On his return to England he became Staff Colonel at the Cavalry Depot, Canterbury, commanded the Cavalry Brigade at Aldershot, and in '99 was appointed to command the Cavalry Division of the South African Field Force. The day after he reached Ladysmith he reconnoitred in force to Modder Spruit, and successfully engaged the Boers at Elands-laagte. After leaving Ladysmith he commanded the force in the Colesberg district till he was withdrawn to lead the mounted force which so brilliantly and successfully relieved Kimberley. During 1901 he rendered splendid service in the operations against Botha, and later on was given charge of the forces in Cape Colony. In Oct. 1901 he was appointed to succeed Sir Redvers Buller in the command of the First Army Corps; and in 1902, after the cessation of the war, he returned to England to take up his duties. He received the Cross of the Red Eagle of Prussia, 1902, the insignia of Grand Officer of the Legion of Honour, 1903, and the Cross of the Iron Crown of Austria, 1904. Hon. LL.D. Cambridge, 1903; hon. D.C.L. Oxford, June 1904. See ARMY, BRITISH.

FRIENDLY SOCIETIES.

The Friendly Societies Act, '96, and the Collecting Societies and Industrial Assurance Companies Act, '96, consolidate all the law upon the subject. An annual report of the Chief Registrar of Friendly Societies is published. The societies include Friendly Societies proper, with their branches, Benevolent Societies, Cattle Insurance Societies, Working Men's Clubs, and specially authorised societies for various purposes, and in addition to these the Registrar has to deal with Workmen's Compensation schemes, Industrial and Provident (co-operative) Societies, Building Societies, Trade Unions, certified Loan Societies, Trustee Savings Banks, Railway Savings Banks, and certain Scientific and Literary Societies certified for exemption from rates. The Registrar has exclusive jurisdiction in the settlement of disputes with the Post Office Savings Bank and Trustee Savings Banks. The figures (see table on next page) give an interesting summary of the latest information available as to the various classes

Game Laws. Animals feræ naturæ (wild animals) are not in English law subjects of property, and therefore are not protected by the law of larceny. Special statutes, accordingly, have been enacted for the preservation of game, and these are known as the game laws. Game, as a legal term, comprises hares, pheasants, partridges, grouse, heath or moor game, black game and bustards (1 and 2 Will. IV., c. 32, s. 2). By the Ground Game Act, '80, it is provided that the occupier of land (the tenancy of which has been created since Sept. 7th, '80) shall have the right to kill ground game (hares and rabbits) thereon equally with the landlord, and shall be unable to alienate this right; but he may authorise certain others to kill his game. See Land Tenure Bill under Session.

Game and Gun Licences. The number of licences to kill game, including gamekeepers' licences, has increased in the United Kingdom as follows: England '95-6, 5626; 1905-6, 60,140; Scotland '95-6, 8611; 1905-6, 9735; Ireland '95-6, 4982; 1905-6, 4992; United Kingdom '95-6, 69,856; 1905-6, 74,867. The number of gun licences issued in 1905-6 was: England 199,581; Scotland 20,782; Ireland 18,877: total United Kingdom, 239,240.

GARDEN CITIES.

Garden cities are settlements designed to enable workmen and others to live in healthy, uncrowded homes close to their work in towns, and yet in close proximity to the country. The idea is one which has long possessed the minds of philanthropists and thinkers. One of the earliest attempts to put it into practice was the foundation, some few years ago, by Messrs. Lever Brothers, of the model village of Port Sunlight, on the Mersey. The plan was advanced a step further by Mr. George Cadbury, who placed in the hands of trustees an estate at Bournville, near Birmingham, for the benefit of the future residents, and expressed willingness to advance money to his own employees and others for the erection of suitable dwellings on Building Society principles, with the addition of restrictions, whereby a certain amount of land shall always be kept clear round each dwelling, the power ever to erect other buildings upon the land being withheld.

The scheme for the founding of garden cities was first introduced by Mr. Ebenezer Howard, in his book "To-Morrow," published in '98. The "Garden City Association" was founded in '99, and in Sept. 1903 the present Company, "First Garden City, Ltd.," was formed, with a capital of £300,000, of which about £150,000 has been subscribed, and an estate of 3818 acres was purchased at Letchworth, near Hitchin, at a cost of about £40 per acre. There were two villages on the estate and a large number of buildings, the insurance value of which was estimated at over £80,000. The estate, which is in a ring fence, may therefore be regarded as having been purchased at a reasonable figure. After the completion of the purchase the directors of the Company prepared a scheme for the development of the new town, and have already carried out a large part of the work of development, with the aid of expert engineering, architectural, and other advice. The whole of the estate was contoured, and the town laid out in relation to the existing features. The water, gas, and sewerage works are completed, and from four to five miles of new roads are already made. A temporary railway station has been made at the centre of the property, with extensive goods sidings.

A factory area has been laid out so that every factory has its own siding in direct communication with the Great Northern Railway, which traverses the estate for two miles. Seven factories are at work—viz., the engineering and motor works of the Heatly-Gresham Engineering Co., the Swiss Embroidery Co., Messrs. J. M. Dent & Co., Messrs. W. H. Smith & Sons, the Arden Press, Ltd., the Garden City Press, Ltd., and Messrs. Vickers & Field, asphalt manufacturers. Messrs. Parkinson, and W. & B. Cowan, Ltd., manufacturers of gas meters, etc., are building a depot; and Messrs. Idris, table water manufacturers, Messrs. G. Ewart & Sons, geyser manufacturers, and others have taken sites for factories. A number of builders and builders' merchants are on the estate; shops have been erected, and by the end of 1906 between three and four hundred houses and other buildings had been built, and most of them were occupied. A post office, telegraph, telephone, and two banks are established.

The Garden City Association is now engaged in developing another estate near Manchester.

Associations for the promotion of the Garden City idea are in active operation in France, Germany, and Belgium.

Offices of the Garden City Association, 602, Birkbeck Bank Chambers, W.C.; Sec., Ewart G. Culpin; First Garden City, Ltd., 326A, High Holborn; and at Letchworth, Hertfordshire.

GAS UNDERTAKINGS.

The latest returns issued by the Board of Trade relate to the year ended Dec. 31st, 1904, for Companies' authorised undertakings, and to the year ended March 25th, 1905, for undertakings of Local Authorities. The main figures are as set out overleaf:—

	Companies.	Local Authorities.
Number of undertakings . . . . .	469	265
Capital Authorised	£99,534,335	£42,740,770
Paid up and
Borrowed . . . . .	£82,729,040	£38,512,295
Receipts . . . . .	£17,828,872	£9,546,682
Expenditure . . . . .	£13,397,727	£7,052,474
Coal, Carbonised (tons) . . . . .	8,673,343	5,622,259
Gas made (1000 c. ft.)	105,311,980	63,335,656
(sold) . . . . .	97,255,155	58,324,570
Gas Mains (miles) . . . . .	18,632	12,258
No. of Consumers . . . . .	2,588,917	2,148,260
Public Lamps Lighted . . . . .	343,908	310,275

The total gas sold by both classes of undertakings, viz. 168,647,676,786 cubic feet, includes 18,752,500,641 cubic feet of water gas, and 103,500 cubic feet of acetylene gas.

In the "Gas Works Directory and Statistics" published 1906 (Hazell, Watson & Viney, Ltd.) particulars are given of the following undertakings:—

Country.	Local Authorities.	Companies.	Private Capital.
England and Wales . . . . .	217	943	82
Scotland . . . . .	53	187	20
Ireland . . . . .	23	76	13

London (including Southgate on the north, Croydon on the south, Richmond on the west, and Ilford on the east) is supplied by 14 companies, the two chief of which are the Gas Light and Coke Company and the South Metropolitan. Of the total of 4623 miles of mains, these two companies have respectively 2135 and 1162 miles. The amount of gas made by the 14 companies during 1905 amounted to 45,277,198,200 cubic feet, the quantity sold being 42,371,968,100 cubic feet. The number of consumers was 1,016,348. Slot meters and gas stoves increased to 540,540 and 625,203 respectively. Of ordinary gas lamps there are 15,217, while incandescent lamps (gas) now number 79,334.

Geikie, Sir Archibald, F.R.S., hon. D.Sc. (Camb. and Dublin), LL.D. (Edin., Glasgow, and St. Andrews), D.C.L. (Oxon), was b. at Edinburgh, 1835. Ed. at the High School and the University. Appointed to the Geological Survey in '55, appointed director of the Survey of Scotland '67, and Director-General of the Geological Survey of the United Kingdom, and Director of the Museum of Practical Geology, London, '81-1901. In 1903 he was elected General Secretary of the Royal Society. He has written numerous works on geology, literary essays, and a volume of "Scottish Reminiscences." 10, Chester Terrace, Regent's Park, N.W., and Athenæum Club.

Genealogical and Biographical Society, 38, Conduit Street, London, W. Sec., L. Ricci.

Gentlemen-at-Arms. A bodyguard to the sovereign instituted in 1509 by Henry VIII., and the oldest corps in H.M. service except the Yeomen of the Guard. Its members were "chosen of Gentlemen that be common and extracte of Noble Blood." Towards the close of last century it fell into great degeneration, and the posts were systematically bought and sold. But the corps is now of a far higher social standard. It contains over forty members, all of them ex-commissioned officers of distinction. It is only mustered for duty on such occasions as drawing-rooms, levées, and great state ceremonies. The captain of the corps changes with the Ministry.

Geological Survey of Great Britain. This organisation was founded by Sir H. T. De la Beche, who commenced work single-handed in the south-west of England about 1830. The Geological Survey was officially recognised as a branch of the Ordnance Survey in '34. In '45 it was placed under the Office of Woods and Forests, and in '54 under the Department of Science and Art, now the Board of Education. A detailed summary of the progress of the survey is issued annually. The maps and memoirs of the Geological Survey can be obtained from the agents who sell the maps of the Ordnance Survey (q.v.). The Survey, with the associated Museum of Practical Geology, is under a Director—Dr. J. J. H. Teall. Office: 28, Jermyn Street, S.W.

Geological Society of Ireland. This was formerly a branch of the above, but is now a distinct organisation. Office, 14, Hume Street, Dublin.

THE GERMAN EMPIRE.

Ruler.

William II., German Emperor and King of Prussia, the eldest son of the late Emperor Frederick III. by Victoria, Princess Royal of England. He was b. Jan. 27th, 1859, and succeeded his father June 15th, '88, his mother, the Empress Frederick, surviving till 1901. Ed. at the gymnasium of Cassel and the University of Bonn. He married on his twenty-second birthday, in '81, the Princess Augusta Victoria, of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Augustenburg, b. Oct. 22nd, '58, and the silver wedding was celebrated on Feb. 25th, 1906. His eldest son, Prince Friedrich Wilhelm, the Crown Prince, came of age May 6th, 1900, having been born May 6th, 1883; and was married on June 6th, 1905, to H.H. the Duchess Cecilia of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, who was b. Sept. 20th, 1886. Their son, Prince Wilhelm Friedrich Franz Joseph Christian Olaf, and grandson of the Kaiser, was b. July 4th, 1906. The Emperor has five other sons—Princes William, Adalbert, August, Oscar, and Joachim—and a daughter, Princess Victoria Louise. An International Labour Conference was inaugurated by the Emperor in '90. His Majesty arrived in England, accompanied by the Empress, in July '01. They were entertained at a series of splendid festivities, and the Emperor was presented with the freedom of the City of London. In October and November '98 he paid a visit, with the Empress, to Constantinople, where their Majesties stayed some time as the Sultan's guests, and went on subsequently to Palestine and Jerusalem. In Jan. 1901 he left the festivities arranged to celebrate the bicentenary of the Prussian monarchy to attend the deathbed of H.M. Queen Victoria, and was present at the funeral. While in England he was appointed by King Edward VII. a Field-Marshal of the British army. He visited the King at Sandringham in Nov. 1902, and afterwards stayed with Lord Lansdale for a few days at Lowther Castle. Some anxiety was caused by an operation which he underwent in Nov. 1903 for a polypus in the throat, but the growth was pronounced non-malignant and he soon recovered. The Emperor met King Edward at Cronberg on Aug. 15th, 1906, on his way to Marienbad, and entertained him at Friedrichshof Castle.

Government.

According to the constitution of April 16th, 1871, all the states of Germany form an eternal union; the direction of political and military affairs is vested in the Emperor, who may declare war, but if it is not defensive, the consent of the Bundesrath, or Federal Council, is required. The Imperial Army is under the supreme generalship of the Emperor, and there is a Minister of War for each of the four kingdoms, the Prussian War Minister being also Minister for the smaller states. The legislative functions of the empire are vested jointly in the Reichstag and the Bundesrath, and the Emperor has no veto on laws passed by these bodies. All laws for the Empire must receive the votes of an absolute majority of the Bundesrath and the Reichstag, and to take effect must be promulgated by the Emperor. The Bundesrath, which represents the individual states of the empire, as the Reichstag represents the German nation, consists of 58 delegates, appointed by the governments of the individual states for each session. Of these, 17 sit for Prussia, 6 for Bavaria, 4 each for Württemberg and Saxony, 3 each for Baden and Hesse, 1 each for Mecklenburg-Schwerin and Brunswick, and 1 each for the remaining states, including Hamburg, Lübeck, and Bremen. Alsace-Lorraine is represented by four Commissioners, who, however, may not vote. Of its functions, it may be said that the Bundesrath is mainly a confirming body, although it has the privilege of rejecting measures passed by the Reichstag. It has also a limited initiatory power, which it occasionally exercises. Members of the Bundesrath have the right of appearing in the Reichstag, and of speaking on any question in which the state they represent is directly interested. Members of the one chamber, however, are not eligible for election to the other, although they may sit in their respective provincial diets. The Reichstag is composed of 397 members, elected by universal suffrage and ballot for the term of five years. Of these 236 constitute the elected of Prussia, 48 represent Bavaria, 23 Saxony, and the remainder the other states in due proportion, ranging from 1 to 17. Members are now paid. See HISTORY below.

The Army.

The German Emperor is the head of the army, and is assisted by his Military Cabinet. The Prussian, Saxon, and Württemberg Ministries of War conduct the administration of the forces of these States, forming the Imperial Army, of which the command is exercised through the great general staff, by which the work of the army is prepared for in peace and moulded in war. There is constant interchange between regimental work and staff work, and between the latter locally and with the headquarters' staff in Berlin. Scarcely any regimental officer rises high in his corps without having been called to staff service; so that the ideas of the staff are based upon practical experience, and react upon the whole army, to which they come as a kind of tradition of duty and policy, sharpening and directing the life and work of the army.

Under the new Army Law, which came into force on April 1st, 1905, considerable additions are being made to the German army. The object is to increase the annual strength on a peace footing until it reaches the number of 505,839 men during the financial year 1909, at which figure it is to be maintained up to March 31st, 1910. According to the Act, the several German States will by the year 1909 be contributing to the proposed strength of the peace footing of the German army in the following proportions: Prussia, 392,979 men; Bavaria, 55,424 men; Saxony, 37,711 men; and Württemberg, 19,725 men.

The forces are now organised in 20 army corps (including the Guard Corps, and there are in addition 3 Bavarian corps), and comprise 623 battalions of infantry and rifles, 490 squadrons of cavalry, 583 batteries of artillery, 40 battalions of foot artillery, 29 battalions of pioneers, 23 battalions of train, and battalions of railway troops, telegraphists and balloonists. Under the new Law the additions are 8 infantry battalions, 9 cavalry regiments, 2 battalions of foot artillery, 3 pioneer battalions, and 1 battalion of telegraph troops. The contingent annually embodied approaches 275,000 men. The service in the standing army is as follows under the new Law: Every German fit to bear arms belongs for 7 years to the Regular Army, during the 5 following years to the 1st Levy of the Landwehr, and then, up to March 31st of the year in which he completes his 39th year, to the 2nd Levy of the Landwehr. During their period of service in the Regular Army, men belonging to the cavalry and horse artillery spend 3 years without interruption with the colours; men of all other branches of the Service remain 2 years with the colours.

The recruiting service of the Guard, consisting of the tallest and finest-looking men, is carried out by a committee consisting of officers specially nominated for the purpose. Under the system of recruiting there are always more men than are necessary to keep up the army strength, the surplus constituting the Ersatz Reserve.

The war strength is approximately 4,330,000 men, including the field army and its reserve formations, 1,700,000; the Landwehr, 1,800,000; trained men of the Landsturm, 800,000; and 30,000 trained men of the Ersatz reserve.

The Navy.

The Navy of the German Empire is under the supreme command of the Emperor, with a Naval Cabinet, with a flag officer at its head. All matters concerning the promotions, appointment of officers, etc., are dealt with by this Cabinet. There are two other central authorities, one of which has as its President the Secretary of State for the Navy, who represents the Navy in Parliament, and in whose office matters of organisation and administration are dealt with, and the other is the Admiral Commanding in Chief, under whose direction are the movements of vessels and squadrons. The department of the Naval Secretary of State consists of several branches, not unlike those in the British Admiralty, such as the Constructive Department, the Ordnance Department, and the Hydrographical Department. In the same division is the Department of Intelligence. In the office of the Admiral Commanding in Chief the business is that of war, and its preparation—training and education, plans of operations, studies of foreign navies, mobilisation, the political work of the Navy, and so on. Each section has at its head a naval officer who is on the staff of the Commander-in-Chief.

An "Admiral Staff" of the Navy has been established, of which all the officers on the staff of Admirals, whether ashore or afloat, are members, just as in the case of the General Staff of the Army. The Admiral Staff at the Admiralty is officially termed the Chief Admiral Staff, and the assimilation between the Army and Navy has been carried out in regard to ranks and titles, and the composition of the Fleet.

Minister of Marine, Admiral von Tirpitz.

Comptroller, Vice-Admiral Diederichsen.

Director of Works, Rear-Admiral von Ahlefeld.

Director of Construction, Rear-Admiral von Eickstedt.

Director of Ordnance, Captain Goetz.

Accountant-General, Captain Capelle.

Chief of the General Staff, Vice-Admiral Buchsel.

Chief of the Naval Cabinet, Admiral Baron von Senden-Bibran.

The men for the Navy are obtained by general conscription among the maritime population and voluntary enlistment. In addition to the recruits levied by conscription boys are entered voluntarily and engaged for 9 years' term of service. The petty officers of the Navy are as a rule drawn from the ranks of those who enter as boys. The Naval Estimates are prepared every year by the Naval Secretary of State, and after being examined by the Imperial Exchequer are submitted to the Federal Council, and as passed by the Council are submitted to the Reichstag in the name of the Emperor.

The total of the German Naval Budget for 1906 as voted by the Reichstag was £12,672,834 5s. (253,456,695 marks). The corresponding figures for 1905 were £11,780,910 5s. (235,618,205 marks). The estimates for the financial year 1907 will not be finally drawn up until November or December.

The number of officers and men on the active list in 1906 was 43,654. The total number of able-bodied men liable for service in the Reserve is about 70,000. The executive officers are divided as follows: 1 grand admiral, 6 admirals, 4 vice-admirals, 15 rear-admirals, 71 captains, 151 commanders, 349 lieutenant-commanders, 874 lieutenants, 378 midshipmen, and 175 cadets.

The German dockyards are situated as follows:—Kiel: Two docks take any ship; also two floating docks; four docks take any ship up to 10,000 tons. Wilhelmshaven: One dock takes any ship; one takes up to 10,000 tons; three floating docks; two new ones building. Dantzig: Two small floating docks and a new dock to take any ship building. Although the private yards of Germany could build very large vessels, there is only one manufacturing establishment for armour and armament, and this fact limits the annual output in armoured vessels of large size.

The supplementary Navy Bill laid before the Reichstag in the autumn of 1905 allows for the construction between 1906 and 1917 of 18 battleships, 13 armoured and 24 small cruisers; the Navy Law of 1900 having allowed for each of these classes 17, 10, and 29 vessels respectively. During 1907 the vessels to be laid down will comprise 2 battleships, 1 armoured cruiser, 2 small cruisers, and 2 divisions of torpedo boats. All these vessels, with the exception of the large cruiser, are to replace obsolete ships. The old battleships Kaiser, Deutschland, Preussen, and Friedrich der Grosse, were removed from the effective list. The vessels launched were: battleship Schlesien (Q), May 28th, leaving (R) on the stocks; armoured cruiser Schamhost (c), March 26th, and Gneisau (d), June 15th (these two vessels are to be completed in 1907); small cruisers Nurnberg and Stuttgart in September; and the first German submarine in Aug. 1906. The following vessels completed their trials: battleships Deutschland, Lothringen, and Hessen; armoured cruiser Yorck; and small cruiser Lubeck. The Deutschland was commissioned as flagship for Prince Henry of Prussia, who succeeded Grand Admiral von Koester as Commander-in-Chief of the Baltic fleet, the strength of which was brought up to 18 battleships. Although no official details were published, it was reported that the two new battleships to be laid down before the end of 1906 would be of a modified type to that originally proposed. Their displacement was increased to 19,000 tons each, and the armament to sixteen 50-calibre 11-in. guns, carried in pairs in eight turrets. The length of these guns is 45 ft. 10 in., as compared with the 45 ft. of the 12-in. guns in the Dreadnought. The penetration at the muzzle is 50 in. of iron, against 51 in. for the Dreadnought's guns, and the weight of the 11-in. shell 700 lb., against the 850 lb. of the British shell. The armoured cruiser, it was also reported, would be of a heavier type, embodying ideas introduced in the British Invincible class.

Religion, Education, etc.

Owing to its federal constitution, the relations of Church and State vary in different parts of the empire, but liberty of conscience prevails. The Jesuit Law of 1872 excludes from the Empire the Order of the Society of Jesus and kindred orders in their corporate capacity, though the clause giving power to expel individual members of these orders was repealed in 1904. The Protestants form 62½ per cent. of the population, and Roman Catholics, with adherents of the Greek Church, 36½ per cent., Jews making up 1 per cent. of the remainder. Education is general and compulsory throughout the empire for children of from 6 to 14 years. There are elementary schools, supported from the local rates, in every town and village; and besides the elementary there is an admirable system of secondary education, including continuation schools for the working classes, middle schools for business life, gymnasia for the universities and learned professions, with modifications where necessary in favour of modern subjects and modern languages, and special schools for technical education. There are, besides, 21 universities in the empire. Uniform codes of civil, commercial, and criminal law prevail throughout the empire. The lowest courts are the Amtsgerichte, each with a single judge trying both civil and criminal cases. Above these are the Landgerichte, with a more extensive jurisdiction, including a criminal chamber with five judges and jury courts. The Oberlandesgerichte are the courts of second instance, and the supreme court (Reichsgericht), with 92 judges, appointed by the Emperor on the advice of the Bundesrath, sits at Leipzig.

Newspapers.

The organ of the Government is the Reichsanzeiger, or Imperial Gazette. In Berlin the principal papers are: The Vossische Zeitung, organ of the Liberal party; the Berliner Tageblatt; and the Lokalanzeiger, which possesses the largest circulation, but does not boast any political standing. In the provinces the Cologne Gazette takes rank somewhat similar to a combination of the Times and Manchester Guardian. In politics it is Liberal, with friendly leanings to the Government. The Hamburger Nachrichten, the Augsburger Allgemeine Zeitung, and the Correspondent, are also influential provincial journals. The North German Gazette is a well-known semi-official organ used largely by the German Chancellors. The Socialists' principal daily paper is the Vorwärts. Amongst the leading illustrated journals are the Leipziger Illustrirte Zeitung, the Gartenlaube, and the Woche. Amongst the comics there are the old-established Fliegende Blätter of Munich, which is strictly non-political, the Kladderadatsch of Berlin (the German Punch), and the Lustige Blätter.

Industries and Trade.

Agriculture is a very considerable industry, supporting about 19,000,000 of the population. Of the total inhabitants of the Empire, 46 per cent. live in the rural districts and 54 per cent. in the towns. The mining, metal works, textile (see TEXTILE INDUSTRIES) and other manufacturing industries employ and support more than 20,000,000, and the chief articles exported are iron and iron goods, groceries and food products, drugs and chemicals, wool and woollen goods, cotton and cotton goods, anthracite coal and coke, instruments, machines and vehicles, earthenware, ores, and precious metals, hardware, literary and art objects, fancy goods, clothing, silk and silk goods, etc. Forestry and mining are both industries of great importance. About 25 per cent. of the area of the Empire was estimated to be under forest in 1900. Mining is pursued chiefly in Prussia and Saxony. The industries of the country have been developed enormously in recent years, and in actual tonnage the shipping of Germany stands second in the world. The chief imports are corn, groceries and food products, wool and woollen goods, cotton and cotton goods, earthenware, ores and precious metals, drugs and chemicals, wood, hides and skins, oils and fats, animals and animal products, silk and silk ware, cattle, etc. The commerce of the country has since 88 been administered by the Zollverein or Customs League, which embraces the whole of the states with the exception of a few small districts, as well as Luxemburg. Import duties are levied, the country's policy having been strongly protectionist since 1879. For commercial purposes there are 145 districts, each with its Chamber of Commerce; and these chambers, have done more towards building up German commerce than any other one factor.

Compulsory insurance against sickness, accidents, old age and infirmity, has been in operation for some years. Most of the railways, which traverse 34,022 miles, belong either to the Imperial or the State Governments. There are 832 miles of canals and navigable rivers. See CANALS and ENGINEERING.

Statistics and Diplomatic.

Area (with Alsace-Lorraine), 208,830 sq. m.; pop., 1905, 60,605,183. Berlin has a population of 2,040,222; Hamburg, 875,090; Munich, 538,393; Leipzig, 502,570; Breslau, 470,751; and Cologne, 428,503. ### Political Parties.

The centre of political life in the German Empire is the Reichstag, the constitution of which is somewhat complex. The Agrarian League claimed in 1902 to have 250,000 members. The Agrarians showed both their aggressiveness and their strength during the discussions on the new Tariff 1902-5. The last three general elections have resulted as follows:—

Party.	General Elections.
	1893.	1898.	1903.
Centre . . .	96	103	100
Conservatives . .	98	74	73
National Liberals .	53	48	50
Social Democrats .	44	56	82
Radical Left . .	24	30	26
Poles . . .	19	14	16
Anti-Semites . .	17	12	9
Moderate Radicals	14	13	9
Smaller parties* .	32	47	32
	397	397	397

* South German People's Party, Guelphs, Danes, Agrarians.

The outstanding feature in the 1903 election was the great success of the Social Democrats, who made denunciations of the tariff policy of the Government and advocacy of direct taxation in the form of income and property taxes in place of and in reduction of indirect taxation the leading features of their programme. The Agrarians suffered considerably, though very many of the Conservative and Centre parties are members of the Agrarian League. The number of votes cast for Social Democrat candidates was 3,010,771 as against 2,107,076 in '98. The Government rely on the Conservatives, Clericals, and National Liberals for their majority, and therefore muster about 223 supporters, without counting the smaller parties.

History, 1906.

A provisional arrangement continuing the most-favoured-nation treatment to the British Empire for two more years as from Jan. 1st, 1906, passed the third reading in the Reichstag (Dec. 14th, 1905). A meeting under the auspices of the Berlin Merchants' Guild was held in Berlin (17th), and was attended by over 2000 persons, the object being to recommend the establishment and maintenance of friendly relations with Great Britain. Further expressions of cordiality towards England were made at a banquet given to the British Ambassador by the Berlin Chamber of Commerce in January, and at other gatherings at Cologne, Sonneberg, Offenbach-am-Maine and Magdeburg. A party of German Journalists visited England as the guests of the Anglo-German Friendship Committee in June.

A White Book on the Morocco question was published (Jan. 8th) the aim apparently being to rebut the impression produced by the previous publication of the French Yellow Book (see FRANCE) and to support the German contentions, that the reforms urged by France upon Morocco would have resulted in placing that country completely under the economic control of France; that Germany had been kept in ignorance of French intentions, and that the French envoy had represented to the Sultan that he had a European mandate for the reforms which he urged upon him. (For subsequent developments see MOROCCO.)

A vigorous agitation, accompanied by violence in some towns, was carried on in January against the existing system of election to the representative Chambers in Prussia and other States, which operated so as to exclude Social Democrats even in districts when they were in a majority and able to carry the elections for the Reichstag under the universal suffrage system prevailing for the latter only. Enormous crowds held mass meetings to protest against the three-class electoral system (21st) throughout Prussia. In the Upper House of the Prussian Chamber, Prince Bülow declared that Social Democracy was a grave menace to the rights and liberties of the State and of the individual, and appealed for unity amongst all other parties in combating it. A Government Bill was carried in the Prussian Chamber on April 3rd increasing the number of members from 433 to 443 and carrying out some redistribution of seats, but in no way meeting the popular demands. A Radical amendment in favour of direct and universal suffrage and the ballot was defeated by 188 votes to 81. The Hamburg Burgerschaft passed a bill revising the electoral law by dividing the electors into two classes—those with incomes under £125, and those with incomes over £125. The purpose of the bill was avowedly to keep in a minority, if not to exclude, Social Democrats.

An agreement with the United States was reached, and was embodied in a bill according to the States most-favoured-nation treatment on the basis of the new German tariff until June 30th, 1907, with the idea of concluding a regular treaty in the meantime (Feb. 22nd) The bill passed its third reading (23rd).

Herr Eugen Richter, the leader of the Radical party, died (March 10th), in his 68th year.

After lengthy discussions in Committee, extending over three months, the Imperial Finances Reform Bill came before the Reichstag (May 1st), its object being to establish a fresh scheme of taxation, increasing the Imperial revenue by about £11,000,000. Of this sum the Committee knocked off £2,000,000, but taxes on beer, cigarettes, and railway and steamboat passenger tickets were left in, and a system of death duties was included. The bill passed its third reading (19th). The Payment of Members Bill passed its third reading in the Reichstag, not in its original form, but as amended by the special committee. It provided that members should receive £150 per annum in five monthly instalments of £10, £15, £20, £25, and £30, from Dec. 1st to April 1st, and a final instalment of £50 at the close or adjournment of the session. For each day's absence from plenary sittings of the Reichstag £15s. is to be deducted. Members were also given free passage on all German railways during the session.

The Government were defeated in the Reichstag (May 27th) over their proposal to establish a separate Colonial Office in place of the existing Colonial Department of the Foreign Office. By a narrow majority the first reading had been carried, but the Government's demands for money for military forces in East Africa, and for compensation to ruined colonists and railways in S.W. Africa, roused strenuous opposition. The Reichstag demanded that the force of 15,000 troops in S.W. Africa should be rapidly reduced, and the southern part of the colony evacuated. The acting director of the Colonial Department, the hereditary Prince of Hohenlohe Langenburg, in vain opposed these demands, and later in the year he resigned (Sept. 3rd), Herr Bernhard Dernburg succeeding him.

A great sensation was caused in October by the publication of the diary of the late Prince Hohenlohe-Schillingsfürst the third German Chancellor. The Emperor expressed his amazement and indignation at the publication, which was described by the Vossische Zeitung as "the greatest political scandal that has been known for a long time." Prince Alexander Hohenlohe, with Dr. Curtius, was responsible for the arrangement and publication of the memoirs, and he resigned his official position as regional president of Upper Alsace (Oct. 15th).

GERMAN EMPIRE, STATES OF.

The States constituting the German Empire are as follows, arranged in alphabetical order:

Alsace-Lorraine, administered as the Reichsland by a Governor-General, called the Statthalter, Prince Hohenlohe-Langenburg, appointed (1894) by the Emperor, with a Ministry, Council of State, and Provincial Committee of 58 members. Over 76 per cent. of the inhabitants are Roman Catholics. Capital, Strassburg (pop. 167,342). Area, 5604 sq. m.; pop., 1,814,626.

Anhalt, a Duchy under Duke Friedrich (b. Aug. 19th, '56, succeeded Jan. 24th, 1904; heir, Prince Edward, b. '61). The Diet has 36 members. Capital, Dessau (pop. 50,849). Area, 906 sq. m.; pop., 328,007.

Baden, a Grand Duchy under the Grand Duke Friedrich I., who was b. '26, and succeeded his father, the Grand Duke Leopold, '52; K.G. Sept. 20th, 1906. His wife is a daughter of William I. of Germany, and his heir is Frederick, born July 9th, '57. There is a representative assembly called the Landtag, of two Chambers, the lower elected by the people and containing 63 members. Nearly two-thirds of the population are Catholics. The capital is Carlsruhe (pop. 97,185). Pop. of Mannheim 162,607. Area, 5823 sq. m.; pop., 2,009,320.

President of Ministry, Dr. W. Nöck.

British Chargé d'Affaires, (vacant).—Consul at Mannheim, P. Ladenburg.

Bavaria, a Kingdom under King Otto, b. '48, succeeded '86, though his uncle Prince Luitpold (b. '21) has acted as Regent for him ever since his accession. The legislature includes an Upper House of 81 members and a Chamber of Representatives of 159 members. Though the army forms an integral part of the German army, it has, in time of peace, its own administration. Area, 29,286 sq. m.; pop., 6,512,824. Revenue and expenditure, £22,745,234. Debt, £80,011,876. The population of Munich, the capital, is 538,393, and of Nuremberg 294,344. Over 70 per cent. of the population of Bavaria are Roman Catholics.

Ministry: Minister of State and Foreign, Baron Von Podewils.—Instruction and Public Worship, Dr. von Wehner.—Justice, Herr Ferdinand Miltner.—Finance, Hermann von Pfaff.—War, General Baron Von Asch zu Asch. British Minister Resident at Munich, Fairfax Cartwright, Esq.

Bremen, a Free City and State, governed by two Burgomasters, a Senate of 16 members, and a Bürgerschaft of 150 members elected for six years. Area, 99 sq. m.; pop., 263,426. The second port of the Empire.

Brunswick, a Duchy, under a Council of Regency. The Regent, Prince Albrecht of Prussia, died Sept. 13th, 1906. The 3rd Duke of Cumberland is the heir, but his refusal to give up his claim to the throne of Hanover excluded him from the succession when Duke William I. died, in '84. On the death of Prince Albrecht the Diet resolved that an attempt should be made to settle the differences between the Duke and the Kaiser. The Duke offered to transfer his rights, and those of his eldest son, to the succession in the Duchy to his youngest son, Prince Ernest Augustus; but the Emperor would not consent to the arrangement, and the Brunswick Diet resolved (Oct. 23rd) that no steps should be taken for three months to fill the Regency, in order to give the Duke of Cumberland an opportunity of formally renouncing all claim to the throne of Hanover. The legislature consists of a Chamber of 48 members. Capital, Brunswick (pop. 136,162). Area, 1424 sq. m.; pop., 485,655.

Hamburg, a Free City and State, governed by two Burgomasters, a Senate of 18, and a Bürgerschaft of 160 members chosen for six years, though half have to be elected every three years. Area, 158 sq. m.; pop. 875,090. The chief seaport of the Empire.

Hesse, a Grand Duchy under the Grand Duke Ernst Ludwig (b. Nov. 25th, '68, succeeded March 13th, '92; married, '94, to Princess Victoria of Saxe-Coburg; the marriage was dissolved in Dec. 1901, and the Grand Duke married again, Feb. 2nd, 1905, Princess Elenore). The legislature consists of two Chambers, the second containing 50 elected representatives. Area, 2966 sq. m.; pop., 1,210,104. Revenue and expenditure, £4,133,000. Debt, £13,321,002.

Chargé d'Affaires, F. D. Harford, C.V.O.

Lippe, a Principality under Prince Leopold IV. (b. May 30th, '71; succeeded as Regent Sept. 27th, 1904, and as Prince Jan. 13th, 1905; heir, Ernst, b. June 12th, 1902). There is a Diet of 21 members. Area, 469 sq. m.; pop., 145,610.

Lübeck, a Free City and State, governed by a Burgomaster, Senate of 14 members, and Bürgerschaft of 120 members. Area, 115 sq. m.; pop., 105,857.

Mecklenburg Schwerin, a Grand Duchy under the Grand Duke Friedrich Franz IV. (b. April 9th, '82, succeeded April 10th, '97, married 1904 to Princess Alexandra Louise, daughter of the Duke of Cumberland. His younger sister, the Duchess Cecilia, was in June 1905 married to the German Crown Prince. The Diet is composed of the burgomasters of the chief towns and landed proprietors who have a feudal right to a seat, of which only a small proportion of those qualified (nearly 800) avail themselves. Chief towns, Rostock (pop. 54,735), and the capital, Schwerin (pop. 38,672). Area, 5135 sq. m.; pop., 624,881.

Mecklenburg-Strelitz, a Grand Duchy under the Grand Duke Adolphus Frederick (b. July 22nd, '48, succeeded May 30th, 1904; married '77 Elizabeth, Princess of Anhalt; heir, Adolphus Frederick, b. '82). The Diet is constituted like that of Mecklenburg-Schwerin. Capital, New Strelitz (pop. 11,340). Area, 1131 sq. m.; pop., 103,251.

Oldenburg, a Grand Duchy under the Grand Duke Friedrich August (b. Nov. 16th, '52, succeeded June 13th, 1900). The Grand Duchy includes the Duchy of Oldenburg, and the principalities of Lübeck and Birkenfeld. The Diet consists of 37 deputies elected for three years. Capital, Oldenburg (pop. 26,797). Area, 2479 sq. m.; pop., 438,195.

Prussia, a Kingdom under King Wilhelm II. The Constitution of '50, frequently modified since, vests the executive authority in the King, with a Council of Ministers, and the legislative in the King with the Landtag, composed of an Upper House of the princes of the royal family, the nobility, including life peers and other members nominated by the King, and a representative element; and of a Lower House of 433 members, indirectly elected for five years. The Kingdom is divided into 14 provinces, each under a Governor, and these are again divided into counties, circles, towns, and communes. Religious liberty is guaranteed by the Constitution, about two-thirds of the population are Protestants, and the State Church is the Evangelical. Agriculture supports over 11,000,000 of the population. Manufactures of all kinds are carried on with the utmost vigour and success. The mineral riches are great, especially coal, iron, and zinc. There are 19,177 miles of railways. The chief towns are Berlin (pop. 2,040,222), Breslau (470,751), Cologne (428,503), Frankfurt-on-Main (334,951), Hanover (250,032), Magdeburg (240,661), Düsseldorf 253,099, and Stettin (224,278). Area, 134,622 sq. m.; pop., 37,278,820. Revenue, 1905-6, £133,249,098; expenditure (ordinary), £123,493,643; (extraordinary), £9,755,455; public debt, 1905, £353,380,053.

Ministry: President and Foreign Affairs, Prince von Bülow.—Finance Minister, Baron von Rheinbaben.—Minister of Interior, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg.—Justice, Dr. Beseler.—Commerce, Herr Delbrück.—Agriculture, Herr von Arnim-Criewen.—Public Works, Major-Gen. Budde.—War, Gen. von Einem.—Instruction and Worship, Dr. Studt.

Schaumburg-Lippe, a Principality under Prince Georg (b. Oct. 10th, '46, succeeded May 8th, '93). There is a Diet of 15 members. Chief town, Bückeburg (pop. 5625). Area, 131 sq. m.; pop. 44,992.

Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt, a Principality under Prince Günther (b. Aug. 21st, '52, succeeded Jan. 19th, '90). There is a Chamber of 16 members elected for three years. Capital, Rudolstadt (pop. 12,405). Area, 363 sq. m.; pop. 96,830.

Schwarzburg-Sondershausen, a Principality under Prince Karl Günther (b. Aug. 7th, '30, succeeded July 17th, '80). There is a Diet of 15 members. Chief town, Arnstadt (pop. 14,421). Area, 333 sq. m.; pop. 85,177.

Waldeck, a Principality under Prince Friedrich (b. Jan. 20th, '65, succeeded May 12th, '93). There is a Chamber of 15 representatives. Prussia manages the finances. Area, 433 sq. m.; pop. 59,735.

Württemberg, a Kingdom under King Wilhelm II. (b. Feb. 25th, '48, succeeded Oct. 16th, '91). The legislature consists of two Chambers, the Upper representing the royal princes, nobility, etc., and the Lower of 93 members, 30 appointed by different classes and 63 elected by the citizens, for six years. Agriculture is the chief industry. Chief town, Stuttgart (pop. 249,443). Area, 7534 sq. m.; pop. 2,300,330. Revenue and expenditure, 1903-4, £4,556,544. Debt, £24,758,427.

Ministry: President and Minister for War, General von Schnürlein.—Minister of Foreign Affairs, Freiherr von Soden.—Finance, Herr von Zeyer.—Public Worship, Dr. Von Weizsäcker.—Interior, Herr von Pischbeck.—Justice, Dr. Von Breiting.

British Minister at Stuttgart, F. L. Cartwright, C.V.O.—Consul, Dr. Rose.

GERMANY, COLONIES AND DEPENDENCIES OF.

The German Colonial possessions have an area of 1,028,000 sq. m., with a population of about 13,000,000, including about 12,500 Europeans, of whom 7500 are Germans, not counting the military forces, which number 4500 Germans and 3825 natives (exclusive of the special forces sent to German S.W. Africa). The colonies in the most favourable position financially are German S.W. Africa, Togoland, and the Cameroons.

i. Colonies in Africa.

Cameroons. A territory on the Bight of Biafra, West Africa, annexed by Germany in 1884, with a coast-line of 200 miles. Inland it is bounded by Nigeria on the north-west and the French Congo on the south and west. It is administered by an Imperial Governor, with a local representative council. The capital is Buéa, but the chief town is Cameroon. Cacao and tobacco are grown, rubber is exported, and a flourishing trade is carried on in ivory and palm-oil. Cocoa is becoming a considerable export. A Plantation Co. has taken up a concession of about 34,000 sq. m., and is developing it, having commenced a railway from Victoria to Moliko and Lisoka. The Kaiser signed a Bill for the construction of a railway to Lake Chad, March 22nd, 1905. Area 191,130 sq. m., pop. 3,500,000, of whom about 710 are Europeans. Revenue and expenditure, 1905, £255,400, including £119,000 Imperial subsidy. Exports, 1902, £306,600; 1903, £378,250; 1904, £401,050. Imports, 1902, £649,800; 1903, £481,900; 1904, £468,900.

British Consul, A. Nightingale (resides at Boma).

German East Africa lies immediately to the south of British East Africa, and has an estimated area of 384,180 sq. miles, with a population of 6,700,000, including about 1875 Europeans, of whom 1324 are Germans. Several stations have been established by the German East Africa Company, and the chief ports are Dar-es-Salaam (pop. 13,000), Bagamoyo (pop. 13,000), Kilwa (pop. 10,000), and Tanga (pop. 5000). It is administered by a Governor, and a number of communes, with administrators and district councils have been formed; military and police force about 2400. The products are coffee, tobacco, cotton, ivory, caoutchouc, and gum. Gold has been found, and coal north-west of Lake Nyasa. The Usambara railway runs from Tanga to Pongwe and Karagwe (54 miles), and has been carried on to Mombo (28 miles). The Government have guaranteed interest on the cost of a line between Dar-es-Salaam and Mrogoro, which is open to Kingani (50 miles). Revenue and expenditure, 1905, £450,400, including £235,700 Imperial subsidy. Imports, 1902, £433,670; 1903, £559,400; 1904, £716,950. Exports, 1902, £258,645; 1903, £352,700; 1904, £447,550.

Governor, Capt. Count von Goetzen.

British Consul-General, B. Cave, C.B.

German South-West Africa has a coast-line extending from Cape Frio to the mouth of the Orange river, and is bounded inland by British territory. The area is estimated at 322,450 sq. miles, and the population at 200,000, including about 4750 Europeans. Coast infertile and desolate; inland are richer tracts. Damaraland is the name of the northern district, Namaqualand and Luderitzland lying to the south. The German South-Western Africa Colonial Company holds and works the coast lands. The country is apparently rich in copper and in agricultural resources, though as yet it is quite undeveloped. Guano is exported. The capital is Great Windhoek, 180 miles inland from Walvisch Bay, which belongs to Cape Colony. A railway runs from Swakopmund to Windhoek, about 237 miles, and another to Tsumeb, about 360 miles. A serious rising broke out in Jan. 1904, and gave great trouble during that year, and was not suppressed completely even in 1905. The forces sent out to deal with it numbered over 14,000, and by the end of 1905 about £10,000,000 had been expended in putting down the rebellion. Revenue and expenditure, 1905, £4,331,450, including £4,032,450 Imperial subsidy. Imports, 1902, £419,360; 1903, £396,550. Exports, 1902, £108,320; 1903, £172,150.

Governor, Herr von Lindequist (appointed 1905).

Togoland lies between the Gold Coast Colony on the west and Dahomey on the east; proclaimed a protectorate in 1884. It includes Little Popo and Porto Seguro, and is administered by an Imperial Governor, assisted by a local council representative of the merchants. The coast-line is only 32 miles long, but inland the protectorate widens considerably. Area, 33,700 sq. m.; pop. 1,500,000, of whom only 189 are Europeans. The capital is Lome, but Togo is the chief native town, and has 8000 inhabitants, of whom only about 150 are Europeans. Revenue and expenditure, 1905, £263,300, including an Imperial loan of £180,000. Imports, 1902, £303,800; 1903, £305,250; 1904, £344,900. Exports, 1902, £205,296; 1903, £180,800; 1904, £177,500. Chief exports, palm oil, gum, and ivory. Cotton is being grown with very satisfactory results. A railway has been built connecting Lome with Little Popo, and has been joined by a line from Lome to Misahoche.

British Consul, Capt. C. F. Cromie, C.M.G., at Dakar.

ii. Colonies in the Pacific, etc.

Bismarck Archipelago. A group situated N. of the eastern part of New Guinea, including islands formerly called New Britain, New Ireland, and New Hanover. They have been a German possession since '84. As to government see Kaiser Wilhelm's Land below. Area 20,000 sq. m.; pop. 188,000, including about 280 Europeans. Chief exports copra and cocoanut fibre. Imports, 1903, £117,000; 1904, £87,950. Exports, 1903, £48,150; 1904, £60,500.

Caroline Islands. This archipelago, or group of islands, in all numbering five hundred, lies between the Philippines and the Marshall Islands, in the Pacific Ocean, and to the north of German New Guinea. After the Spanish-American war, the Caroline, Pelew, and Marianne or Ladrone Islands (except Guam, ceded to the United States in '98) were left under Spanish rule; but they were sold during '96 to Germany for about £837,500. The chief islands in the Caroline group are Yap, Ponape, and Kusai. Area, 560 sq. m.; pop. 50,000. The Pelew group, the most westerly of the groups, consist of 26 small islands, the largest of which is Babel-thuap. The pop. is about 10,000. The Ladrone are divided into two groups, the northern and southern. The former are volcanic and uninhabited, and the latter have a population of about 10,000. Area of Ladrone 250 sq. m.; pop., 2000. For administrative purposes there are three divisions: (1) the Eastern Carolines, capital Ponape; (2) the Western Carolines and Pelew Islands, capital Yap; (3) the Ladrone, capital Saypan. The whole group was put under the Governor of German New Guinea. The chief export is copra. Revenue and expenditure, 1905-6, £17,250, including £8050 Imperial subsidy. Imports, 1903, £42,050; 1904, £35,500. Exports, 1903, £38,550; 1904, £24,000.

Kaiser Wilhelm's Land is the German portion of New Guinea, and lies to the north of the British territory. Its area, with Long Island, Dampier Island, etc., is about 70,000 sq. m., and the population 110,000. The administration was formerly in the hands of the German New Guinea Company and an Imperial Commissioner, but the Imperial Government assumed the control of the protectorate on April 1st, '99. The seat of government is Herbertshöhe, in the Bismarck Archipelago, an Imperial Commissioner presiding over the Archipelago, Kaiser Wilhelm's Land, and the Solomon Islands. Tobacco, cotton, coffee, and the coco-palm are cultivated with much success, and there are rich forests. Revenue and expenditure, 1905, £58,800, including £42,050 Imperial subsidy. Imports, 1904, £28,350; exports, £2700.

Kiao-Chau, a German protectorate in the Chinese province of Shantung, was occupied by Germany in Nov. '97, and formally ceded to her on a 99 years' lease by China in Jan. '98. The protectorate is administered under the German Navy department by a Governor. The territory conceded with the town stretches about 160 miles along the coast, and a neutral zone, with an area of about 2500 sq. miles and a population of about 1,200,000, surrounds the district and the bay. Area of the protectorate (exclusive of the bay) about 200 sq. miles; pop. about 20,000. A dock is being built, and the place is to be made a fortified coaling station, though for commercial purposes the port is free. Railways run inland from Tsintau to Tsi-nan-fu and I-chau, so as to serve the extensive coalfields of Wei-hsien and Pashan. Revenue and expenditure, 1905, £764,800, including £733,000 Imperial subsidy. Imports, 1901-2, £953,902; exports, £243,294.

Marshall Islands. These have been German since 1885. They include the Ratak and Ralik Islands. Area, 150 sq. m.; pop. 15,000. The chief island and capital is Jaluit, and the Jaluit Company of Hamburg administers the group under an agreement with the German Government; but the administration was to be taken over by the Government on April 1st, 1906. Improved trading regulations were put in force on Oct. 1st, 1905. Copra is the chief export. Imports, 1903, £24,900; 1904, £22,200. Exports, 1903, £26,100; 1904, £29,150.

British Vice-Consul, A. B. Scott, at Yap.

Samoa Islands. By an agreement made between Great Britain and Germany Nov. 9th, '99, and approved by the United States in Jan. 1900, Upolu (area 345 sq. m.), and Savaii (area 660 sq. m.), were assigned absolutely to Germany; and Tutuila and the other islands to the United States. Equality as to freedom of trade was reserved to all three nations, which had previously jointly guaranteed the independence of the islands. The population is 39,000, of whom 450 are whites and 650 half-castes. The islands are administered, together with adjacent smaller islands, by a Governor, with a native High Chief and Council. The town and port of Upolu is Apia. Chief exports, copra and cocoa beans. Revenue and expenditure, 1904-5, £28,685, including £11,526 Imperial subsidy. Imports, 1923, £134,050; 1904, £115,850; 1905, £144,093. Exports, 1903, £69,250; 1904, £83,750; 1905, £101,392.

Solomon Islands. The German islands are administered from Kaiser Wilhelm's Land, and until '99 included Isabel, Bougainville, and other islands; but by the Samoa agreement with Great Britain (concluded Nov. 14th, '99) all the islands, except Bougainville and Buka, were ceded to Great Britain. The islanders are in demand as labourers in Queensland and in New Guinea, and Germany reserved her right to hire them for such purposes. Stations have been established by the Melanesian Mission, but the natives are treacherous, and many of them are cannibals and head hunters. Sandal-wood and tortoise-shell are the chief products. Area, 4200 sq. m.; pop., 45,000.

Gilchrist Educational Trust. A fund left by the late Dr. John Borthwick Gilchrist (1759-1841) to trustees, "for the benefit, advancement, and propagation of education and learning in every part of the world, as far as circumstances will permit." The income is applied to the support of scholarships and studentships for young men and women, in connection with various universities and colleges; in occasional grants to Educational Institutions under special circumstances; and to the delivery of high-class lectures for the people, at a nominal charge for admission. Secretary, R. D. Roberts, M.A., D.Sc. Office, 1, Plowden Buildings, Temple, E.C.

Giolitti, Signor Giovanni, Italian Premier for the third time in 1906, and Minister of the Interior. B. at Mondovì in 1842, of an old but poor family of mountaineers, he has preserved the same simple habits as when he was a struggling barrister. After occupying several minor legal posts he entered politics in '82 as Deputy for Coni, and soon came to the front as a man of great independence and ability, and also as an orator. Although he became Minister of the Treasury under Crispi (80), he subsequently fought the Crispinian policy with the greatest determination as Prime Minister. When he fell and his opponent returned to power, Signor Giolitti crossed the frontier, having been advised that his arrest had been decided on. During his second administration (1903-5), he introduced several Liberal reforms.

Girls' Friendly Society, The (Patroness, Queen Alexandra; Presidents, the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Archbishop of York). There are 1,442 branches, and 164,174 members all over the world. Clubs, classes, homes of rest, registry offices and protected emigration form part of the scheme. Secretary, Miss Ethel Smith, 39, Victoria Street, S.W.

Godley, Sir Arthur, K.C.B., Permanent Under-Secretary of State for India since 1883, is the only son of John Robert Godley, late of Killigar, co. Leitrim, and was b. in '47. Ed. at Rugby and Balliol College, Oxford; entered as a student at Lincoln's Inn '69, and was called to the Bar '76. From '72 to '74 and from '80 until '82 he was private secretary to the late Mr. Gladstone, then Prime Minister and First Lord of the Treasury, who appointed him a Commissioner of Inland Revenue in '82; and he was selected for the position he now fills in '83. Lady Godley, whom he married in '71, is a daughter of Walter Charles, first Lord Northbourne.

GOLD FIELDS AND PRODUCTION.

The following table gives a bird's-eye view of the world's production during the last half-century, the figures for 1905 being necessarily only approximate:—

Year.	Australasia.	United States.	Whole World.
	£	£	£
1851	1,319,000	11,000,000	17,200,000
1855	11,277,000	11,000,000	27,015,000

1903	18,331,000	14,718,000	67,022,000
1904	17,836,000	16,093,000	71,106,000
1905	17,650,000	17,250,000	77,358,000

Among the gold fields of the world the Witwatersrand, though discovered only 20 years ago, is now the most important, and it is here that gold mining has attained its most scientific development. The nature of the reefs is so regular as to enable them to be located when they are an unusually long way below the surface, and this has led to the opening up of a great many so-called "deep" mines, where shafts are sunk to an immense distance below the surface before the reef is struck. Recent investigation tends to show that the real reef area, of which the Witwatersrand forms a part, is really very much larger than was at one time supposed, and that in circular or semicircular form it extends to portions of the Transvaal formerly deemed quite destitute of gold.

Gold production in Western Australia, as will be seen from the table below, continues to increase. Here, again, the whole development has taken place within a comparatively recent period, and under great difficulties in the way of transport and owing to lack of efficient water supplies. The latter deficiency has now been remedied, so far as the Kalgoorlie field is concerned, by providing an artificial supply from a great distance at very considerable cost. The development of the Western Australia gold industry has been checked and delayed by the unpopularity brought upon it owing to the mismanagement of some properties in which British investors were interested, and there is no present prospect of the boom of '99 being repeated, while no important discoveries of new ore bodies have recently taken place, and the leading mines are pretty steadily crushing poorer ore.

The third column in the table below records the progress of gold mining in India, in the Colar district. There the ore is comparatively rich in gold, but has hitherto proved expensive to work. Now, however, expenses are being materially lessened by the introduction of electrical power supply by the Government of Mysore.

The output of the three countries above described has been as follows:—

Year.	Witwatersrand.	Western Australia.	India.
	oz.	oz.	oz.
1890	494,817	34,209	104,932
1892	1,210,869	59,548	163,140
1894	2,024,163	207,131	209,729
1896	2,280,892	281,265	321,878
1897	3,034,679	688,603	389,779
1898	4,295,602	1,050,182	415,147
1899	4,369,166*	1,539,212	440,249
1900	251,891	1,472,990	493,342

* Including 300,000 oz. estimated to have been extracted after the declaration of war.

1906	4,514,730†	1,345,657‡	469,365†

* Seven months only; crushing resumed in May 1901.

† Ten months.

‡ Nine months.

In Rhodesia steady progress is being made, the output in 1899 being only 65,300 oz., while in 1901 it had reached 172,150 oz.; in 1904 the total was 267,715 oz., and in 1905 407,048 oz. During the first ten months of 1906 the production was 455,063 oz. While the development has been steady, the industry has not yet reached a position of real importance. The discovery was reported during 1904 of Banket reefs, the accounts of which are of a most favourable character, though at present operations in connection with them have only been of an experimental kind.

In other parts of the world the principal areas in which British investors are interested are: New Zealand, Queensland, British Columbia, Klondyke, and West Africa. No developments of great importance occurred in 1906, but there is little question that a largely increased output was effected during the year. Gold mining has made distinct progress everywhere except in Russia, and a considerable increase seems assured from the whole of North America.

Gosse, Edmund, LL.D., Librarian to the House of Lords, critic, and poet, was b. in London 1849, ed. privately, appointed an assistant librarian at the British Museum '67, and translator to the Board of Trade '75, resigning that office on his appointment as Librarian to the House of Lords in 1904. Hon. M.A. Camb., LL.D. St. Andrew's, Clark Lecturer in English Lit. Trin. Coll., Camb. '84-'90. Author of "Collected Poems," '96, "Northern Studies," Lives of Gray, Congreve, Dr. Donne, and Jeremy Taylor, Histories of XVIIIth Century Literature, Modern English Literature, etc. 17, Hanover Terrace, Regent's Park, N.W.

Gould, Sir Francis Carruthers, the greatest political cartoonist of the day, was b. at Barnstaple in 1845, and was ed. in that town. He entered a local bank at the age of 16, and at 20 came up to London and entered a stockbroker's office, eventually himself becoming a member of the Stock Exchange. In '79 he began to illustrate the Christmas number of Truth, but his first journalistic work was done on the Pall Mall Gazette and Budget when Mr. Stead was editor. He very soon became a regular member of the staff, and with his colleagues transferred his services to the Westminster Gazette when the former paper passed into Mr. Astor's hands. For years his pictorial commentary on the proceedings at Westminster has been brilliant in the extreme. His "Cartoons for the Crisis," during the general election of '95, afterwards republished separately, firmly established his reputation as a political caricaturist. He is now assistant editor of the Westminster Gazette and editor of Picture Politics. Knighted June 1906. Address: 3, Endsleigh Street, Tavistock Square, W.C.

GREECE.

Ruler.

King George I. (Christian William Ferdinand Adolphus George) is a brother of the Dowager Empress of Russia, Queen Alexandra, and King Frederik of Denmark; b. 1845. Chosen King of Greece in '63, in succession to Otho I. King George married in '67 Princess Olga, daughter of the Russian Grand Duke Constantine, and has five sons and one daughter. An attempt to assassinate him was made in '98, but happily failed. The eldest son and heir-apparent is Prince Constantine, Duke of Sparta, b. Aug. 2nd, '68, who married Princess Sophia of Prussia, sister of the Emperor William II., in '89. The second son, Prince George (b. '69), was High Commissioner in Crete '98-1906. Another son, Prince Andrew, married Princess Alice, eldest daughter of Prince Louis of Battenberg, in 1903. The present King is of the Lutheran faith, but by the constitution his heirs and successors must be members of the Greek Orthodox Church. He paid a State visit to King Edward VII. in Nov. 1905, and the King conferred on him the Royal Victorian Chain. His income is about £52,000.

Government.

This country gained its independence in the famous struggle of 1821-29, after centuries of subjection to Turkey, and was in '30 declared a kingdom under the protection of Great Britain, France, and Russia. Under the Constitution of '64 the executive is vested in the King and his responsible ministers. The legislative authority is in the hands of the Boule, a chamber of 235 representatives elected by manhood suffrage for four years. The deputies are each paid about £72 per session. The Greek Orthodox Church, governed by a permanent council called the Holy Synod, is the State religion, but complete liberty of worship prevails.

In the war with Turkey, which arose in '97 out of Greek sympathy with Crete, Greece was defeated, and had to pay an indemnity of £14,000,000, and to submit to a strategic reconstruction of the frontier in Turkey's favour. She also had to accept international control in financial matters in the shape of a Financial Commission established at Athens, to which the revenues from specified duties and the State monopolies in salt, petroleum, matches, etc., are assigned for the payment of the interest on the external debt. The Financial Commission has entrusted the administration of the monopolies and the collection of the assigned revenues to a Greek Company, which acts under the control of the Commission.

The Army.

Under a new law, military service for all adult males lasts for 12 years, of which 2 are passed with the colours. The regulations provide for an army of from 120,000 to 130,000 men on a war footing. The 3 divisions on the peace establishment swell in war into 6, each containing 2 infantry brigades, 2 battalions of chasseurs à pied, 1 regiment of artillery, 1 of cavalry, 1 battalion of engineers, with military train, etc. Each infantry regiment consists of 3 battalions, each artillery regiment of 8 six-gun batteries, and in war each infantry division is joined by an artillery regiment of 4 batteries. There are 6 mountain and 3 heavy-gun batteries. The armament is to be changed, the guns being replaced by quick-firers, and the present Gras rifle by a magazine rifle. A contract for the supply of 60,000 Mannlicher-Schönauer rifles by 1908, and 40,000 subsequently, was signed in Nov. 1905.

The Navy.

The Navy consists of three small battleships, with a few gunboats and torpedo craft of no large fighting value. There is a naval personnel of about 4000, conscripts for 2 years or voluntary enlistment. There is a small arsenal at the Piræus. Three armoured cruisers and some torpedo vessels were reported (Oct. 1906) to be projected.

Minister of Marine, M. Zygomalas.

Statistics and Diplomatic.

Education is compulsory between the ages of 5 and 12, but illiteracy largely prevails. There are 3587 schools and 238,165 pupils. The chief industry is agriculture, carried on largely by peasant proprietors, and the chief exports are currants, ores, wines, fruit, and olive oil. There are 700 miles of railway open. There are large numbers of Greeks outside the limits of the kingdom. In Asia Minor there are probably about 2,000,000, in European Turkey about 4,000,000, and large numbers dwell in Crete, Cyprus, etc. The population of Athens was in '96, 111,486.

Area about 24,528 sq. m.; pop. 1905 (estimated), 2,680,403. Revenue (estimated) 1904 (£1 = 36 drachmai), £3,366,284; 1905 (£1 = 31 dr.),

History, 1906.

When the Chamber met to elect a President, the Government candidate was defeated (Dec. 11th, 1905), and the Cabinet resigned. M. Theotokis then formed a new Cabinet (21st), and after a recess of one month the Chamber re-assembled (Jan. 29th). The Premier announced that the Government would enlarge the electoral districts by reducing their number to one-third of the existing number, and would deduct from the service of officers elected to the Chamber all the time not passed in the army. The military deputies strongly opposed these proposals, and the Prime Minister denounced M. Kalli for encouraging the Opposition. Finally Parliament was dissolved by royal decree (Feb. 14th), and the elections were fixed for April 9th. They resulted in a complete triumph for the Government, M. Theotokis' supporters winning 120 seats. The Ralists secured 42, the Zaimists 7, and the Independents 8. King Edward and Queen Alexandra arrived at Corfu (April 11th), and were welcomed by the Prince and Princess of Wales, who had arrived the previous day on the Renown, en route for home, after their visit to India. The royal party had a great reception at Athens (17th), and were present at the inauguration of the Olympic Games (22nd), leaving on the 25th. The Games came to a close on May 2nd. The law excluding junior officers of the army and navy from the Chamber was read a third time (30th). Other measures carried provided for the reorganization of the gendarmerie, and for making good the deficiency of military material by retrenchments in ordinary expenditure and some increase of taxation. A system of electric tramways for Athens and the Piræus was sanctioned. The session then closed (July 18th). The final rupture of diplomatic relations with Roumania was notified (June 13th), the Russian Legation there assuming the protection of Greek interests.

Greenwich Hospital. This ancient institution was originally a Royal Palace, and was appropriated as "a memorial of the virtues of good Queen Mary, of the love and sorrow of King William, and the great victory of La Hague," to receive disabled seamen and relieve the widows and orphans of seamen. The funds are derived from the investment of over £4,000,000 of capital, landed estates in the north of England, house property at Greenwich, and Exchequer grants amounting to £21,000 a year. In '65 it was resolved to close the Hospital as an asylum for disabled seamen, and to devote the Hospital funds to pensions for officers and men, the education and maintenance of their children, gratuities to relatives dependent on men who died in the naval service, etc. Director, Mr. C. H. R. Stansfield.

Gresham College. Sir Thomas Gresham, the "Royal Merchant" of Queen Elizabeth, by his will, dated July 5th, 1575, bequeathed certain rents growing out of the Royal Exchange, which he built, to the Corporation of the City of London, and to the Mercers' Company, for the "erecting and maintaining of divers lectures in sundry faculties"—divinity, law, physic, geometry, astronomy, music, and rhetoric. The lectures were organised and commenced in June 1597. In '76 the Gresham Lecturers submitted two schemes for the improvement of the Lectures, and the recommendations under this head were adopted, the principal being that all the Lectures should be delivered in English instead of Latin and English, twelve lectures to be given in each year by each Professor. The names of the present Gresham Lecturers are as follows: Physic, E. Symes Thompson, M.D.; Rhetoric, J. E. Nixon, M.A.; Astronomy, Rev. E. Ledger, M.A., F.R.A.S.; Law, G. H. Blakesley, M.A.; Geometry, W. H. Wagstaff, M.A.; Music, Sir J. F. Bridge, M.V.O.; Mus. Doc. (q.v.); Divinity, Rev. W. H. Thompson, B.A., LL.D.; Clerk to the Gresham Committee, Sir John Watney, Mercers' Hall, E.C.

Grouse Disease. The President of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries in April 1905 appointed a Committee, with Lord Lovat as chairman and Mr. A. S. Leslie as secretary, to inquire into the nature and causes of grouse disease, and to report whether any and, if so, what preventive or remedial measures can with advantage be taken with respect to it. The cost of the inquiry will be defrayed by subscription and guarantees, and no charge in respect of it will fall upon public funds.

GUATEMALA.

Guatemala is the most northerly republic of Central America, bounded on the west and north by Mexico, on the east by British Honduras and Salvador, and on the south by the Pacific. It formerly formed part of the Confederation of Central America, but the Republic was established in 1847. Governed by a President, elected for six years. The legislative power is vested in a National Assembly, elected by universal suffrage for a term of four years, and a Council of State of 13, part elected by the Assembly and part nominated by the President. Roman Catholicism is the chief religion, but liberty prevails. Education free and compulsory. Army numbers about 7000 officers and men, with militia about 57,000. The soil is very fertile, and the cultivation of rubber is being encouraged. Minerals are found, but are little worked. A new railway uniting the Central, Southern and Western Departments was opened Nov. 21st, 1903, and there are in all over 400 miles of line open. Chief products: coffee, rubber, hides, bananas, and sugar.

Area about 49,000 sq. m.; pop. 1,647,300, of whom 60 per cent. are pure Indians. Capital, Guatemala la Nueva, pop. 96,560. Revenue, 1903, £220,000; 1904, £418,445; 1905, £549,325. Expenditure, 1905, £329,377 (ordinary), and £402,758 (extraordinary). External debt, 1905, £1,842,526 (including interest unpaid Dec. 30th, '99, to Dec. 31st, 1905, £359,726). The regular service of the loan has been suspended. A general meeting of the bondholders of the External Debt was held on Dec. 1st, 1904, and carried a resolution protesting "energetically against the conduct of the Guatemalan Government in allowing its External Debt to remain in total default during five years," and claiming their full rights under the arrangement of '95. Internal Debt, 1905, £62,427. Imports, 1901, £851,791; 1902, £803,373; 1903, £594,327; 1904, £1,008,228; 1905, £1,363,889. Exports, 1901, £1,503,897; 1902, £1,806,300; 1903, £1,343,797; 1904, £1,510,373; 1905, £1,647,552.

Hostilities broke out with San Salvador in July, and the forces of the latter country were defeated and their commander, General Regalado, killed (13th). The Guatemalan troops crossed the boundary of Honduras in pursuit of the fugitives, and fighting went on in both countries. The Guatemalans were defeated at Piatanar (14th), and an armistice was then arranged (18th) pending peace negotiations, which were carried on board the U.S. cruiser Marblehead at San José, both the United States and Mexico offering their help to bring about a settlement. A treaty of peace was signed (20th) by the representatives of all three countries, and with the sanction of Costa Rica.

Guildhall School of Music, Victoria Embankment, E.C., was established by the Corporation of London in '80, for the purpose of providing high-class instruction in the art and science of music at a moderate cost. Lessons in any branch of music can be had at fees varying from £1 11s. 6d. to £4 14s. 6d. per term. There are 110 scholarships, etc. Principal, Dr. W. H. Cummings, F.S.A.; Secretary, Mr. H. Saxe Wyndham; Lady Superintendent, Mrs. Charles P. Smith.

Guthrie, Sir James, President Royal Scottish Academy, was b. 1859, ed. at Glasgow High School and Univ., became A.R.S.A. '88, R.S.A. '92, and President 1902. He is an Hon. Member of the R.S. Water Colour Society, the Royal Hibernian Academy, and various foreign societies. Knighted 1903, LL.D. Glasgow 1906. 41, Moray Place, Edinburgh, and Rowmore, Row, Dumfriesshire.

Guyot, Yves, b. at Dinan, Sept. 6th, 1848, is the son of a barrister at Rennes, where he pursued his early studies. He is an energetic Free-Trader, and as such was made, in '79, an honorary member of the Cobden Club. When still young he took a part in the revolution of Sept. 4th, '70, which, on the news of the surrender of Sedan, established the third Republic. An ardent reformer, but not a socialist, he became a member of the Municipal Council of Paris in '74, and conducted a campaign against the Prefecture of the Police in '78. He was elected a member of the French Parliament in '85, and took office as Minister of Public Works in '89. Appointed editor of the Siccle, an old-established Liberal paper, in which he now writes on economic subjects, he wrote "La Tyrannie Socialiste" (93), "Les Principes de '89 et le Socialisme" (94), "L'économie de l'Effort" (96), "Le Bilan de l'Eglise" and "La Question des Sucres" (1901). He was one of the prominent leaders in the defence of Dreyfus, and waged a successful campaign for the abolition of the Continental sugar bounties. After their abolition by the Brussels Conference in 1902, he was honoured by a public banquet at the National Liberal Club. He published "Les Conflits du Travail et leur Solution," in which he argues that the contract of labour is a contract of exchange, and "La Comédie Protectionniste" in 1904.

He was first Governor of the province of Kobe, but was then transferred to the Foreign Office, and after the Chinese War negotiated the treaty of commerce and navigation with China in Peking. He was next sent as Minister to St. Petersburg. He served in '99 as Japan's chief delegate at the Hague Peace Conference; and in the autumn of '99 he was appointed to succeed Mr. Kato as Minister, and afterwards Ambassador in London, which office he held till 1906. He was appointed Minister for Foreign Affairs May 1906. Hon. G.C.V.O. July 1905.

HAYTI.

Hayti, called Hispaniola by Columbus, and afterwards San Domingo, is the second largest island of the Antilles, lying between Cuba and Puerto Rico. Area, 28,249 sq. m.; pop. about 3,000,000. There are two states in the island. The larger is the Republic of San Domingo (g.v.).

The Republic of Hayti occupies the western portion of the island. Area, 10,204 sq. m.; pop. estimated (1905) at 1,500,000 to 2,500,000. Capital, Port-au-Prince, pop. 101,133. It was originally a French colony, but was proclaimed independent in 1804, and is governed under a constitution drawn up in '89. The executive power is in the hands of a President, elected for seven years by the Senate and Chamber of Representatives, who receives a salary of £4800. The Chamber of 95 members is elected directly for three years by all male citizens, and the Senate of 39 members indirectly for six years. The religion is Roman Catholic, and elementary education is free. There is an army of 18,016 men, and a navy of 6 small vessels. Agriculture is the main occupation of the country, but comparatively little is done to till the fertile soil. The principal product is coffee, and the bulk of the trade goes to Havre. Cocoa and cotton are grown, the latter in increasing quantity. Minerals exist, and are now being more worked. Railways are being built. Revenue, 1905, £481,508 (gold), and $2,669,021 (paper); expenditure, £695,775 (gold), and $7,549,976 (paper); debt, 1906, £5,152,122 (gold), and £472,554 (paper); exports (coffee, mahogany, logwood, cotton, cocoa, turtle-shells, and hides), 99, £2,800,000; imports, 1902-3, £796,333.

Hearst, William Randolph, American newspaper proprietor and politician. B. at San Francisco in '63, he began life by publishing a paper in that city, but soon extended his activity to Chicago and New York. His papers in these three cities appeal to the masses, and have very large circulations. They are "papers that do things," and are proud of being "yellow." Mr. Hearst began his political career as a Democrat, then sought labour support and became an advocate of Municipal Socialism. After being returned to the House of Representatives he was an unsuccessful candidate for the mayoralty of New York, and in Nov. 1906 stood unsuccessfully for the Governorship of New York State. By many Mr. Hearst is considered to have designs on the Presidency.

Hervieu, Paul Ernest, novelist and dramatist, member of the French Academy (elected 1900). B. at Neuilly (Seine) Sept. 2nd, '57, and

ed. in Paris. Practised as barrister, and secured appointment as Secretary of Embassy, but left both law and finance to devote himself to literature. Hervieu may be compared to Alexandre Dumas filis in that his novels and plays attempt to solve moral or social problems. He has courageously defended noble causes. His plays, many of which have been produced at the Comédie-Française, are, like himself, cold, logical, combative. Chief works: "La Course du Flambeau," "Peints par eux-mêmes," "L'Armature," "Les Tenailles," "La Loi de l'Homme," "L'Enigme," "Théroigne de Méricourt," "Le Dédale." Address: 17, Avenue du Bois de Boulogne, Paris.

Highways Protection League. Aims at reducing the present maximum speed limit for motor cars, and reducing it in towns and villages, etc. Secretary, A. Barnes, 7, Fig Tree Court, Temple, London, E.C.

Historical Manuscripts Commission. A Royal Commission was appointed in 1869 to examine and report upon the collections of manuscripts in the possession of private families and municipal authorities, who have rendered the commissioners every assistance in the investigation and classification of manuscripts illustrative of history, constitutional law, and general literature. Numerous reports and many appendices thereto have been issued by the Commission, describing some hundreds of private collections of manuscripts in Great Britain and Ireland. The Commission at present is constituted as follows: The Master of the Rolls (chairman); the Marquess of Ripon, K.G.; the Earl of Liverpool; the Earl of Crawford, K.T.; the Earl of Rosebery, K.G.; the Earl of Dartmouth; Lord Fitzmaurice; Lord Alverstone; Lord Hawkesbury; Lord Stanmore, G.C.M.G.; Lord Lindley; Sir Edward Fry; Sir H. C. Maxwell-Lyte, K.C.B.; Mr. John Morley, O.M., LL.D., D.C.L.; and Professor C. H. Firth, M.A., with Mr. R. A. Roberts as Secretary. The reports are prepared by various inspectors acting under the authority of the Commission, many of the historical papers examined being deposited by their owners in the Public Record Office for the purpose. Office, Public Record Office, Chancery Lane, W.C.

Historical Society, Royal. Hon. Secretary, H. E. Malden, M.A., 6 and 7, South Square, Gray's Inn, W.C.

Hofmeyr, Jan H., South African journalist and politician, is the leader of the Afrikaner Bond, and has often represented Cape Colony at Colonial and other conferences. For some years Mr. Cecil Rhodes found him a staunch ally; but after the Jameson Raid he broke with Mr. Rhodes, and in the elections of '98, as wire-puller of the Bond caucus, was active in his opposition to him. At one time Mr. Hofmeyr advocated total separation of South Africa from England; but after the Transvaal War of '82 he acted as mediator between the Boers and the Cape Government, especially over the Swaziland question, and it was through his influence that a solution of the difficulty was arrived at. He was prominent in the negotiations which followed on the Bloemfontein Conference, '99.

Holman Hunt, William, was b. in London 1827, and first exhibited at the Royal Academy in '46. He was one of the originators of the Pre-Raphaelite movement, and his best known pictures are "The Light of the World," of which he painted a new version in 1904, "The Finding of Jesus in the Temple," '60; "The Scapegoat," "The Shadow of Death," '73; "The Triumph of the Innocents," "Christ the Carpenter," "May Morning on Magdalen Tower," '91; "The Miracle of Holy Fire," etc. In 1905 he exhibited a new masterpiece, "The Lady of Shalott," based on the design which he made in '57 to illustrate an edition of Tennyson's Poems then published. Appointed to Order of Merit June 30th, 1905. A nearly complete collection of his works was shown at the Leicester Galleries in Oct. 1906. Address: 18, Melbury Road, Kensington, W.

Home Arts and Industries Association. Founded Nov. 1884. Supported by voluntary contributions. Its aim is to teach hand-work to the children of the poorer people by means of classes taught voluntarily by members of the association. An annual exhibition of the work done is held in the Royal Albert Hall (usually in May). Secretary, S. C. Hendrey. Office and studios, Royal Albert Hall.

HOME OFFICE, THE.

The Home Office is the senior of the Departments of the Principal Secretaries of State. Its functions, which formerly extended to foreign, colonial, and military affairs are now strictly confined to the United Kingdom, and in some matters to England and Wales only. The affairs of the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands, however, still come to the Home Office.

The Home Secretary's duties are multifarious, and cover a wide range of subjects. He is, speaking generally, the medium of communication between the Crown and its subjects. Addresses and Petitions to the Throne are presented and answered through the Home Secretary; Royal Warrants and Licences relating to peerages, titles, decorations, changes of names and arms, and Royal Commissions are issued by him; and he is the authority for granting Certificates of Naturalisation. He is the adviser of the Sovereign in the exercise of the prerogative of mercy in all cases arising in England or Wales, and it is on his advice that all pardons and remissions of sentence are granted to convicted persons. Hence the decision whether in cases of murder the capital sentence is to be carried out rests with the Home Secretary, and is among the most important and difficult of his duties. He also grants the licenses—formerly called "tickets of leave"—on which convicts are conditionally released before the expiration of their sentences.

To the Home Secretary belongs the general administration of the prison system in England and Wales, the maintenance of Broadmoor Criminal Lunatic Asylum, the custody of all criminal lunatics, and the execution of the law relating to the Extradition (q.v.) of fugitive offenders from or to the United Kingdom. It is on his recommendation that Recorders, Metropolitan Police Magistrates, and Stipendiary Magistrates are appointed, and Commissions of the Peace are issued, and Courts of Quarter Sessions granted to Municipal Boroughs. He has also jurisdiction in settling the salaries of Coroners, Clerks of the Peace, and Clerks to Justices, in fixing the fees they may charge, in prescribing the payments made to witnesses, and in other matters in which the intervention of a Government department is required in the administration of criminal justice. As the Minister to whom Parliament looks for the maintenance of order, he has under his direct supervision and control the Metropolitan Police Force, consisting of about 17,000 officers and men, and he has extensive powers in regard to the County and Borough Police Forces in England and Wales. The police bye-laws made by Municipal Corporations and County Councils which deal with such subjects as street betting, street music, the lighting of vehicles, etc., are subject to the Secretary of State's allowance. The reformatory treatment of habitual drunkards is another matter which comes within the jurisdiction of the Home Secretary, who makes regulations as to the treatment, both of inebriates who voluntarily resort to Retreats and of those who are committed by courts of law to Inebriate Reformatories. There are two "State" Reformatories, established and maintained by the Prison Commissioners, and at present ten "certified" Reformatories maintained by philanthropic bodies and local authorities.

Another of the most important features of Home Office work in modern times is the administration of many statutes relating to industrial questions. The laws which Parliament has passed for protecting the workers in mines, quarries, factories, and workshops are administered by the Home Office, which makes rules and orders of a legislative character for the protection of life and health in dangerous industries, and enforces them by means of a large staff of inspectors (40 Inspectors of Mines and Quarries and 165 Inspectors of Factories and Workshops). It is also the central authority (for England and Wales) under the Employment of Children Act, 1903, and the Shop Hours Act 1904. Byelaws made under the former Act and closing Orders made under the latter by local authorities require the confirmation of the Secretary of State. The Acts providing for Workmen's Compensation and those preventing the abuses arising from Truck in the payment of wages are also under the general charge of the Home Office. Another staff of inspectors (4 in number) is charged with the task of seeing that the requirements of the Explosives Act, 1875, and the orders made under that Act, are carried out in the interest of public safety. The Home Office is also an educational authority. The Reformatory and Industrial Schools established by voluntary agencies or local authorities for the special training of children who are either criminal or living in circumstances in which they are in danger of falling into crime, are supported mainly out of Parliamentary Votes, and are placed under the inspection and supervision of the Home Department. More than 20,000 children and youths are being trained in these schools.

The Home Office administers the Acts relating to Anatomy; its sanction, speaking generally, is necessary for the exhumation of human remains, and it has the duty of prescribing regulations under which the practice of Cremation may be allowed. It is the Government Department concerned with the Licensing Acts, and makes regulations for the procedure governing the payment of compensation in certain cases of the extinction of licences under the Act of 1904; it issues orders for the Protection of Wild Birds; administers and enforces the law relating to Experiments on Living Animals; performs important functions regarding the custody, care, and repatriation of the inmates of lunatic asylums, who are by statute entitled to free communication with the Secretary of State; it is the authority for laying down rules as to the care of children who have been taken out of their parents' custody under the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act, and for deciding whether in any particular case such children shall be allowed to emigrate under the auspices of the guardians appointed under that statute, or shall be removed to other custody; and it administers the law for the restriction of the immigration of undesirable aliens, and the expulsion of criminal aliens. Finally the Home Office is a Statistical Department, publishing annually volumes of statistics as to the judicial business of the country (civil and criminal), as to mines and quarries, as to factories and workshops, and as to licensed premises, and from time to time preparing such returns on special subjects as Parliament may require of it.

HONDURAS.

Honduras is a Republic in Central America, established in 1839, just before the Confederation of Central America broke up. Governed by a President and Congress, elected by popular vote for four years. Religious liberty is guaranteed by the Constitution, but Roman Catholicism prevails. Education is free, compulsory from 7 to 15 years of age, and secular. Army about 500, but there is a militia of about 20,000. The country possesses great agricultural resources and much mineral wealth, but these have been neglected because of the lack of capital and transport. Agriculture, however, is now showing signs of development. The revenue is derived mainly from the customs and from government monopolies in spirit, powder, and tobacco. Chief products: bananas, tobacco, coffee, sugar, indigo, wheat, gold, silver, and cattle. Most of the foreign trade is with the United States.

Area, 43,000 sq. m.; pop. 400,000 to 600,000, the majority of whom are Indians. Capital, Tegucigalpa, pop. 34,692. Revenue, 1905, £443,725; expenditure, £442,819; imports, 1902-3, £287,401; 1903-4, £414,827; 1904-5, £472,552; exports, 1902-3, £351,012; 1903-4, £443,568; 1904-5, £494,578; debt, £5,398,570. The loans were raised (1867-70) for the purpose of constructing an inter-oceanic railway, but a small proportion only was expended for this purpose. The arrears of interest to 1905 amount to £15,216,512.

Fighting took place with Guatemala in July 1906. See GUATEMALA.

President, General Manuel Bonilla (elected Feb. 1903).

Consul-General in London, M. J. Kelly, 8, Idol Lane, E.C.

HOUSING QUESTION, THE.

In the 1902 ed. there appeared an article describing the evils arising from insanitary dwellings overcrowded with occupants, situated in insanitary localities overcrowded with buildings—evils which not only affect the poorer classes directly concerned, but also threaten the welfare of the whole community. The problem is naturally most acute in the large towns, but even in the rural districts it exists, because of the scarcity and insanitary condition of housing accommodation for the working classes. The legislation directed to the mitigation of these evils was also fully described in the 1902 ed., where a summary was given of the following Acts:—The Shaftesbury Acts (1851-85) increased the number of lodging-houses for the working classes, giving local authorities power to erect them and to improve the condition of common lodging-houses. The Torrens Acts ('68-82) gave power to close and demolish and subsequently rebuild insanitary dwellings. The Cross Acts ('75-82) dealt with whole areas, and gave power to local authorities to demolish and reconstruct.

A Royal Commission ('84-5) resulted in the Housing of the Working Classes Act '85, which extended the Shaftesbury Acts, and made new provisions as to the mode of acquiring land for housing purposes.

The Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890, included 6 parts. Part I. deals with unhealthy areas, consolidating and amending the Cross Acts, provides that the medical officer of health in urban sanitary districts (rural sanitary districts being excluded from this section), whenever he is of opinion that a certain area contains houses, courts or alleys unfit for human habitation, or upon complaint by two justices of the peace or twelve ratepayers (who, if action is not taken, may petition the Local Government Board), shall make a representation to the local authority; and makes provision for an improvement scheme to be submitted by the local authority to the Secretary of State, or (in places outside London) to the Local Government Board, and confirmed by a special Act of Parliament. Part II. deals with unhealthy dwellings. It consolidates and amends the Torrens Acts, and gives all sanitary authorities important powers and duties in relation to the closing and demolition of buildings unfit for human habitation, and in relation to the preparation and execution of schemes for the improvement of areas too small to be dealt with under Part I., proceedings being initiated, if necessary, by 4 householders living in or near the street where the nuisance arises making complaint to the medical officer, or petitioning the Local Government Board in default of his action. Part III. consolidates and amends the Shaftesbury Acts as to the supply of working-class lodging-houses by the local authorities. Part IV. contains supplemental provisions, and Parts V. and VI. relate to the application of the Act to Scotland and Ireland. The Housing of the Working Classes Act '94 merely extends the borrowing powers under Part II. of the above Act.

In consequence of the difficulties experienced in working the '90 Act, the Housing of the Working Classes Act 1900 was passed. Sect. 1 enacts that where any council other than a rural district council have adopted Part 3 of the Housing of the Working Classes Act 1890, they may, for supplying the needs of their district, establish or acquire lodging-houses for the working classes under that Part outside their district. Sect. 2 provides that the council of any rural district may, with the consent of the county council, adopt Part 3 of the Housing of the Working Classes Act 1890, either for the whole of their district or for any contributory place; Other sections deal with the powers of Metropolitan boroughs to adopt Part 3 of the principal Act, their power to borrow money for that purpose being exercisable in like manner and subject to like conditions as for the purposes of Part 2 of that Act. The local authority may lease any land so acquired by them to any lessee on the condition that he erects and maintains on the land lodging-houses within the meaning of the Act. If a district council fails in its duty under the Act, its powers may be transferred to the county council. The Act applies only to England and Wales.

The Housing of the Working Classes Act 1903 provides that the maximum period which may be sanctioned as the period for which money may be borrowed by a local authority for the purposes of the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890, and any Acts amending it, shall be eighty years. Where under statutory powers given after the date of the passing of this Act any land is acquired, whether compulsorily or by agreement, by any authority, company, or person, or where after the date of this Act any land is so acquired compulsorily under any general Act (other than the Housing Acts), certain proposals are to apply with respect to the provision of dwelling accommodation for persons of the working class. These enactments are of a very important character. If in the administrative county of London, or in any borough or urban district, or in any parish not within a borough or urban district, the undertakers [the authority, company, or person acquiring the land] have power to take under the enabling Act [i.e. any Act of Parliament under which the land is acquired] working men's dwellings occupied by thirty or more persons belonging to the working class, the undertakers shall not enter on any such dwellings until the Local Government Board have either approved of a housing scheme under this enactment or have decided that such a scheme is not necessary.

If, on a report made to the Local Government Board on an inquiry directed by them, they are satisfied that a scheme ought to have been made for the improvement of the area to which the inquiry relates, or of some part thereof, they may in their discretion order the local authority to make such a scheme either under Part I. (unhealthy areas) or Part II. (unhealthy dwelling-houses) of the principal Act, and to do all things necessary under the Acts for carrying into execution the scheme so made.

In addition to the above-mentioned public Acts, there is imposed by Standing Orders of Parliament an obligation to provide for re-housing on all promoters—whether municipal bodies or companies—who seek to obtain special powers, by means of local or private Acts, for undertakings which involve the clearance of sites occupied by dwellings for the working classes. The Public Health (London) Act 1891 requires vestries and district boards (now united as borough councils) to make bye-laws with the object of abating nuisances and of securing proper sanitation; and to enforce them by means of a periodical inspection of all working-class lodging-houses other than common lodging-houses, which are under the supervision of the London County Council. They can apply to a court of summary jurisdiction to deal with a nuisance by means of a nuisance order, a prohibition order, or a closing order. If a vestry or district board (borough council) makes default in its duties, the county council may take proceedings, or may complain to the Local Government Board. The Public Health Acts, '75 and '90, practically contain a sanitary code for places outside the Metropolis; and, in particular, provide for the regulation and inspection of working-class lodging-houses and of common lodging-houses by the sanitary authorities.

A deputation from the National Housing Reform Council had an interview with Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman and Mr. John Burns on Nov. 6th, 1906, and urged the Government to introduce a measure in the 1907 Session dealing with both urban and rural housing. They submitted a memorandum of the reforms they advocated, which were grouped as follows: (1) Local authorities should be stimulated to carry out their duties under the Health and Housing Acts; (2) there should be certain amendments of the Public Health Acts; (3) the closing and demolition of unhealthy dwellings; (4) the clearance of slum areas; (5) the creation of model suburbs; (6) the acquisition of land by agreement; (7) the compulsory purchase of land; (8) town and village development commission; (9) rural housing, small holdings, and other village developments; (10) town extension planning; (11) cheaper money; and (12) the revision of by-laws. Both the Prime Minister and Mr. Burns, in reply, expressed the sympathy which the Government and the present House of Commons entertained for the objects of the deputation; but Mr. Burns added that if the local authorities could be stimulated to do their duty in the matter, nine-tenths of what they asked the central authority to do would be accomplished.

Associations.

The Rural Housing and Sanitation Association was formed in 1902 to forward the improvement of the condition of housing and sanitation in country working-class homes throughout England. Sec., Miss A. Churton; Office, 9, Southampton Street, High Holborn, W.C.

Workmen's National Housing Council, which carries on a campaign in the country generally, stirring up the municipalities and local authorities wherever it can. Sec., Mr. F. Knee, 120, Sugden Road, Battersea, S.W.

The National Housing Reform Council, which supplies information, arranges conferences, etc. Sec., Mr. H. R. Aldridge, 18, Dulverton Road, Leicester, and 432, West Strand, London, W.C.

The Liverpool Housing Association. Sec., Mr. W. Knowles, The Beeches, Raby Drive, Bromborough.

The Peabody Fund.

The Peabody Fund, which is administered under a Royal Charter of incorporation by "The Governors of the Peabody Donation Fund," had its origin in the gift in 1862 by the late Mr. George Peabody, an American citizen, of £150,000, to be vested in trustees and devoted to the provision of improved dwellings at cheap rentals for persons of moral character and good conduct belonging to the poorer section of the industrial classes. The first residential block was completed and opened in '64 in Commercial Street, Spitalfields. Mr. Peabody made further donations of £200,000, and left a bequest of £150,000 for the same object, making a total of £500,000, to which has been added £993,747 received for rent and interest, bringing the total fund to Dec. 31st, 1905, to £1,493,747. Further blocks of similar dwellings have been put up in various parts of the Metropolis, at a total cost of £1,414,826 up to Dec. 31st, 1905. The 19 groups of dwellings cover altogether an area of 1,425,354 sq. feet, and provide accommodation for upwards of 19,000 persons. There are provided 12,328 rooms, besides bath-rooms, laundries, and lavatories, comprised in 5469 separate dwellings. Chairman of Governors, Duke of Devonshire. The Ambassador of the United States to Great Britain, for the time being, is a Governor ex officio. Sec., F. B. Crouch, Esq. Head Offices: 64, Queen Street, Cheapside.

Rowton Houses.

"Rowton Houses," which have not inaptly been termed "Poor Men's Hotels," are buildings erected on the initiative of the late Lord Rowton for providing poor unmarried men with cheap accommodation in the shape of beds in airy compartments partitioned off (sometimes designated as cubicles), and the use of properly heated and ventilated public rooms for reading, writing, recreation, and smoking; baths, lavatories, etc.; in short, most of the conveniences afforded by the commercial and private hotels to the more opulent. They are not asylums nor charitable institutions, but are organised in accordance with the principles of commercial philanthropy—that is to say, that although intended to benefit the poorer classes, they are expected to pay a fair dividend of (say) 4½ per cent., as a commercial investment. The charge is 7d. for one night or 3s. 6d. for seven nights. The first of these houses was erected in Vauxhall in '92 at a cost of some £30,000, by Lord Rowton himself, and provided accommodation for 484 persons. The venture having proved a successful one, a company "Rowton Houses, Limited," was formed to take over this house and to go on building others; and since that date five more, making the total accommodation for 4866 persons, have been opened in London. The sixth, and largest Rowton House, is at Camden Town. It has accommodation for 1103 men, and was completed in Dec. 1905. The Rowton House at King's Cross is being enlarged from 678 to 955 beds, and the Company will then provide a total accommodation for 5449 persons. Chairman, Sir Richard Farrant. Secretary, W. T. Dulake, Esq., 16, Great George Street, Westminster.

The Guinness Trust.

In Nov. '89 Sir E. C. Guinness (now Lord Iveagh) gave £250,000 for housing the labouring poor, £200,000 of which, together with £25,000 given in '93 by the Goldsmiths' Co., and £141,674 net income from rents and investments, forms the Guinness Trust London Fund, with a capital at Dec. 31st, 1905, of £366,674. The trustees have provided 2574 separate dwellings, containing 5339 rooms, besides laundries, club rooms, sheds, etc. Average weekly rent per room is 2s. 13d. There were 9734 persons living in eight Trust Buildings at the end of 1905. Of the original gift £50,000 was appropriated to form the Dublin Fund, which is now called the Iveagh Trust. Chairman of the Guinness Trust, Lord Iveagh; Secretary, E. W. Winch. Offices, 5, Victoria Street, S.W.

Howard Association, The (founded 1866) was instituted, under the patronage of Lord Brougham, to promote the best methods of treatment and prevention of crime and pauperism. The principles of the great philanthropist, John Howard, have been generally embodied in the work of the Association. It collects information both at home and abroad bearing on the present systems of punishment and prevention of crime. Many books and pamphlets dealing with prison management, pauperism, boarding-out neglected children, vagrancy, and kindred subjects, have been disseminated by this Association. Secretary, Thomas Holmes. Office, Devonshire Chambers, Bishopsgate Without, E.C.

Humanitarian League, The, founded in 1891, proposes a thorough revision and more humane administration of the criminal law and prison system, deprecates the various provocations to aggressive warfare, urges the need of amending present social conditions, advocates the prohibition of vivisection, condemns cruel sports, and aims at the mitigation of the sufferings to which animals are subjected in the cattle traffic and the shambles. Hon. Sec., Mr. Henry S. Salt; office, 53, Chancery Lane, London, W.C.

Ilbert, Sir Courtenay Peregrine, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., Clerk of the House of Commons, was b. June 12th, 1841, at Kingsbridge, Devon, ed. at Marlborough Coll. and Balliol Coll., Oxon, where he took a first in Mods., first Final Classical Schools, as well as the Hertford, Ireland, Craven, and Eldon Scholarships. He was called to the Bar at Lincoln's Inn '69, was Counsel to the Education Department '79-82, legal member of the Viceroy's Council in India '82-6, Assistant Parliamentary Counsel to the Treasury '86-'99, and Parliamentary Counsel '99-1902. He was made Clerk of the House of Commons in Feb. 1902. He married a niece of the late Dean Bradley in '74, and has published "The Government of India" and "Legislative Methods and Forms." Address: Speaker's Court, Westminster, S.W.

Imperial Federation. This movement is being prosecuted by several bodies in the United Kingdom, as well as by branches founded by the League in Canada and Australia. Among the former may be mentioned The United Empire Trade League (Sir Howard Vincent, M.P., Hon. Sec.), which advocates a commercial union of the Empire by means of preferential trading relations; The Imperial Federation (Defence) Committee (Hon. Sec., Howard d'Egville, 11A, Princes Street, Westminster), which advocates combination for the purposes of Defence in the first instance by maintaining a common Navy; the Federal Union Committee (4, Great George Street, Westminster), which advocates "legislative and administrative devolution applicable to the several countries of the United Kingdom, and the ultimate Federation of the Empire for the common ends."

Imperial Institute, The, was founded in 1887 as a record of Queen Victoria's Jubilee (see eds. '87 and '88), and was transferred to the control of the Board of Trade by Act of Parliament in 1902. Sir C. C. Smith, G.C.M.G., and Sir Alfred Bateman, K.C.M.G., were appointed a managing committee in 1905 to supervise the current work of the Institute. Its principal work is to display and illustrate the natural resources and industries of the Colonies and India, to promote by scientific and technical investigation the commercial utilisation of the raw materials of the Empire, and to supply full information concerning the Colonies and Dependencies of the Empire and their resources. The Institute includes a scientific and technical department, and a Reference Library and Reading-rooms containing works of reference and the principal newspapers and official publications and maps of India and the Colonies. The Indian and Colonial Collections in the Exhibition Galleries are open free to the public daily (Sundays excepted) from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in summer, and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in winter. Director, Prof. Wyndham R. Dunstan, M.A., LL.D., F.R.S. Principal Assistant, Scientific and Technical Department, T. A. Henry, D.Sc. (Lond.). Superintendent Colonial Collections, W. G. Freeman, B.Sc. (Lond.), F.L.S. Superintendent Indian Section, C. E. Jones, B.Sc. (Lond.), F.L.S.

Imperial Service Order, The, was instituted by H.M. King Edward VII. in August 1902 as a decoration for members of the Civil Service of the Empire, to be conferred after long and meritorious service. It consists of the Sovereign, the Prince of Wales, and such Companions as the Sovereign shall appoint. Only members of the administrative or clerical branches of the Civil Service are eligible as Companions, and their number must not exceed 425, of whom 250 are to belong to the Home Civil Service, and 175 to the Civil Services of the Colonies and Protectorates. Appointments to the Order will be made on the recommendation of a Secretary of State after 25 (or in unhealthy Colonies 16) years' service, or for "eminently meritorious service." Companions of the Order may add the letters "I.S.O." after their names. Secretary and Registrar, R. F. Reynard, I.S.O., Home Office, S.W.

Imperial South African Association, 66, Victoria Street, S.W. Chairman of Committee, Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P.; Sec., H. Handcock.

Imperial War Fund. Established 1882. The war in South Africa caused a heavy drain on the fund in 1900, and by July 7th all grants to widows and orphans were compulsorily suspended because the money had run out, after a sum of over £8000 had been expended in grants, and £3000 out of original capital stock had been realised. Offices of Hon. Sec., 677/8/20, Bucklersbury, London, E.C.

INCOME TAX.

The Tax was first imposed in 1798 to meet the cost of the French War, and was in force till 1801, again from 1803 to 1815, and then after 26 years it was again levied in 1842.

The rates at which the Income Tax has been charged since '42 are as follows:—

In the following Table the Profits from Businesses, Concerns, Professions, Employments, etc. (Schedules D and E) in the United Kingdom in 1904-5 are classified according to amount:—

The Graduation Select Committee.

A Select Committee, consisting of Sir Charles Dilke (Chairman), Mr. Beach, Mr. Brace, Mr. Bridgeman, Mr. Cavendish, Mr. Evans, Mr. George Faber, Mr. Keir Hardie, Mr. Hayden, Sir William Holland, Sir Seymour King, Mr. M'Crae, Mr. M'Kenna, Mr. William Redmond, Mr. Rose, Mr. Trevelyan, and Sir T. P. Whittaker, was appointed in May 1906 to inquire into and report upon the practicability of graduating the income tax, and of differentiating, for the purpose of the tax, between permanent and precarious incomes.

Incorporated Society of Authors, The, established in 1884 to defend the interests of those who produce literary, dramatic, and musical property, to maintain the rights of all authors of the above works, to advise them as to questions of copyright, and in other ways to render them assistance in their agreements and the publication of their works; to help them to recover accounts and moneys due under their agreements, or for work sent to magazines, etc. Also to procure in England the passing of an Act which shall amend and consolidate the law of Copyright, Imperial or International. Monthly organ The Author. Membership 1600. Secretary, G. Herbert Thring. Office, 39, Old Queen Street, S.W.

Inebriates Acts, '98 and '99, The. See Session, sect. 58, in ed. '99, and sect. 62 in ed. 1900. Other Acts were passed prior to that of '98. Under the Act of '79 an inebriate had himself voluntarily to apply for admission to a retreat. The '98 Act made compulsion legal in the case of such drunkards as by repeated drunkenness in public or by crime brought themselves within reach of legal procedure. The Licensing Act 1902 gave power to commit a wife who was an habitual drunkard to a retreat. There are three kinds of institutions to which inebriates may be sent: viz.,—(1) Certificated Inebriate Reformatories, (2) State Inebriate Reformatories, which are for the worst cases, and (3) Licensed Retreats, in which there has been marked improvement in late years. The Criminal Statistics for 1904 of England and Wales give a list of 3 Male Reformatories in England and Wales (at Warwick; Brentry, near Bristol; and Newdigate, near Dorking), and 11 Female Reformatories (at Aylesbury; Brentry, near Bristol; Duxhurst, near Reigate; East Harling; Farmfield, near Horley; Horfield, near Bristol; Whalley, near Blackburn; Chesterfield; Ackworth, near Pontefract; Ashford, Middlesex; and Lewes. Since the institution of Inebriate Reformatories the number of admissions have been:—

	Males.	Females.	Total.
1899 . . . . .	—	88	88
1900 . . . . .	16	128	144
1901 . . . . .	35	169	204
1902 . . . . .	46	232	278
1903 . . . . .	38	259	297
1904 . . . . .	38	380	418
1905 . . . . .	86	329	415

In Scotland there is a State Inebriate Reformatory at Perth, besides Local Reformatories at Girgint, Greenock, and Lanarkshire, and the Scottish Labour Colony, Dumfriesshire. In the Criminal Statistics for Scotland, 1904, it is said the system is not utilised as it ought to be.

Inebriates' Reformation and After-Care Association, 17, Victoria Street, S.W. Sec., A. J. S. Maddison.

Inebriety, Society for the Study of. Established 1884. Qualified medical practitioners are admitted as members, medical students and others interested in the study of alcoholism as associates. Quarterly organ, "The British Journal of Inebriety." Hon. Sec., T. N. Kelynack, M.D., M.R.C.P., 120, Harley Street, London, W.

Inland Revenue. The Commissioners of H.M. Inland Revenue form the Board of Inland Revenue, which was established in 1849, and controls the collection of the Excise Duties, Death Duties, Stamp Duties, and Income and other Taxes. For details of the amounts collected under these heads see FINANCE NATIONAL, pp. 157-8. Chairman, Sir H. W. Primrose, K.C.B., C.S.I., I.S.O.; Deputy-Chairman, L. N. Guillemand, C.B.; Commissioners, B. Mallet, E. E. N. Bower; Special Commissioners of Income Tax, W. Gyles, H. W. Page Phillips, S. P. Foster; Joint Secretaries (Excise) J. B. Meers, C.B. (Stamps and Taxes), E. E. Stoodley, C.B.

Institute of Oil Painters, The (founded '83), has its headquarters at 195, Piccadilly, W. The Exhibitions, which are held annually, commencing in October, are open to all artists, and the principle of selection is the same as at the Royal Academy (q.v.). President, Frank Walton, R.I.; Vice-President, John Filleylove, R.I.; Secretary, W. T. Blackmore.

INSURANCE COMPANIES AND STATISTICS.

[Readers are referred to the Classified Index to Advertisements at end of the "Annual" for further particulars of Insurance Companies, which a limited space here will not permit of our including. Insurance Companies should send particulars of any new schemes issued during the forthcoming year to the Editor by October 1907.]

I. FIRE.

The year 1906 proved an annus mirabilis. Not only were the resources of the Fire Companies strained to the utmost owing to the unparalleled disaster which overtook San Francisco on April 18th, but those offices cultivating foreign business generally complained of the unfavourable nature of their trading. The results in the Argentine Republic, the East Indies, and upon the continent of Europe, it is understood, proved far from profitable. Had it not been for the exemption clause in their contracts, further disaster would have been encountered by Fire Companies in connection with the damage occasioned by fire arising through the earthquake at Valparaiso in August.

The total damage arising from the San Francisco calamity approximated to £50,000,000 sterling, of which rather less than one half was covered by insurance. The net liability of the eighteen British offices involved in this disaster was said to be £7,950,000. The actual division of this amount cannot be ascertained until the accounts of each individual office have been rendered for 1906. Apart from the disastrous effect this catastrophe must have upon the accounts in the Fire Branch, it is to be feared that the real significance of the position is not yet fully appreciated. Seeing that in some cases the entire fire reserves were almost exhausted in satisfying the claims from San Francisco, it is thought that several of the offices will be forced to follow the example of one office, and reduce the distribution to the proprietors during the time required to replenish the funds to a point of safety. The collection of the share of the losses falling to re-insurances made by British Companies both in America and the Continent gave rise to anxiety. It was computed that they had approximately £3,000,000 to collect from the above sources, of which at least 20 per cent. was regarded as being uncertain. Three of the leading British Offices were said to have decided to cancel their American and Treaty re-insurances in connection with American business, being persuaded that it was foolish to continue paying out good premiums in exchange for doubtful security; and probably in future most of the Companies will be content to transact only as much business in the United States as they can carry upon their own books. Rates may, and doubtless will, now stiffen; but it is an open question whether American fire business is worth cultivating.

During the year fire business in the United Kingdom yielded the usual satisfactory results, despite a few somewhat destructive fires, the largest of which—viz. the Watson Whisky Bond Stores at Dundee—carried a loss of about £400,000. The recognition of the value of Fire Alarms by the Tariff Offices was one of the most noteworthy features of the year, but rebates are only allowed in connection with certain classes of risks. Very few noticeable alterations were made in the Home Tariffs, beyond a reduction for theatres and music halls. There was a tendency to increase rates for both distilleries and bond stores. The King Insurance Office, after acquiring the Fire Reinsurance Co., began to push for business in the United Kingdom. The oldest Irish Office, the Patriotic, established in 1824, decided to relinquish a separate existence, and accepted the offer of the Sun Office to acquire the business. The business in Ireland will still be carried on in the name of the Patriotic. The National Union of Bedford, after a career of some twelve years, went over to the London and Lancashire Fire Office; and a comparatively small concern, the Durham and Yorkshire Insurance Co., has been transferred to the Royal Insurance Co.

After a great deal of discouragement in its initial stage, an association of agents and brokers was formed. It already includes some of the more important agents and brokers in London and the provinces. The Central, one of the most aggressive of the non-tariff offices, has at length decided to join its colleagues in upholding tariff rates.

The Ocean Accident Corporation, the National Burglary Corporation, and the Accident Insurance Company entered the Fire Insurance field, and established special departments in connection therewith.

The aggregate premium income of fire offices for 1905 amounted to about £23,500,000, and the losses to about £12,000,000. The number of companies in the United Kingdom of any importance who transact Fire Insurance under a tariff is 35; about 28 compose the London Salvage Corps; and about 65 contribute towards the expenses of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade at the rate of £35 per million on the amount of property insured. The premiums and losses of British fire insurance companies given below have been extracted from the Insurance Register and other sources.

The above figures are, with a few exceptions, for the year ending Dec. 31st, 1905.

The Western Assurance Co. has introduced a revised fire policy, the object being to simplify the contract and make it readily understood. It contains a clear statement of the company's liability for damage by fire, gas explosion (except at gas works), lightning, and domestic boiler explosion, and the conditions are reduced in number and length.

The British and foreign business of the Western Assurance Co., whose chief office is at Toronto and whose branch office in Great Britain is at 2, Change Alley, Cornhill, has made good progress.

The Loss of Profit Policy of the Profits and Income Insurance Co. covers indirect loss following fire, etc., which is not provided for by the ordinary fire or boiler policy, and also supplies the means of meeting standing charges, thus maintaining unimpaired the normal revenue. Loss through boiler explosions is also covered at a slightly additional premium. The insurance of profit or fixed charges is a practical necessity to every manufacturing and trading concern. During the past few years the company's system has been carefully matured, and is now stated to be perfected on a scientific basis. The premiums appear to be moderate, and claims are paid in an equitable manner which is practically automatic. The company has secured facilities for re-insuring large sums with other wealthy companies which have approved its system.

II. LIFE.

The event of the year was the "trial" of American Life Assurance methods, especially those practised by the three giant companies. It would serve no purpose to detail the scandals brought to light towards the end of 1905. The recommendations made to the United States Legislature in the voluminous report of the Committee, presided over by Senator Armstrong—recommendations which have in the main become law—indicate the character of the abuses of the past management, to which reference need not be made. American Life

Offices largely "set their houses in order" and made a clean sweep of all offending directors and officials involved in the scandals. At least two of the important New York Life Offices made their actuaries, hitherto purely advisory officials, vice-presidents, thus increasing their powers, and following the example of the United Kingdom, in which the chief control of the Life Offices is usually in the hands of a Fellow of the Institute of Actuaries. The regulations referred to above, which came into force as regards New York Life Offices on April 27th, 1906, in effect require inter alia that—

(a) No directors shall have any pecuniary interest in any purchase, sale or loan made by the Company.

(b) Deferred Bonus Policies shall not be issued in future, and there shall be an annual distribution of profits.

(c) No non-profit policies shall be issued by mutual companies.

(d) The directors shall be elected annually by the policy-holders.

(e) The expenses of obtaining new business shall be limited, and no amount of new business may be issued in any one year exceeding £30,000,000 in sums assured.

(f) No insurance company shall engage in other kinds of business.

Following the State Inquiry, the great American Life Offices thought fit to have independent examinations and audits of their respective businesses by highly reputed British firms of chartered accountants, and on the whole these proved satisfactory. It may be noted that the solvency of the concerns has never been called in question. The operations of the three companies are being watched by committees constituted from the policy-holders, who now possess the power of selecting the executive.

Early in 1906, apropos of the American exposures, a Select Committee of the House of Lords was appointed to inquire and report what steps should be taken, by deposit of funds or otherwise, to provide adequate security for British policy-holders in life insurance companies which have their chief offices outside the United Kingdom, and which carry on business in this country. They reported that—

(a) There was unanimity against requiring foreign life offices to deposit funds as a security for their British policy-holders beyond the sum of £20,000 required by the Life Insurance Companies Act of 1870, and the Committee confirmed this opinion.

(b) It was recommended that foreign companies should be placed as far as possible in the same position as the British companies with which they compete, and be required to comply fully with the requirements of the 1870 Act.

(c) The Committee recommended that the £20,000 deposit referred to above should be maintained permanently, so long as any policies continue outstanding, in this country, and that British trustees should be appointed to act for foreign and colonial companies with full powers.

(d) The best means of guarding the interests of policy-holders was to insist on the fullest openness in the accounts of insurance companies, and it was recommended that all such companies should be required to furnish the Board of Trade with full revenue accounts, balance sheets, and valuation statements, showing at the same time expenses of management.

(e) The Board of Trade should have powers to vary the returns to be made by insurance companies under the Act of 1870, and to compel all these to make complete and accurate statements in connection therewith.

(f) Foreign business should be distinguished from British business in all returns, and insurance companies should provide statements in such returns of the securities held by them and the market value thereof.

In May 1906 the North British and Mercantile Insurance Co., through Mr. D. C. Haldeman, the late General Manager of the Mutual of New York in London, and an energetic member of the Committee of British Policy-holders, offered to accept transfers of the contracts of a certain section or class of policy-holders in the Mutual, giving North British and Mercantile policies, free of cost and without medical examination in exchange. Mr. Haldeman was at the same time appointed Joint General Manager of the North British and Mercantile in London. Legal proceedings were taken against the North British and Mercantile and Mr. Haldeman, to restrain the use of lists of the Mutual's policy-holders, and the matter was still sub judice at the time of going to press.

A Royal Commission was appointed during the year to investigate the operations of Canadian Life Offices. It was thought that the committee would follow the recommendations of the American Armstrong Committee, especially with regard to discouraging the issue of Deferred Bonus and Tontine Policies, and limiting the expenses of new business.

The Mutual Reserve Fund of New York, an Assessment Life Office which for several years carried on a system of insurance again and again pronounced actuarially unsound, decamped, taking with it the £20,000 statutory deposit required by the Board of Trade.

In June a Bill was introduced in the House of Commons by Mr. Kearley, supported by Mr. Lloyd-George, to provide for the better regulation of Bond Investment Companies, as recommended by the Committee of Inquiry dealing with these institutions, to which reference was made in our last issue.

The privilege of obtaining rebate of Income Tax on all Life Premiums up to one-sixth of one's income was extended to all companies legally carrying on life assurance in this country.

The invasion of Colonial companies still continues, the Manufacturers Life and the Confederation Life Association, both of Toronto, having entered the ranks. The Australian Mutual Provident, a society with funds exceeding £21,400,000, resolved to open an office in London, but was temporarily debarred by the opposition of a few of the members, who instituted proceedings to prevent the resolution being carried into effect.

The Alliance Assurance Co. acquired the business of the Provident Life Office, and the Guardian Assurance Co. took over the Westminster and General Life. The old-established Patriotic Assurance Co. was absorbed by the Sun Life Office. At the time of going to press the proposed amalgamation of the Star Life Office with the United Kingdom Temperance and General Provident Institution was suddenly declared impossible; but an offer from the Norwich Union Life Office to acquire the Star was put forward for consideration.

Two new life offices were launched—viz. the National Standard Life Assurance Corporation, and the London and Provincial Assurance Co., the latter being an offshoot of the Provincial Homes Investment Co., a thriving home purchase concern in Manchester.

The General Accident Fire and Life Assurance Corporation, Ltd., is the new title of the company formerly known as the General Accident Assurance Corporation, which has taken full powers to transact and promises to do a large life business.

A noteworthy development of the utility of Life Offices as financial institutions, is their undertaking the redemption of Debenture Capital by issuing Sinking Fund Policies. The annual premiums under these are paid out of the profits of the company whose capital is to be replaced. The Board of Trade have notified Life Offices that under the Act of 1870 the Life Assurance Funds of a company cannot be held liable for this class of contract, which is not a Life Policy.

INDUSTRIAL INSURANCE.

Life assurance as transacted at the Post Office is not suited to the habits of the working classes, and the number of policies issued by it is therefore small, though showing a slight increase for 1906. According to the last annual report of the Postmaster-General, for year ending March 31st, 1906, the number of Post Office assurances was 741 for £37,011. The number of immediate annuity contracts entered into was 1840 for £45,488. The number of deferred annuities granted was 158 for £3204.

On the other hand, an enormous number of life policies are granted to the masses by industrial life assurance companies and collecting friendly societies; and this kind of insurance has prodigiously increased during recent years—so much so that nearly half the population of this country is insured in them.

Industrial insurance is making rapid strides, and its interests have, since May 1904, been represented by the Insurance Mail, a weekly review, the circulation of which, it is understood, has already reached the phenomenal number of over 14,000 copies per week.

The Prudential has the largest industrial business: its Ordinary and Industrial funds total £60,000,000, and in 1905 it settled no less than £2,261,749 in claims.

Of the Collecting Friendly Societies the Liverpool Victoria Legal has the largest premium income, and this society pays good bonuses. On Oct. 5th this Society held a confirmatory meeting relative to a resolution passed on Sept. 19th to convert the Society into a Company limited by Guarantee. The conversion was finally carried, and backed by a memorial of 50,000 members, but not without severe opposition. An application for an injunction to restrain the Society from acting on its special resolution was refused. The United Provident Assurance Co., a progressive institution that has recently declared a Bonus after five years' working, has acquired the business of the Yorkshire Provident Life Assurance Co., and is negotiating with a view to acquiring the business of the Popular Life Assurance Co., which was registered as recently as 1904. The Aberdeen and Northern Friendly Society announced a bonus to its members of 30s. per cent. per annum for five years.

A novel feature of the policies of the Pioneer Life Office is that they are "protective," one-half the sum assured being paid in the event of loss of one limb or one eye by accident.

Ordinary Forms of Life Insurance.

A review of and guide to the present systems of Life Assurance, as transacted in this country, with special reference to recent schemes established as new features by particular offices, appears below. First, however, a brief summary of the ordinary forms of Life Assurance may be given. These can be subdivided under two headings, Participating and Non-Participating. The former class, in consideration of an increased premium being paid, shares in the profits of the business, called bonuses, and the latter does not. In the participating section the profits added will usually exceed the increase in the premium paid; but the non-participating policy-holders are not affected by the profits of the office, theirs being what the Clerical, Medical, and General Life Office aptly calls a "system of definite contracts."

The application of profits by way of bonus can be made in a variety of ways:—

1. By additions to the policy in reversionary value, the bonus so added being payable when the policy becomes a claim.

2. By reduction of premiums over a term of years, or during the continuance of the assurance; or to cancel the payment of premiums in old age.

3. By payment in cash.

4. By making the assurance payable during the life of the person assured, by converting it into an endowment assurance.

5. Or, in the case of endowment policies, by making the date of maturity earlier.

6. Many offices have tables of assurance at very low rates in which the usual rate of premium is reduced to a minimum by the application of anticipated profits.

Sometimes the profits are deferred and allotted only to policies which have been in force a specified number of years, or, in the case of endowment assurances, those who survive the term. These are called Deferred Buses, and should, under ordinary circumstances, be larger than those which vest immediately.

If the profits of a particular class of policy are pooled and divided at the end of a given time amongst the survivors of that class, they are known as Tontine Bonuses.

The usual forms of Life Assurance are:—

The Ordinary Whole-Life Assurance, with or without profits, under which the assured, by paying a premium throughout life, secures the payment of a sum at his death.

Special Forms of Life Insurance.

The Special Schemes from time to time put forward by life offices consist of ingenious and useful combinations and variations of the more simple forms referred to above. The modifications may either be the introduction of some new form of bonus distribution, or may offer an alternative in the method of paying premiums, or further, an annuity may be coupled with the life assurance benefit.

The following sections set out some of the various special schemes, a full explanation being given, with the names of some of the offices transacting such business.

(For the addresses and particulars of insurance companies advertising in the ANNUAL see Advertisements Index.)

1. Endowment Policies.

The Scottish Provident Institution grants endowment assurance with or without bonus additions: the entire surplus arising under such assurance with profit tables is to belong exclusively to those assured under this class. An interim bonus of £1 10s. per cent. per annum will be added to the sum assured in the event of death before the next division of surplus in 1909.

The Yorkshire Fire and Life Insurance Co. has brought out a new table, giving Endowment Insurance at Minimum Cost, but with profits deferred until the attainment of the endowment age. This Company, and also the Pelican and British Empire Life Office and the Standard Life Office, have brought out new schemes, under which, if death occurs before the endowment period, £1000 is paid to the legal representatives, but if that period is reached, the assured is entitled to the following options: 1. A cash payment. 2. An annuity for life and cash payment at death. 3. An annuity payable for a term certain. 4. An annuity for life varying in amount according to the age at entry and the duration of the endowment period. In the Standard Life Office some of these options can be combined.

The London and Lancashire Life Office has introduced a Special Endowment Scheme, combining a family provision with a good investment or a pension for life. Policies under this scheme are particularly advantageous to the insurer, as the assured has the right to receive a large (estimated) cash bonus should he attain the Endowment age.

The Scottish Life Assurance Co. has issued two forms of Whole Life and Endowment Assurance Guaranteed Option Policies. The special features are Guaranteed Paid-up Policies, Surrender Values, Extended Assurance if premiums are unpaid, and these are actually endorsed on the policy.

The Norwich Union Mutual Life Office has devised an entirely new Investment for Small Savings. It is simply Single Payment Insurance without Medical Examination. The plan is known as the Current Savings Policy. An investor aged 40 deposits a single premium £50, and receives a policy insuring £75, with full profits payable at death or at 60 years of age. The insurance benefits are entered on after 12 months, but in case of death within that period the premium is returned with  $\frac{3}{4}$  per cent. interest. The loan value of these policies after two years rises rapidly from 90 per cent. of the deposited premium, and the effect of the Norwich Union Bonus will probably be to increase the policy to £100 on maturity. The return is over  $\frac{3}{4}$  per cent. compound interest.

The Scottish Metropolitan, the Union Assurance Society, the Star Life Office and the Scottish Provident have all introduced Endowment Assurance Policies with Guaranteed Bonuses. The Royal Insurance Company permits its with-profit Endowment Assurance policyholders to leave their bonuses with the company, these accumulating to large sums by the time the policy matures. The Endowment Assurance policies of the Mutual Life of Australasia are endorsed with guaranteed surrender values, and can be effected (if desired) by monthly premiums and without medical examination.

The Legal and General Life Assurance Society has introduced a novel scheme of Endowment for Bachelors convertible on marriage.

2. Instalment, Debenture, and Investment Policies.

A variation from the usual settlement of a life policy by payment at death or at a fixed date is for the office either to—

- (a) Pay the sum assured by instalments, or
- (b) Pay a percentage on the sum assured for so many years, the amount itself being paid at the end of that period.

For example, the Colonial Mutual Life Assurance Society, the Pelican and British Empire Life Office, have schemes under which 6 per cent. is guaranteed for 10 years after the sum assured becomes due, the amount of the policy being paid at the end of that time. Other offices offering similar benefits are the City of Glasgow, the National Mutual, the English and Scottish Law Life, the Scottish Metropolitan, and the Gresham.

Some of the offices undertaking to pay the sum assured under their policies (if desired) by instalments are the Edinburgh Life Office, the Sun Life of Canada, and most of the American companies.

In the Edinburgh Life Office a man aged 30 would pay £16 instead of £20 17s. 6d. for a Whole-Life Policy for £1000, payable in 20 instalments. By this means the difficulty of investment is got over.

In the "Old" Equitable Life Assurance Society, so named to distinguish it from its namesake of America, a policy called a Perfect Endowment Assurance for £1000 would cost about £40 per annum for 30 years only to a person aged 30. Under this policy £50 per annum would be paid from age 60 to the death of the life assured, when the £1000 would at once become payable.

The National Mutual Life Office has introduced a 3-per-cent. Dividend Policy, also obtainable from the Sun Life of Canada. The feature is that the office allows 3 per cent. per annum on the premiums paid to date.

The policy of the Sun Life of Canada is on the 20-Payment Life plan, and the 3-per-cent. interest or dividend credits can be left on deposit with the company at  $\frac{3}{4}$  per cent. compound interest. The Commercial Union Assurance Co., the National Mutual of Australasia, and Scottish Provident Institution, have Investment plans whereby, by combining an immediate annuity, a return of over  $\frac{3}{4}$  per cent. can always be obtained on amounts invested.

The Scottish Widows' Fund allows its policies, when due, to be deposited with it for not more than 20 years, and during that period pays 3 per cent. per annum on such amount deposited.

The Scottish Amicable Society, in order to meet the difficulty of finding satisfactory investments for the trust funds left by policyholders, issues what are called Income Policies, under which the office retains the sum assured when the policy becomes a claim until the death of the policyholder's widow or nominee—allowing  $\frac{5}{8}$  per cent. to such nominee. This Society has now perfected a scheme whereby a policyholder can secure any one of the following benefits: (1) A pension in his own old age; (2) a pension to himself, with continuance to his wife; or (3) an annuity to his wife and children at his death.

The Royal Exchange Assurance under the heading of Guaranteed Optional Investment Policies has recently introduced a new scheme under which a person, by payment of an annual sum of £35 3s., is entitled to the following benefits upon the attainment of a given age: (a) An annual income for the rest of life, and a cash payment at death; or (b) a free paid-up policy (payable at death), subject to good health; or (c) a cash payment alone. In the event of death before attainment of the age there will be offered corresponding alternatives.

The North British and Mercantile Insurance Co. has introduced 5-per-cent. Investment Policies which have been designed primarily for the use of husband and wife, securing to the latter, called the nominee, a 5-per-cent. investment after the death of her husband (the assured) if she should survive him; but such policies may also be taken out by other persons. On the death of the survivor of the assured and the nominee, the sum assured will be at once paid over to the executors or administrators of the assured, or the Company will hold the money as trustees.

The Canada Life Assurance Co., the oldest Colonial office, which has branch offices throughout the country, also grants 5-per-cent. 20-year gold bonds, with options at the end of the accumulative period. Some of the Bonus results of this office are remarkable.

The Mutual Life Association of Australasia and the Commercial Union have introduced schemes of Income Policies which guarantee £100 a year for 10, 15, and 20 years certain, commencing at age 50, 55 or 60, with a specified benefit in the event of earlier death, and the option of a large cash surrender value on survival of the age selected, all benefits being guaranteed.

The Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York has two good plans—one a Double Pension Policy guaranteeing an Income for Life to a man after 20 years, with absolute protection to wife or other beneficiary; the other a Continuous Instalment Policy, securing an Income for Life to beneficiary at death of husband, such income being guaranteed, and in no case less than for 20 payments. The benefits are guaranteed, and independent of future profits.

3. Policies at Reduced and Modified Premiums.

Instead of a uniform annual premium throughout the term, several Life Offices accept a reduced premium for the first few years of assurance, and increase it thereafter. This is an improvement on the former "half-credit" plan, for no debt attaches to the policy. As an illustration, in the Liverpool, London, and Globe Insurance Co. a person aged 25 can insure for £1000 against death for a premium of £12 4s. 2d. per annum for 5 years and £24 8s. 4d. thereafter, and participates in this company's Reversionary Bonus (35s. per cent. per annum) after the fifth year.

The Standard Life Office has a scheme of Increasing Premiums for Limited Payment Policies; the premiums are smallest for the first 7 years, and are increased every 7 years until after 21 years, when the policy is paid up and premiums cease.

The United Kingdom Temperance and General Institution for a uniform premium of £10 will grant a Maximum Diminishing Assurance: to commence at £1203, for example, at age 24, diminishing annually to £276 to age 60, and so on.

The Scottish Provident Institution originated in 1837 what may be called the Low Premium and Deferred Bonus system. The premiums for whole life policies are very low, and the whole surplus is reserved for division exclusively among those who survive the period at which their premiums with compound interest at 4 per cent. amount to the sum assured. Over 75 per cent. of the death claims last year were in respect of policies which had participated, and their bonus additions average 50 per cent. of the original assurances.

The London and Lancashire Life Office has a similar plan, bonuses being deferred until the expectation of life is attained.

The Pelican and British Empire Life Office also issues Diminishing Premium Policies. Under these the premiums are limited in number and diminish in amounts at stated periods, the annual charge during the last few years becoming very small.—The Colonial Mutual Life Association, and also the Standard Life Office, under the Reversible Premium Plan issues policies whereby the sum assured becomes payable at death, and the premiums cease at the age of 60 or 65, as selected at the outset, and afterwards the society will return one premium each year as long as the policy-holder lives.—The London Life Association grants policies under the fully participating scale on which one-half of the premiums payable during the first seven years may be left on credit at 4 per cent. interest. This office, which employs no agents and pays no commission, has recently issued upon this half-credit policy a New System of Minimum Policies. There is no debt on the policy under this plan, and after 7 years participation in profits at a reduced rate is allowed, which operates to further reduce the premium. This premium is not subject to increase.—The Metropolitan Life Assurance Society, an office which also pays no commission, in its Discounted Abatement System assumes a 33-per-cent. abatement, and discounts the premiums to this extent. No debt whatever attaches to the policy, and the premium is reduced to a minimum. After five years, if the rate of abatement by way of profit falls below 33 per cent. the premium would be increased; if it rises above 33 per cent. a further reduction in the premium would be made—it is now 34 per cent. This office also grants Increasing Assurances and guarantees surrender values under its non-participating Endowment Assurances.

Mention may be made of what are known as Convertible or Enlargeable Term Policies. For a trifling advance on short-period rates an option is extended of converting a term-assurance to some other plan, so long as the change is effected before the policy runs out. Endowment assurances at whole-life rates with option of conversion are granted by the Pelican and British Empire Life Office. The Scottish Temperance Life Office and the Scottish Equitable provide good plans in this line.

4. Life Assurance without Medical Examination.

As mentioned above, several Life Offices, following the plan of the Caledonian Insurance Co., will grant policies on the Double Endowment Plan without medical examination. The Caledonian Insurance Co. also issues these policies by monthly premiums.

The Standard Life Office, the Sun Life, the Century, and the Mutual Life of Australasia have all adopted similar schemes of non-medical examination. The three last-mentioned offices accept monthly premiums, and the Mutual of Australasia incorporates in its policies Guaranteed Surrender Paid-up Values, and also allows immediate participation in profits.

5. Partnership Policies.

The National Mutual Life Assurance Society has introduced a scheme for mercantile and professional firms called Convertible Partnership Policies. These are designed to meet the cases when after a few years a partnership may be dissolved, and the partnership policy is no longer required. In such a case, in exchange for the partnership policy, the society will grant to each partner a policy on his own life at the rate of premium for his original age at entry.—The Union Assurance Society has brought out a scheme under which policies are issued assuring a given sum on the death of the first of two lives, and convertible at any time into two separate single life policies. Similar plans are put forward by the Atlas Assurance Co. and the Star Life Office.

6. Female Life Assurance.

Until recently life offices were not favourably disposed to assure women, and would only grant them policies at premiums very much in excess of those charged to males. The Double Endowment Policy of the Prudential and the Monthly Premium Policies of the Sun Life Office are very suitable for women.

7. Assurances with Exemption from Payment of Premiums under circumstances involving Temporary or Permanent Incapacity.

The Sun Life Office has introduced the above-named policy, which means (a) that the policy cannot lapse so long as it has any surrender value; (b) if the assured has a breakdown in health he has no premiums to pay during the period of his incapacity; (c) if he becomes totally incapacitated the society will not trouble him for any more premiums; (d) if he meets with a very serious accident the society will pay him half the sum assured, keep the policy in force free of cost, and pay the balance of the policy at his death.

The Law Life Assurance Society issues policies which provide for the discontinuance of premiums in the event of the assured becoming incapacitated, either by accident or bodily or mental disorders, from continuing to earn their own livelihood. These special benefits cease at age 65.

The Law Union and Crown Insurance Co. and the Scottish Accident Life and General Insurance Co. provide under certain policies for the Exemption from Payment of Premiums whilst the assured may be temporarily or permanently incapable by accidental bodily injury or illness, or by mental disorder, from attending to his usual profession, business, or occupation. The Protected Policy of the Star Life Assurance Society is one of this kind. The Century Insurance Co., the Scottish Temperance Life, and the Mutual of Australasia make a speciality of Combined Life and Accident Insurance, the last-named office endorsing guaranteed surrender values in its policies.

8. Some Special Schemes of Life Assurance.

The Canada Life, the oldest Colonial office, and the Citizens of Australia have plans of assurance under which premiums are returned with the sum assured. The combination of plans of life assurance to give Double Benefit Policies is a favourite device. For example, the Abstainers and General and the General Life Offices combine a limited payment policy with an endowment at the time the payments cease. The Life Association of Scotland under its combined benefit policy pays half the sum assured on a given age being attained, and the balance at death thereafter. The Northern Assurance Co. issues policies combining Life Assurance with Deferred Annuities.

Total Abstainers and Vegetarians.

Several Life Offices offer special terms to total abstainers. The Abstainers and General, the Pelican and British Empire, the Scottish Temperance Life, the United Kingdom Temperance and General, and the Sceptre are of this number. The first-named company classifies vegetarians with a view to offering them the increased profits they deserve (if any).

Class Offices.

There are one or two offices which indicate by their name that they cater exclusively or particularly for special classes of lives. For example the Clergy Mutual and Clergy Pensions Institution for the clergy, the Friends' Provident for members of the Society of Friends, the University for members of universities, colleges or schools.

Naval, Military, or Mercantile Marine Policies.

The London and Lancashire Life Office accepts Naval and Military Officers without extra payment at ordinary with-profit rates, profits being deferred until permanent retirement from the Service. The Yorkshire Insurance Co. has a similar scheme. The Edinburgh Life Office charges a small extra payment only while the assured remains liable for military or naval foreign service. Officers and others in the Mercantile Marine Service are accepted by the London and Lancashire Life Office under its Special Endowment Scheme without extra premium.

9. Children's Assurances and Endowments.

Children's Deferred Assurances are now effected by many offices. The leading method for such is that there are two scales of premiums. In one all that are paid are returnable if a child dies before 21. In the other scale, which is lower in the amount of premiums payable, these are non-returnable. On the child attaining 21 the policy comes into full force as a policy of insurance. By the scheme of the Atlas Assurance Company, if it should be desired to surrender the policy before the child attains 21, all the premiums paid, except the first, would be returned, but without interest. The Child's Endowment Policy of the National Mutual Life Association of Australasia appears to be much appreciated. The benefits of the policy are: (1) That the amount of the endowment shall be paid if the child survive the age of 21. (2) All premiums paid, with simple interest at 4 per cent. per annum, will be returned to the parent or his representatives if the child die before attaining this age. (3) That no further premiums shall be payable, and the policy shall be fully paid up, if the parent die before the child and during the currency of the policy. Policies are entitled to a full share in the profits, and no medical examination is required.

The Norwich Union Life Office, the Yorkshire Insurance Co., and the National Mutual Society have introduced Educational Annuities to commence at a given age of the child and to run for four or five years. They are a very inexpensive form of provision, and the policies carry valuable options.

10. Annuity Schemes.

The National Mutual of Australasia is the cheapest office for Annuities. It returns generally  $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. per annum more than most offices, and in some instances the difference is as great as 2 per cent. per annum. The Royal Exchange Corporation will grant increased annuities to lives below the average in health.—The Commercial Union Insurance Society has devised Special Deferred Annuity Policies to facilitate provision for old age. Instead of the amounts of the periodical premiums and their due dates being fixed at the outset, the premiums may be paid in any multiples of £1, and at any intervals which may be most convenient. If the payment of premiums is not continued or made regularly, nothing is lost. Each premium is quite independent of the payment of other premiums, and secures a certain definite amount of annuity, as if it constituted by itself a wholly separate transaction. At the deferred age, or at death, or on surrender, the policyholder is entitled to take a guaranteed cash value which will be found to be almost exactly the accumulated amount of the premiums paid with compound interest at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum. The same society has introduced a new scheme of Immediate Annuities with a guaranteed return of part of the purchase-money in the event of early death or surrender.—The Norwich Union Life Insurance Society has a scheme for providing Old Age Pensions which may commence at 50, but this is at the option of the pensioner, each additional premium thereafter paid increasing the pension when he or she desires the Society to commence paying it.

11. Provision against Death Duties.

can be made by means of Life Policies especially endorsed, payable, at the request of the legal representatives of the assured, to the Inland Revenue authorities in settlement of these duties.

12. Loans on Personal Security.

Several British Life Assurance companies grant loans on personal security with life assurance. The English and Scottish Law Life Office and the Norwich Union offer very good terms in this line of business.

III. MARINE INSURANCE.

The general public has but a very vague notion of how and where the world's shipping and ocean-carried merchandise are insured. A shipowner or merchant effects his insurances either direct with the marine insurance companies, or through an insurance broker, who deals with the companies or the numerous syndicates of underwriters at Lloyds. London still retains its supremacy as the centre of the world's underwriting, partly owing to the stability of the companies which have their offices there, but principally to the fact that it is the seat of Lloyds (q.v.).

The losses in 1906 were not above the normal, and in consequence the market was fairly easy, and the old tendency towards further cutting of rates was as noticeable as ever. No doubt the vast improvements in the construction of steamers, the dredging of harbours and waterways in recent years, and the more complete systems of lights round the coasts warrant the continual reductions in premiums to a great extent; but there is no doubt that the margin of profit in underwriting is extremely small nowadays, especially when the risks involved are considered. Considerable damage was sustained by shipping during the typhoon at Hong-Kong and the cyclone at Pensacola. Underwriters also had to pay heavy claims on goods burnt in warehouses at Buenos Ayres.

The transfer of the Alliance Marine and General Assurance Co. to its namesake the Alliance Assurance Co., Ltd., took effect during the year.

IV. ACCIDENT.

By far the most important change which has taken place in recent years by legislation between employers and employed has been caused by the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. The liability of an employer to his injured workmen is now regulated by the common law: by the Employees Liability Act, 1880; the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897; and the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1900, which extended the Act of 1897 to workmen in agriculture. The liability thus imposed upon employers has been met by different kinds of insurance, the bulk of which is transacted by the existing accident insurance companies.

Accident or casualty insurance makes rapid progress, the premium incomes of the 65 companies transacting the business totalling £7,000,000 per annum.

To the list of companies already transacting Accident business may be added the Law, Car and General, Majestic, Reliance Fire and Accident. During the year the Resolute, Co-operative Sickness and Accident and Workmen's Accident and Legal were wound up. The British business of the "Continental Casualty" was transferred to the Accident Co., and the "Ocean" added Fire to its branches. The Accident Insurance Co. also opened a Fire department. The Ontario Accident Insurance Co. of Toronto commenced business in London, and issued a policy against damage to Personal Property by impact. The Scottish Union and National Insurance Co. acquired the business of the Lancashire and Yorkshire Accident Insurance Co. The Northern Accident of Glasgow agreed (Nov.) to amalgamate with the Royal Insurance Co.

The outstanding feature of 1906 was the introduction of the Bill to amend the Workmen's Compensation Acts of 1897 and 1900. At the time of going to press the Bill had not assumed its final shape, but it was evident that serious alterations would be effected, in the main increasing the liability of the employer and enhancing the benefit to the employee. With the introduction of the Bill the Employers' Liability Corporation issued a policy providing for compensation without regard to whether the employment was included or excluded; and most companies are prepared to issue policies carrying limited benefits where the Act does not apply.

Published figures go to prove that rates of premium asked in the past have been inadequate, and an increase in the cost to the employer may be assumed apart from the probable alterations in the law. On this point a recent declaration by one office is a matter of interest: viz., that the average cost of settlement in the classes of permanent injury and death has increased since 1901 to the following extent:—

	1901.	1905.
For Death . . . . .	£113	£117
Permanent Disablement . . . . .	55	87
Temporary " . . . . .	5	5

Among the stronger offices transacting this class of business a mutual effort to maintain rates was more in evidence during 1906 than previously, and, although no further tariff was arranged, an Association of Accident Offices was formed, having for its object the consideration of all matters connected with Accident Insurance. This may eventually be the means of bringing about a common basis of rating.

Developments in Personal Accident and Sickness Insurance were mostly confined to an increase in the number of diseases covered, the introduction of monthly premiums, the issue of non-terminable policies, and the formulating of schemes for the return of premiums at fixed ages.

Special Accident Policies.

A brief review of some special Accident Policies follows:—The Accident Insurance Co. has a policy providing accident and disease benefits, with limited medical expenses, at a fixed monthly premium of 2s. 6d., the benefits varying according to class. The Car and General issues Sickness Insurance Policies without medical examination covering all illness. The Casualty Insurance Co. has an "All Risk" Policy obtainable at a small premium without medical examination.

The Return Plans of the Century Insurance are remarkable, securing insurance against sickness or accident, with return of all premiums, on attaining 65, irrespective of claims. These policies can be combined with life assurance. Sickness alone may be assured against on the same conditions at slightly lower premiums.

The Commercial Union provides for the cost of surgical operations following accidents. The Compensation and Guarantee Fund makes a specialty of Insurance against Zymotic Diseases.

The "Business Man's" policy of the Employers' Liability Corporation extends double benefits to all public vehicle accidents. In addition to the cumulative bonus a reduction is made on the second and all further premiums irrespective of claims. The Empire Guarantee issues a Whole-Life Railway Accident Policy for £500 for 10s. The General Accident, Fire and Life Assurance Corporation of Perth has introduced Sickness and Accident Insurance by Monthly Premiums, 50 per cent. of which are returned at 65 or at death from natural causes. Its "Triumph" policy is worthy of notice.

The Tontine Bonus for Non-Claimants is a system devised by the London, Edinburgh and Glasgow Assurance Co. Under this scheme the premiums payable by a policy-holder who continues his assurance with the company, and who makes no claim for compensation, will be considerably reduced.

In its "Paragon" policy the London Guarantee now offers benefits for sixty diseases. Under the "Red Shield" Policy of the London and Lancashire Fire Office special bonuses are allowed and premium reductions are offered to Total Abstainers.

The "Ocean's" Leader Policy carries an automatic 5-per-cent. annual addition to the sum insured, as well as a quinquennial reduction of premium in cases of no claim.

The Profits and Income Insurance Co. effects Health assurance, with or without return of premiums at a fixed age, irrespective of claims paid. With these benefits may be combined life assurance, endowments, and deferred annuities.

The benefits payable by the Railway Passengers Assurance Co. in no case go in diminution of damages obtainable elsewhere.

The Perfect Annuity Policy of the Royal Exchange Assurance provides annuities up to 15 years in the event of death, permanent total disablement, and permanent partial disablement by accident, or in the event of blindness or paralysis by disease.

The Scottish Accident Life and General now offers in its "Copestone" policy, in addition to compensation against illness, a sum at death if it results from any of thirty diseases.

The Sun Life Office issues a combined Sickness and Accident Policy without medical examination, insuring from £1 to £6 a week against any sickness.

The Imperial Accident appeals specially to those who hunt, and policies are granted covering all hunting risks at ordinary premiums. Special policies are also issued to farmers.

The "Pallas" Personal Accident Policy of the "United Legal" Indemnity is a lifelong contract, and carries surrender values. Benefits are paid to a policy-holder whose wife or children contract certain diseases.

The Yorkshire Life Office caters for the Army and Navy, including the Indian Civil Service, insuring against accidents and charging no extra in cases of mishaps during Sports. Diseases are covered whilst resident in Europe.

V. FIDELITY GUARANTEE.

The rates of premium vary from 5s. to 40s. per cent., and are classified under the different employments. Length of service, position and means are all matters taken into consideration when fixing the premium to be paid. Any number of officials of an employer may be guaranteed under one policy. Additions and alterations are made by endorsement from time to time. This is a great convenience when there is a large staff. This class of business is transacted by most Accident Insurance offices. The National Guarantee and Suretyship Association will act as sureties or relieve private sureties of their risk. The Law Guarantee and Trust Society specialise in this and all kinds of guarantee risks and other contingencies.

VI. MISCELLANEOUS BRANCHES.

1. Bad Debt Insurance. Policies are issued by the Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation and the Commercial Union Assurance Co. for covering merchants and others against bad debts of short duration. The Excess Insurance Co. also insures Solvency and the taking up of Bills of Exchange.

2. Burglary and Housebreaking. Several offices, and most Accident Insurance Companies, transact insurance against these felonies. The National Burglary and Fire Insurance Corporation, the pioneer of this class of business, issues a combined Burglary and Fire Policy, and also special policies for Licensed Victuallers, Cyclists, and the Army. The North British and Mercantile, the Union, and the Century Insurance Companies have Burglary Insurance Departments; and also the Imperial Accident, Live Stock and General, the Guardian Fire and Life, the Yorkshire, and the Royal Exchange Assurance Offices. The Car and General Insurance Corporation offers a combined policy against burglary, housebreaking, larceny, and fire. It is understood that a large amount of burglary insurance is underwritten at Lloyd's. The Yorkshire Insurance Co. has a special Army scheme of Burglary Insurance.

The risk of murder by burglars or housebreakers is now covered by the Guardian Fire and Life Insurance Co. and the London Guarantee and Accident Insurance Association by payment of a small additional premium to that of the burglary and housebreaking risk.

3. Chemists' and Druggists' Indemnity Insurance is undertaken by the Northern Accident Insurance Co., the Royal Exchange Assurance, the Law Accident Insurance Society, the Vulcan Boiler and General Insurance Co., the Patriotic Insurance Co., the Compensation and Guarantee Fund, and the United Legal Indemnity Insurance Society for risks connected with the dispensing and sale of drugs by chemists and druggists in their business.

4. Special Indemnities or Contingency Policies are issued in almost any cases, when they are required, by several life offices, as well as by the Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation, the Law Guarantee and Trust Society, the Law Accident Insurance Society, the Fine Art and General Insurance Co., the General Accident Fire and Life Assurance Corporation, the Compensation and Guarantee Fund, the Royal Exchange Assurance, and the Car and General. Most ordinary life assurance companies insure against issue of marriages, and on the other hand against a person dying with or without issue, when those events are improbable. Insurances are sometimes effected with ordinary life offices against such contingencies as a change of name, armorial bearings or religion, loss or recovery of reason, etc. The Law Guarantee and Trust Society, beyond granting policies for these objects, have done so with regard to defects in title to landed or other property: lost documents, missing beneficiaries, avoidance of voluntary settlement, and payment of annuities. Some of these risks are also insured by the Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation.

5. Performance of Contracts. The London Guarantee and Accident Co., the Fine Art and General Insurance Co., the Vulcan Boiler and General Insurance Co., and the General Accident Fire and Life Assurance Corporation, insure the performance of contracts; also the Fidelity and Deposit Co. of Maryland. The Car and General Insurance Corporation insures the continuance of salaries of employees in the event of bankruptcy of a firm.

6. The coupon system of insurance entitles persons who possess copies of specified newspapers, railway guides, etc., containing accident coupons, to the payment of certain sums for injuries mentioned therein; while some of these on other coupons promise to pay the next-of-kin or legal representatives of the holders who suffer death from certain accidents—which are generally those that happen in railway trains—within specified times, fixed sums, which vary very much according to chances of death from such occurrences. By far the greater part of this insurance is transacted by the Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation and the General Accident Fire and Life Corporation. It is also transacted by some of the other Accident Companies.

7. Cycle Insurance of different kinds is undertaken by many companies, including the Law Accident Insurance Society, the National Burglary Insurance Corporation, the Fine Art and General Insurance Co., the General Accident Assurance Corporation, the United Legal Indemnity Insurance Society, the National Burglary Insurance Corporation, and the Law Fidelity and General Insurance Corporation.

8. Dairymen's Indemnity policies are issued by the Car and General Insurance Corporation.

9. Engines and Boilers and Steam Pipes. Inspection and insurance of steam, gas, oil engines and boilers, and advice on all matters relating thereto, is undertaken by the Vulcan Boiler and General Insurance Co., by the National Boiler and General Insurance Co., the Law Accident Insurance Society, and the Ocean.

10. School Epidemics can be insured against in the Car and General Insurance Corporation.

11. Forged Transfers. The Law Guarantee and Trust Society, and the Ocean Accident and Guarantee, and other offices insure companies against loss consequent upon dealing in, or acting on, forged transfers.

12. Hailstorm Insurance is transacted by the Norwich and London Accident Insurance Association, and the Nurserymen's and Market Gardeners' Insurance Co.; this company covers crops in glass houses. The Alliance Assurance Co. insures against hailstorms.

13. Horses and Cattle and Insurance against Death by Accident and Disease is undertaken by the Horse, Carriage, and General Insurance Co., the Imperial Accident, Live Stock and General Insurance Corporation, the National Live Stock Insurance Co., and the Scottish Live Stock Insurance Co. The latter company covers the horses of the Yeomanry and Volunteers.

14. House Purchase Insurance. By this system, adopted by the British Homes Assurance Corporation, the Century Insurance Co., the Scottish Temperance Life Office and others, a person can buy his house and insure his life out of money which would otherwise be paid as rent.

15. Landlords' and Factors' Indemnity Insurance. Policies are issued for these risks by the Northern Accident Insurance Co., the Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation, the Law Accident Insurance Society, the Royal Exchange Assurance, the Compensation and Guarantee Fund, the General Accident Fire and Life Assurance Corporation, and the United Legal Indemnity Insurance Society to indemnify such persons for compensation which they may be compelled to pay in respect of those personal accidents the policy covers.

16. License Insurance. The Licenses Insurance Corporation and the Law Guarantee and Trust Society insure license-holders and other interested persons against loss or deprivation in the value of property incurred by the forfeiture or non-renewal of licenses.

17. Lifts, Hoists, and Cranes. Several of the leading accident companies, and about five Life Offices, assure the owners or tenants of passenger and other lifts against liability for damages for personal injuries to individuals from accidents by or in connection with such lifts. The Vulcan Boiler and General Insurance Co., the National Boiler and General Insurance Co., and the General Accident Assurance Corporation insure lifts and hoists against breakdowns.

18. Loss or Damage of Passengers' and Mariners' Luggage at Sea. The Marine and General Mutual Life Assurance Society and the General Accident Assurance Corporation undertake these risks.

19. Medical Attendance during Sickness is insured by the National Medical Aid Co., the United Legal Indemnity Insurance Society, the Commercial Union, the Central and several industrial assurance companies.

20. Mortgages, Debentures, and other Securities. The insurance of the holders of these valuables against loss of principal and interest, and other business of a kindred character, is effected by the Law Guarantee and Trust Society, the Liverpool Mortgage Insurance Co., the Ocean Accident and the General Accident Insurance Companies, the Trustees, Executors, and Securities Insurance Corporation.

21. Motor-Car Indemnity and Horseless Carriage Insurance is carried on by the Imperial Accident Insurance Co., the Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation, the Law Accident Insurance Society, the Yorkshire Fire and Life Insurance Co. and the Norwich and London Accident Insurance Co. The Car and General Insurance Corporation offers special terms and facilities in this line.

22. Pictures and other Valuable Objects of Art. The owners of these are indemnified against loss from damage or destruction of such by the Fine Art and General Insurance Co., the Compensation and Guarantee Fund, and the United Legal Indemnity Insurance Society.

23. Plate-glass Insurance was first commenced in '52 by the Plate-glass Insurance Co. Many companies transact this business, to which may be added the Guardian Plate-glass Insurance Co. of Manchester. The insurance is often undertaken by contract in private houses.

24. Registered Post Insurance is transacted by the Compensation and Guarantee Fund, the Law Accident Insurance Society, the Fine Art and General Insurance Co., the Royal Exchange Assurance, and the United Legal Indemnity Insurance Society on bonds, jewellery, notes, and other valuable articles sent by registered post.

25. Indemnity against the payment of rent, mortgage interest, etc., if the house is rendered uninhabitable through fire, is granted by the Central Insurance Co.

26. Sinking Funds or Capital Redemption in connection with Leasehold Property. Several life offices, and the Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation and the Law Guarantee and Trust Society, issue policies for this purpose.

27. Third Party Risks are taken by most Accident Insurance companies.

28. Transit Risks. The Northern Accident Insurance Co., the Fine Art and General Insurance Co., the Law Accident Insurance Society, the Compensation and Guarantee Fund, the London and Lancashire Fire Insurance Co. and the United Legal Indemnity Insurance Society, insure against loss of property in transit other than such as is sent by registered parcel post, as mentioned in No. 24. The Car and General Corporation covers motors against transit risks.

29. Trusteeship and Executorship. In consideration of certain premiums, the Law Guarantee and Trust Society, the Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation, the Trustees, Executors, and Securities Insurance Corporation, the Century Insurance Co., the Liverpool Mortgage Insurance Co., and the Lancashire and Yorkshire Accident Insurance Co. arrange to act as trustees or executors. The Royal Exchange Corporation has recently agreed to act as trustees or executors.

30. Vehicular Risks are also taken by the General and nearly all other Accident Insurance companies. The Ocean Accident and Guarantee issues a public liability policy for horse drivers. The Horse, Carriage, and General Insurance Co. also makes a speciality of this line. The Car and General Insurance Corporation has a special prospectus for motor cars, lorries, and vans. The Imperial Accident Co. insures private carriages of all kinds, also tradesmen's carts, vans, etc.

INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION.

The International Arbitration Court was organised in 1901, with a Permanent Bureau, and is the chief result of the Hague Conference, which met in '99 at the invitation of the Czar (see eds. 1901 and 1902). The various Governments nominated members to represent them, and M. de Beaufort, as ex officio President, officially notified the signatories (April 14th, 1901) that the Court was duly constituted. The Court is to be housed in a Palace of Peace, of which Mr. Carnegie has undertaken to defray the cost. The Dutch Parliament has provided a site in the Zorgvliet Park at The Hague. The Court has already been called upon to deal with a number of international questions, such as the dispute between Japan and three European Powers as to the house-tax, the Venezuela difficulty, the Anglo-French difficulty with regard to Muscat, the Newfoundland fisheries award, etc.

British Members of the Court: Sir E. B. Malet, Sir E. Fry, Professor Westlake, and Sir John Ardagh.

General Secretary and Chief of the Bureau: Baron Michiels Verduynen.

First Secretary of the Bureau: M. le Jonkheer W. Röell.

A treaty of arbitration and conciliation between Great Britain and France was signed Oct. 14th, 1903. This treaty provided for the reference of all differences of a judicial order and not involving vital interests or national honour to the decision of The Hague Court, the reference to be preceded by a special agreement setting out the subject in dispute, the powers of the arbitrators, and the constitution of the Court.

Similar treaties, holding good for 5 years, have since been signed by many of the European Powers inter se.

The Netherlands and Denmark, on June 9th, 1904, concluded an unlimited treaty of arbitration, which contained a clause leaving it open for other Powers to join.

Proposed Second Hague Conference.

At the annual conference in 1904 of the Inter-Parliamentary Union, held at St. Louis, a resolution was unanimously carried in favour of a second conference being summoned, and asking the President of the United States to send out invitations to such a conference. The President accepted the task, and sent a despatch to all the U.S. Ambassadors abroad directing them to ascertain whether and how far the governments to which they were accredited were disposed to act in the matter, and indicating three points for consideration: viz.—(1) the rights and duties of neutrals, including the question of contraband; (2) the inviolability of private property in naval warfare; and (3) the bombardment of ports, towns and villages by a naval force. A Note sent out by Mr. Hay, Dec. 16th, 1904, notified the acceptance in principle of the President's invitation, but deeply regretted Russia's refusal to join as tending to cause some postponement of the proposed conference.

In September 1905 it was announced that President Roosevelt had decided to leave the initiative in convoking a second Conference to the Czar; and on the 21st of that month the Russian Government sent out instructions to its representatives to ask the Powers if they would be willing to attend a second Conference. In November it was stated that the receipt of a sufficient number of favourable replies was assured, most of the Powers, however, stipulating that the scope of the questions to be considered by the Conference should be submitted beforehand.

Inter-Parliamentary Conference, 1906.

At the Inter-Parliamentary Conference held in London in July 1906, a resolution supported by the Hon. W. J. Bryan in an eloquent speech was carried as follows:—"If a difference should arise between the contracting parties which by the terms of the convention should not be submitted to arbitration, the parties shall not have recourse to any measure of hostility, of whatever nature, before having jointly or separately demanded, according to the circumstances of the case, either the constitution of an International Commission of Inquiry or the mediation of one or more friendly Powers. This requisition shall be made in case of need conformably to Article VIII. of The Hague Convention for the peaceful settlement of international conflicts."

Other resolutions were carried by the Conference as follows:—"That it would be advantageous to give The Hague Conferences a more permanent influence in the work of pacification, and that the Powers should agree in establishing the periodical meeting of these conferences."

"That the Powers when appointing their representatives to the second Hague conference could usefully include in their instructions the duty of endeavouring to find the means of constituting a permanent consultative council entrusted with preparing the codification and development of international law."

"The Inter-Parliamentary Conference, considering that the increase of naval and military expenditure, which weighs so heavily upon the world, is universally recognised as intolerable, expresses emphatically the wish that the question of the limitation of armaments should form part of the programme of the next Hague Conference. The conference decides that each group of the Inter-Parliamentary Union shall without delay bring this resolution before the Government of its own country, and that it shall bring the utmost possible pressure to bear upon its own Parliament; so that the question of the limitation of armaments shall be made the subject of the national study necessary to secure the success of the international discussion."

"That The Hague Conference, in their second session, should—(1) By treaty define contraband of war as being restricted to arms, munitions of war, and explosives; (2) Reassert and confirm the principle that neither the ship carrying contraband of war, nor other goods on board such ship, not being contraband of war, may be destroyed; (3) Affirm that even between belligerents private property should be immune at sea as it is upon land."

Societies.

The International Arbitration League, formerly known as the Workmen's Peace Association, was established in 1870, and has carried on an active peace propaganda, in Great Britain, on the Continent, and in America. It initiated and organised the inter-parliamentary conferences of Members of Parliaments in favour of international arbitration which have been held at Paris, London, Rome, Berne, The Hague, Brussels, Budapest, Christiania, Vienna, and St. Louis. It has 150 members of Parliament as Vice-Presidents. President, Rt. Hon. Thomas Burt, M.P.; Treasurer, Howard Evans; Secretary, W. Randal Cremer, M.P. Offices, 11, Lincoln's Inn Fields, London.

The Peace Society was founded in 1816, and advocates a gradual, proportionate, and simultaneous disarmament by all nations, and the employment of pacific methods of settling international differences, especially the principle of arbitration. Amongst other methods of action, it especially advocates the preaching of sermons on peace, in as many churches as possible, on the Sunday before Christmas. President, R. Spence Watson, LL.D. Treasurer, Walter Hazell, J.P.; Secretary, W. Evans Darby, LL.D. Offices, 47, New Broad Street, London, E.C.

International Law. See article on, in 1905 ed., and consult: Hall, "International Law"; Wheaton, "International Law"; Lawrence, "Principles of International Law." See EX-TRADITION, FOREIGN OFFICE, and INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION.

International Law, Institute of (Institut de Droit International), founded in '73. The first meeting was at Ghent in '74, and since then the Institute has assembled annually at various places on the Continent and in England. The idea of the founders was that since the rules which govern the intercourse of states are established out of respect for the public opinion of the civilised world, and since this public opinion in turn is mainly derived from the leading international jurists of Europe, the incorporation of those jurists into a society whose resolutions should form a corpus juris gentium, could not but facilitate the development of the reign of law and justice among nations. The maximum number of its members is 60, and of its associates 60, and no nation can possess more than a fifth of the whole number. The Institute was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1904. The English members are Professors Westlake, Holland, Leech, and Dicey, Sir Robert Hart, Lord Reay, Sir Thomas Barclay, Sir D. Mackenzie Wallace, and Lord Chief Justice Alverstone; and the English associates are Mr. E. J. Lawrence, Sir Sherston Baker, Mr. J. A. Foote, Prof. Goudy, Sir John Macdonell, K.C.B., and Sir John Ardagh. General Sec., M. Alberic Rolin, 99, Rue de Namur, Louvain, Belgium.

International Statistical Institute. Established in 1885 by an assembly of statisticians from all parts of the world which met in London. Meetings have since been held at Rome, Paris, Vienna, Chicago, Berne, St. Petersburg, Christiania, Budapest, and Berlin. The membership is limited to 200. The object of the Institute is to compare the work and method of statistical inquiry in different States, and to deal with such subjects as emigration and immigration, foreign trade, vital statistics, etc. The tenth session was held in London, commencing on July 31st, 1905. President, Dr. Karl Theodor von Marn-Sternegg; General Secretary, Signor Luigi Bodio, Italian Commissioner-General of Emigration at Rome; Treasurer, Sir Alfred Bateman, K.C.M.G., Woodhouse, Wimbledon Park.

IRELAND.

Ireland has an area of 32,605 sq. m., and a population, according to the 1901 census, of 4,458,775. In 1906 the population was 4,386,035. Of the 1901 total of 4,458,775, 2,200,040 were males and 2,258,735 females, showing an excess of 58,695 females as against a similar excess of 66,844 in 1891. The decrease in the population, as compared with 1901, was 245,975. Munster showed a decrease of 97,241, or 8·29 per cent.; Connaught of 73,037, or 10·08 per cent.; Leinster of 38,709, or 3·26 per cent.; and Ulster of 36,988, or 2·28 per cent. The only county which showed an increase was Dublin, with 6·31 per cent. All the other counties showed a decrease, ranging from 5·69 per cent. in the case of Wicklow to 13·45 in the case of Monaghan. As to religious professions, 3,308,661 were returned as Roman Catholics, being 6·7 per cent. less than the number in '91; 581,089 as Protestant Episcopalians, or 3·2 per cent. less than in '91; 443,276 as Presbyterians, or 0·4 per cent. less than in '91; 62,006 Methodists, or 1·17 per cent. more than in '91; 3,898 Jews, or 111·9 per cent. more than in '91; and 59,845 all other persuasions. Put in another way, 74·2 per cent. of the population were returned as Roman Catholics, 13·03 per cent. as Protestant Episcopalians; 9·94 per cent. as Presbyterians, and 1·39 per cent. as Methodists. The number of families returned in 1901 was 910,256, or a decrease since '91 of 2·3 per cent., representing an average of 4·9 persons to a family, as against 5 in '91. The number of inhabited houses was 858,158 in 1901, a decrease of 12,420, or 1·4 per cent. The country is divided into 4 provinces: Leinster, Munster, Ulster, and Connaught. There are 6 county boroughs: Dublin, pop. 290,638; Belfast, 349,180; Cork, 76,122; Limerick, 38,151; Londonderry, 39,892; and Waterford, 26,769.

The Banking and Railway Statistics, Ireland, for 1905, published in 1906, supply some interesting figures as to the material condition of the country. The deposits and cash balances in Joint Stock Banks have steadily increased from £29,370,000 on Dec. 31st, 1885, to £45,432,000 on Dec. 31st, 1905, though this figure was £68,300 less than that for Dec. 31st, 1904. The estimated balances in Post Office Savings Banks increased from £2,438,000 on Dec. 31st, '85, to £10,230,000 on Dec. 31st, 1905. In Trustee Savings Banks the amount of deposits increased from £1,981,000 in '85 to £2,462,000 in 1905. The bank-note circulation showed some contraction in 1905, and so did the note circulation of Irish banks of issue.

Administration.

The head of the executive in Ireland is the Viceroy or Lord-Lieutenant, who is assisted by a Chief Secretary, the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, the Attorney-General for Ireland, the permanent officials, and a Privy Council (which is a separate and distinct body from the Privy Council of Great Britain); but the government of the country is in all essential points carried on under the direction of or in concert with the Ministry of the day in London. The Lord-Lieutenant is charged with the maintenance of peace and order; the Irish Constabulary are under his control, and he may, if he think it to be necessary, direct the Commander of the Forces to send troops to their aid. He has power to commute sentences and pardon criminals. There are, however, more agreeable and less anxious functions attaching to the office; for, as representing His Majesty, the Viceroy, assisted by his wife, holds courts, drawing-rooms, levées, and maintains in Dublin an establishment of a semi-regal character. On occasions he confers the honour of civil knighthood. During his absence the duties of chief governorship are performed by three or more Lords Justices, those who act in this capacity being usually the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, the Commander of the Forces, and some of the judges. The Lord Chancellor of Ireland is head of the Irish judicial establishment, principal legal adviser of the Lord-Lieutenant, and exercises in Ireland many of the powers which in England are vested in the Lord High Chancellor. The office may be held by a Roman Catholic.

The Chief Secretary to the Lord-Lieutenant, or Chief Secretary for Ireland as he is usually called, has been described as prime minister to the Viceroy; and although he is in theory subordinate to the Home Office, he has his own establishment at the Irish Office in London, as well as in Dublin, and is directly responsible to the House of Commons for the acts of the Irish administration. He is assisted by a Permanent Under-Secretary, salary £2000, and other officials.

There is a separate Local Government Board (see below); a Board of Public Works, which is the great financial agent of the Government in Ireland; a Board of Trade; a Board of National Education, by which the grant made by Parliament for public education is administered (see EDUCATION); and a new Department of Agriculture and other Industries and Technical Instruction was created in '99. This Department has done a most important work in and for the country in the development of agriculture and industry. See AGRICULTURE.

Lord-Lieutenant, The Earl of Aberdeen.

Chief Secretary, Rt. Hon. James Bryce, M.P.

Under-Secretary, Rt. Hon. Sir A. P. Macdonnell, G.C.S.I.

Lord Chancellor, Lord Justice Walker.

Chairman Board of Public Works, G. C. V. Holmes, C.V.O., C.B.

Principal Officer Board of Trade, Captain W. Tillar.

Vice-President Board of Agriculture and Technical Instruction, Rt. Hon. Sir Horace Plunkett, K.C.V.O.

Royal Irish Constabulary.

This is a semi-military force, consisting of over 9,500 members, who are drilled and disciplined as soldiers, live in barracks, and are armed with rifles, swords, bayonets, and revolvers. It was established by Act of Parliament in '36, and is directly controlled by the Irish Government. In '67 the title of Royal Irish Constabulary was conferred on the force by command of H.M. Queen Victoria. Its authorised strength consists of 4 district inspectors, 8 head constables, and 400 sergeants, acting-sergeants and constables.

The Inspector-General is resident in Dublin, and is assisted by a Deputy Inspector-General and three Assistant Inspectors-General. Each county or riding is under the immediate charge of a county inspector.

The duties of this imperial constabulary consist of the following among other numerous civil services not imposed upon police forces in the United Kingdom: viz., collecting agricultural statistics yearly; taking the census decennially; acting as auctioneers for sale of distress; acting as inspectors of weights and measures; the performance of Custom officers' duties for the prevention of smuggling, and of Excise duties to prevent illicit distillation.

The headquarters of the force are at the depot in Phoenix Park. This is also the place for recruiting and the professional education of all members of the Constabulary. Recruits must be unmarried, at least 5 ft. 9 in. in height, and between 19 and 27 years of age.

A separate force was established by Act of Parliament for Belfast in '65, with an inspector in charge now styled Commissioner of Police, whose salary and half the cost of the extra men are paid for by that borough. In '70 a small additional force was appointed to Londonderry, the cost of which is defrayed in the same manner.

Civil Service Examinations are held, for candidates nominated by the Chief Secretary, for cadetships in the force. One-half of the vacancies for district inspectors are filled by cadets and one-half by specially selected head constables of exceptional merit. Candidates for cadetships must be unmarried, at least 5 ft. 8 in. in height, and between 21 and 26 years of age. A pension system has been established by statute law. Special provisions have also been made for men who are incapacitated from injuries received in the discharge of their duty.

Dublin Metropolitan Police.

The Dublin Metropolitan Police are under the immediate direction of a Commissioner and an Assistant Commissioner, and the offices of Receiver and Secretary are consolidated. At the end of 1905 the effective strength of the force was 1194, consisting of 7 superintendents, 23 inspectors, 43 station sergeants, 147 sergeants, and 974 constables. An excellent detective staff exists in the force for the prevention and detection of crime, headed by a superintendent and other officers. The expenditure for the year ending March 31st, 1905, for the Dublin Metropolitan Police Establishment, including the Police Courts, was £160,950, of which £52,437 was received as appropriations in aid from local sources, and the balance from the Imperial Treasury. Pensions and gratuities are provided for the force by an Act of Parliament passed in '83.

Chief Commissioner, Lieut.-Col. Sir J. F. G. Ross, of Bladensburg, K.C.B., D.L.

Assistant Commissioner, Wm. Vesey Harrel, Esq. M.V.O.

Secretary and Accountant, J. Mills Goldsmith, Esq., I.S.O., Dublin Castle.

Local Government Board.

This Board, like those for England and Scotland, is the central authority for poor law, local government, and public health matters. The Board consists of the Chief Secretary to the Lord-Lieutenant as President, a Vice-President (The Right Hon. Sir Henry A. Robinson, K.C.B.), and other members (viz. the Under Secretary of State, Mr. W. L. Micks, and Mr. T. J. Stafford, C.B.), and is assisted by a staff of officials and inspectors. The duties of the Board are in the main similar to those of the English and Scottish Boards, but the Lord-Lieutenant exercises certain powers which in England belong to the Local Government Board. The principal local authorities are the same as those in England and Wales—viz., county councils, municipal corporations, urban and rural district councils; but there are no parish councils.

Local Taxation Statistics.

For the year ended Sept. 30th, 1905, the daily average number of indoor paupers was 42,288, and of out-door paupers 60,127. During the year ended Lady Day, 1905, the receipts of boards of guardians amounted to £1,241,484, and their expenses to £1,261,797. Of the receipts £1,220,073 was supplied by county and county borough councils. The chief items of expenditure were:—

In-maintenance . . . . .	£455,511
Out-relief . . . . .	209,054
Salaries and rations of officers . . . . .	199,713
Medical and vaccination expenses . . . . .	179,205

During the same year the receipts of rural district councils amounted to £570,909, and their expenses to £598,787. Of the receipts £199,612 came from the county councils and £315,652 from loans. Of the expenses £345,315 is in respect of the Labourers Acts.

The receipts of Committees of Lunatic Asylums were £541,373, and their expenditure £552,129. As regards Town Authorities the receipts were £2,552,943, and the expenditure £2,432,564. The amounts paid into the Local Taxation Account from Imperial sources in aid of local rates during the year ended March 1905 came to £1,287,266. The amount raised by local taxation during the year was £4,013,303, which was a decrease of £35,197 on the preceding year.

The total outstanding loans, including stock, were as follows:—

County Councils . . . . .	£310,096
Town Councils . . . . .	5,687,436
Town Commissioners . . . . .	736,720
Commissioners under Special Acts . . . . .	1,022,855
Harbour Authorities . . . . .	2,889,497
Belfast Water Commissioners . . . . .	1,816,046
Joint Boards . . . . .	165,037
Boards of Guardians . . . . .	298,864
Rural District Councils . . . . .	2,661,680
Committees of Lunatic Asylums . . . . .	1,328,860

Total . . . . . £16,917,091

Under the Local Government (Ireland) Act, '98, agricultural land is assessed to the poor rate and county cess at one-half of its value. To make up the deficiency on the other half, a grant is paid out of the Local Taxation (Ireland) account from moneys received from the Consolidated Fund. The total annual amount of the grant is £727,655, which all went to the County Councils, except some £317 for County Borough Councils. The amount of poor rate collected in the counties during the year was £1,502,195. Town authorities received £995,261 from rates for municipal purposes, and £403,079 from poor rate.

The Irish Reform Association.

The Land Conference Committee, which was formed in 1902, and had so much to do with the inception of the Land Act, 1903, was in August 1904 dissolved and reconstituted as the Irish Reform Association, with Lord Dunraven, Sir Algernon Coote, Lieut.-Col. Hutcheson Poë, Mr. L. Talbot Crosbie and Col. Everard as a Provisional Organising Committee. The President is Lord Dunraven, and the Treasurer Lieut.-Col. Hutchinson Poë, C.B.

The objects of the Association, as stated in its articles, are (1) to encourage co-operation amongst all Irishmen, irrespective of creed or class, for the development of the country's resources, and for the promotion of the welfare of the people; (2) to secure for Ireland such effective control of purely Irish affairs as may be compatible with the maintenance of the legislative Union between Great Britain and Ireland and with the supremacy of the Imperial Parliament.

The Organising Committee reported on Sept. 23rd, 1904, indicating the lines on which devolution might proceed. They proposed:—“(1) The creation of a financial council, partly elected and partly nominated, to make presentments and supervise the expenditure of voted money and of money derived from savings effected in administration; (2) the formation of a statutory body, composed, in accordance with the Scotch model, of members of the Legislature and an extra-Parliamentary panel, and empowered to deal with private Bill legislation, and such other business as Parliament may refer to it.”

The MacDonnell Affair.

It soon became known that the Permanent Under-Secretary, Sir Antony MacDonnell, had assisted Lord Dunraven in preparing the draft of a scheme on the lines of the first report of the Association, and that the Lord-Lieutenant, Lord Dudley, was aware of this. The Irish Unionists were very angry about it, and the Times (Jan. 28th, 1905), declared that Irish Unionists were convinced, rightly or wrongly, that the aim of Sir Antony MacDonnell's policy was to favour and strengthen the Clericalist and Nationalist elements in the country, to the disadvantage of those who were loyal to the British connexion. Mr. Wyndham stated in the House of Commons early in 1905 that Sir Antony MacDonnell had been censured by the Government because, owing to the misunderstanding which had arisen, he had assisted at the publication of proposals to which the Cabinet objected, which he as Chief Secretary would not have been free to make without consultation with his colleagues, and which therefore Sir Antony was not at liberty to make without first obtaining the approval of his chief. Mr. Wyndham's resignation was announced on March 6th, 1905, and Mr. W. H. Long was appointed to succeed him. The controversy, however, did not end here. In a correspondence with Sir Edward Carson, in February and March 1906, Lord Dudley said that, though he “fully explained to the late Prime Minister the nature of my connection with what you describe as Sir A. MacDonnell's Home Rule scheme, he never conveyed to me any intimation that he or the Government disapproved strongly or otherwise of my conduct.” On Aug. 30th, 1906, Sir A. MacDonnell, in reference to a speech made by Mr. W. H. Long, in which he challenged “people who had got letters” to produce them, wrote to Mr. Long assuming that he was referred to, and said “the time has not yet come for publishing the correspondence connected with the unsuccessful attempt to deprive me of office in 1904-5.” He mentioned also “the refusal of the late Prime Minister to lay the correspondence on the table of the House of Commons.” Mr. Long, on Sept. 2nd, 1904, said he had satisfied himself completely at the time when he took office as Chief Secretary that Sir A. MacDonnell rightly or wrongly believed that in everything he did he was only carrying out the wishes of the Government. Mr. Wyndham spoke on the subject on Sept. 8th, and on Oct. 12th Lord Lansdowne said at Nottingham, after explaining his connection with the appointment of Sir A. MacDonnell, that the documents already published should suffice, and they did not intend to give any more, but if any one had a document which seemed to establish the charges made against the late Government they would raise no objection to its publication. Mr. Balfour said at Manchester (Oct. 22nd) that neither he nor his colleagues of the late Government tolerated for one instant the idea of a measure of devolution for Ireland, and challenged the possessor of any “compromising letters” to produce them.

Land and Estates Commissioners' Reports, 1905-6.

The report of the Irish Land Commissioners for 1905-6 [Cd. 3113] showed that the total number of judicial rents fixed under the Land Law Acts during the period from August 1881 up to March 31st, 1906, where the parties applied to have fair rents fixed for a first statutory term, was 360,135 (excluding judicial leases and fixed tenancies). The total rental dealt with was £7,206,078, and the aggregate judicial rent fixed in respect thereof was £5,715,158, an average reduction of 20·7 per cent. The number of cases struck out or dismissed was 70,803, making the total number of cases disposed of 430,938 for a first statutory term.

The number of rents similarly fixed to March 31st, 1906, for a second statutory term, was 120,515. The total rental in these cases for the first statutory term was £2,151,815; and the aggregate judicial rent fixed for the second statutory term was £1,728,600, an average reduction of 19·7 per cent. on first-term rents. The number of cases struck out, withdrawn or dismissed was 17,737, making the total number of cases disposed of 138,252.

The general result of proceedings under the Land Purchase Acts 1881-96, for the period from 1881 to March 31st, 1906, was as follows:—

	No. of Advances to Tenants Issued.	Amount
1881 Act Cash Advances . . . . .	731	240,801
1885, 1888 Acts Cash Advances . . . . .	25,367	9,992,536
1891, 1896 Acts Advances in Guaranteed Land Stock . . . . .	46,921	13,127,524
	72,819	23,360,861

The Commissioners also reported their proceedings under the 1903 Land Act in regard to advances for the purchase of holdings. From the passing of the Act in 1903 to March 31st, 1906, 5300 applications, representing £991,553, were received, of which 4468 applications, involving advances of £826,220, were sanctioned provisionally, and 44 applications for £23,527 were dismissed. (It should be noted that these figures are exclusive of proceedings for the sale and purchase of estates before the Estates Commissioners.) There were actually issued during the same period 3521 loans for £685,318, and these, with advances made to the Congested Districts Board under the 1903 Act and the 1899 Act, brought the total amount of cash issued to £760,794.

The Estates Commissioners reported in 1906 that in the period from Nov. 1st, 1903, to March 31st, 1906, applications for advances under various sections of the Land Act 1903, as well as in cases of direct sales, came before them in respect of 3596 estates, for which the number of purchasers amounted to 97,245, the purchase money to £35,401,177, of which £125,346 was in cash payments, the balance of £35,275,831 being the sum for which applications for advances were made. Out of the totals above, 3446 estates came under the direct sale agreements, accounting for 86,898 purchasers, and £32,811,564 of the purchase money.

Home Rule.

The demand for Home Rule was renewed at the meeting of the Nationalist Convention in Dublin, April 21st, 1904. At Glasgow, July 10th, Mr. Redmond said: "The one great fact to the Irish leaders' mind which stood out in the present political situation was that Home Rule was still the be-all and end-all of the Irish policy and programme. . . . The land question might come to a settlement apart from Home Rule, and the finances of Ireland might be put on a better footing, but these could only be valuable because they were stepping-stones to Home Rule."

The proceedings at the Nationalist Convention held in Dublin Dec. 6th, 1905, were attended by about 2500 delegates from branches of the United Irish League, and were made specially interesting by the political situation in England. The following resolution was carried unanimously:—"That this Convention adopts and reaffirms the motion moved by Mr. J. Redmond in the House of Commons on Feb. 20th, 1905—namely, 'That the present system of government in Ireland is in opposition to the will of the Irish people and gives them no voice in the management of their own affairs; that the system is consequently ineffective and extravagantly costly, does not enjoy the confidence of any section of the population, is productive of universal discontent and unrest, and has proved to be incapable of satisfactorily promoting the material and intellectual progress of the people'; that the whole Liberal party, by voting for that resolution, pledged themselves as a party in the most solemn way to undertake at the earliest practicable moment the removal of the monstrous system so condemned, and the substitution in its place of a system of government giving to the Irish people power to manage the affairs of Ireland; and we hereby solemnly assert that no new system of government for Ireland will be accepted as satisfactory or will prove effective except a Legislative Assembly, freely elected and representative of the people, with power to make laws for Ireland, and an Executive Government responsible to that Assembly; and this Convention declares that the Irish National party cannot enter into alliance with or give permanent support to any English party or Government which does not make the question of granting such an Assembly and Executive to Ireland a cardinal point in its programme."

Sir Antony MacDonnell, speaking in August 1906, said: "His firm belief was that the coming year 1907 would see the fruition of many of those hopes which the best Irishmen had for many years entertained. . . . It would be the fruition of so much that they might make it the fountain and the source from which the whole of their hopes might be fulfilled."

See Session, sect. 11.

Irish University Education.

A Royal Commission on Irish University Education was appointed June 1901, "To inquire into the present position of higher general and technical education in Ireland, outside Trinity College, Dublin, and to report as to what reforms, if necessary, are desirable in order to render that education adequate to the needs of the Irish people." Its report was published in March 1903. The Royal University, the Commissioners recommended, should be reconstructed as a teaching University with four Constituent Colleges, the three existing Queen's Colleges at Belfast, Cork and Galway, and a new Roman Catholic College situated in Dublin. The Commissioners held that all the chairs in the new College should be open to persons of all denominations, and that the existing Catholic University School of Medicine should form the medical faculty of the College. The endowment and equipment of the College should be on a scale required by a University College of the first rank. The report further recommended the reform of the constitution and government of the Queen's Colleges, with an increase in their powers of self-government, and in the endowment of Queen's College, Belfast. Provision for the education of women was also recommended. There were notes appended by individual Commissioners objecting to the exclusion from the University scheme of both Magee Presbyterian College and the arts students of Maynooth.

Another Royal Commission was appointed in June 1906, and it was understood that it would consider the report of the former Commission and the evidence submitted to it, but would not itself receive further evidence on matters already dealt with, so that its report might be presented at no very distant date. The terms of reference were as follows:—"To inquire into and report upon the present state of Trinity College, Dublin, and of the University of Dublin, including the revenues of the College and of any of its officers and their application, the method of government of the University and of the College, the system of instruction in the College and the teachers by whom it is conducted, the system of University examinations, and the provision made for post-graduate study and the encouragement of research; and also to inquire and report upon the place which Trinity College, Dublin, and the University of Dublin now hold as organs of the higher education in Ireland, and the steps proper to be taken to increase their usefulness to the country." The Commission is constituted as follows:—Sir Edward Fry (Chairman), Chief Baron Palles, Sir T. Raleigh, K.C.S.I., D.C.L., Sir A. W. Rücker, LL.D., F.R.S., H. Jackson, Esq., D.Litt., Douglas Hyde, Esq., LL.D., Trinity College, Dublin, D. J. Coffey, Esq., M.A., Fellow of the Royal University of Ireland, and S. B. Kelleher, Esq., Fellow of Trinity College, Dublin.

Commissions on Congestion and Railways.

In July 1906 the Lord Lieutenant appointed a Commission to inquire into the present working of railways in Ireland, including light railways; and to report how far they afford adequate facilities for the cheap and rapid transport of goods and passengers within the island and to Great Britain; what causes have retarded the expansion of traffic upon the Irish lines and their full utilisation for the development of the agricultural and industrial resources of the country; and generally by what methods the economical, efficient, and harmonious working of the Irish railways can best be secured. The Commission is thus constituted: Sir Charles Scotter (Chairman), the Right Hon. W. J. Pirrie, Sir Herbert Jekyll, K.C.M.G., Lieut.-Col. W. Hutcheson Poë, C.B., Mr. Thomas Sexton, Mr. W. M. Acworth, and Mr. John A. F. Aspinall.

A Royal Commission was appointed in July 1906 to inquire into and report upon—

The operation of the Acts dealing with congestion in Ireland; the working of the Congested Districts Board and the Land Commission under these Acts, and the relations of the Board with the Land Commission and the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction.

What areas (if any) outside the districts now scheduled as congested require to be dealt with as congested.

What lands are most conveniently situated for the relief of congestion.

What changes in law or administration are needed for dealing with the problem of congestion as a whole, for facilitating the migration of the surplus population from congested areas to other lands, and generally for bettering the condition of the people inhabiting congested areas.

The Commission is constituted as follows:—The Earl of Dudley, G.C.V.O. (Chairman), Dr. O'Donnell, Bishop of Raphoe, Sir A. P. MacDonnell, G.C.S.I., K.C.V.O., Sir J. C. R. Colomb, K.C.M.G., Sir Francis Mowatt, G.C.B., Mr. J. Annan Bryce, M.P., Mr. Conor O'Kelly, M.P., Mr. Angus Sutherland, and Mr. W. McMurrough Kavanagh. Secretary, Mr. Walter Callan, Assistant Private Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

Irish Industries Association, Royal, for the organisation of exhibitions and sales of Irish cottage-made work. Office, 20, Motcomb Street, Belgrave Square, London.

Irish Language Society for the Preservation of the, founded 1877. There is a Chair of Irish established in the Royal University of Ireland, Professorships of Irish in Cork College, Galway College, the Catholic Training College (for teachers), Drumcondra, etc. Irish-speaking Inspectors are sent to the schools; and Irish can be used as a medium for instruction in Irish-speaking districts. Of the Society's books 331,910 have been sold in Ireland. Treasurer, G. N. Count Plunkett, V.P., M.R.I.A., F.S.A.; Secretary, J. J. MacSweeney, R.I.A. Offices, 6, Molesworth Street, Dublin.

IRON AND STEEL TRADE OF THE WORLD.

The progress of this industry during the last thirty years has been so immense that it may now rightly be deemed to be one of the leading ones of the world, as will be manifest from the statistics given below.

I. PRODUCTION AND CONSUMPTION OF IRON ORE.

The 4th edition of Mulhall's "Dictionary of Statistics" (1893) gives the total tons produced in the world, and the iron ore raised in leading countries approximately as follows:—

Period.	Million Tons Ore.
	Great Britain.	United States.	Germany.	France.	Spain.	Various.
1801-20 .	17	3	4	6	—	5
1821-40 .	44	9	6	12	1	10

Statistics, 1890—1905.

The total output of iron ore in the world probably amounted in 1904 to about 94,000,000 tons, and in 1905 to about 114,000,000 tons, the principal producers being the United States, Germany, the United Kingdom, and Spain, in the order given, these countries accounting for about 76 per cent. of the total output of the world. The details, both of output and of consumption, in tons of 2240 lbs., for the years and countries named are given in the following table. Of course, where the consumption exceeds the output, the difference is accounted for by imports of iron ore.

II. PRODUCTION AND CONSUMPTION OF PIG IRON.

The greater portion of the pig iron produced is now used in the production of steel. According to Mulhall's Statistics, 4th edition (1898), the production of pig iron for the ninety years 1800-1899, in the principal nations producing it, was approximately as follows:—

Million Tons Pig Iron.

Statistics 1890-1905.

The total quantity of pig iron produced in the world in 1904 amounted to about 45,000,000 tons, but in 1905 to over 53,000,000 tons, the chief producers being the United States, Germany, and the United Kingdom, in the order stated. These countries between them are accountable for about three-quarters of the whole output.

The figures below give, in tons of 2240 lbs., for the countries and years named the total and per head output and consumption of pig iron.

Very little pig iron is made in other countries than those named above. In Canada, however, it is increasing, and rose from 68,800 tons in '98 to 319,600 tons in 1902; in 1905 it was 468,000 tons. Government bounties on the production of pig iron have been in operation in Canada since 1897, and are to continue in force, though subject to a gradual reduction, until 1907.

III. PRODUCTION AND CONSUMPTION OF STEEL.

The aggregate quantity of steel produced from 1850 to 1890, according to Mulhall's Statistics, 4th edition (1899), may be set down approximately as under:—

Period.	Great Britain.	United States.	Germany.	France.	Various.	Total.
	Tons.	Tons.	Tons.	Tons.	Tons.	Tons.

Statistics, 1890-1905.

The total steel production of the world in 1904 may be put at about 36,000,000 tons, and in 1905 at nearly 43,500,000 million tons. The following tables show total production, and production per head, of steel, in tons of 2,240 lbs., in the countries and years named.

* Provisional figures.

A comparison of the total quantity of steel produced, with the total quantity of pig iron consumed for all purposes, shows that for every 100 tons of pig iron consumed for all purposes the United Kingdom produced on an average of the three years 1902-4 about 63 tons of steel, while Germany produced 88 tons, the United States 80 tons, and France about 68 tons.

The quantity of steel produced by the open-hearth process in the United Kingdom is at present about double that produced by the Bessemer process. In Germany, on the other hand, the proportions are reversed, about two-thirds of the total production consisting of Bessemer steel. In the United States also the production of Bessemer steel considerably exceeds that of steel produced by the open-hearth process.

Nearly the whole of the German and American steel is basic steel, whereas most of the steel produced in the United Kingdom is acid steel.

IV. IMPORTS AND EXPORTS OF IRON AND STEEL AND MANUFACTURES THEREOF.

British Imports and Exports.

The chief imports into the United Kingdom are pig iron (principally from Sweden and Spain); unwrought steel from the United States, Germany and Belgium, and girders, beams, joists, and pillars largely from Belgium. The figures, which are given in tons throughout, are:—

ITALY.

Ruler.

Italy is governed by Victor Emmanuel III., the third constitutional king. The first was Victor Emmanuel II., King of Sardinia, of the house of Savoy-Carignano, who was declared

King of Italy on March 17th, 1861, by the first Italian Parliament, which assembled in Feb. '61, though it was not until '70 that the province of Rome was occupied by the Italian army and annexed to the kingdom. The second was King Humbert I., who on July 29th, 1902, was assassinated at Monza by the Anarchist Bresci. Victor Emmanuel III. was b. Nov. 18th, '69, and in Oct. '96 was married to Princess Hélène of Montenegro. As Crown Prince of Naples, he visited Queen Victoria with his Princess in '97, and took part in the Diamond Jubilee celebrations. He earned the respect and confidence of the people over whom he rules before he ascended the throne, and his kindness of nature and rectitude of purpose are universally acknowledged. The heir to the throne is Umberto Nicola Tommaso Giovanni Maria, Prince of Piedmont, born Sept. 15th, 1904. A daughter (Yolanda Margherita) was born in June 1901, and another daughter on Nov. 19th, 1902. While in England in 1903, on a visit to King Edward, the King received the degree of D.C.L. from Oxford University. The annual allowance for the King's Civil List is over £700,000.

Government.

Under the Constitution of 1848, as subsequently modified and expanded, the Executive is vested in the King, and exercised through his Ministers. The legislative authority is exercised by the King in conjunction with a Senate of about 367 members in 1905 (composed of the Princes of the royal house who are of age, and of an unlimited number of members selected by the Ministry and nominated by the King for life, who have rendered eminent services to the country, are upwards of forty years of age, and pay taxes to an annual amount of £120); and a Chamber of 508 Deputies, elected by conditional universal suffrage for a period of five years, though the King can dissolve the Chamber at any time. Electors must be over 21, and qualified by a certain standard of education, by payment of at least 19'80 lire in direct taxation, or if farmers of at least 500 lire of rent, or, if in business, of an annual rent varying from 150 to 400 lire, according to the communes in which they live; professors, soldiers who have served under arms for 2 years, and others are qualified to vote. All money bills must be initiated in the Chamber. Senators and deputies are unpaid, but travel free.

The Army.

The Italian army consists of the Active Army, the Mobile Militia, and the Territorial Militia. There are 12 army corps, each having 2 infantry divisions, except that in the district of Rome there are 3. The organisation of the permanent army comprises 96 regiments of line infantry (288 battalions), 12 regiments of bersaglieri (36 battalions) and 7 Alpine regiments (22 battalions). The strength varies considerably, the company having upon a peace strength a maximum of 100 and a minimum of 60, with a mean of 80, known as the forza bilancia. Upon this basis there were in 1905-6 13,673 officers, 207,162 men, while the figures of the legal cadre effective are respectively 13,860 and 265,901. There are 24 regiments of cavalry (144 squadrons), each squadron having a mean strength of 145 men and 124 horses. There are 24 regiments of field artillery, with 186 6-gun batteries, but in peace time the battery has only 4 guns. The army also comprises 1 regiment of horse artillery (6 batteries), 1 of mountain artillery (12 batteries), 1 brigade of mountain artillery, with 3 batteries in Venetia, 3 regiments of coast artillery and a brigade in Sardinia, 2 regiments of fortress artillery and 5 of engineers, comprising 60 companies of the various branches.

The total war strength of the forces is given as follows, but it must be remarked that the men of the territorial militia are almost untrained:—

With the colours, officers and men . . .	248,111
On unlimited leave " " . . .	486,290
Mobile Militia " " . . .	320,170
Territorial Militia " " . . .	2,275,631
Total on a war footing " " . . .	3,330,202

There are about 1250 guns with the Regular Forces and 378 with the Mobile Militia. The year 1905-6 is the sixth and last covered by the provision of 60,000,000 lire for the rearmament of the artillery.

The Navy.

The Navy is administered by a Minister of Marine, responsible to Parliament, with an Under-Secretary of State, relieving the Minister of many of his executive duties. Attached to the Under-Secretary of State's office are four bureaux, dealing respectively with the Personnel, Shipbuilding, Artillery, and the Mercantile Marine. There are also two consultative bodies to assist the Minister, one of which, presided over by the Under-Secretary of State, deals with general questions, and the other is practically a committee on designs. There are three Naval Districts, each administered by a flag-officer. Seamen for the Italian Fleet are recruited by conscription; all men following a seafaring life of 20 years of age must serve at sea for 18 months or more. Actually the whole draft is not required, and the part which is taken for service remains afloat for 4 years. There are also training-schools for boys.

Minister of Marine, Rear-Admiral Carlo Mirabello.

Chief Constructor, Colonel V. A. Cuniberti.

The 1905-6 Naval Estimates totalled £5,089,878 (127,246,962 lire), as against £5,087,643 (127,191,089 lire) for 1904-5. The sum to be expended on new construction is £812,400 (20,460,000 lire).

The personnel allowed for in the Budget of 1905-6 is 27,200. The executive officers are divided thus: 1 admiral, 11 vice-admirals, 15 rear-admirals, 59 captains, 70 commanders, 72 lieutenant-commanders, 410 lieutenants, 174 sub-lieutenants, and 81 midshipmen.

The strength of ships built, building and projected for the Italian Navy on Nov. 30th was:—

	Built.	Build- ing.	Pro- jected.
Battleships, 1st class . . .	14	4	—
do. 3rd class . . .	2	—	—
Armoured cruisers . . .	6	2	2
Protected cruisers:

Torpedo vessels . . .	11	—	—
Torpedo-boat destroyers . . .	13	—	4
Torpedo boats . . .	128	20	—
Submarines . . .	4	2	2

The Government dockyards of Italy are at Spezia, Venice, and Taranto.

The vessels under construction were the battleships Vittorio Emanuele, Regina Elena, Napoli and Roma, to be completed in 1907; the armoured cruisers San Giorgio (laid down 1904) and San Marco (laid down 1905), an armoured blockade mine ship of 25 knots, 4 destroyers and 27 torpedo boats. Three submarines were completed in 1906, the Delfino, Glauco and Squalo, and are of the same type as the Navalo; the boats under construction are the Otario and Tricheco. A commission has been established at Cardiff for buying Welsh coal, and a transport, the Bronze, of 6000 tons, has been constructed to carry coal to the Italian naval depôts. A new company was formed in Jan. 1906, called the Vickers-Terni Società Italiana d'Artiglieria e Armamenti, for the purpose of supplying guns and equipment to the Italian Navy. A new gun foundry is also to be established at Spezia.

Local Government, Education, etc.

For the purposes of local government the country is divided into 69 provinces administered by provincial councils, and subdivided into 8275 communes. Each commune is presided over by a syndic (who in the larger communes is elected, in the smaller appointed by the King), and has a municipal council of from 30 to 50 members according to the population. The Roman Catholic is the nominal State religion, and the religion of the vast majority of the people; but the Government has passed many acts so framed as to make the civil government supreme, and to secure complete freedom for all creeds. The officials of the Church are appointed by the Pope, but the royal assent is necessary in the case either of a bishop or an archbishop. (See separate article on RELIGIOUS BODIES.) Elementary education is compulsory between the ages of six and nine (or six and twelve in some communes where facilities exist) in all parts of the country, but the law is not rigorously enforced. There are about 56,000 public primary schools, with scholars numbering in all about 2,950,000. Secondary and higher instruction is also provided by the State, and there are 21 universities. The chief newspapers are the Tribuna of Rome, the Government organ, the Secolo of Milan (Liberal), the Corriere della Sera, which circulates throughout the north of Italy, and the Osservatore Romano, the Vatican organ.

Industries, Railways, etc.

Agriculture is the occupation of nearly one-third of the population, wheat, maize and other grains being largely produced. Poultry and dairy farming for export are making great progress. Wine, silk and oil are among the other products, and sulphur, zinc, lead and iron are mined. There has been a very marked and rapid industrial development in recent years, particularly in the last ten or twelve. The chief industries are the textile—silk, cotton, flax, hemp and jute—mechanical and metal industries. Electricity is very largely used for motive power and for lighting and traction. The chief exports are silk, wine, oil, cotton, sulphur, hemp and flax, skins, ores, and cattle. On July 1st, 1905, the Government took over the management of 6690 miles of railway, which were its own property, but which had been leased since July 1st, 1885, to the Mediterranean, Adriatic, and Sicilian Railway Companies. The indemnity paid to the companies was fixed at rather more than £20,000,000, the money being raised by (1) the State assuming railway companies' debts of £3,400,000; (2) loans of £8,600,000 from various banks, etc.; (3) the issue of special coupons redeemable within forty years to the amount of £8,000,000, the interest in each case being fixed at 3·65 per cent. The Southern Railways Company owned another 1440 miles of line, and in 1906 the Sonnino Government came to an agreement with the company to take them over also, paying about £1,600,000 annually to the company until Dec. 31st, 1966. The arrangement was carried through by the Giolitti administration in July 1906.

Political Parties.

Italian political parties formerly consisted of a Right and a Left, the former being the party of Cavour, the monarchical and Conservative party, and the latter consisting of the followers of Mazzini, the Liberal and democratic if not Republican party. These two parties, however, have since split up into many different combinations. Signor Crispi, after a long tenure of power, resigned in '91, but the disastrous state of the country's finances led to his recall in '94 by the unanimous wish of the nation, and he remained in office until the disasters which overtook the Italian forces in Erythra in the early part of '96 brought about his downfall. He was succeeded by the Marquis di Rudini, who found himself to a large extent dependent upon the support of the extreme Radicals, led by Signor Cavallotti, and after the general election in March '97 gave Signor Zanardelli and two other Radicals places in the Ministry (Dec. '97).

General Pelloux succeeded him with a Liberal Ministry, including adherents of Giolitti, Zanardelli and Crispi, June 29th, '98, but was compelled to resign in May '99, and formed a new administration, consisting, for the most part, of Conservatives, a curious change. Baron Sonnino, though not in the Ministry, lent it his support. The general election of June 1900 resulted in large gains by the Extreme Left, who secured 101 seats, allocated thus—Radicals 44, Republicans 27, and Socialists 30. The Government secured 300 supporters in the new Chamber, and the Constitutional Opposition about 110. Nevertheless General Pelloux resigned, and a Cabinet of a Moderate Liberal type, under Signor Saracco, succeeded to office. On this falling, in Feb. 1901, an administration was formed by Signor Zanardelli, but in Oct. 1903 he had to retire owing to bad health. M. Giolitti then formed a new Ministry, with Signor Luzzatti as Finance Minister and Signor Tittoni as Foreign Minister. The Extreme Left had formed an important section of M. Zanardelli's supporters, but their attitude gradually changed to strong opposition both to him and to M. Giolitti. In Sept. 1904 serious strike riots broke out, at the instigation of the Socialists, and the Premier seized the opportunity to dissolve. The General Election followed in November. The alarm felt at the reign of terror during the riots led to the defeat of the Extreme Left, who only secured 91 seats (including 30 Socialists), as compared with 106 seats before the dissolution. More than four-fifths of the members elected pledged themselves to support the Constitution against Socialist attacks; this four-fifths including the Constitutional Liberals and the Constitutional Opposition under Baron Sonnino. In March 1905 Signor Fortis succeeded M. Giolitti as Premier. See History below.

History, 1906.

A division was taken in the Chamber on the modus vivendi with Spain (Dec. 17th, 1905), and the Government were defeated by 277 votes to 124, the deputies apparently taking the view that the wine industry of the southern provinces would be ruined. Signor Fortis accordingly tendered the resignation of the Ministry to the King, who accepted it (22nd), but charged Signor Fortis to form a new Ministry. This he did (24th), the most notable change being the substitution of the Marquis di San Giuliano for Signor Tittoni as Foreign Minister. When Parliament reassembled (Jan. 30th) the new Ministry were given a rather hostile reception in the Chamber, and defeated in a debate on the Ministerial statement (Feb. 1st). They at once resigned (2nd), and Baron Sonnino formed a new Cabinet (8th), drawing his colleagues chiefly from the Centre, but including three representatives of the Left. Count Guicciardini was appointed to the Foreign Office. When the Session opened (March 8th) the Premier explained the Government's railway policy (see above), and said a measure would be introduced to effect the economic improvement of the South and to raise the moral condition of the Southern peasant. The land tax in the Southern provinces, including Sicily and Sardinia, would be reduced by 30 per cent. In regard to the army the two years' service system would be largely extended. As to foreign politics, while remaining cordially faithful to the Triple Alliance, the Government would maintain the traditional intimacy with Great Britain and sincere friendship with France. On the conclusion of the Algeiras Conference (see Morocco) the German press took rather a reproachful tone towards Italy, accusing her of having supported France; but Count Guicciardini stated on April 24th that the work of the Italian delegate, Marquis Visconti Venosta, had been one of conciliation and mediation.

The eruption of Vesuvius in April completely destroyed the commune of Bosco-Trecase (April 8th), the extent of the lava overflow exceeding anything of the kind during the last 200 years. Naples was crowded with terrified refugees and covered with dust and ashes from the volcano. Other towns, like Torre Annunziata and Torre del Greco, were abandoned by most of the inhabitants, and a number of lives were lost at San Giuseppe. The King and Queen visited the district, and their presence helped materially to allay the panic. King Edward and Queen Alexandra also visited Naples (27th), and went out to Bosco-Trecase and Pompeii, walking on foot to the edge of the lava flow. Their Majesties afterwards visited the Observatory by the funicular railway, and left on April 30th. The International Exhibition at Milan, was opened by the King who was accompanied by the Queen (29th).

The Sonnino Ministry were defeated on a question of procedure in regard to the railway bills (May 17th) and in consequence resigned, the Chamber being adjourned. Signor Giolitti then formed a new administration, and Signor Tittoni resumed his post as Foreign Minister (30th). Signor Luzzatti carried (June 20th) a scheme for the conversion of the 5 per cent. Rentes (amounting to £324,000,000) into a new stock bearing 4 per cent. interest until Dec. 31st, 1906,  $3\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. thence for five years, and afterwards  $3\frac{1}{2}$  per cent., with a guarantee that no further conversion should take place before 1920. The redemption of the southern railways was voted by 208 to 21 (July 8th), and the Chamber adjourned for the summer vacation.

Colonies.

Erythrea. The Italian possessions on the Red Sea were combined under this name by various decrees from '90 to 1901. The colony extends from Cape Kasar about 670 miles along the coast of the Red Sea to a point on the Strait of Bab-el-Mandeb. It has the control of its own administration and finance, under a civil Governor appointed by the King. Italy, Abyssinia, and Great Britain agreed to a modification of the frontiers between the colony, Abyssinia, and the Soudan (May 15th, 1902), and the annexation of Raheita to the colony was announced (19th). Area about 88,500 sq. m., population, which is nomadic, about 450,000. Asmara is the seat of government. Massowah has about 8000 inhabitants. Gold mines exist near Asmara, and pearl fishing is carried on at Massowah by the Italian Pearl Fishery Company. A railway is being built from Massowah to Asmara.

Italian Somaliland, in North-East Africa, is separated by the river Juba from the East Africa Protectorate (British), and has a coast-line extending from the Juba to Cape Guardafui, and then along the coast of the Gulf of Aden to the Somali Coast Protectorate, also British. Area 100,000 sq. m., population about 400,000. It is divided into three parts for administrative purposes: (1) The Benadir Coast Colony, with a coast-line from the Juba to Merogh. In Jan. 1905 Italy assumed sovereign rights over this territory, paying the Sultan of Zanzibar £144,000 therefor, and undertaking the administration instead of the Benadir Co. Great Britain also leased to Italy five acres of land at Kismayu, with a frontage on the shore, to facilitate trade with Benadir. (2) The Sultanate of Obbia under Sultan Yusuf Ali, on the eastern coast. (3) The Sultanate of the Mijertain, covering the Horn of Africa, the capital of which is Bandar Alula.

Ito, Marquis Hirobumi, the great Japanese statesman, is issued from the Shoshiiu clan, and was born in '38. In '63 he escaped by stealth to Shanghai in order to visit foreign lands and study Western customs, spending a year in London. Since then he has spent some thirty-four years of his life in office, "always," in his own words, "trying to help and sometimes even to force on measures necessary for the growth of Japan." He was appointed Governor of Hiogo in '68 and Vice-Minister of Finance in '69, afterwards becoming Premier four times. In this capacity he was instrumental in giving a Constitution to Japan. In 1900 he founded the Constitutional Political Association, and soon afterwards became Premier again. In July 1903 he relinquished his connection with party politics to become President of the Privy Council, an advisory body which is consulted by the Emperor on all important measures. During and since the Russian war he was sent to Seoul, to settle the relations between Japan and Korea, a task which he satisfactorily accomplished. He visited Europe in '71, '82 and 1901, and was made a G.C.B. in 1902.

Izvolsky, M. d', Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs, is a warm supporter of the Franco-Russian Alliance, and favourable to an Anglo-Russian understanding. He is a relative of Count Muravieff, a former Foreign Secretary, entered the Foreign Office at an early age, and was soon singled out for important missions, notably to the Vatican. It was on his initiative that Russia accredited a diplomatic representative to the Holy See. On his return from Rome he was sent to Tokio, and used his best endeavours to prevent a conflict. From Tokio M. d' Izvolsky was transferred to Copenhagen, a post entrusted only to men enjoying the Tsar's special confidence. In 1906 M. d' Izvolsky was recalled to St. Petersburg to succeed Count Lamsdorff as Minister of Foreign Affairs.

J

Jameson, Leander Starr, C.B., Premier of Cape Colony, Feb. 1904, was b. in Edinburgh in 1853, adopted the medical profession, became M.R.C.S. Eng. '75 and M.D. London '77. In '91 he was appointed Administrator of Rhodesia, and held that post till the famous Raid in Dec. '95, after the failure of which he was tried in London and sentenced to 10 months' imprisonment. He was elected to the Legislative Assembly of Cape Colony in 1900 to represent Kimberley, and appointed a Director of De Beers in the same year, and of the British South Africa Co. in 1902.

JAPAN, EMPIRE OF.

Ruler.

Mutsu Hito, b. Nov. 3rd, 1852. Ascended the throne in '68, and married Princess Haruko in '69. His children are Prince Yoshihito (b. Aug. 31st, '79, proclaimed Crown Prince in '89, and married in 1900 to Princess Sadako, b. June 25th, 1884), and four Princesses. A son and heir, Prince Hirohito, was b. to the Crown Prince on April 29th, 1901, and he has two other sons, Prince Yasuhito (b. June 25th, 1902), and Prince Nobuhito (b. Jan. 3rd, 1905). The Emperor's reign has been marked by great reforms; and the feudal system, which had impeded the general progress of the country, was abolished in '71. Under the rule of the present Emperor, Japan has entered upon an unprecedented era of prosperity. Civilisation has made rapid progress, and the introduction of Western arts and ideas has secured for Japan a foremost place amongst the Asiatic nations. He has given the Japanese a Parliamentary constitution based on European principles. His direction of the operations in the war with China was marked in Dec. '98 by the Diet by a vote of £200,000 from the war indemnity paid by China. The Emperor's Civil List is fixed at £300,000.

Government.

The history of Japan is almost as ancient as that of China, the present Emperor, Mutsu Hito, being the representative of a dynasty which claims to have possessed the throne since B.C. 660. The country was, prior to '89, an absolute monarchy, but in that year a new Constitution was promulgated. In the Emperor are vested the executive power with the advice of his Ministers, whom he appoints, and who are responsible to him; and the legislative power with the consent of the Diet. The Privy Council is an advisory body which is consulted by the Emperor on all important State matters. The Diet is composed of a House of Peers and a House of Representatives. The House of Peers numbers about 370, and consists of (a) Peers elected for life, including: (1) male members of the Imperial family above 20 years of age; (2) princes and marquises above 25 years of age; (3) persons nominated by the Emperor for State services or for their learning; and (b) Peers elected for 7 years, including: (1) counts, viscounts, and barons above 25, to the number of one-fifth of each order, elected by the respective orders; (2) persons elected indirectly by the residents in the various districts who pay the highest taxes. In the House of Representatives there are 369 members, elected for 4 years by male citizens over 25 paying land tax or other direct taxes of not less than 10 yen per annum who have resided in their districts for one year at least. Elected and nominated members of both Houses are paid 2000 yen (about £200) for each session, with travelling expenses.

The Army.

The Emperor is supreme head of the army, and military affairs are directed through the War Minister and the Chief of the General Staff by the Superior War Council. In order to insure unity of action between the various branches and the Navy, there is a Council consisting of the War Minister, the Naval Minister, the chiefs of the General Staff and the Naval Staff, and the Director-General of Military Training.

The military forces are the Active Army, with the first and second reserves, the National Army and its reserve, some special forces, and the Militia of certain of the islands. The Active Army is available for foreign service, the National Army for home defence, and the Militia for auxiliary operations in more distant parts of the country; but in the war Japan put forth a vast reserve of military strength, and the mobilisation of the reserves enabled her to despatch a force which was estimated at 800,000 men to Manchuria.

Owing to the demands of the war, it became imperatively necessary to expand considerably the numbers of the Active Army, and therefore in April 1905 an Imperial Ordinance declared that the first line of the National Army (Kokumin) and certain other troops should be made eligible to fill vacancies in the ranks of forces in the field (Jobi). A Japanese is liable for military service between the ages of 17 and 40, but is not embodied until he is 20. Previous to the war he served 3 years with the colours (Geneki), 4½ years with the first reserve (Yobi), being 7½ years in all, except that special classes passed 7½ years in the Hoju or recruiting reserve. The 7½ years was followed by 5 years with the second reserve (Kobi), making 12½ years in all. The period of liability to serve was completed in the National Army (Kokumin), which under normal circumstances was only nominal. In 1904 the service with the second reserve (Kobi) was doubled, making it 10 years instead of 5, the age for joining the National Army (Kokumin) thus being 37½ years instead of 32½, the system being made retrospective. A large addition was therefore made to the active ranks in case of war, in which the first and second reserves of the Active Army are available. It was supposed that the actual number thus added to the available forces was 280,000, and out of the addition 26 regiments were organised in 1904. These were the men who formed General Kawamura's army, which operated on the extreme right. The changes of 1905 affect the men of the Active Army and the Reserves, and also those of the second National Army, who formerly served as supernumeraries or in other special categories. All these have now been declared eligible for active service, and the addition made is not less than 300,000, though some deductions might have to be made. The result of these various changes has been to create an available margin of 830,000 men, of whom 430,000 are fully trained. The scheme of organisation of the Active Army brought the establishment in 1905 to 560,000; and, if the expansion provided for by the special ordinances of 1904 and 1905 are added, it will be seen that Japan can place at least 1,000,000 men in the field, with every facility for maintaining them there.

The Navy.

The Naval Administration of Japan is under the control of a Minister of Marine, Admiral Saito, and a Vice-Minister. There are also ten heads of Departments: the Bureau of General Affairs, the Bureau of Military Affairs, the Bureau of Personnel, a Medical Bureau, an Accountant Bureau (which also includes supplies), a Bureau of Justice, a Bureau of Naval Education, a Central Department for the Materiel of the Navy, the Hydrographical Office, the Department of Works, the Legal Department (concerned with courts-martial), the Board of Admirals and the Board of Technical Affairs. The two last-named are Committees of Advice. In addition there is the Naval General Staff, of which the President is Admiral Viscount Ito, the Vice-President Sir G. Ijuin; and this staff is divided into three sections, including the Intelligence Department.

The number of officers and men available for active service is about 35,500. There is also a small reserve of some 4,000. The executive officers are distributed as follows: 7 admirals, 23 vice-admirals, 26 rear-admirals, 99 captains, 146 commanders, 192 lieutenant-commanders, 342 lieutenants, 320 sub-lieutenants, and 268 midshipmen.

The strength of the Japanese Navy in ships built and building on Nov. 30th, 1905, was:—

The Government Dockyards in Japan are situated as follows:—Yokosuka: one dock takes any ship; two smaller. Kuré: one dock takes cruisers.

The Japanese Minister of Marine in October asked for a grant of 270,000,000 yen (£27,000,000) to be distributed for a ship-building programme over a period extending from 1906 to 1913. A sum of £2,300,000 is to be devoted to new construction and repairs during 1906-7.

The following ships were launched in 1906: Armoured cruisers Tsukuba (Jan. 1906) and Ikoma (April 1906). The battleships Katori and Kashima finished their trials and left England for Japan in June 1906. The battleship Satsuma, of 19,000 tons, was launched (Nov. 15th), and the Aki is to be completed early in 1907. The battleship Mikasa, which sank at Sasebo in Sept. 1905, was successfully floated in Aug. 1906. Capt. S. Tochanai, I.J.N., has been appointed Naval Attaché to the Embassy in London. It was reported in October that, as the result of a council of admirals, a special committee on naval construction had been appointed to investigate the latest designs for warships.

Local Government, Education, etc.

For local administration the country (except Yesso, which has a governor and a special administration, and Formosa, for which see below) is divided into 47 prefectures, each with a governor and an elected assembly. The prefectures are subdivided into 60 municipalities and 638 counties, and the counties again into 1125 towns and 12,304 villages, each with its chief magistrate, council and assembly. In religious matters absolute freedom is allowed, subject to the preservation of peace and order. The chief forms of religion, however, are Shintoism and Buddhism. The strength of ancestor worship amongst all classes was made very evident during the Russo-Japanese war. In every Japanese home there are shrines or places devoted to ancestor worship, not only of the family ancestors, but of the clan deities and of the Imperial ancestors. The Temple at Ise is dedicated to the worship of the first Imperial ancestor. Elementary education is compulsory for children of from 6 to 14 years of age. There are over 27,000 elementary schools, and about 5,200,000 pupils, while high schools and technical schools are rapidly increasing in number. For the administration of justice there are 310 sub-district courts of first instance, the district courts, which number 49, 7 courts of appeal, and the Supreme Court or Court of Cassation at Tokio.

The chief Tokio journals are the Fiji Shinpo, which has been called the Times of Tokio, Nichi Nichi Shinbun, Asahi Shinbun, the Keizai Zasshi, and the Kokumin.

Industries, Commerce, etc.

The land is largely held by peasant proprietors, and the chief products are rice and cereals, tea, sugar, and silk, while textile and other manufactures are improving and increasing. There are about 1,300,000,000 tons of workable coal in the empire, one-half of which is found in Yesso, which island also contains large deposits of sulphur. Copper, iron, and silver are also mined.

The length of railways was (1905) 4889 miles, of which 1461 miles were owned by the State. In 1906, in order to ensure the fullest facilities by internal transport and communication for the development of the national resources, the Government decided to purchase all the lines required for general traffic, and introduced a Railway Nationalisation Bill dealing with 32 private companies' lines, and the Seoul-Fusan Bill, dealing with the Seoul-Fusan Railway, in March. Parliament approved the Bill, the only change made being that the House of Peers reduced the number of companies bought out to 17, with an aggregate length of 2812 miles, and extended the period of purchase. In July it was notified that the Government would purchase six of the lines for £25,000,000 before the end of the year. The total cost of purchase was put at £42,100,000, and it was estimated that the loan issued for this purpose would be redeemed within 32 years by means of the profit on the working of the railways, leaving therefore an annual profit of £5,300,000.

A gold standard was adopted in October '97. By treaties concluded with Great Britain and other European Powers in '94, the right of the Japanese to frame their own Customs policy was acknowledged, though provisional arrangements were made for a period of twelve years. Foreign jurisdiction in the treaty ports was abolished in '99, and in return the country was thrown open to European traders, instead of only the treaty ports. Great Britain enjoys "most favoured nation" treatment. Foreigners cannot own real estate, except as members of associations or partnerships constituted conformably to Japanese law.

Statistics, etc.

Area (excluding Formosa, the Pescadores, and Sakhalin) is about 147,655 sq. m.; pop., (1906) 48,608,943. The population of the capital, Tokio, is 1,818,655, of Osaka, 995,945, and of Kyoto, 380,568. Yokohama (pop. 326,025) and Kobe (pop. 285,002) are the two chief ports, and the chief centres of foreign trade.

The island of Formosa lies off the Chinese coast. A Governor-General (M. Sakuma) administers the island, which is divided into twenty districts, each under a chief magistrate. Area 13,458 sq. m., pop. (1906) 3,133,005, mostly Chinese. The chief towns are Tamsui at the north and Tainan and Kelung at the south end. The chief products are coal, tea, sugar, rice, and camphor. The camphor industry is carried on by a British firm under contract with the Government. There are 231 miles of railways, and good roads have been also made in all directions.

The Pescadores have an area of 85 sq. miles and a pop. of 55,222.

The island of Sakhalin, south of the 50th degree N. lat., was ceded to Japan at the conclusion of the war with Russia. The island is separated from Japan by the narrow strait of La Perouse. Its fisheries are valuable.

The lease of Port Arthur, Ta-lien-wan, and the Kwantung Peninsula, which expires in 1923, was also transferred by Russia to Japan by the treaty of Portsmouth, Sept. 5th, 1905. See details, p. 236. Dalny has been made a free port.

Political Parties.

When the new constitution came into force and the Diet assembled in 1890, the Government was constituted mainly of statesmen drawn from two great clans, the Satsuma and Choshin clans. But the representatives elected to the Diet consisted for the most part of men drawn from two other and rival clans—the Hizen clan under Count Okuma, and the Tosa clan under Count Itagaki. Count Okuma formed and led the Progressive party, and Count Itagaki the Liberal party, both of which advocated the principle of party government, though they would not combine to secure it. This the Government would not accept, and so they were continually being defeated in the House, which they as often dissolved. Eventually the Government tried a coalition in '95 with the Liberals, the Marquis Ito being Premier; and then for a time, especially during the war with China, the Opposition was quiescent. But after the war, difficulties again manifested themselves. In '98 the Liberals and Progressives at last joined their forces, and the Marquis Ito, who was then in power, at once resigned, and a new Ministry was formed, with Count Okuma as Premier. The experiment, however, failed, and the Marquis Yamagata formed a Cabinet on the old lines of clan statesmen, in Nov. '98, which endured till 1900. In August of that year the Marquis Ito issued a manifesto setting forth the aims of a new party formed by him and termed the Seiyukai, or Constitutional Political Association. He received the support of a majority of the members of the House of Representatives, and was soon afterwards appointed Prime Minister in place of the Marquis Yamagata, who resigned office (Sept. 29th). In June 1901 the Marquis Ito gave way to a Ministry led by Viscount Katsura, and composed mainly of members of the House of Peers unconnected with the two great political parties. The general election in March 1903 resulted in the return of the Seiyukai 183 strong. In July 1903 the Marquis Ito resigned his leadership of the Seiyukai to the Marquis Saionji and accepted the office of President of the Privy Council, Count Matsugata and Marquis Yamagata also being appointed Privy Councillors. When the Diet was opened on Dec. 10th, 1903, the Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne, read by the President of the Diet and approved by the House, expressed the view that the Ministry were pursuing a policy of opportunism at home and forfeiting opportunities abroad. The Government thereupon dissolved Parliament, and a general election was fixed for March 1st, 1904. Meanwhile the war with Russia broke out. The general election resulted in the return of 134 members of the Seiyukai, 93 Progressives, 132 Independents, and 20 Imperialists. When the Treaty with Russia was made public, in 1905, the Seiyukai, though disappointed, supported it, but the Progressives attacked the Government and called on them to resign at once.

Anglo-Japanese Treaty, 1905.

An Agreement between the United Kingdom and Japan was signed at London by Lord Lansdowne and Viscount Hayashi (August 12th, 1905). Its object was: a) The consolidation and maintenance of the general peace in the regions of Eastern Asia and of India; b) The preservation of the common interests of all Powers in China by insuring the independence and integrity of the Chinese Empire and the principle of equal opportunities for the commerce and industry of all nations in China; c) The maintenance of the territorial rights of the High Contracting Parties in the regions of Eastern Asia and of India, and the defence of their special interests in the said regions. If the rights and interests referred to above are in jeopardy, the two Governments will communicate with one another fully and frankly as to the measures which should be taken to safeguard those menaced rights or interests, and will act in common in case of unprovoked attack or aggressive action, wherever arising, on the part of any other Power or Powers. Japan's paramount political, military, and economic interests in Korea, and Great Britain's special interest in all that concerns the security of the Indian frontier, are mutually recognised. The Agreement remains in force for ten years from August 12th, 1905, and unless denounced twelve months before the expiration of the said ten years, it will remain binding until the expiration of one year from the day on which either of the High Contracting Parties shall have denounced it. But if, when the date fixed for its expiration arrives, either ally is actually engaged in war, the alliance shall, ipso facto, continue until peace is concluded. For full text of Agreement, see 1906 ed.

Russo-Japanese Treaty, 1905.

The Russian Government, acknowledged Japan's paramount political, military, and economic interests in Korea, and engaged neither to obstruct nor interfere with the measures of guidance, protection, and control which Japan may find it necessary to take in Korea. Japan and Russia mutually engaged: (1) to evacuate simultaneously Manchuria, except the territory affected by the lease of the Liau-tung Peninsula; and (2) to restore to the exclusive administration of China all portions of Manchuria in the occupation or under the control of the Japanese or Russian troops, with the exception of the territory above mentioned. Russia transferred to Japan, with the consent of China, the lease of Fort Arthur, Ta-lien, and adjacent territory and territorial waters, and all rights, privileges, and concessions connected with or forming part of such lease, and all public works and properties in the territory, Japan undertaking that the proprietary rights of Russian subjects should be respected. Russia agreed to transfer to Japan, with the consent of the Chinese Government, the railway between Chang-chun (Kwang-cheng-tsze) and Port Arthur and all its branches, as well as all coal mines in the said region, belonging to or worked for the benefit of the railway. Russia ceded to Japan the southern portion of the Island of Sakhalin, and all islands adjacent thereto and public works and properties thereon. The 50th degree of N. latitude was adopted as the northern boundary of the ceded territory. Russia engages to grant to Japanese subjects rights of fishery along the coasts of the Russian possessions in the Japan, Okhotsk, and Behring Seas. For full text of treaty see 1906 edition.

On Dec. 22nd, 1905, a Convention with China was signed confirming the transfer and assignments made in the Russo-Japanese treaty, arranging for the withdrawal of the troops, and regulating commercial and railway interests in Manchuria.

History, 1906.

The Emperor opened the Diet (Dec. 28th, 1905), referring in his speech to the "honourable peace" concluded with Russia, and to the renewal of the alliance with England. The Lower House, in its reply, acknowledged the great increase in the country's responsibilities and its resolve to assist to the utmost in fulfilling them. It also recounted the great successes in peace and war which had rendered His Majesty's reign illustrious. A new Cabinet, under Marquis Saionji, was appointed by the Emperor (Jan. 7th), and it was noted that five of the new Ministers had previously filled the position of Vice-Minister, and three were leading members of the Seiyu-Kai. An incident that attracted some notice was the reply of General Terauchi, War Minister, to an interpellation calling attention to the organisation of the British Army. The questioner, M. Oishi, declared that it was not developing equally with the British Navy, and asked whether that fact did not indicate the necessity of improvement. General Terauchi replied that under the Anglo-Japanese Treaty the two Powers had to consult one another, but they had not yet entered on any discussion on the subject.

The British cruiser Diadem, with Prince Arthur of Connaught on board, arrived at Yokohama (Feb. 19th), and the Emperor in person met the Prince at Tokio station. The next day the Prince invested the Emperor with the Order of the Garter, and received from him the Grand Order of the Chrysanthemum. The Order of Merit was given to Admiral Togo and Marshals Yamagata and Oyama (21st). A number of Japanese bluejackets arrived in London (March 24th) to take charge of the warship Katori, built at Barrow-in-Furness. They were warmly welcomed, and entertained by the Lord Mayor and others. A Bill for nationalising the railways (details of which are given on p. 234) was finally carried (27th). The Foreign Minister, Mr. Kato, resigned because of objections to the Bill, and was succeeded by Viscount Hayashi, the Ambassador in London, who was himself succeeded as Ambassador by Baron Komura.

Jaurès, Jean, is a leading member of the French Chamber of Deputies, and a member of the Socialist party. A relative of the admiral of the same name, he was b. on Sept. 3rd, 1859, at Castres, in the South French department of Tarn. After a distinguished college career, he became Professor of Philosophy, first at Albi, and then at Toulouse. He took the degree of Doctor in '92, and one of his theses for the doctorate dealt with the German scientific socialists Lassalle and Marx. He was first elected deputy in '85. He is editor of La Petite République, and has attempted to reunite the different groups of French Socialists. See SOCIALISM. He was much to the fore in the defence of Capt. Dreyfus. Amongst his publications are: "Les Preuves," '98; "Action Socialiste," 1900; "Etudes Socialistes," 1902. He is the general director of a great work, by various authors, "L'Histoire Socialiste," to be completed in 15 vols.

JEWS.

The numbers of Jews in the various countries of Europe, according to the "Jewish Year-Book," are as follows: Russia, 5,082,342; Austria-Hungary, 2,076,277; Germany, 586,948; Roumania, about 200,000; Turkey, 282,277; Holland, 103,988; France, 95,000; Great Britain and Ireland, 228,707; Italy, 35,617; Switzerland, 12,264; Serbia, 5729; Greece, 8350; Denmark, 3476; Sweden and Norway, 5000. Total in Europe, about 8,786,120. Outside Europe no satisfactory enumeration is possible, but it is probable that Asia contains 377,410; Africa, 402,622; the Americas, 1,584,022; and Australia, 17,493. There are probably about 11,103,500

Jews in existence at the present date, and of late years the number living in Palestine has noticeably increased. The Jews are returning to the land of their ancestors as tillers of the soil. It is estimated that there are now 100,000 Jews in Palestine. The number of Jews in London is estimated at 140,000, and in other parts of Great Britain and Ireland at 88,000.

In England, full emancipation was granted to the Jews in '58. They possess a special Jewish Board of Guardians (Middlesex Street, Bishops-gate), which provides for indigent Jews, and expended £33,026 in relief during 1905 to 6746 cases; a large orphan asylum at West Norwood, in addition to many other charities, and there are Jewish wards in several hospitals. There are seven large Jewish elementary schools in London, the principal being the Jews' Free School, Bell Lane, Spitalfields, the largest and one of the most successful elementary schools in the world. Similar schools and charities are connected with the principal provincial congregations. The most important are those of Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, Leeds, Glasgow, Newcastle, Hull, and Sheffield. The spiritual wants of Jews are provided for in the East-End by a number of hebrass or minor congregations, which have been united (Federation of Synagogues); while sixteen of the larger synagogues are organised by the United Synagogue (36, Hallam Street, Portland Place, W.). Ministers for these are trained at the Jews' College (Queen Square House, Guilford Street, W.C.), which has a very extensive library of works dealing with Jewish subjects. Another library specially noteworthy for Hebrew MSS. is situated at the Beth Hamidrash (Mulberry Street, Commercial Road, E.), where the sittings of the Beth Din, or ecclesiastical tribunal, are held, at which points of Jewish law are decided.

Ecclesiastical and other Bodies.

Ecclesiastical matters are under the control of the Chief Rabbi, Dr. Hermann Adler (q.v.). The mandates of the Chief Rabbi are only binding on the so-called Orthodox Jews, while there are "Reform" congregations at Upper Berkeley Street, London, Manchester and Bradford. There has been a marked rapprochement of recent years between these two bodies. There are, besides, some 3000 Spanish and Portuguese Jews (Sephardim) in London, who are under the spiritual charge of the Rev. Dr. Gaster and whose ritual slightly differs from that of the more numerous German and Polish Jews (Ashkenazim). A new movement, styled the Jewish Religious Union, was started in 1901, which provides services, largely in English, for those to whom the ordinary synagogue service does not appeal. The services were at first held in the West End only, but an East End Branch was established in Oct. 1903. As a religious term "Jew" has nowadays the very vaguest connotation, ranging from the superstition of the Chassidim of Russia and Galicia to the advanced agnosticism of the Society of Ethical Culture in New York.

Jews have some special enactments connected with the form and registration of their marriages, modifications of the Factory Acts to suit their Sabbath, etc. These, and other matters likely to affect them, are looked after by the Jewish Board of Deputies (19, Finsbury Circus; Solicitor and Secretary, Charles H. L. Emanuel, M.A.). In 1905 the Government passed a Bill for regulating the admission of aliens into this country, the operation of which largely affects Jews, especially those in Russia, whose existence in their native country is rendered almost unbearable by the authorities. The Board of Deputies, while successful in some instances, vainly endeavoured to secure the adoption of amendments tending to mitigate some of the severest stipulations of the Bill. The chief Jewish weekly is The Jewish Chronicle (2, Finsbury Square, E.C.: Publisher, Solomon Davis).

Until comparatively recently Jews were restricted in their rights throughout the world, and those of eastern Europe and parts of Africa and the East still labour under many disabilities, which it is the object of the "Alliance Israélite" of Paris, and of similar societies in Germany, Austria, and England (Anglo-Jewish Association, 85, London Wall, E.C.: Secretary, M. Duparc), to remove.

The Zionist Movement.

The Zionist Movement, founded by the late Dr. Theodore Hertzl, aims at (1) the organisation of the Jews, (2) the opening of the door to Palestine, (3) the successful establishment of a home for the Jews there, (4) the working up of the State into a model State after the home has been established, and (5) the realisation of the Jewish mission by imparting to the world the social solutions and ideals of righteousness developed by the spiritual genius of the race. Zionist Congresses have been held since '97, with ever-increasing attendances. The British Government in 1903 made an offer of land in British East Africa, on the Uganda Railway between Nairobi and Mau, for the founding of a specially Jewish colony, with self-government, under British control. The proposal was welcomed by most of the leaders, but the majority of the Russian representatives at the Congress voted against it, as deviating from the aim of obtaining Palestine. A commission of three members left in December 1904 for the region, to investigate and report. Their report stated that the territory offered was too small for any considerable settlement of Jews, and that it was chiefly suitable for pastoral purposes. Both on these grounds and because, as stated above, the proposal was regarded as a deviation from the aim of obtaining Palestine, the offer was rejected by an overwhelming majority at the Congress held at Basle in July 1905. In England there are 15,000 Zionists enrolled in 75 associations, while the total number of members enrolled in the movement is 320,000. Sir Francis Montefiore, Mr. L. J. Greenberg, and others are at the head of the movement in this country.

Mr. I. Zangwill, who warmly advocated the acceptance of the offer of land in East Africa, and others who hold the same views, have in consequence of the decision of the Congress formed the Jewish Territorial Organisation, to which many prominent Jews have rallied who are opposed to the purely Zionist Movement.

The Jewish Colonisation Association (Paris, 2, Rue Pasquier) is the trust created by the late Baron Hirsch for the purpose of helping persecuted Jews in all parts of the world, and its chief work has been the formation of colonies in Argentina. The Zionists contend that the money should be used to help their movement.

Joachim, Joseph, the distinguished violinist, was b. near Presburg, in Hungary, in 1831. Already famous as a youthful prodigy, he went to Leipzig in '43, to the Conservatoire previously founded by Mendelssohn, who saw his genius and encouraged him. The first of his annual visits to London was in '44, and for many years he was principal violinist of the Monday and Saturday Popular Concerts. In '69 he became the head of the newly developed Academy of Music at Berlin. He has written several works for his instrument and the orchestra, the chief being the Hungarian Concerto. Mus. Doc. Cambridge, '77, Hon. D.C.L. Oxford. In celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of his first appearance in public, Herr Joachim was, on March 17th, '89, presented with a magnificent violin. On the sixtieth anniversary of his first appearance in England, his portrait, by Sargent, was presented to him by Mr. Balfour, at a reception held at Queen's Hall (May 16th, 1904).

Johnston, Sir Harry H., G.C.M.G., K.C.B., D.Sc., was b. in London June 12th, 1858, and ed. at Stockwell Grammar School and King's College, London. After studying painting for some time at the Royal Academy he travelled a good deal, especially in Africa, and was made British Vice-Consul in the Cameroons in '85. Thence he was transferred to the Niger coast and to Portuguese East Africa. He took the leading part in the expedition to Lakes Nyasa and Tanganyika which resulted in the founding of the British Central Africa Protectorate, of which he was appointed Commissioner and Consul-General in '91. He was Consul-General of Tunis '97-9, and Special Commissioner of the Uganda Protectorate '99-1901, upon which he published a comprehensive work in 1902. He retired on a pension in 1902, and stood unsuccessfully for Rochester in 1903 and for West Marylebone in 1906. Since 1904 he has interested himself in the commercial development of Liberia.

Joint Stock Companies. See 1902 ed. for an article upon the provisions made by the Companies Acts '62-1900 as to the formation of such companies, with a summary of the 1900 Act in particular. A return is compiled annually by the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies, containing a list, with particulars of capital, etc., of all joint stock companies registered in the United Kingdom during each year, as well as a list of companies dissolved or struck off the register during the same year. On April 30th, 1906, there were on the register in the United Kingdom 40,995 joint stock companies, with a paid-up capital of £2,003,392,001. During 1905 there were 4358 companies registered, with a nominal capital of £119,179,333. The President of the Board of Trade in Feb. 1905 appointed a Committee to inquire what amendments are necessary in the Acts relating to Joint Stock Companies. The attention of the Committee was specially directed to the following questions: (1) The growing practice of issuing companies without a prospectus; (2) The registration outside England of companies carrying on business in England and appealing to English investors; (3) The extension of the provisions of the Act of 1900 with regard to the registration of mortgages and charges to include all mortgages and charges and not only those created since the 1st January, 1901; (4) The amendment of Table A of the Act of 1862. The Committee reported in July 1906. By a majority they recommended that all companies not filing a prospectus before commencing business should be compelled to file a preliminary statement containing similar information to that required by section 10 of the Companies Act, 1900, and that the statement should set forth in substance, mutatis mutandis, all the various particulars required to be set forth under paragraphs (c) to (m) inclusive of section 10 of the Companies Act, 1900, as proposed to be amended in the report. The Committee did not think it would be possible or desirable to require foreign companies carrying on business in Great Britain to register or comply with any of the requirements of the Companies Act, 1900, as to prospectuses, or to make deposits here with a view to securing British creditors. But every foreign company, having any place of business in this country, should be required to file in England a verified copy, with a verified English translation, of its charter, statutes or memorandum, and articles of association, with the names of all directors, and with the name of some person, or persons, resident in the United Kingdom, authorised on the behalf of such company to accept service of process of any notices required to be served on such company, and so that the person so registered shall be the only person entitled to commence or authorise proceedings on behalf of such company in any Court in the United Kingdom; and that for default of complying with such requirement a penalty should be imposed. The Committee further recommended that every such foreign company should file with the registrar a verified copy of its annual balance-sheet, with a substantial penalty for default, and when using the word "Limited," and carrying on business in the United Kingdom, should be compelled under penalty to put up its name, with the place of origin, on its business premises. They recommended that the law be amended: (1) By giving power to the Court to relieve any director or promoter from liability for breach of any duty imposed on him by the Companies Acts 1862 to 1900, provided that the breach has been occasioned by honest oversight, inadvertence, or error of judgment on his part; (2) By giving the Court power in an action for negligence or breach of trust against a director to relieve him from his liability on such terms as the Court may consider proper, where the Court is satisfied that he has acted honestly and reasonably. The Committee further recommended that it should be enacted, not only that an annual meeting should be held in each year, but that there should not be an interval of more than fifteen months between any two annual meetings, and also that there should be a penalty imposed for not holding the annual meeting according to law; that any life assurance company duly making returns for the Board of Trade, under the Life Insurance Act, 1870, should be exempted from compliance with the provisions of section 44 of the Companies Act, 1862; that a penalty for omission to file with the Registrar a signed copy of a prospectus before it is issued be imposed; that further provision be made for enforcing the prompt delivery of certificates of titles to shares; that receivers should be required under a penalty to file with the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies an abstract of their receipts and payments for each half-year during which the receivership continues.

Journalists. The Institute of, established March 9th, 1889, by conversion of the National Association of Journalists, founded in '84, and incorporated by royal charter in March '90. The Charter, by which journalism is formally constituted one of the professions, directs and declares that the members of the Institute "shall for ever hereafter be, by virtue of these presents, one body politic and corporate." The objects of the Institute include the devising of examination or other practical tests for candidates for membership; "the promotion of whatever may tend to the elevation of the status and the improvement of the qualifications of all members of the journalistic profession"; ascertainment, and where necessary amendment, of the law and practice affecting the discharge by journalists of their professional duties, and the promotion by all reasonable means of the interests of journalists and journalism. There are over 3000 members, organised in 55 districts and sub-districts. The Charter confers upon the Institute power to affiliate branches in India and the Colonies and in foreign countries—a power which has been exercised in the case of the New Zealand Institute of Journalists. The Annual Conference in 1906 was held at Dublin. Mr. F. W. Wilson, F.J.I., of Ipswich, was elected President for 1905-6. Hon. Treasurer, Mr. Arthur W. à-Beckett, F.J.I. Legal Advisers, Mr. J. Andrew Strahan, M.A., LL.D., Hon. Counsel; and Sir Albert K. Rollit, Hon. Solicitor; Messrs. Adams & Adams, Solicitors. Auditors, Mr. Arthur J. Cook, A.I.A., and Mr. F. Hinde, F.J.I. Hon. Secretaries, Mr. Joseph Watson, F.J.I., and Mr. F. G. Byles, F.J.I. Secretary, Herbert Cornish, F.J.I. Hall, Tudor Street, London, E.C.

K

Katsura, Count Taro, was b. in 1849 in the province of Choshu, Japan. During the Restoration era, in '67, he distinguished himself as an able subaltern, and some years afterwards was sent to Germany to study army details, and spent several years in that country. In '76, when a colonel, he was again sent to Germany in company with the late General Kawakami, to inspect the German military system. On his return home he was gazetted major-general, was appointed Vice-Minister of the War Office, under General Oyama, and took a prominent part in the reform of the Japanese army. In '91 he was promoted to be lieutenant-general, and in the following year was appointed to the command of the third division of the army. During the Chino-Japanese war he marched with his division through Korea to Manchuria; and later on served under General Nodzu. For his services he was created a viscount, and two years after promoted to the rank of general. In '98 he was appointed War Minister, and held that post till the downfall of the Yamagata Cabinet in October 1900. He was Premier from May 1901 till Jan. 1906, covering the period of the war with Russia, and in 1906 was appointed a member of the High Military Council of Japan. Hon. G.C.B. 1905. See JAPAN.

Kerr, Admiral of the Fleet Lord W. T., G.C.B., is the 4th son of the 7th Marquis of Lothian, and was b. Sept. 28th, 1839. Ed. at Radley, he entered the Navy in '53, and has seen much and varied service—in the Baltic '54-5, with the Naval Brigade at Lucknow, in important sea commands, and at the Admiralty. His sea service includes the position of second-in-command of the Mediterranean station '90-92, and the full command of the Channel Squadron '95-7. He was private secretary to the First Lord '85-90, Junior Lord '92, Second Sea Lord '94-5, and Senior Naval Lord '99-1904. Promoted to G.C.B. June 1902. Address, 58, Cromwell Road, S.W.; Melbourne Hall, Derby.

Kew Gardens. First formed as a Botanic Garden by the Princess Augusta of Saxe-Gotha, Dowager Princess of Wales, in 1759; gardens transferred to Commissioners of Woods and Forests 1840. Botanic Garden opened to the public free '41; Arboretum '47. Palm-house built '48; Temperate house '62-99; Jodrell Laboratory for research '76; North (Picture) Gallery '82. Transferred to Department of Agriculture 1903. The Gardens are in close connection with the Colonial Office, and serve as an advanced horticultural school, in which special attention is given to the training of gardeners for colonial and Indian service. Open free to the public every weekday from noon (June to September from 10 a.m.), and on Sunday from 1 p.m. till dusk. Director, Lieut.-Col. D. Prain, C.I.E., F.R.S.; Curator, W. Watson. Office, 197, Kew Road, Kew.

King's College, London. Established by royal charter Aug. 14th, 1829, opened '31; charter annulled by Act of Parliament May 19th, '82, and College re-incorporated for the purpose of "giving instruction in literature, science, and the doctrines and duties of Christianity as the same are inculcated by the Church of England." By the Amending Act 1903 all religious tests as qualification for office in the College or on the Council were removed, except in the case of Professors and Lecturers in the faculty of Theology. The College is a School of the University of London in all the Faculties, and appoints two members of the Senate. There are eight faculties and departments in the College—viz., theology, arts, natural science, engineering, medicine, women's, civil service, and two schools. The College grants, under authority of its Act of Parliament, the diploma of "Associate of King's College." The Department for Women is conducted in Kensington Square; certificates of proficiency are granted on passing the examinations, after a regular attendance of three or more terms. The students of the Evening Classes, which are held in each faculty, from October to March and from April to June, receive certificates. The Civil Service Department and the Strand School prepare for the excise, customs, post office, the navy, and other examinations, and for commercial life; women are also prepared. During the Academical year 1905-6 there were 174 students in theology (108 matriculated), 1182 in arts and laws (60 matriculated), 992 in science and engineering (266 matriculated), 335 in medicine (49 matriculated), also 462 women. In addition to the above 3145 students, 1200 attended the lectures on Banking, 1412 were in the Civil Service classes, 336 boys attended the school at Wimbledon Common, and 804 the Strand School: total under education, 6897. The whole College is under the supervision of the Principal, Rev. Dr. Arthur C. Headlam.

Kipling, Rudyard, was b. in Bombay 1865, and is the son of Mr. J. Lockwood Kipling, C.I.E. He was ed. in England, and in '82 he went out to India and joined the staff of the Civil and Military Gazette, Lahore, for which paper his earlier tales were written. He has depicted Anglo-Indian and military life in "Soldiers Three," "Black and White," "Plain Tales from the Hills," "Story of the Gadsbys," "Life's Handicap," etc. "The Naulakha," published in '91, and written in collaboration with Wolcott Balestier, is not of such high merit as the work that is all his own. "Many Inventions," a collection of stories, appeared during '93, and a good deal of verse in various magazines. In '94 "The Jungle Book" was published, followed in '95 by "The Second Jungle Book." A book of verse, "Barrack-Room Ballads," appeared in '92, and in '96 another volume, "The Seven Seas." In '97 he published "Captains Courageous," in '98 "The Day's Work," in '99 "Stalky & Co.," in 1901 "Kim," in 1902 "Just So Stories," in 1903 "The Five Nations," in 1904 "Traffics and Discoveries," and in 1906 "Puck of Pook's Hill." In 1903 a dramatised version of "The Light that Failed" was produced at the Lyric.

KNIGHTHOOD, ORDERS OF.

In modern days knightships are conferred as a mark of the Sovereign's esteem, or as a reward for services of any kind, military or civil. They are bestowed by the Sovereign, or the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland as representing him, or by letters patent. The Royal Orders of Knighthood are: the Garter, the Thistle, St. Patrick, the Bath, St. Michael and St. George, Star of India, the Indian Empire, and the Victorian Order.

Knights not belonging to any of these orders are termed knights bachelors.

In 1904 H.M. the King commanded the creation of a Central Chancery of all the Orders of Knighthood, and the issue of Insignia and registration of warrants is now carried out by the Lord Chamberlain's Department, the Comptroller of which is Major-General Sir Arthur Ellis, G.C.V.O., C.S.I.

The Most Noble Order of the Garter.

Originally established by King Edward III. in 1348, and reconstituted in 1837, it is limited to the Sovereign, the Prince of Wales, and such descendants of George I. as may be elected to be members of it, and to twenty-five Knight Companions; but sovereigns and princes of other realms, and extra Knight Companions, may be admitted by special statutes. Its abbreviation is K.G., and it is the highest order of knighthood. Its insignia and habit are most elaborate and imposing, and include the George, a gold medallion of St. George and the Dragon, suspended from a blue ribbon; the Garter, which is worn below the knee of the left leg, and is made of dark blue velvet, edged with gold, its motto being "Honi soit qui mal y pense" ("Evil be to him who evil thinks"); a mantle of blue velvet lined with taffeta, with the star of the order embroidered on the left breast; a hood and surcoat of crimson velvet, and a hat of black velvet; a collar of gold weighing thirty ounces, and the star with the cross of St. George in the centre, encircled by the Garter. The following is a full list, the date of creation being prefixed in each case:—

The Most Honourable Order of the Bath.

Originally established by King Henry IV. at his coronation, 1399, this order fell into neglect in the seventeenth century, but was revived in 1725, under George I. It was remodelled by the Prince Regent in 1815, to commemorate the auspicious termination of the long and arduous contest in which the empire had been engaged, and was further enlarged in 1845, and now has three classes:—

G.C.B. . . Knight Grand Cross Bath.

K.C.B. . . Knight Commander Bath.

C.B. . . Companion Bath.

Members of the first two classes, being knights, are, after knighthood, entitled to the prefix "Sir." The G.C.B.'s are not to exceed 55 for military service, exclusive of the sovereign and princes of the blood, and those distinguished foreigners upon whom may be conferred the honorary dignity, and 27 for the civil service; of the second class there may not be more than 145 for military and 100 for the civil service, excluding those admitted as honorary members, and except in certain special circumstances when there is power to increase the numbers. Of Companions there may be 988, of whom 705 may be for military and 283 for civil service. An officer must have received a medal or some similar honour, or have been specially mentioned in despatches for distinguished service in action before he can be nominated. The badge is suspended by a crimson ribbon, with motto Tria juncta in uno (Three joined in one).

Bath King of Arms, Sir Spencer C. B. Ponsonby-Fane, G.C.B., I.S.O.

Gentleman Usher of the Scarlet Rod, Charles George Barrington, C.B.

The Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George.

Instituted in 1818, and is the order to which subjects of His Majesty who have taken a distinguished part in colonial and foreign affairs are generally admitted. It consists of the Sovereign, a Grand Master, and three classes of members:—

G.C.M.G. . . . Knight Grand Cross.

K.C.M.G. . . . Knight Commander.

C.M.G. . . . Companion.

Members of the first two classes, being Knights, are entitled to the prefix "Sir." The first class is limited to 100 members, exclusive of honorary members and princes of the blood, the second to 300, and the third to 600 members. The Chapel of the Order in St. Paul's Cathedral was dedicated in the presence of the King, the Prince of Wales, and many of the most eminent members of the Order, on June 12th, 1906.

The motto of the Order is Auspicium melioris ævi.

Grand Master, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.
Prelate, The Rt. Rev. Bishop St. H. Montgomery, D.D.

Chancellor, The Duke of Argyll, P.C., K.T., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O.

The Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.

Established by letters patent in 1861 and enlarged in '66, '76, '97, and 1902. Its badge is worn pendent from a light-blue ribbon with white stripes edgewards; motto, "Heaven's Light our Guide." It consists of the Sovereign, a Grand Master, who is the Viceroy of India for the time being, and three classes of members:—

G.C.S.I. . . Knight Grand Commander.

K.C.S.I. . . Knight Commander.

C.S.I. . . Companion.

Members of the first two classes, being Knights, are entitled to the prefix "Sir." Of the first class there may be 36, of the second class 85, and of the third (or Companions) 170; but extra and honorary members may, and have been, from time to time appointed.

Registrar, Major-Gen. Sir Arthur Ellis, G.C.V.O., C.S.I.

Secretary, The Foreign Secretary to the Government of India.

The Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire.

Instituted Dec. 31st, '77, to commemorate the proclamation of H.M. Queen Victoria as Empress of India, and enlarged in '86, and in the Jubilee year, as a means of rewarding those whose services to the Indian Empire have merited the Imperial favour. This order consists of the Sovereign, a Grand Master, who is the Viceroy of India for the time being, and of three classes of members—viz., Knights Grand Commanders (G.C.I.E.), Knights Commanders (K.C.I.E.), and Companions (C.I.E.). Only the two first of these, being knights, are entitled to the prefix "Sir." The motto of the order is Imperatrix Auspiciis.

Secretary, The Foreign Secretary to the Government of India.

Registrar, Major-General Sir Arthur Ellis, G.C.V.O., C.S.I.

The Imperial Order of the Crown of India.

Instituted Dec. 31st, 1877, enlarged Jan. 30th, 1900, and consists of the Sovereign and such as the Sovereign may think fit to appoint of the Princesses of His Majesty's Royal and Imperial House; the wives and female relatives of Indian Princes; and the wives or other female relatives of any of the persons who have held, now hold, or may hereafter hold, the offices of Viceroy and Governor-General of India, Governors of Madras or Bombay, Principal Secretary of State for India or Commander-in-Chief in India.

Registrar, Major-Gen. Sir Arthur Ellis, G.C.V.O., C.S.I., Comptroller of the Lord Chamberlain's Department.

The Royal Victorian Order

was created and instituted by H.M. Queen Victoria by letters patent under the Great Seal, April '96. Those admitted to the order are to be British subjects who may have rendered important or personal services to the Sovereign; or foreigners upon whom His Majesty may think fit to confer the distinction, and who are to rank as honorary members. Members of the order are divided into five classes:—

- |                                 |          |
|---------------------------------|----------|
| Knights Grand Cross . . . .     | G.C.V.O. |
| Knights Commanders . . . .      | K.C.V.O. |
| Commanders . . . . .            | C.V.O.   |
| Members of the Fourth Class . . | M.V.O.   |
| Members of the Fifth Class . .  | M.V.O.   |

Members of the first and second classes receive the honour of knighthood. The first and second classes rank after the corresponding classes of the Order of the Indian Empire; the third class ranks after Knights Bachelors; the fourth class after Companions of the Order of the Indian Empire; and the fifth class after the eldest sons of Knights.

Chancellor, The Lord Chamberlain for the time being.

Secretary, The Keeper of His Majesty's Privy Purse for the time being.

The Order of Merit.

Created by King Edward VII. on June 26th, 1902. It is designed to include British subjects who have won conspicuous distinction in the naval and military services, or in letters, art and science. The badge of the Order consists of a cross of red and blue enamel of eight points, having the words "For Merit" in gold letters within a laurel wreath on a blue enamel centre. The reverse of the badge shows the King's Royal and Imperial cipher in gold, and the whole is surmounted by the Imperial Crown enamelled in colour, and suspended by a ribbon of Garter blue and crimson. The members of the Order are:—

- |                           |                                 |                      |

| The Rt. Hon. J. Morley.   | Lord Cromer.                    |                      |
| Viscount Kitchener.       | Marshal Oyama.                  |                      |
| Viscount Wolsley.         | Marshal Yamagata.               |                      |
| Admiral Togo.             |                                 |                      |

The Distinguished Service Order.

Instituted by H.M. Queen Victoria, who, holding that the means of adequately rewarding the distinguished services of officers in the naval and military services who had been honourably mentioned in despatches were limited, instituted and created for the purpose of rewarding individual instances of meritorious and distinguished service in war a new naval and military Order of distinction. The statutes of the Order were issued from the War Office on Nov. 6th, '86. Foreign officers who have been associated in naval and military operations with our forces are eligible to be honorary members; and the Order ranks next to the Fourth Class of the Royal Victorian Order. The badge, which consists of a gold cross, enamelled white, edged gold, having on one side thereof in the centre, within a wreath of laurel enamelled green, the Imperial Crown in gold upon a red enamelled ground, and on the reverse, within a similar wreath and on a similar red ground, the Royal Cypher E.R. VII., is to be suspended from the left breast by a red riband edged blue of one inch in width.

Secretary and Registrar, R. H. Brade, Esq., C.B., War Office.

Koerber, Dr. Ernst von, ex-Austrian Prime Minister, was born at Trient, in Tyrol, Nov. 6th, 1850, and ed. at the Theresian Academy at Vienna and Vienna University. He obtained his LL.D. degree in '72, but in '74 left the law for the service of the Ministry of Commerce. In '75 he worked out a complete plan for the nationalisation of all Austrian private railway lines, which since then has been almost entirely carried out. Later on he became the real leader in Austrian commercial and railway affairs. Count Badeni, as Premier, called him into the Home Office, and after that Minister's fall he filled successively the places of Minister of Commerce and Home Secretary in the passing Cabinets of Gautsch and Clary, and in January 1900 became Prime Minister. He is an excellent speaker, and a convinced adherent of the parliamentary system. In April 1903 he received from the Emperor the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Stephen. His resignation took place at the end of 1904.

Komura, Baron Jutaro, appointed in 1906 Japanese Ambassador in London, is about 51 years of age. He was one of a group of 30 young Japanese sent by their Government to Harvard University in '75, and on his return was first given an appointment at the Ministry of Justice and then made a judge, but resigned, and became a translator at the Foreign Office. He had risen to the position of chief translator, when in '94, on the eve of the war with China, the Japanese Ambassador in Peking suddenly fell ill, and Komura took his place. He returned to Tokio with a great reputation as a diplomat; his despatches are held up as models. In 1901 he was sent to Seoul, in '02 he became Minister of Foreign Affairs, and in '03 he was created baron. He was the Japanese plenipotentiary at the Portsmouth (New Hampshire) Peace Conference, 1905, and played an important part in bringing about the Anglo-Japanese Alliance.

KOREA.

A country embracing the peninsula lying between the Yellow Sea and the Sea of Japan, under Yi Heui, who succeeded to the throne in 1864, and assumed the title of Emperor in '97. He was made an Hon. G.C.I.E. in Dec. 1900. The existing dynasty was founded in 1392.

Until '94 China was the suzerain of Korea, and directed her foreign policy. But so many abuses prevailed under this system, that in June '94 Japan stepped in and proposed various reforms, which it was suggested should be jointly carried out by China and Japan. China refused this offer, and eventually hostilities commenced, with the result that the Chinese were driven out of Korea, and a treaty of alliance with Japan was signed in Aug. '94. On the conclusion of the war in '95, China relinquished her suzerainty, and the independence of Korea was acknowledged.

Soon after the outbreak of war between Russia and Japan, on Feb. 6th, 1904, an Agreement between Japan and Korea was signed Feb. 23rd, 1904. Korea undertook to adopt the advice of Japan in regard to improvement in administration, and the Japanese Government undertook to ensure the safety of the Imperial Household of Korea, and guaranteed the independence and territorial integrity of the Korean Empire.

By another Agreement, signed Aug. 22nd, 1904, Korea undertook to regulate her finance and her foreign relations according to the advice of a Japanese Financial Adviser and a Foreign Diplomatic Adviser recommended by Japan; and to consult the Japanese Government before making treaties or conventions with other Powers, or granting concessions to or making contracts with foreigners. By the Peace Treaty between Russia and Japan the paramount interest of the latter country in Korea was acknowledged.

A Treaty between Korea and Japan, signed at Seoul Nov. 17th, 1905, provided that Japan, through the Department of Foreign Affairs in Tokio, should control and direct the external relations and affairs of Korea; that Japan should be represented at the Court of the Emperor of Korea by a Resident-General residing at Seoul, and have the right to station Residents at the several open ports and such other places in Korea as it might deem necessary.

Government and Statistics.

There is a Cabinet consisting of ten Ministers, whose acts must be ratified by the Emperor. For local administration the country is divided into 13 provinces, and these are further divided into 339 districts. The army consists of about 10,000 men nominally, but was reduced in 1905 to a Palace Guard of about 1500. The Japanese maintain a force of two divisions in the country, with headquarters at Hao-seung and Yongsan.

Rice, millet, cotton, hemp, and tobacco are grown on the fertile territory skirting the sea, and the people are similar in their habits and customs to the Chinese on the neighbouring mainland. The worship of ancestors is carefully observed, and some educational work is done at Seoul. Gold mining is carried on by an American company, which is working the Wonsan deposits, by British subjects near there, and by German, Japanese and Russian concessionaires. Copper, iron, and coal are also found in abundance. There are 620 miles of railways working, and other lines are under construction.

Foreign commerce is carried on at Seoul, the Treaty Ports of Chemulpo, Fusan, Xuensan, Chinnampo, Mokpo, Kunsan, Massampo, Songchin, and the inland city of Pingyang—the bulk of the trade being with Japan. Wiju and Yongampo were in 1904 opened to foreign trade.

Area about 82,000 sq. m., and population estimated at from 10,000,000 to 12,000,000. Capital, Seoul, pop. 200,000. Imports, 1902, £1,382,351; 1903, £1,859,876; 1904, £2,736,000; 1905, £3,262,541; exports, 1902, £1,365,995, including £516,961 gold; 1903, £1,524,511, including £557,006 gold; 1904, £1,219,000, including £511,000 gold; 1905, £1,236,342, including £531,528 gold. The other chief exports are rice, beans, gersing, and hides.

Japanese Resident-General, Marquis Ito.

British Consul-General, H. Cockburn, C.M.G., at Seoul.—Vice-Consul, A. H. Lay, at Chemulpo.

Kossuth, Franz, son of the great Hungarian patriot, Louis Kossuth, whose mantle has fallen upon him. Leader of the Independence party in the Hungarian Parliament. B. in 1842, he suffered exile with his father, was partly educated in England, and lived in France and Italy. After his father's death in '94 he went back to Hungary, took the oath of allegiance as a Hungarian subject, and soon became leader of those aspiring to national independence. M. Kossuth is neither a social revolutionary nor a fanatic, but a diplomat by temperament. In 1903 he resigned the leadership, but he was soon back at his post, and in '04 he united his opposition forces with those of Count Apponyi, and won the elections in Jan. 1905. When the Coalition came into office in 1906 he became Minister of Commerce (see AUSTRIA - HUNGARY). He married an Englishwoman, who died a few years ago.

Kubelik, Johann, violinist, was b. 1880 at Miehle, near Prague. He received his first musical lessons from his father, a market gardener, and at twelve entered the Prague Conservatoire, where his natural talent, coupled with assiduity, attracted attention. He was very successful at concerts in Austria-Hungary prior to appearing in Feb. 1900 in Berlin with the Philharmonic orchestra. Invited to England by Dr. Richter, he made his début at St. James's Hall, June 18th, 1900; married, 1904, the Countess Marianne Csaky-Szell. Started a two-years' tour round the world in the winter of 1905, giving a farewell recital at Queen's Hall, Oct. 7th.

Kyrie Society, The, owes its origin to Miss Miranda Hill, and was formed in 1877. Its work is apportioned between four branches, which undertake, first, to decorate workmen's clubs, hospitals, etc.; second, to preserve open spaces; third, to give music and entertainments to the poor; and fourth, to provide them with literature. There are provincial societies at Birmingham, Cheltenham, Dublin, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Leicester, Liverpool and Nottingham. Hon. Secretary, Miss Lilian James. Office, 2, Manchester Street, W.

L

LABOUR CO PARTNERSHIP ASSOCIATION.

The Labour Co-partnership Association was founded in 1884, and seeks "to bring about an organisation of industry based on the principle of Labour Co-partnership: that is to say, a system in which all those engaged shall share in the profit, capital, control, and responsibility." With this view it seeks (1) in the Co-operative movement to aid by its propaganda and advice all forms of production based on the above principle; (2) in other businesses to induce employers and employed to adopt schemes of profit-sharing and investment tending in the same direction.

The following figures show the increase in co-partnership businesses, established (with two or three exceptions) by working men:—

	1883.	1893.	1905.
Societies at work . . . . .	15	77	124
*Capital . . . . .	103,436	619,154	1,819,390
Trade . . . . .	160,751	1,115,842	3,664,394
Profits . . . . .	9,931	65,387	188,290
Losses . . . . .	114	2,112	7,395
Dividend on wages Not known		8,225	20,496
* Shares, loans, and reserves.

Those figures do not take into account the extension of the principle to private businesses or ordinary companies. Figures concerning these are extremely difficult to get and tabulate, because private firms often make secrecy a condition in their partnership schemes, and the absence of a uniform plan in the schemes makes generalisation difficult.

As to the working-class co-partnership businesses, these divide themselves roughly into four classes: 1. The societies which in the main consist of individual shareholders who are in most cases workers for the society, or hope to become so, as the capital and business connection grow. 2. Societies which consist something like equally of—(a) individuals as in Class 1; (b) co-operative store societies which provide part of the capital and a market for much, if not all, of the produce. 3. Societies which are, in the main, federations of other societies, chiefly co-operative stores, but which have Labour Co-partnership provisions in their rules, whereby their employees are entitled to share in the profit and acquire capital. 4. Special societies. This classification is of course imperfect, but is useful as giving a rough idea of how the movement is made up. Grouped in trades, the societies show that there are in Great Britain 16 clothing and textile, 13 agricultural, 19 boot and leather, 18 metal, 29 building and woodworking, 13 printing, and 18 various trades—125 in all.

In the 1906 ed. particulars were given of the co-partnership schemes of the South Metropolitan Gas Company, the South Suburban Gas Company, and of various private firms.

Secretary Labour Co-partnership Association, Henry Vivian. Office, 22, Red Lion Square, London, W.C.

THE LABOUR MOVEMENT.

Trade Unions.

At the end of 1904 there were 1148 Trade Unions, with a total membership of 1,866,755. Nearly three-fourths of the total membership is found in the building, mining and quarrying, metal, engineering and shipbuilding, and textile trades. During the three years of declining employment, 1902-4, there was, as in previous periods of depression, a falling off in the membership of many unions. The total decline was from 1,940,874 at the end of 1901 (the highest number recorded) to 1,866,755 at the end of 1904, a fall of 74,119, or 3·8 per cent. The decline was chiefly in the smaller unions, and the labourers' unions suffered most, trade unions of Builders and General Labourers losing in the three years 30,000 members, or 19·4 per cent. of their membership in 1901. The mining and quarrying group lost 30,000 also, but this represented a fall of only 5·5 per cent. On the other hand, employees of public authorities and shop assistants gained large numbers of members during 1902-4. The total membership at the end of 1904 was higher than in any year during the period 1892-9, the earliest years for which comparative figures are available. The figures 1895-1904 are as follows:—

	Number of Unions.	Membership.
1895 . . . . .	1289	1,415,846
1896 . . . . .	1302	1,503,739
1897 . . . . .	1294	1,624,035
1898 . . . . .	1264	1,661,360
1899 . . . . .	1258	1,821,666
1900 . . . . .	1245	1,928,894

There were 148 unions at the end of 1904 which included women and girls as members, compared with 149 in 1906; and the number of such members was 125,094, or 6·7 per cent. of the total membership of all trade unions. The membership in '06 was nearly as large. The only group which has shown a substantial rise in membership is that of the Shop Assistants' Unions, the membership of which rose from 327 in '06 to 3739 in 1904. Nearly 90 per cent. of the total female members of Trade Unions are found in the textile trades, cotton weaving accounting for 60 per cent., cotton preparing for 18 per cent., and linen and jute manufacture for 8 per cent.

The Board of Trade Report gives special financial details with regard to one hundred principal unions, which include over 60 per cent. of the total membership of all the societies, as follows:—

	1904.	1895.
Membership . . . . .	1,127,529	907,496
Income . . . . .	£2,097,470	£1,541,502

The expenditure for the ten years 1895-1904 amounted to £16,060,000, of which £2,343,000 or 14·6 per cent. was spent on dispute pay; £3,608,000 or 22·5 per cent. on unemployed benefits, £6,658,000 or 41·4 per cent. on sick and accident benefits, superannuation, etc., and £3,451,000 or 21·5 per cent. on working and miscellaneous expenses.

In 1904 there were 228 Trades Councils, with 874,959 members, compared with 166 with 703,322 members in 1895. They are local councils formed by delegates from neighbouring trade unions. Their main objects are to exert influence on local politics in parliamentary and municipal elections, and to afford mutual assistance in disputes.

In 1904 there were 93 Federations of Trade Unions with 1,851,378 members, compared with 108 with 1,768,442 members in 1900. Their constituent members are trade unions, but their objects and their areas vary very much. Building trades federations are mostly formed of allied trades, and are local in character. The metal and printing groups are also mainly federations of several trades, but the mining and textile groups are largely formed of federations of unions within the same trade. Federations of several trades often have a rule providing for the settlement of disputes between the societies who are members by submission of the matter to the arbitration of the federation. The Miners' Federation had a membership of 326,000; and the Engineering and Shipbuilding Trades Federation, 344,000.

The General Federation of Trade Unions was founded in '99. In 1904 it had a membership of 396,226. The declared objects of the Federation are to maintain the right of combination, to further conciliation, and to assist workers engaged in disputes when approved by the Executive Committee.

Trade Union Congress.

The Congress is composed of representatives of trade unions, either working at their trade or paid union officials. Unions may send one delegate for every 2000 members or fraction thereof. Voting on important questions is on the principle of one vote for every 1000 members represented. A Parliamentary Committee of 12 belonging to different unions is elected to look after the interests of the working classes in parliamentary matters and elsewhere, and a paid secretary is also appointed annually. The office of the Parliamentary Committee is in Buckingham Street, W.C., and the secretary is Mr. W. C. Steadman, M.P.

The 39th annual Congress was held at Liverpool on Sept. 3rd, 1906, and five following days. The chairman was Mr. D. C. Cummings, General Secretary of the Boiler Makers' and Iron and Steel Shipbuilders' Society. There were 165 organisations, with 1,484,101 members, represented by 489 delegates. The membership represented nearly 80 per cent. of the total membership of all Trade Unions. The number of organisations represented was eleven more than in 1905, and the total membership was greater by 1458.

Among the principal industrial subjects on which the Congress passed resolutions were: Restriction of the hours of labour to 8 per day for miners and for workpeople generally; amendment of the law in relation to trade unions and industrial disputes; amendment of the Mines Regulation Act, the Factory and Workshops Acts, the Shop Clubs Act, the Workmen's Compensation Acts, and the Truck Acts; certificates of competency for persons in charge of steam engines and boilers; the wages and general conditions of labour of Government employees; general old-age pensions; improved housing accommodation for working people; use of Trade Union labels on manufactured goods; nationalisation of mines, railways, and canals; abolition of systematic overtime; compulsory state insurance; representation of trade unions at Board of Trade and coroners' inquiries; prohibition of importation of alien labour in case of strikes; cheap travelling fares for workpeople; prevention of evictions of workpeople by employers in case of strikes; and danger of employment of foreigners in British mines. A resolution in favour of compulsory arbitration in trade disputes was rejected by a majority of 397,000 votes; the majority in 1904 was 486,000, and in 1905 92,000.

The 1907 Congress will be held at Bath.

Trade Disputes Bill.

The Royal Commission on Trade Disputes and Trade Combinations, appointed in June 1903, reported in Feb. 1906. The majority recommended that an Act should be passed to declare Trade Unions legal associations; to declare strikes (apart from crime or breach of contract) legal; to declare that to persuade to strike—i.e. to desist from working, apart from procuring breach of contract—is not illegal; to declare that an individual shall not be liable for doing any act, not in itself an actionable tort, only on the ground that it is an interference with another person's trade or business; to provide for the exemption of the provident funds of Trade Unions from liability; to protect the central authorities of a Union from unauthorised acts of branch agents; and to alter the Conspiracy Act, '75.

The Liberal Government brought in the Trade Disputes Bill, 1906, dealing with the above points, as to which see SESSION.

Changes in Rates of Wages.

The Board of Trade Report for 1905 records a decline for the fifth time since '95. The following table shows the number of persons affected by changes in rates of wages in the last ten years, and the amount of such changes:—

Year.	Number Affected.	Net Weekly Rise (+) or Fall (–) of Wages.
		All Trades.	All Trades.
	Number.		£.
1896 . . . . .	603,000	+	27,000
1897 . . . . .	597,000	+	32,000
1898 . . . . .	1,012,000	+	81,000
1899 . . . . .	1,172,000	+	50,000
1900 . . . . .	1,132,000	+	203,000
1901 . . . . .	929,000	–	177,000
1902 . . . . .	887,000	–	73,000
1903 . . . . .	897,000	–	38,000
1904 . . . . .	801,000	–	39,000
1905 . . . . .	689,000	–	2,000
1906 (10 months) .	919,525	+	43,937

The net result of the changes during the last ten years to the end of 1905 was a rise in the aggregate weekly wage of more than £200,000; the decline of the last five years taken together barely exceeded the rise of the year 1900 alone, but the second half of the year showed an upward movement, and the net result for the year was a fall of about £2000 only. The rise which began in the middle of 1905 continued during 1906, and for the nine months ended September 1906 there was a net increase of £41,413 per week, as compared with a net decrease of £5949 per week in the corresponding period of 1905. The increase affected all groups of trades except the building and quarrying trades, which registered very trifling decreases.

Most of the changes in weekly rates in 1905 were insignificant. Of the 689,600 persons affected by changes, 250,000 (including 194,000 coal miners) sustained decreases, 319,000 (including 224,000 cotton operatives) received increases, and 120,000 (including 87,000 cotton spinners, etc., who received a bonus for twelve weeks) sustained both increases and decreases, leaving their wages at the same level at the end of the year as at the beginning-

Strikes and Lock-outs.

The following table summarises the figures for the years 1895-1906 :-

Year.	No. of disputes beginning in each year.	No. of workpeople affected by disputes beginning in each year.	Aggregate duration in working days of all disputes in each year.
1895-9*	793	225,000	7,524,000
1900 .	648	188,538	3,152,694

1903 .	387	116,901	2,338,661
1904 .	354	86,888	1,454,220
1900-4*	495	166,000	2,913,000
1905 .	358	93,503	2,446,271
1906† .	381	179,971	2,258,000

* Average for the period of five years.

† The first ten months only.

About one-half of the time lost in 1905 by disputes was accounted for by those in the mining and quarrying industries. Questions of wages were by far the most important causes of disputes, chiefly through demands for advances in wages. The number of persons affected by disputes arising from refusals to work with non-union men and other questions of Trade Union principles comprised about 20 per cent. of the total. Most of the disputes were settled by the parties themselves, or their representatives.

Conciliation and Arbitration.

In 1905, 66 permanent Boards of Conciliation and Arbitration considered 1726 cases, of which 834 were withdrawn, referred back, or settled independently of the Boards; 614 were settled by the Boards or Committees; 225 by arbitrators or umpires appointed by them; and 53 remained over, under consideration.

Of the 358 disputes referred to above, under strikes and lock-outs, which caused a stoppage of work, 30, involving directly 10,546 workpeople, or 15.6 of the total for all disputes, were settled by conciliation or arbitration. The workpeople involved in stoppages settled by arbitration formed 3.3 per cent. of the total number involved during the year, and the proportion involved in disputes arranged by conciliation 12.3 per cent.

As the result of recommendations made in the report of the Royal Commission on Labour, 1894, the Conciliation (Trade Disputes) Act, 1896, was passed, empowering the Board of Trade, where a dispute had arisen or was apprehended, (a) to inquire into the causes of the dispute, (b) to induce the parties to confer together with a view to a friendly settlement, (c) to appoint a person to act as conciliator at the request of either party, and (d) on the application of the parties to appoint an arbitrator. Provision is also made for the registration of private boards of conciliation and arbitration, and the Board of Trade is authorised to take steps to secure the formation of such boards where none exist. The Board of Trade has no power to compel a settlement, and therefore the Act has been valueless in the case of large and embittered disputes, like the Engineering, Taff Vale, and Penrhyn stoppages. Nevertheless, it has been successful in settling a number of minor quarrels. From August 1896 to June 30th, 1905, the Board dealt with 181 cases. Of these, 68 were in the building trades, 38 in the metal, engineering and shipbuilding trades, and the remainder in other groups of trades. Of the total of 181 cases, 122 were settled under the Act, and 14 others by the parties themselves during the negotiations. In the remaining cases either the Board declined to take action or no settlement resulted from their intervention. Of the 122 settlements, 85 were effected by arbitration and 37 by conciliation, 23 of the latter being arranged by officials of the Department.

Accidents and Poisonous Trades.

During 1905, 4375 workpeople were reported killed in the United Kingdom by accidents in the course of their employment.

This gives a mean annual death-rate of 6.56 per 10,000.

Between 1900 and 1905 inclusive the annual number of cases of lead-poisoning fell from 1058 to 592, and the deaths from 38 to 23. Cases of anthrax rose from 37 to 59, and deaths from 7 to 18. Cases of other forms of industrial poisoning fell from 34 to 12, and in 1905 there was one death from phosphorus poisoning. In 1905 the figures were: Lead-poisoning, 23 deaths out of 592 cases; mercurial poisoning, 8 cases, no death; phosphorus poisoning, 3 cases, 1 death; arsenic poisoning, 1 case, no death; anthrax, 59 cases, 18 deaths: making 663 cases and 42 deaths.

The Unemployed.

Statistics for 1905.

Employment during 1905 showed a considerable improvement compared with the previous year. The mean percentage of unemployed returned by Trade Unions during 1905 was 5.4, compared with 6.5 in 1904, 5.1 in 1903, 4.4 in 1902, and 3.8 in 1901. The average percentage for ten years '96-1905 was 4.04.

The Queen's Unemployed Fund, which finally amounted to £153,635, was formed on the initiation of H.M. Queen Alexandra in Nov. 1905, the Queen herself heading it with £2000. With the exception of £1000 which her Majesty desired should be paid to the Church Army and £2000 to the Salvation Army, and sums "ear-marked" for special objects, the entire proceeds of the fund were paid over to, and disbursed by, the Central Bodies and Distress Committees with the powers of central bodies set up under the Unemployed Workmen Act.

Under the Unemployed Workmen Act, 1905 (see SESSION, sect. 87, in 1906 ed.), the Local Government Board in Sept. 1905 issued orders establishing local Distress Committees in London and in Boroughs and Urban Districts of over 50,000 population. Distress Committees were also established in a number of municipal boroughs and urban districts with a population of between 10,000 and 50,000, with the Board's consent.

The Central Unemployed Committee for London was constituted to superintend and co-ordinate the action of the local Distress Committees in the City of London and the Metropolitan Boroughs, to collect information, and to establish, take over, or assist labour bureaux or employment exchanges. It controls a Central Fund, consisting of (1) voluntary contributions, (2) a rate of not more than  $\frac{3}{4}$ d. (or with consent of the Local Government Board, 1d.) levied on the Metropolitan Boroughs. Relief works were opened in the London area and in the country at Hollesley Bay, Letchworth, etc.

In March 1906 it was decided to establish Employment Exchanges, the complete system contemplated including 26 or 27 local exchanges in different parts of London, with a Central Exchange at 87, Temple Chambers, Temple Avenue, E.C., serving as a clearing-house for the rest, and as a centre of communication with provincial labour bureaux. Each local exchange consists of an office where workpeople can register their age, address, qualifications, etc., and employers may notify their requirements. This side of the work is quite separate from the work of relief through the Distress Committees. By the end of October there were affiliated to the Central Employment Exchange 20 labour bureaux in London. There were also 23 labour bureaux in London and the provinces not affiliated to the Exchange, and there was evidence that the bureaux were doing valuable work.

Foreign Labour Statistics.

The third abstract of Foreign Labour Statistics was published in 1906 by the Labour Department of the Board of Trade. The information given relates to wages, hours of labour, trade unions, labour disputes, conciliation and arbitration, workmen's insurance and co-operation. The figures indicate that in countries of progressive industrial development trade unionism makes steady and in some cases rapid growth. During the years '99 to 1904 the Social Democratic societies of Germany nearly doubled their membership, and they now embrace more than two-thirds of the organised workers of the country; the Christian societies have made almost equal relative progress; and the Hirsch-Duncker societies, though of less importance numerically, continue to hold their own. In France, too, there has been rapid growth both in the number of societies and in their membership. On the other hand, in Denmark there appears to have been a noticeable diminution both of societies and members since 1900.

Lamsdorff, Count Vladimir, is a great-grandson of the Lamsdorff who was tutor to Paul I. and played an important part during the reign of Alexander I. B. Dec. 1842. In '66 he entered the Home Office, in '72 was made Second Secretary of the Foreign Office, and in '75 became First Secretary. In '78 he accompanied Prince Gortschakoff to the Berlin Congress, and for some years afterwards was almost constantly in attendance upon Alexander II. After the accession of Alexander III. he was appointed Director of the Chancellerie at the Foreign Office, and again was in constant attendance on his sovereign. When Count Muravieff became Minister of Foreign Affairs, Count Lamsdorff was appointed Assistant Minister, and when his chief died (1900) he succeeded him. He accompanied the Tsar to France (1901), and in 1902 made a tour of the Near East in connection with the Macedonian question. In 1906 he was succeeded by M. Izvolsky.

Land Law Reform Association. This Association advocates amendments of the law to encourage occupiers in improving either houses or agricultural holdings, by giving them absolute security for the results of their outlay; the rating of ground values; more adequate provision of land for small holdings, etc.; healthy and adequate housing for the working classes; abolition of copyhold, the customary tenure, obsolete manorial rights, and the law of primogeniture; the conveyance of land by registration of title, etc. President, Sir Walter Foster, M.P. Secretaries, F. A. Creed and C. E. Hecht, 27, John Street, Adelphi, W.C.

LANDLORD AND TENANT.

Tenancies are of many kinds; and the most usual are a tenancy for a term of years, a tenancy from year to year, a tenancy at will, and a tenancy on sufferance. A tenant for a term of years is a leaseholder; and if the term be longer than three years the lease must be by deed, although, where no deed has been executed, evidence is admissible to prove that there has been an agreement for a lease. Where there is a lease in proper form the tenant is secured in his possession so long as he pays his rent, and at the expiry of his term he is supposed to give up possession without the formality of a notice to quit. Formerly a breach of any of the covenants contained in the lease was enough to void it; but now a breach may usually be compensated by a money payment. A tenancy from year to year arises when land is let from year to year, or when it is let without any express stipulation to that effect, but with the reservation of a yearly rent, or when the tenant holds over after the expiration of his term and pays rent for so doing. This tenancy cannot be terminated by either party otherwise than by giving a half-year's notice; so that if this notice be not given before the expiration of the first half-year, another year is added to the tenancy, and so on. A tenancy from year to year may be created by word of mouth, and a verbal notice to quit is valid, although it is always desirable, as a precaution, to give written notice. A tenancy at will is a tenancy terminable at the pleasure of either party. The Courts are reluctant to construe any tenancy as a tenancy at will unless there is an express agreement to that effect. But this agreement need not be in writing. A tenancy by sufferance is little more than the fact of possession. It occurs when a tenancy of a higher kind, such as a tenancy from year to year, has expired, and the tenant remains in possession without either hindrance or sanction from the landlord. Tenancy by sufferance cannot be created by the will of the parties, but only by legal construction. If the landlord accept rent from the tenant by sufferance, he immediately creates, according to circumstances, a tenancy at will or from year to year. A tenant under a lease or from year to year may sub-let unless expressly restricted from so doing, but a tenant at will or on sufferance cannot do so.

For the recovery of rent in arrear the landlord has, beside the other remedies of a creditor, the remedy of distress. He may, by his bailiff holding a certificate under the Law of Distress Amendment Act, '88, take possession of so much of his tenant's chattels upon the holding as by their sale will produce a sum sufficient to discharge the arrears. He must distrain at one time for the whole of that which is due. No arrears of rent can be recovered by distress but within six years of their becoming due. After five days have elapsed from the seizure of the goods they may be sold, first having been valued by two sworn appraisers if so required by the tenant or owner of the goods, and the surplus, if any, must be repaid to the tenant. If the distress was unlawful the tenant has an action of replevin. It is a general rule that whatever is affixed to the freehold goes with the freehold; and this rule with its exceptions gives rise to a large part of the law of landlord and tenant.

Fixtures made by the tenant may be subdivided into three classes: (1) fixtures for purposes of trade, (2) fixtures for ornament or convenience, and (3) fixtures for agricultural purposes. As regards (1) trade fixtures, like machinery, furnaces, brewing vats, salt-pans, etc., these may be removed by the tenant who has set them up, in every case in which their removal occasions no material injury to the freehold. (2) Fixtures for ornament or convenience, like window-blinds, marble chimney-pieces or kitchen ranges. These also, if set up by the tenant, may be removed by him, provided always that in removing them he does little or no damage. (3) Fixtures for agricultural purposes. The law relating to these is chiefly contained in the Agricultural Holdings Acts.

Somewhat analogous to fixtures are emblements—that is to say, crops resulting from the tenant's cultivation which at the expiration of his tenancy are still uncut and growing. The general rule with respect to these is that the cultivator has the right, after such expiration, to enter on the land to reap and to carry away the produce of his labour. If he die before the harvest, such crops fall into his personal estate, and his executor or administrator succeeds to the rights which he had. Where a tenant from year to year holds of a landlord who has only a life estate, and the landlord dies in the course of the current year, the tenant is entitled to occupy the holding until the year has expired, and the new landlord is entitled to a proportionable part of the year's rent.

The non-payment of rent does not affect the validity of a notice to terminate a tenancy. Thus a notice given on March 25th to take effect on Sept. 29th is good, even though the rent due on March 25th may not have been paid. The tenant who agrees to "keep in repair" a house, without any saving clause, takes upon himself a liability to rebuild or renovate the house if destroyed or rendered uninhabitable by fire, settlement, etc. The tenant who agrees to pay "all rates and taxes," without any saving clause, may thereby become liable for a special rate for making up and paving the road, if it has not been taken over by the local authority.

Land Nationalisation Society, established '81. It has for its object the abolition of the present system of private ownership of land and the establishment of a general system of public land ownership. It advocates that all land should be assessed on its true value, not on its rental, and that either the State or local authorities should have larger powers of compulsory land purchase on the basis of the assessment. Embodying these two objects, The Local Authorities (Taxation and Purchase of Land) Bill was introduced into Parliament and read a first time on Feb. 5th, 1904, and again in March 1905 and March 1906. The Society's Yellow Vans were started in 1890, and are sent out every summer. President, Prof. Alfred Russel Wallace, D.C.L., LL.D., F.R.S.; Secretary, Joseph Hyder. Offices, 432, West Strand, London, W.C.

Land Registry. The Land Transfer Acts '75 and '97, under which registration of title has been compulsory in the County of London since Jan. 1st, '98, will be found summarised in eds. '98-1902. On Dec. 31st, '95, there were 96,816 separate estates on the register. The Land Registry general offices are at 32, Lincoln's Inn Fields. Office hours: Registration 11 to 3; other business 10 to 4. Saturdays, closed at 1. The staff of the Registry includes: Registrar, Charles Fortescue-Brickdale; Assistant Registrars, Hugh Pollock, T. S. Dury, and C. T. Musgrave; Secretary, Guy M. Kindersley; Assistant Secretary, C. W. Heneage; Examiners of Titles, the Conveyancing Counsel of the Chancery Division and Frederick Stallard, Edward Hume, William Seymour Eastwood, and Thomas R. Colquhoun Dill. The Land Registry also contains the Land Charges, Registration, and Searches Department, and the Middlesex Deeds Department. The last-mentioned Department occupies temporary offices in Chichester Rents, Chancery Lane.

Land Tax. The land tax in England and Wales is an apportioned tax. It is not charged at the same rate in the pound over the whole country, but each parish is liable to contribute a fixed annual quota. The parochial quotas were fixed permanently and made perpetual in 1798 by the Act 38 Geo. III. c. 60, but subject to redemption. The land tax quota payable is required by law to be raised in each parish by a new assessment yearly and from year to year at an equal rate on the annual value of all lands and tenements, etc., which have not been exonerated from land tax (42 Geo. III., c. 116, s. 180). Such lands and tenements are to be charged "with as much equality and indifference as is possible by a pound rate" (38 Geo. III. c. 5, s. 4). Under the Finance Act, '66, s. 31, the amount assessed may not exceed the amount which would be produced by a rate of 1s. in the £ on the "annual value." For the purposes of sect. 31 of that Act "annual value" is the annual value as assessed under Schedule A in the Income Tax Act, '42. The assessment of the land tax rests exclusively with the Land Tax Commissioners for each Division, and every person intending to appeal must give notice of his intention in writing to one or more of the assessors. Appeals once heard and determined by the Commissioners are final. If the income of an owner is less than £160 per annum, he can claim exemption from land tax; or the remission of half the tax if his income does not exceed £400. Any person having an estate or interest in lands and tenements (except tenants at rack rent, or holding under the Crown) may contract for the redemption of the land tax charged thereon. By the Finance Act '96 the consideration for the redemption has been fixed at thirty times the amount of the tax. Information as to redemption may be obtained from the clerk to the Commissioners of Taxes for the division in which the land tax desired to be redeemed is assessed, or (by letter) from the Registrar of Land Tax, Inland Revenue Office, Somerset House, London, W.C.

Land Values, English League for the Taxation of. This League was founded, under the name of the Land Reform Union, in April '83, "to advance the principles laid down by Henry George in 'Progress and Poverty' for the restoration of the land to the people." The League devotes special attention to lantern lectures. Its reports and publications deal with every aspect of the Land Question. Monthly paper, Land Values. President, J. H. Whitley, M.P.; Gen. Sec., Frederick Verinder; Office, 376 and 377, Strand, London, W.C.

Lang, Andrew, M.A., LL.D., hon. D.Lit., Oxford, was b. at Selkirk, 1844, and ed. at Edinburgh Academy, St. Andrews University, and Balliol College (first class in classics). Elected a Fellow of Merton '68. He was long on the literary staff of the Daily News, is a well-known contributor to periodical literature, and writes "At the Sign of the Ship," in Longman's Magazine. His "Ballads and Lyrics of Old France," and "Ballades in Blue China," '81, brought him into prominent notice, and "Helen of Troy," "Rhymes à la Mode," and "Custom, Ritual, and Myth," increased his reputation. He is joint translator, with Prof. Butcher, of the "Odyssey," and with Mr. Myers and Mr. Leaf of the "Iliad." He was appointed Gifford Lecturer on Natural Religion at St. Andrews University, '89. Amongst his books are "Lost Leaders" (reprinted from the Daily News), "The Life of Lord Idlesleigh," "Essays in Little," "Angling Sketches," "Homer and the Epic," "Ban and Arrière Ban," "A Monk of Fife" (a novel), "Life of John Gibson Lockhart," "Pickle the Spy," a history of the obscure years of Prince Charles, "Modern Mythology," "The Book of Dreams and Ghosts," "The Making of Religion," and "The Disentanglers." Mr. Lang has also edited a charming series of "Fairy Tales" in six books, a "Blue Poetry Book," two books of "True Stories," etc., all for children. Address: 1, Marloes Road, W.

Lang, Very Rev. John Marshall, C.V.O., D.D., LL.D., b. at Glassford, Lanarkshire, 1834. Ed. at home privately, at Glasgow High School, and at the University. Ordained in the Church of Scotland, '56, he became minister of East Parish (Aberdeen), Fyvie, Anderston (Glasgow), Morningside (Edinburgh), and in '73 Barony (Glasgow), where he succeeded Dr. Norman Macleod. In '93 he was elected Moderator of the General Assembly, and was President of the Pan-Presbyterian Alliance '97-1900. Principal of the University of Aberdeen in 1900, and an Hon. Member of the Imperial University of St. Petersburg. C.V.O. Nov. 9th, 1906. His works include "Ancient Religions of Central America," "The Anglican Church," "The Last Supper of our Lord," "Life: is it worth Living?" "The Expansion of the Christian Life" (Duff Lecture), and "The Church and its Social Mission" (Baird Lecture). His son, the Right Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang, D.D., was during 1901 appointed a residential Canon of St. Paul's and consecrated as Bishop of Stepney. Chanonry Lodge, Old Aberdeen.

Laurier, Sir Wilfrid, G.C.M.G., the first French-Canadian Premier of the Dominion, was b. at St. Lin, 1841, and educated for the bar. Called in '64, he rose rapidly in his profession, and in '71 was elected as a Liberal to the Quebec Provincial Assembly. In '74 he was elected to the Federal Assembly, and his high personal character, his undoubted loyalty and attachment to the connection of the colony with Great Britain, together with his great oratorical powers, which have earned for him the title "Silver-tongued Laurier," soon gave him high rank in the Liberal party. On the retirement of Mr. Blake in '91 he was chosen as leader of the Liberal party, and at the General Election of '96 he led his followers to a notable victory. His tariff legislation during '97, giving Great Britain the benefit of preferential trade with Canada, aroused much enthusiasm both in the colony and at home, and he was warmly welcomed when he came to London to attend the Jubilee festivities. He was then appointed a member of the Privy Council and made a G.C.M.G. In 1900 he again secured the approval both of the Dominion and of the Empire by the prompt despatch of Canadian troops to aid the mother country in South Africa, and led his party to another victory at the polls in November. He attended the Colonial Conference and the Coronation in England in 1902. He was again returned to power in 1904. See CANADA.

LAW COURTS OF THE UNITED KINGDOM.

I. ENGLAND AND WALES.

The English Courts of Law having jurisdiction in actions between parties are the House of Lords, the Supreme Court of Judicature, with its two main divisions—the Court of Appeal and the High Court of Justice—and the County Courts. In addition to these Courts, which have jurisdiction over all England, there are certain Local Courts of Record, of which the chief are: The Lord Mayor's Court in the City of London (which has a concurrent jurisdiction with the High Court in all matters affecting residents within the city or in which the cause of action arises in the city), the Chancery Court of Lancaster, the Liverpool Court of Passage, and the Salford Hundred Court. The Courts having criminal jurisdiction are the High Court of Justice (King's Bench Division), the Central Criminal Court, the Courts of Oyer and Terminer and Gaol Delivery (usually called the Assizes), the Courts of General Quarter Sessions in counties and boroughs, and the Petty Sessional Courts, metropolitan, county, and borough. Besides these Courts there are certain Ecclesiastical Courts having jurisdiction in matters affecting the churches, church property, and the discipline of the clergy of the Established Church.

Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council is the body by which appeals to the King in Council are heard. These are appeals from Colonial or Indian Courts, and from Ecclesiastical or Prize Courts in England. It is composed of the Lord Chancellor, Lord President, ex-Lords President, the Lords of Appeal in Ordinary, and of such other members of the Privy Council as shall from time to time hold or have held "High Judicial Office" within the meaning of the Appellate Jurisdiction Acts, 1876 and 1887; amongst the last of whom are now included the Earl of Halsbury, Lord Ashbourne, Lord Brampton, Lord Lindley, Sir Edward Fry, Sir Lord North, and Sir Alfred Wills; Lord James of Hereford and Sir Andrew Scoble, K.C.S.I., are Members of the Committee under sect. 1, and Sir Arthur Wilson, K.C.I.E., under sect. 30 of 3 and 4 Wm. IV. c. 41. By 58 and 59 Vict. cap. 44, it is enacted that if any person being or having been Chief Justice or a Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada or of a Superior Court in Canada or of any of the colonies of New South Wales, New Zealand, Queensland, South Australia, Tasmania, Victoria, Western Australia, Cape of Good Hope or Natal, is a member of the Privy Council, he shall be a member of the Judicial Committee, but the number of persons being members of the Committee under this Act is not to exceed five at any one time. Sir Samuel James Way, Bart., C.J. (South Australia), Sir J. H. de Villiers, K.C.M.G., C.J. (Cape of Good Hope), Sir Henry Strong, late C.J. (Canada), and Sir H. E. Taschereau, late C.J. (Canada) are members of the Judicial Committee under this Act. Registrar of the Privy Council and Registrar of Ecclesiastical and Admiralty Causes, E. S. Hope, C.B., Barrister-at-Law. Office: Downing Street, Whitehall, S.W.

A List of Judges.

The following is a list of judges of the Supreme Court of Judicature:—Lord High Chancellor: Lord Loreburn. Court of Appeal: The Lord Chancellor, Lord Alverstone (Lord Chief Justice of England), the Right Hons. Sir R. H. Collins (Master of the Rolls), Sir J. G. Barnes (President of the Probate Division), Sir R. Vaughan Williams, Sir G. Farwell, Sir H. H. Cozens Hardy, Sir J. F. Moulton, and Sir H. B. Buckley.

Chancery Division: Lord Chancellor, Sir A. Kekewich, Sir M. Ingle Joyce, Sir C. Swinfen Eady, Sir T. R. Warrington, Sir R. Neville, and Sir R. J. Parker.

King's Bench Division: Lord Alverstone, Sir W. Grantham, Sir J. C. Lawrence, Sir W. R. Kennedy, Sir E. Ridley, Sir J. C. Bigham, Sir C. J. Darling, Sir A. M. Channell, Sir W. G. F. Phillimore, Bart., Sir T. B. Bucknill, Sir J. Walton, Sir A. R. Jelf, Sir R. Bray, Sir A. T. Lawrence, and Sir H. Sutton.

Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division: Sir J. G. Barnes (President), and Sir H. Bargrave Deane.

Other Judges are the Lords of Appeal in Ordinary, Lords Macnaghten, Davey, Robertson, and Atkinson. Paid Member of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council: Sir Arthur Wilson, K.C.I.E. Court of Arches: Sir Lewis T. Dibdin. Consistory Court: Mr. T. H. Tristram, D.C.L. Bankruptcy Court: Sir J. C. Bigham. Railway and Canal Commission: Sir J. C. Bigham, Lord Stormonth-Darling, Mr. Justice Madden, the Hon. A. E. Gathorne-Hardy, and Sir J. T. Woodhouse. As to salaries, see FINANCE, NATIONAL, III., p. 157.

I. Civil Courts.

i. The House of Lords is the final Court of Appeal for England (and also for Scotland and Ireland) in all civil matters. No appeal can be brought to the House of Lords except from a judgment of the Court of Appeal, and in some cases then only by leave of the Court of Appeal. The judges are the Lord Chancellor, the Lords of Appeal in Ordinary—who are judges appointed to that office at a salary, and who as such become life members of the House of Lords, both in its judicial and legislative capacities—and such members of the House of Lords as have held high judicial office in England, Scotland, or Ireland, which includes ex-lord chancellors and ex-judges of the Supreme Court. To form a quorum for judicial business three of these persons must be present.

ii. The Supreme Court of Judicature consists of two main divisions—the Court of Appeal and the High Court of Justice. All appeals from a judge of the High Court and all divisions of that court, except on a criminal matter, and from many inferior courts, now go direct to the Court of Appeal. From its decisions an appeal in most cases lies to the House of Lords.

The High Court of Justice now consists of the Chancery Division, the King's Bench Division, and the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Division.

iii. The County Courts, have jurisdiction in all claims for debt or damages (with very few exceptions) not exceeding £100. They have exclusive jurisdiction under the Employers' Liability Act '80 and the Workmen's Compensation Act '87 (whatever may be the amount claimed) under the Tithes Act, and also outside the Metropolitan area in bankruptcy. They also have collateral jurisdiction with the High Court in many matters on the Chancery or Equity side, and in Admiralty and Probate. Besides actions that may be commenced in the County Court, many actions commenced in the High Court may be, and commonly are, sent down from the High Court and heard in the County Court. The Debtors Act '69 empowers a County Court Judge to commit to prison, for a term not exceeding six weeks, any debtor who can pay but will not pay. The Court fees payable are 1s. in the £ for each £ claimed on entering the plaint, and 1s. additional, and 2s. in the £ for the hearing, with a maximum of 21s. and 40s. respectively. There is an appeal to the High Court on a question of law, but not of fact, in cases where more than £20 is claimed, but where less than that sum is claimed leave to appeal must be obtained from the judge.

II. Criminal Courts.

i. The Court of Crown Cases Reserved is a statutory Court consisting of at least five judges of the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court, of which the Lord Chief Justice should be one, and is the Supreme Court of Appeal in all questions of criminal law. It is not a Court of Appeal "of fact." Questions of law can be brought before this Court on appeal from the Central Criminal Court, the Assize Courts, and the Courts of Quarter Sessions, but only if the Court below consents to reserve the point for the decision of the Court.

ii. King's Bench Division of the High Court. All proceedings in the nature of appeals on points of law from justices sitting in Petty Sessions come before the King's Bench Division of the High Court, by way of a case stated by the magistrates, or by mandamus or certiorari.

iii. The Central Criminal Court is a special statutory Court for the City and County of London, the County of Middlesex, and some portions of the Counties of Surrey, Kent, and Essex. It takes the place of the Assize Courts for these districts, and is also the Quarter Sessions Court for the City of London. Trials take place on true bills found by a grand jury before two of the judges of the Court and a petty jury.

iv. The Assizes, or the Courts of Gaol Delivery and Oyer and Terminer, are Circuit Courts of the High Court of Justice. At these Courts, which sit in the assize town of each county two or three times a year, are tried all criminal cases (except those triable at the Central Criminal Court, Quarter Sessions, or by Courts of Summary Jurisdiction). The Court usually consists of a judge of the King's Bench Division, sitting with a petty jury; but any King's Counsel may, as a commissioner of assize for his circuit, if specially appointed for the purpose, sit instead of a judge.

v. The judges of County Quarter Sessions are all the justices of the peace for the county. The chairman is only their spokesman, but on a criminal trial he practically acts in the same way as the judge at the Assizes. The judge of a Borough Quarter Sessions is the Recorder of the borough, who is sole judge, though the other magistrates attend. At Quarter Sessions all criminal cases, except those triable only at Assizes, can be tried. These Courts also hear appeals from summary convictions, where the penalty imposed is imprisonment without the option of a fine; appeals from certain other orders and convictions of justices where an appeal is given by statute; and appeals against rates.

vi. Courts of Summary Jurisdiction and Petty Sessions (usually called Police Courts) consist of two or more justices of the peace, or a stipendiary or a metropolitan magistrate.

III. Ecclesiastical Courts.

These are of three degrees of jurisdiction. First, purely spiritual courts, including the Archdeacon's Court, the Bishop's Consistory, and the Archbishop's Court; second, courts of mixed spiritual and secular jurisdiction—e.g., the Court of Arches and the Court of the Official Principal of York; and, third, courts of purely secular constitution—e.g., the Judicial Committee of Privy Council, which is the Court of Final Appeal in ecclesiastical causes. The judgments of the Judicial Committee may be upheld and enforced by any of the High Courts of Justice.

The Archdeacon's Court is a court of first instance, and appeals lie to the bishop; but its aid is seldom invoked.—Consistory. Every bishop has his Consistory Court held before his Chancellor or Commissary, in his cathedral church, or other convenient place in his diocese. In this court are granted faculties for the alteration, repair and renovation of churches. Nothing can be added to or taken from the ornaments of the Church except a faculty is obtained for the purpose. The Archbishop's Court, distinguished from the Provincial Court, is the canonical tribunal for the hearing of spiritual causes. Sir Lewis Dibdin's Court, or the old Court of Arches modified as stated, unites the powers of the jus canonium with new powers conceded by the Church Discipline Act, '41, and the similar statute of '74, exercising authority in both Provinces. The Registrar is Mr. F. Hugh Lee, and the Court is held at Church House, Westminster.

The Bishops assembled at Lambeth in January '99 resolved that a Bill for the Reform of the Ecclesiastical Courts, drawn on the lines laid down by the Royal Commissioners in '83, should be submitted to the Houses of Convocation. During 1900 and 1901 Convocation considered the subject, and a Joint Committee of both Houses presented a report on July 3rd, 1901. (For the resolutions then adopted see 1905 edition.)

II. SCOTLAND.

The principal Scottish Courts of Law having civil jurisdiction are (1) The House of Lords, which is the final Court of Appeal in Scottish as well as in English and Irish cases; (2) The Court of Session, sitting in Edinburgh, with its two main divisions, The Inner House and The Outer House; (3) The Sheriff Courts.

The principal Courts having criminal jurisdiction are (1) The High Court of Justiciary, (2) The Sheriff Courts.

The following is a list of the judges of the Court of Session, or, as they are more properly designated, Senators of the College of Justice:

Inner House, First Division—The Lord President (Lord Dunedin), Lord Pearson, Lord McLaren, Lord Kinnear. Second Division—The Lord Justice Clerk (Right Hon. Sir John Hay Athole Macdonald, K.C.B.), Lord Kingsburgh, Lord Kyllachy, Lord Stormonth-Darling, Lord Low.

Outer House, Permanent Lords Ordinary—Lord Ardwall, Lord Dundas, Lord Johnston, Lord Salvesen, Lord Mackenzie.

1. Civil Courts.

(i) The House of Lords. See under England and Wales.

(ii) The Court of Session consists of (1) the Inner House, with its two divisions of equal and co-ordinate authority:—The First Division, presided over by the Lord President of the whole Court, and the Second Division, presided over by the Lord Justice Clerk; and (2) The Outer House, consisting of the five Lords Ordinary sitting singly. The Inner House hears appeals from the judgments of the Lords Ordinary, from the Sheriff Courts, and from the Dean of Guild. It also acts as a court of first instance (1) where its nobile officium (or equitable power) is appealed to; (2) in actions appropriated to it by custom or by statute.

The Lords Ordinary have, generally speaking, original jurisdiction in all Scottish civil actions. In some cases this jurisdiction is exclusive; in other cases it is concurrent with that of the Sheriff Courts (q.v.). Where the value of the cause is not greater than £25 the cause cannot be brought before the Court of Session, but must be determined in one of the inferior courts. An appeal from a Lord Ordinary to a division of the Inner House is termed a Reclaiming Note.

The Bill Chamber is a department of the Court of Session which acts in some respects as a separate court.

(iii) The Sheriff Courts.—These are territorial courts, each sheriffdom consisting of a county or group of counties. The Sheriff Principal acts mainly as a judge of appeal from the judgments of his substitutes and as an administrative officer. The Sheriff-substitute is the ordinary judge of first instance in the Sheriff Court. He may entertain actions upon contracts or other personal obligations, however great their value, and actions relating to heritable right or title where the subject in dispute is not worth more than £50 a year or £1000 in value, but not actions relating to status. Besides presiding in the ordinary Sheriff Court, the Sheriff-substitute presides in the Debts Recovery Court and in the Small Debt Court.

In most cases an appeal from the Sheriff-substitute may be made to the Sheriff Principal, and then from him to one or other of the divisions of the Inner House of the Court of Session, or the appeal may be made directly to the latter. The High Court of Justiciary (see Criminal Courts) is somewhat anomalously the court provided by statute for appeals from the Sheriff Courts under the Small Debt Act, 1837.

2. Criminal Courts.

(i) The High Court of Justiciary.—This is the Supreme Criminal Court of Scotland. It is the only competent court for the trial of certain major offences, as treason, murder, etc., and in all cases in which by statute a higher punishment than imprisonment is directed. The High Court also sits as a Court of Appeal from the inferior criminal courts where some error in law or irregularity of procedure is alleged. A jury in criminal cases has fifteen members, and they may give a verdict by a majority. They may find the prisoner "guilty" or "not guilty," or they may find the charge "not proven." When a verdict of "not proven" has been given the prisoner is released, and cannot be tried again for the same offence, even though fresh evidence may have come to light.

(ii) The Sheriff Courts have jurisdiction where the offence is committed within the sheriffdom. They may in general try any offence for which the punishment is arbitrary. The greater offences are tried by a sheriff (or his substitute) and a jury. The smaller offences are tried summarily without a jury.

(iii) Borough Magistrates and Justices of the Peace have a common-law jurisdiction now confined to petty cases, and a statutory jurisdiction in certain minor contraventions of Acts of Parliament.

III. IRELAND.

The House of Lords is the final Court of Appeal. (See under England and Wales.)

As in England, there is a Supreme Court, divided into a Court of Appeal and a High Court of Justice, the latter being subdivided into (1) the Chancery Division (including the Landed Estates Court) and (2) the King's Bench Division (including the Courts for Probate and Matrimonial Causes, Admiralty, and Bankruptcy). The practice in these Courts is generally similar to that in the English Courts, except as regards Bankruptcy and the Land Courts.

County Courts.—These have jurisdiction in matters of contract and tort up to £50, in equity and probate up to £500, and in lunacy up to £700. There is an appeal, in equity, to the Chancery Division or to a Judge of Assize; and, in common law, to a Judge of Assize.

Criminal Courts.—There are (1) the Court of Crown Cases Reserved, and (2) the Assize Courts, similar to those in England; also (3) Courts of Quarter Sessions (presided over by a County Court judge), with wider jurisdiction than in England, though the more serious crimes are transmitted to the Assize Courts; and, finally, there are (4) the Courts of Summary Jurisdiction and Petty Sessions for preliminary inquiries and minor offences.

Trial by jury is the rule in the Criminal Courts except petty sessions, and the special courts consisting of two resident magistrates appointed under the Crimes Act.

The following is a list of the Judges of the Supreme Court:

Court of Appeal.—Rt. Hon. Sir S. Walker, Bart. (Lord Chancellor), Lord O'Brien (Lord Chief Justice), Sir A. M. Porter, Bart. (Master of the Rolls), Right Hon. C. Palles (Lord Chief Baron), Lord Justice FitzGibbon, Lord Justice Holmes.

Chancery Division.—Lord Chancellor, Master of the Rolls, D. P. Barton, J. Ross (Land Judge).

King's Bench Division.—Lord Chief Justice, Lord Chief Baron, W. D. Andrews (Probate and Matrimonial), W. M. Johnson (Admiralty), J. G. Gibson, D. H. Madden, W. Boyd (Bankruptcy), W. Kenny, G. Wright.

LAW SOCIETIES, ETC.

Inns of Court.

The Inns of Court are as follows:—

Inner Temple, Fleet Street. Sub-Treasurer, Sir Henry Lawrence; Clerk, J. H. Milton.

Middle Temple, Fleet Street. Under-Treasurer, J. W. Waldron.

Gray's Inn, Holborn. Under-Treasurer, Dennis W. Douthwaite.

Lincoln's Inn, Lincoln's Inn Fields. Steward, A. Weatherley Marriott.

At these Inns students for the Bar are entered. They are governed by Benchers.

Council of Legal Education.

The Council of Legal Education was established by the four Inns of Court in 1852 to superintend the education and examination of students for call to the Bar. The Council is charged with the education and examination of such students. It offers 12 scholarships of the annual value of £50 each, tenable for 3 years, on condition that the holder pursues a course of legal studies approved by the Council. The scholarship examinations were held in October in 1905, but in future are to be held in June. Chairman, Lord Macnaghten; Clerk, Frederick Dapp. Office, 15, Old Square, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.

Director of Legal Studies, Mr. W. Blake Odgers, LL.D., K.C.

The Bar Council.

General Council of the Bar. The Council is the accredited representative of the Bar, and its duty is to deal with all matters affecting the profession, and to take such action thereon as may be deemed expedient. The Council consists of: (1) the Attorney General and Solicitor General for the time being, and every former Attorney General or Solicitor General whilst remaining in actual practice at the Bar; (2) 48 practising barristers elected by the whole Bar (not less than 12 of the Inner Bar and not less than 24 of the Outer Bar), one-half of the total number retiring from office at the time for the close of the election in each year. A statement of the proceedings of the Council is published annually, and copies thereof are supplied to every barrister having an address in the Law List. The Council has received recognition at the hands of the legislature. Chairman, Mr. C. M. Warmington, K.C.; Vice-Chairman, Mr. W. English Harrison, K.C.; Hon. Treasurer, Mr. T. T. Methold; Secretary, Mr. Henry C. A. Bingley; Clerk, Mr. C. Worthy. Offices of the Council, 2, Hare Court, Temple, E.C.

The Law Society.

The Law Society was established in 1825, and a royal charter was obtained in Dec. '31. In '45 it was remodelled upon the principle of other learned and professional bodies, and received a new charter. This charter was amended by supplemental charters in '72 and 1903. Any solicitor practising in England or Ireland, and any writer practising in Scotland, as well as any solicitor or writer who has ceased to practise, is eligible for election as a member of the Society. The administration of business is in the hands of an elective council of forty ordinary members, of whom ten vacate their seats every year, and ten extraordinary members chosen by the Council from among those members of the Society who are members of provincial law societies, and are nominated by various groups of these societies. The President and Vice-President are annually elected by the members of the Society from the members of the Council. The members of the Society at present number over 8500. Its buildings are situated in Chancery Lane, and comprise a handsome hall and a library of upwards of 47,000 volumes. The general function of the Society resembles that which the Inns of Court discharge. It takes care of the professional training, character, and interests of solicitors. When it was founded no test was required from any person wishing to become a solicitor, beyond evidence of character and of having served under articles for the prescribed time. The Society instituted lectures on law in '33, and in '36 obtained from the judges authority to examine students on the completion of their articles. Since then Preliminary, Intermediate, Final and Honours Examinations have been added, and the entire control of all the examinations has been transferred to the Society. Under recent legislation, all cases of alleged malpractice by solicitors are heard before a specially appointed committee, which, when necessary, makes a report to the High Court, which has the power of striking off the names of the offenders from the roll. The committee has never undertaken the duty of prosecuting offenders against the criminal law, and no such duty, express or implied, is cast upon it by charter or statute. The committee, however, places any evidence it obtains at the disposal of the Public Prosecutor. Secretary, E. W. Williamson. Office, Chancery Lane.

LAW CASES, 1906.

An attempt is made in the following pages to bring under convenient headings readily recognisable by the layman some of the most important decisions of the legal year. Nearly every branch of law is illustrated; and while the object chiefly in view has been the collection of those decisions that are important to the man of affairs, it is hoped that the collection may be of use to the legal student in summarising the effect of the year's cases.

Civil Judicial Statistics, 1904.

The following table shows the chief changes mentioned in detail in the Civil Judicial Statistics for 1904:—

NOTE.—In this table bankruptcy and companies' winding-up proceedings are included in the figures for the Courts in which they were taken. The figures for Lancaster Chancery Court include a few proceedings in companies winding up in the Durham Chancery Court.

The total proceedings in 1903 were 1,458,449, the principal increase being 53,000 in the County Courts, where the proceedings are 4 to every 100 of the population. The percentage of cases heard and determined to those commenced was in 1904 32.75 and in 1903 33.40.

Bills of Sale.

In Swanley Coal Co. v. Denton (Gillespie claimant) it was held by the Court of Appeal, reversing the King's Bench, which in its turn had reversed the County Court Judge, that a bill of sale which included in its schedule the deeds of a leasehold house was not void because the inclusion of the deeds did not create a charge on the house but only on the documents. In the result two judges of the Court of Appeal and the County Court Judge held one way, and three judges of the King's Bench (including the Lord Chief Justice) and one judge of the Court of Appeal the other way.

Company Law.

On the application of the company Mr. Justice Buckley allowed the names of 1026 persons, who had subscribed for 48,000 shares, to be struck off the register of shareholders of the London Electro-Bus Co. on the ground that they had been induced to take the shares by misrepresentations made in the prospectus of the company. The shareholders whose names were so struck off were repaid by the company the amounts they had paid (In re London Electro-Bus Co., Ltd.).

The Court will wind up a company whose assets are covered by debentures if the circumstances render it desirable, although there is not likely to be any surplus (In re Alfredo Melson Co., Ltd.), and even if some of the assets will be forfeited by the winding-up order—e.g., a lease of value to the company but containing a clause for forfeiture in the event of winding-up (In re Crigglestone Coal Co., Ltd.).

Where the powers of the company are vested in the directors subject to such regulations as may from time to time be made by the company by extraordinary resolution, the directors are not bound to carry out a resolution of a general meeting carried by a simple majority (Automatic Self-cleansing Filter Syndicate, Ltd. v. Cunningham).

In Ridson Iron and Locomotive Works v. Furness a company incorporated in England had incurred liabilities in California, where the law makes every shareholder in a company trading there, wherever registered, personally liable for the proportion of the company's debts that his holding bears to the total subscribed capital. It was held by Court of Appeal that an English shareholder was not liable, as he did not by becoming a member authorise the directors to pledge his personal credit.

The House of Lords confirmed the decision of the Court of Appeal in Ruben and Ludenburg v. Great Fingate Consolidated Co., Ltd., that a company is not liable for any loss sustained by the issue by the secretary of the company of certificates forged by him.

In Peat v. Clayton the owner of shares in a company had executed a deed of assignment of all his property for the benefit of his creditors, but subsequently refused to execute a transfer of the shares and hand over the certificates to the trustee. The trustee gave notice of the assignment to the company. The debtor then sold the shares on the Stock Exchange and executed a transfer. The company refused to register the transfer. The trustee of the deed was held entitled to the shares as against the purchaser and the brokers who had bought in other shares and transferred them to the purchaser. In Hooper v. Herts the owner of shares executed a blank transfer and handed it with the certificates to Herts, with authority to raise money upon them for his own use. Herts handed them to the plaintiff and requested him to raise a loan on them. The plaintiff raised the money at his own bank in his own name, lodging the transfer and certificates, and handing the money to Herts. The money was not paid when due, and the Bank directed the plaintiff to fill his own name in the transfer, and sent the transfer with the certificates for registration. The owner, Wharton, objected to the registration, and the Company refused registration. The shares fell greatly in value, and it was held by the Court of Appeal, reversing Mr. Justice Kekewich, that the plaintiff could recover as damages the loss he had sustained by the delay in the registration.

In Ehrmann Bros. Ltd., Albert v. Ehrmann Bros. Ltd., the question arose as to the effect of the proviso inserted in the usual order extending the time for the registration of debentures not registered within the statutory period. It was held it did not protect unsecured creditors whose debts were in existence at the time of the registration, unless they obtained an actual charge, or there was a liquidation prior to the registration. Following this case, Mr. Justice Buckley was asked in In re Cardiff Workmen's Cottage Co., Ltd., to add words to the usual order giving protection to unsecured creditors, but refused to do so, holding that as the company could create new debentures that would prejudicially affect the unsecured creditors, they had no equity to be protected against the registration of existing debentures of which they had no knowledge.

If a liquidator disputes the validity of the plaintiff's claim, an action against a company will not be stayed because the company is in liquidation (Currie v. Consolidated Kent Collieries Corporation, Ltd.).

A private company borrowed money of its bankers, the permanent director guaranteeing the payment and giving private security. The company, at the same time, resolved to give to the permanent director, whenever called upon to do so, security on its assets by means of debentures. Two months later the company obtained a further overdraft on the same terms, and twelve months later, at the request of the permanent director, issued debentures to him to cover the amount for which he was liable to the bank. The directors, fourteen days later, resolved to call a meeting of shareholders to pass an extraordinary resolution for winding up. Two days later the permanent director registered his debentures, and two days after that the company resolved to wind up. The debenture was held to be a fraudulent preference (In re Jackson and Bassford, Ltd.).

Copyright.

In Stackman v. Paton it was held that the copyright of photographs of a school and school groups taken gratuitously, and on the chance of selling them to the proprietors, belonged not to the photographers but to the proprietors of the school—the permission to take the photographs on the chance of selling some of them to the proprietors was a good consideration, and the proprietors of the school were entitled to use the photographs they had purchased for advertising purposes and for insertion in a list of schools.

In Macmillan & Co. v. Dent & Co. the point to be decided was the right to publish sixteen letters written by Charles Lamb to Robert Lloyd between the years 1798 and 1810. Eventually these letters came into the hands of a Mr. and Mrs. Steeds, who, without parting with the actual possession of them, sold the copyright for £250 to Messrs. Smith, Elder, & Co., who in their turn granted an exclusive licence to Messrs. Macmillan for the purposes of one of their publications. Later, the defendants purchased the sixteen letters and some others from Mr. and Mrs. Steeds for £250, having been previously informed of the assignment of the copyright. The defendants then published the documents in an edition of Lamb's letters, and by their defence traversed the plea of copyright. Mr. Justice Kekewich's judgment was to the effect that the defendants had no right to publish the letters, because, after their assignment of the copyright, nothing remained to the Steeds but the physical possession of the letters themselves. The Court of Appeal held that the true effect of the agreement was to vest the letters in Smith, Elder, & Co., and that therefore the appellants' case must be dismissed with costs.

Criminal Law.

Evidence of previous operations and their avowed intention can be given on a charge of procuring abortion (Rex v. Bond).

A person who knowingly receives money stolen by a wife from her husband in such circumstances as to make the stealing an offence under the Married Women's Property Act, 1881, is properly charged with a misdemeanour and not with the felony of receiving stolen goods knowing them to be stolen (Rex v. Payne).

If a wife's goods are stolen from her husband's house, it is not sufficient to lay them in the indictment as the property of the husband (Rex v. Murray).

In Foss v. Best two important points of procedure on a case stated were decided. The case was granted by the justices on the application of the prosecutor on their refusal to commit on a charge of embezzlement, the justices holding that the facts did not amount to embezzlement in law. The defendant disappeared, and could not be served with the case. The King's Bench held they had no jurisdiction to hear the case without something equivalent to service on the defendant, and that on a refusal to commit on a criminal charge there is no right of appeal by way of case or otherwise.

Education Acts.

The important case of The King v. The West Riding County Council had not been decided by the House of Lords (Nov. 19th). The Court of Appeal held that the Education Act of 1902 does not compel the local education authority to pay the expenses of religious instruction in non-provided schools, and the authority is entitled to withhold such part of the teachers' salaries as may be deemed fairly referable to the time occupied in giving religious instruction. This decision was founded on the words of the Act which require the authority to maintain and keep efficient the non-provided schools as public elementary schools. Public elementary schools are efficient for the purposes of the Parliamentary grant if no religious instruction is given. See EDUCATION.

Byelaws not making any provision for partial or total exemption from school attendance in the case of a child between 12 and 14 who has obtained a certificate of previous due attendance in accordance with sect. 71 of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, prevent such a child being employed whole time in a factory, but do not prevent him being employed half time (Stevenson v. Geldstraw; Stevenson v. Craig).

In Crocker v. Plymouth Corporation it was held that there is no privity of contract between a teacher in a non-provided school and the local education authority, and that the teacher cannot maintain an action against the authority for his salary.

A county council delegated all its powers (except as provided by the Act) to its education committee; the committee delegated to a sub-committee its powers with regard to the appointment and dismissal of teachers, and the sub-committee appointed a section to deal with dismissals. Non-provided school managers applied to the section for approval of the dismissal of their head teacher. On Nov. 25th the section consented, on the 28th the education secretary wrote that "the committee will approve" the dismissal; on the 30th the managers dismissed, on Dec. 9th the sub-committee approved. On Dec. 18th the mistress commenced an action, on Jan. 19th she moved for an injunction; and on the 20th, before the conclusion of the argument, the education committee passed a resolution consenting to the dismissal. On these facts Mr. Justice Buckley gave some very important rulings, as follows:

1. That the effect of the delegation under sect. 17 was that the education committee was, in respect of any powers as to the dismissal of teachers, the educational authority.

2. That to the sub-committee there was delegated power to determine, and not merely to report to the committee upon, the question whether consent to dismissal should be given.

3. That the section was only a subordinate body, the duty of which was to consider and report to the sub-committee, and the action of which required the sub-committee's approval; and therefore that the consent of the education authority had not been obtained at the time of the dismissal.

4. That, if consent to dismissal was required, it was not a condition precedent to dismissal, but if given subsequently operated as a ratification of dismissal with the provisional consent of the section.

5. That the effect of sect. 7 was that, unless the education authority intervened, the power to appoint and dismiss teachers rested with the managers.

6. That if the education authority intervened, the managers must either yield to that authority's wishes, or disqualify the school for maintenance from public funds; and

7. That the requirements of the Act as to consent were operative only as between the managers and the education authority, and gave no right to the teacher.

It would appear to be a further effect of the judgment that if the managers of a non-provided school fail to comply with the requirements of any of the conditions and provisions contained in clauses (a) to (e) of sub-sect. 1 of sect. 7 of the Act of 1902, compliance with any requirement cannot be enforced by mandamus or otherwise—the only consequence of the failure being that the local education authority is released from its obligation to maintain the school out of public funds.

Husband and Wife.

The important case of Paquin, Ltd., v. Beauclerk, in which the House of Lords confirmed the Court of Appeal, decided that in a case where a wife contracts with her husband's authority and as his agent and in her married name, it is immaterial whether the other party knows or does not know she is a married woman, or whether they intend to trust the husband or the wife—the husband alone is responsible, and the wife cannot be sued, although she has separate estate.

A South Dakota divorce obtained by an English wife against a domiciled New Yorker on grounds not recognised by the courts of the State of New York or of England, but which divorce would be treated as good by the courts of New York, will be good in England (Armitage v. Attorney-General; Gillig v. Gillig).

A husband who cannot obtain a divorce owing to his own misconduct cannot obtain damages against a co-respondent (Cox v. Cox and Warde).

A wife who has obtained a separation order from the justices cannot subsequently obtain a divorce on the ground of desertion and adultery (Dodd v. Dodd).

Income Tax.

Allowance must be made every year for the actual wear-and-tear of plant for the current year, and where a shipowner owning a fleet of the average age of 31 years had had during that period 96 per cent. of the value allowed for depreciation, in addition to all actual repairs, he was still entitled to the actual depreciation of the 32nd year (John Hall, junr., & Co. v. Rickman).

The De Beers Consolidated Mines, Ltd., were held by the House of Lords liable to income tax, although a company registered in Cape Colony, because it had an office in London from which the real control was exercised (The De Beers Mines, Ltd. v. Howe).

The House of Lords also held, confirming the Court of Appeal, that an hotel company is not entitled to deduct from its assessable income damages and costs in an action brought against it for the negligence of one of its servants (Strong & Co. of Romsey, Ltd., v. Woodfield).

In Ashton v. Attorney-General it was held that a gas company cannot pay its maximum dividend ex income tax. The dividend plus the income tax on it must not exceed the maximum.

Alimony under a deed of separation is payable less income tax, even if the deed is entered into as the result of a compromise in court; but alimony given by the court has to be paid in full (In re Barry's Trusts; Barry v. Smart).

Landlord and Tenant.

Where, as a condition of granting a licence to assign, the lessor required the assignee to enter into new covenants with him to observe the covenants of the lease, the Court of Appeal held this was not a breach of the Conveyancing Act, 1892, sect. 3, and that the assignee could be sued on his covenants (Waite v. Jennings).

A covenant by a lessor to repair any part of the building is a covenant to repair on notice and not otherwise (Torrens v. Walker).

An agreement for a tenancy at a yearly rate, determinable by three calendar months' notice in writing, is a yearly tenancy determined by three months' notice to expire at the end of any year of the tenancy (Lewis v. Barker).

A tenancy for one year, "with an option of a lease of the same after the aforesaid time at a rental of £30 per annum," gives to the tenant exercising the option a tenancy for at least one further year, and possibly for life (Austin v. Newham).

Licensing Laws.

A number of points of practice under the Licensing Act, 1904, were decided.

A seven years' licence may be provisionally granted for a new building to be erected, and will date from the final order of the justices approving the building (Rex v. Johnstone, Ex parte Cobold).

The granting or refusing of a "provisional" licence is a judicial act, and can be reviewed by certiorari. A "provisional" licence must not be granted if there is a proper objection to the renewal of the licence apart from redundancy, but the licence should be refused (Rex v. Woodhouse).

At the hearing before the compensation authority, the counsel for the licensee may ask questions in cross-examination as to the conduct of adjoining houses not referred to quarter sessions, with a view to showing they are really the redundant houses (Morgan v. Aylesford Justices).

There is no appeal from County Borough Sessions to the County Sessions on a refusal to renew (Rex v. Southampton Justices); and in the same case it was held that the County Borough "quarter sessions"—that is, the whole body of the justices—had power to state a case, the proceedings being judicial.

In Rex v. Leeds it was held that in a county borough where no rules have been made with the approval of the Secretary of State for the appointment of a committee or defining a quorum, at least a majority of the whole body of justices not disqualified must be present and adjudicate at every meeting of the compensation authority.

The most important case was In re Ashby's Cobham Brewery Co., decided by Mr. Justice Kennedy on appeal from the Commissioners of Inland Revenue as to the proper method of calculating the compensation. The valuation approved was as follows:—

Value of freehold premises when licensed, 18 years' purchase of	£	s.	d.
Add value of beer trade on profits earned: 169 barrels at 12s. 6d. per barrel, and 10 years' purchase	1393	15	0
Add for spirit trade	18	15	0
Depreciation of trade fixtures	25	0	0
	1797	10	0
Deduct value of freehold of premises when licence taken away	300	0	0
Amount of compensation	£1497	10	0

The principles settled were that the value of the licence in the case of a tied house is to be ascertained by adding to the capital value of the premises calculated on the rent actually paid the capital value of the profit made by the brewer on the beer sold, but adding nothing for the tenant's profits and deducting the freehold value of the premises when unlicensed. The profit per barrel of course will depend on the actual profit of the particular brewer, and the quantity of beer sold is to be an average for a fair number of years—in practice three. Nothing is to be included in the valuation in respect of the tenant's interest, but a sum is to be added for depreciation of trade fixtures.

Where a brewery sends out beer by carmen who have orders to supply only the beer previously ordered by the customer and take the money for it, the officer of the brewery holding the licence cannot be convicted of having sold beer where he was not authorised to sell it if the drayman sells a crate of beer to a person who has not previously ordered it, as such a sale is not within the scope of the drayman's employment (Boyle v. Smith).

In Elias v. Dunlop it was held that a grocer having two shops, at one of which he held a licence and at the other not, was liable to be convicted of selling without a licence if he took an order at the shop where he did not hold the licence and supplied the beer from the other shop where he did.

Local Government.

A borough treasurer, who was a banker and received no remuneration, was restrained from charging interest on an overdraft by the Corporation where the Corporation had exhausted all its borrowing powers before making the overdraft, the overdraft being an unauthorised borrowing (Attorney-General v. de Winton).

A highway presumably includes all the land between the hedges; and a local authority which sought to make up an ancient highway which had been widened by filling in a ditch as a new road under the last paragraph of sect. 150 of the Public Health Act 1875 failed, the County Court judge holding as a fact, and being upheld by the King's Bench, that the ditch was part of the highway (Chorley Corporation v. Nightingale).

A local authority owning an infectious hospital is not liable for damages because its duly qualified doctor discharges a patient before such patient has ceased to be in a condition to cause infection. They perform their duty by employing a duly qualified doctor (Evans v. Liverpool Corporation).

An illegitimate child can acquire a settlement for itself by residence before sixteen (Woolwich Union v. Fulham Union).

The period of six months' absence from the meetings of a local authority to vacate the seat runs from the first meeting in such period from which the member absented himself, and not from the last meeting at which he was present (Kershaw v. Shoreditch Borough Council).

A contract of an urban authority under the Public Health Act 1875 is not void because it does not contain any penalty clause. The provisions of the Act on this head are directory only (Soothill Upper Urban Council v. Wakefield Rural District Council).

A local authority that causes damage by pouring sewage into a channel too small for the purpose, although originally large enough, is guilty of negligence, and liable to the owner for any damage so caused to private property (Hawthorn Corporation v. Kammlink).

In Wolfenden v. McCulloch it was held that where the milk was deficient in butter fat owing to the interval that had been allowed to elapse between the milkings the justices were not bound to convict.

It is not necessary for the sanitary inspector of a London borough to have the express authority of the Council to prosecute on a charge of "having in his possession unsound meat for the purposes of sale." A private person can prosecute, and so therefore can an inspector without authority; and if he purports to act on behalf of the Council, these words can be struck out of information and summons as surplusage (Giebler v. Manning).

A percentage added to the costs of road repairs in the Metropolis for expenses of supervision, etc., cannot be recovered by the local authority (Ballard v. Wandsworth Borough Council).

A mews or private courtyard, when once paved under order of the local authority, has to be kept in repair by the owner; but the authority cannot require him to adopt some new form of pavement (Harrison v. New Street Mews).

In Hornsey Corporation v. Birkbeck Freehold Land Society it was held that a local authority has no jurisdiction under sect. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, to charge a proportion of the expenses of making up a street on the owners or occupiers of premises which, though fronting, adjoining, or abutting on the street, are outside the boundary of the local authority.

Master and Servant.

Where an engine and driver are let out, the hirers having the control of the driver and directing him what to do, the driver is in the employment of the hirers so as to render them liable for his negligence, and the owner of the engine and employer of the driver is not liable (Dewar v. Tasker).

In Devonald v. Rosser & Sons a rollerman employed in tin-works for many years and paid by piecework, one of the terms of the employment being that the engagement could only be determined by 28 days' written notice, was held by the Court of Appeal to be entitled to be found a reasonable amount of work during the currency of the notice.

(See also under Workmen's Compensation.)

Money Lending.

In Carringtons, Ltd., v. Smith, 75 per cent. per annum was held a not unreasonable rate of interest on a loan of £150 to a director of a company with an income of £1000 a year, and possessed of furniture and pictures of considerable value made without security, except two bills for £72 and £150, repayable by 6 and 12 monthly instalments. The borrower was pressed for money, but not actually threatened by his creditors with proceedings.

In Bonnard v. Dott it was held that an unregistered money lender cannot only not recover his loan, but that the borrower can recover from him any securities he has lodged with him.

Negligence.

In Clark v. London General Omnibus Co. a father brought an action under Lord Campbell's Act 1846 and at common law claiming damages for loss occasioned by his daughter being killed while riding a bicycle by one of the defendant company's 'buses. He claimed (a) funeral expenses, (b) travelling expenses incurred to recruit the health of himself and his wife owing to the shock, (c) the damage to the bicycle, and (d) loss of his daughter's services. The jury found for £14 under head (a), and £6 under head (c), but nothing under the other heads. The Court of Appeal set aside the verdict, and held that the father had no remedy.

In Bullock v. London General Omnibus Co., it was held that where a plaintiff brings an action against two parties contributing to an accident, not knowing which defendant is liable, and it is held that only one of them was negligent, the Court may in a proper case add the costs of the successful defendant which it directs the plaintiff to pay to the damages recoverable by the plaintiff against the other defendant.

Property.

A company owning leaseholds went into liquidation, and transferred its assets to a new company, which paid the purchase money and took possession of all the assets, including the leaseholds, but did not take an assignment of the leaseholds. The old company was then dissolved, in pursuance of sect. 143 of the Companies Act 1862. The Court appointed a "new trustee" under the Trustees Act 1893, sect. 25, to convey the leaseholds to the new company. (In re No. 9, Bomore Road.)

A forged transfer confers no title on the transferee acting in good faith for valuable consideration, and the transferee, on the register being rectified by restoring the name of the true owner, has no claim to compensation. A solicitor forged a transfer of a registered charge, and handed it with the charge certificate to a transferee for value. He registered the transfer, but his name was removed from the register without compensation. (Attorney-General v. Odell.)

On conviction for felony the whole of the felon's property, real and personal, passes to his administrator appointed under the Forfeiture Act 1870, with power to sell and convey, but the administrator cannot bar an estate tail. The felon, however, himself can, as the barring of an entail is not an act of alienation. (In re Gaskell and Walter's Contract.)

A power contained in a contract for sale to rescind on account of any requisition which the vendor declines to answer, must not be exercised arbitrarily. It is arbitrary to refuse to give the date of birth of a child, evidence of whose birth is a necessary part of the title, if the vendor has ready means of obtaining it (Quinion v. Home), and it is unreasonable to rescind in order to avoid payment of compensation for some variation in the description. (In re Jackson v. Hayden's Contract.)

Registration Law.

A very important case, leading to many interesting decisions in the Registration Courts, and considerable additions to the roll of Parliamentary and municipal electors, was Kent v. Fittall, in which the Court of Appeal held that it is not conclusive against a person living in another's house, being an occupier, that the landlord lives on the premises. Previously this had been regarded as a conclusive test between "lodgers" and "occupiers." The importance to the voter is that if he is an occupier he can vote at a municipal election while a lodger cannot, and he can carry on his qualification from one place in the same town to another by means of the "successive occupation" qualification.

Trade.

In Kemp v. Baerselman, Kemp, who was a cake manufacturer, contracted with the defendants that they should supply him with all the eggs he wanted in his business. He sold his business to a company, and purported to assign the contract to them. The defendants refused to supply the company. The contract was held to be a personal contract and not assignable.

In Diestal v. Stevenson a contract for the sale of coal to be delivered in Germany provided a penalty of 1s. a ton on the portion unexecuted. Default was made, and the plaintiff claimed to disregard the 1s. penalty "as a penalty," and not agreed or liquidated damages, and to claim the actual damage, which exceeded 1s. a ton. The Court, however, held that on the true construction of the contract the 1s. a ton was to be treated as liquidated damages. And in Fye v. British Automobile Commercial Syndicate, Ltd., it was held that the paying of a deposit on the making of a contract did not necessarily make the amount deposited liquidated damages, but the Court must decide what was the true intention of the parties.

An auctioneer is not a trader, and a partner in a firm of auctioneers has therefore no implied authority to bind the firm by accepting a bill of exchange in the firm's name (Wheatley v. Smithers).

In the case of In re Brindley ex-parte Taylor, Sons & Co., Lord Justice Cozens-Hardy expressed the opinion that a clause in a deed of arrangement allowing the trustee to pay in full or otherwise than by dividends any creditor or creditors who should decline to execute or assent to the deed was improper, as providing a means of bribing a creditor to assent to the deed, and might go far towards invalidating the deed altogether.

A commercial traveller's commission is part of his salary, and as such a good preferential debt in bankruptcy (Re Klein ex-parte Goodwin).

A creditor who has so acted that he cannot avail himself of a deed of arrangement as an act of bankruptcy can, if he is not actually bound by the deed, file a petition founded on some other available act of bankruptcy, and so avoid the deed (In re Mills ex-parte Mills).

A very important point was decided in Ponsford, Baker & Co. v. Union of London and Smiths Bank. The plaintiffs, a firm of stockbrokers, were declared defaulters on the Stock Exchange, and so committed an act of bankruptcy. The bank knew of this, and refused to allow the plaintiffs and the official assignee of the Stock Exchange to redeem securities they held, on the ground that for three months after an act of bankruptcy of which they had notice no one could make a good title to redeem except a trustee in bankruptcy. The Court of Appeal, reversing Mr. Justice Buckley and the case of In re Lawford and Lawrence (1902), held that this was the correct view of the law, but that the official assignee should be allowed to redeem if he gave an undertaking to hold till the bankruptcy or the expiration of three months from the act of bankruptcy.

One of two partners without authority signed a deed assigning book debts in his partner's name as well as his own. It was held a good equitable assignment, on the ground that an assignment of book debts was within the authority of one partner (In re Briggs & Co.).

In Bannatyne v. D. and C. MacIver it was held, where the manager of the London branch of a country firm, who had the right to draw on the London banking account, borrowed money and used part of it in paying the firm's debts, although the firm had supplied him with the necessary money, and appropriated the firm's money to his own uses, that the lender was entitled to recover from the firm so much of the money lent by him as was actually used in paying the firm's debts.

Goods delivered to a tradesman on the terms of a memorandum in the following words: "On approbation, on sale for cash only or return; goods had on approbation or on sale or return remain the property of (the merchant) until such goods are settled for or charged," are not goods on sale or return within sect. 18, rule 4 of the Sale of Goods Act, 1893; the property remains in the merchant, and he can maintain an action for them against the pledgee of the tradesman (Weiner v. Gill, Weiner v. Smith).

Wills.

A gift of an annuity to be bought by the executors carries with it a right in the annuitant to have the sum necessary to purchase the annuity instead of the annuity, and if the annuitant dies before the purchase is made, his executors can claim to be paid the amount that would have had to be paid for the annuity at the date of the testator's death (In re Robbins—Robbins v. Legge).

A testator made a will in '96 and a codicil in '98, the effect of which was to give his estate to his wife for life and then to his children. In 1905, the day before his death, he signed in the presence of two witnesses, who duly attested the signing, a document containing only the words, "All for mother." It was proved and admitted that "mother" meant the widow. The widow, who was executor with her son of the first will and codicil, proved them in common form, and subsequently sought to have the probate set aside and the document "All for mother" admitted to probate. This was done, administration being granted to her of the estate, worth about £7000, with the document which was held to be the last will, revoking the earlier one attached. (Thorn v. Dickens.)

In In re Loveland—Loveland v. Loveland, the testator had married his niece in Scotland, the marriage being void and the children (if any) illegitimate. By his will, made before the birth of any child, he gave his estate to his niece by name for life, and then in trust for all her children living at his decease. A child was subsequently born, and it was held that her child took, although illegitimate.

In In re Correllis—Freeborn v. Napper, the testator was a member of a family all of whom were illegitimate, the father and mother never having married. They lived, however, as a family, and always treated one another as lawful relatives. A bequest to nephews and nieces was held to cover all the children of these natural brothers and sisters, although not named.

A legacy to a creditor is by the general rule a satisfaction of the debt; and in a case where a testatrix gave a legacy of £400 to a sister to whom she owed £150, on which interest was payable and had been paid up to the date of death, it was held that the rule applied, although the sister was executrix and the debt carried interest, while the legacy for one year would not (In re Rattenberry—Ray v. Grant).

In Sampson v. Sampson, Mr. Justice Kekewich held that under the statutory power to appoint new trustees the appointor cannot appoint himself. Trustees are bound to deduct income tax from annuities, and if annuities are paid in full they can be called upon to reimburse the trust estate (In re Sharp—Rickett v. Rickett).

Workmen's Compensation.

A farm carpenter who at times assisted in harvesting, etc., may be an agricultural servant (Smith v. Coles).

Employment on a gas main at some distance from the gas works is not employment in or about the gas works (Spacey v. Dowlais East Coke Co.).

The laying of a telephone wire under a tramway was held to be work of "alteration of a railroad," although the lines were not disturbed, and only the road on the outside of and between the double track, but not between the lines of each track (Adams v. Shaddock).

In Rogers v. Cardiff Corporation the workman employed by the Corporation to keep the overhead equipment of a tramway belonging to them in order was injured while walking along the line from one place where he had carried out repairs to another some distance off where he was to do repairs. The Court held the whole tramway was an engineering work, and the workman recovered compensation.

In Tullock v. Waygood & Co. the repair of a hydraulic lift, the workman making use of the machinery of the lift itself for the purpose, was held to be an "engineering work"; but the erecting of a machine, if no mechanical power is used for its erection, is not (Murphy v. O'Donnell).

Unloading rails at a distance of 700 yards from the actual operation of relaying a tramline is not work on, in, or about an engineering work (Buck v. Dick, Kerr & Co.).

An employé of a firm of shipwrights employed on repairs to a ship in a dry dock cannot recover from his employers unless they have the "occupation" of the dock (Burden v. Gregson).

It is serious and wilful misconduct to disobey a written rule made under the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, although the workman disobeying may not have known of the rule, and in doing what he did was following the usual custom (Dotson v. United Collieries, Ltd.). But it is not serious and wilful misconduct to use a lift which the workmen were forbidden to use except under special conditions (Johnson v. Marshall).

In a Scotch case a father whose average weekly earnings for four weeks were £145.11d. was held not in part dependent on a son who gave him 10s. a week (Arrol & Co. v. Kelly). In Osmond v. Campbell the widow was in part dependent, she earning something for herself, and the county court judge gave her £150. She would have been entitled to £155 os. 6d. if wholly dependent. The Court of Appeal upheld the decision.

The claim need not be in writing. The arbitrator can decide on the facts and admissions, whether a claim was made or not (Lowe v. Myers); but in Scotland it was held that it must be for a definite amount (Maver v. Park).

If a workman bringing an action under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, loses, and asks to have his compensation assessed under the Workmen's Compensation Act, this is a final election, and he cannot obtain a new trial of his action or appeal from the judgment (Neale v. Electric and Ordnance Accessories Co.).

League of the Empire. The objects of the League are to further friendly and educational intercourse between schools and other educational institutions of the Empire, and to bring about a large co-operation between the different classes, as also between the different countries of the Empire for their mutual benefit. The League is officially recognised by the Education Departments of many of the Colonies, and has held an exhibition of the schools of the Empire at the Crystal Palace. Hon. Sec., Mrs. Ord Marshall. Office, Caxton Hall, Westminster.

Legal Tender. The following are legal tender up to and including the annexed amounts:—

Of the	{	Gold coins . . .	up to any amount.
Royal	{	Silver coins . . .	£2.
Mint.	{	1d. and ½d. coins . . .	1s.
	{	½d. coins (farthings) . . .	6d.

Bank of England notes are legal tender in England and Wales (except by the Bank of England itself), but a creditor cannot be compelled to give change.

Legion of Honour, The. Instituted by Napoleon when First Consul of France (May 1802), and intended as a reward for military and civil services. There were originally four grades—Grands Officers, Commandants, Officers, and Légionnaires (see ed. '87). On the coronation of Napoleon I. the Grand Officers were divided into two classes. The constitution of the Legion was remodelled by Napoleon III. in '52, and now it includes the following grades in order: Grands Croix, Grands Officers, Commandeurs, Officers, and Chevaliers. The President of the Republic is the Grand Master of the Order. Membership of the Order is for life.

L'Entente Cordiale, founded in 1898, has about 580 members. Its objects are to maintain and perpetuate friendly social intercourse between the two nations. Two scholarships, enabling elementary scholars to spend a month in France, are offered for competition; and two scholarships are open to University students on condition that they go through a course at a French University. President, Lord Colebrooke. Chairman, A. Barton Kent, Esq., 31, Marlborough Place, N.W.; Hon. Sec., W. H. Sands, Esq., 6, Fig Tree Court, Temple, E.C.

Liberator Relief Fund. This Fund was started in Dec. 1892 to relieve the widespread misery caused by the disastrous failure of the Balfour group of companies. The total to which the Fund has attained is £131,269, of which more than £113,000 has been expended, the balance being invested for the permanent relief of the most aged and needy sufferers. Income, 1905, by subscriptions and donations, £4374 10s. 7d.; payments, £6148 10s., in 2015 grants to 1050 sufferers, five-sixths of whom are aged and afflicted widows and spinsters. Secretary, Rev. J. Stockwell Watts. Office: 16, Farringdon Street, London, E.C.

LIBERIA.

Liberia is a negro republic on the coast of West Africa, lying between the French colony of the Ivory Coast on the east and Sierra Leone on the west, and between the French possessions in the interior and the sea. Liberia was founded in '22 by American philanthropists for the settlement of freedmen. It was declared independent in '47, was recognised as a sovereign state by Great Britain in '48, and by the United States in '62. The constitution is on the model of that of the United States. The President is elected for two years, the House of Representatives (14 members) for two years, and the Senate (9 members) for four.

The development of the country is hindered by the laws prohibiting any but Liberian subjects from holding land, and forbidding foreigners to trade in the interior or anywhere except at the official ports of entry. There has been much inter-tribal warfare, also, in the interior, but a conference was held at Monrovia in 1904, at which all the important chiefs signed a declaration of peace. There are magnificent forests in the interior, and much mineral wealth exists, some of which is being prospected by the West African Gold Concessions Company. The chief products are palm oil, coffee, rubber, and ivory. Cotton is indigenous, but is not cultivated to any extent.

Area about 35,000 sq. m.; pop. 1,500,000, including about 20,000 civilised Americo-Liberians, the rest being natives. Capital, Monrovia, pop. 5000.

Revenue, 1900, £40,000; expenditure, £40,000. Imports, 1901, £120,000; exports, £99,000. In '71 a debt of £100,000 was contracted in England, on which no interest was paid. Under an arrangement made in '99, the service of the debt, with reduced interest, has been resumed; and in 1905 it stood at £96,197, including £18,747 arrears of interest.

President, Arthur Barclay (elected May 1903), took office Jan. 1904.

British Consul, Captain C. Braithwaite Wallis, at Monrovia.

Consul-General in London (and acting Chargé d'Affaires), Henry Hayman.—Consul, S. de Stein, 3, Coleman Street, E.C.

Liberty and Property Defence League, The (motto "Self-help versus State-help"), was established in 1882 for maintaining security and freedom of contract, for upholding proprietary rights, and for resisting socialistic legislation. Federated with the League are about 220 Defence and Protection Societies, representing the chief industries in the kingdom. Chairman, Earl of Wemyss. Central offices, 25, Victoria St., S.W.

LIBRARIES OF THE UNITED KINGDOM.

The special feature of the British library system has been the work done under the Public Libraries Acts. These Acts date from 1850, the Act of that year having been followed by Acts extending the principle to Scotland and Ireland and amending matters of detail. A consolidating Act was carried in '92. The Acts enable towns, local board districts, and parishes to establish libraries, to be maintained by a rate not exceeding 1d. in the £.

The libraries in the County of London, established under the Public Libraries' Acts, contain about 1,000,000 volumes, and issue between 6,000,000 and 7,000,000 volumes annually.

Of the older libraries of the country the most important, of course, is that of the British Museum (q.v.), which is only exceeded in extent by the Bibliothèque Nationale at Paris. It possesses over 2,000,000 volumes and 100,000 MSS. and charters. It is entitled under the Copyright Acts to a copy of every work published in this country—a privilege which is also enjoyed by the Bodleian Library, Oxford (600,000 vols. and 30,000 MSS.), and the Cambridge University Library (550,000 vols. and 5000 MSS.), the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh (430,000 vols. and 3000 MSS.), and the library of Trinity College, Dublin (238,000 vols. and 2000 MSS.). Valuable and extensive libraries are attached to the other universities, to the colleges of Oxford and Cambridge, and to most cathedrals.

The Library Association, founded '77, incorporated by Royal Charter '98, now numbers over 600 members, including chairmen and members of committees and the chief librarians of the country. A list of the municipal and other libraries in the United Kingdom, as well as the principal libraries of the British Colonies, is published in the "Year-Book" of the Library Association, published by the Association at Whitcomb House, Whitcomb Street, Pall Mall East, price 1s. net. President, Sir William Bailey; Hon. Secretary, L. Stanley Jast, Whitcomb House, Whitcomb Street, Pall Mall East.

LICENSING STATISTICS.

The number of licensed premises in England and Wales in 1905 was 124,571, made up thus:

Full Victuallers' Licences . . . . .	66,466
Beerhouses . . . . .	31,876†
Refreshment Houses . . . . .	935
Off Licences—Shops, etc. . . . .	14,327
" Beerhouses, etc. . . . .	10,967
Total . . . . .	124,571

The number of Registered Clubs was 6554.

Wine and Spirit Dealers' Retail Licences, 1661.

* The stamp duties, etc., bring this sum up to about £30.

† Of these 14,054 were known to be "ante '69."

The number of convictions for drunkenness in 1905 was 207,171, and the number of persons convicted was 184,620, though this figure cannot be taken as strictly accurate. Of the total 88,742 were known to have been not previously convicted, and 44,964 to have been previously convicted persons. There were 415 committals to inebriate reformatories, and 469 persons were black-listed.

There was published in 1906 a blue-book, "Licensing Statistics, 1905," in which the above figures were combined to show the proportions they bore to one another for every district in England and Wales. The totals give the following results:—

Licensed Premises—On . . . . .	30'5	} per 10,000 of the population.
" Off . . . . .	7'8
Registered Clubs . . . . .	2'01
Convictions for drunkenness 63'7		}

The number of licences the renewal of which was refused in England and Wales in 1905 was 108 "on" and 23 "off"; there were 78 appeals to Quarter Sessions, with the result that the net number of licences refused was 80 "on" and 21 "off."

The number of licences the renewal of which was not applied for in England and Wales in 1905 was 532, including 226 "on" and 306 "off" licences.

The number of new licences granted in 1905 was 47 "on" and 192 "off."

Lifeboats. The Royal National Lifeboat Institution is supported by voluntary contributions, and was founded 1824. It has 284 lifeboats on the coasts of the United Kingdom. Total number of lives saved since institution more than 45,000. During the past fifty years the self-righting boats have been launched more than 9,000 times on service, and have saved upwards of 16,000 lives. Those boats have been capsized altogether 59 times while out on service, but only on 30 of those occasions was there any loss of life. The number of lives lost (counting 42 men who perished on the occasion of disasters which befell the Southport and St. Anne's lifeboats on Dec. 9th, '86, and the Kingstown lifeboat on Dec. 24th, '95), amounts to 150, including 15 shipwrecked persons. The 135 lifeboatmen lost represent about 1 in 1000 of the men employed in the boats on service; and the upsets were at the rate of 1 in each of the 171 service launches. Secretary, Charles Dibdin, 20, Charing Cross Road, W.C. La Société Centrale de Sauvetage des Naufragés is the French Society, established in 1865. It has its head office at Paris, and its operations embrace the entire coast of France, besides Algeria and Tunis. It has 101 lifeboats. Sec., Lieut. Emile Duboc.

Lighthouse Administration, Royal Commission on. In Aug. 1906 the King appointed a Royal Commission to inquire into the Lighthouse Administration of the United Kingdom, constituted as follows: The Right Hon. G. W. Balfour (Chairman), Sir Frank Forbes Adam, C.I.E., Colonel I. J. C. Herbert, C.B., C.M.G., M.P., Vice-Admiral W. H. Henderson, Mr. M. A. Ennis, and Captain C. Bigham, C.M.G. (Secretary). Offices, Chapel Place, Delahay Street, S.W.

The terms of reference are: "To inquire into the existing system of management of the lights, buoys, and beacons on the coast of the United Kingdom by the three general light-house authorities, and as to the constitution and working of these authorities, and to report what changes, if any, are desirable in the present arrangements."

Limitations, Statutes of. These statutes limit the time within which a man may seek redress for an injury he has sustained. Lapse of time will not protect any one who has ever committed a crime from being prosecuted for it, unless, as regards certain statutory offences, a limit is fixed by any particular Act. Redress from a trustee for such a breach of trust as to constitute a fraud may always be had, however long the interval since its commission. But with this exception the remedy for any civil injury may be barred by lapse of time. An action of debt or covenant, if founded on a deed, must be brought within 20 years of breach; if founded on any less formal agreement, within 6 years of breach. Part payment of a debt, or payment of interest, is sufficient to prevent the Statute from running, as is also a written document or letter admitting the debt or promising to pay it: either of these will enable a creditor to sue even after the 6 years has passed since the date of debt being contracted. An action to recover land must be brought within 12 years after the right to bring it first accrued. Should the right have accrued to a person under disability, as an infant or lunatic, an action may be brought within 12 years of its accruing, or within 6 years of the disability ending or the disabled person dying; but in no case of disability are more than 30 years to be allowed altogether. The above term of 12 years applies also to an action brought by a mortgagor to recover possession of his land, and to an action brought to recover money charged upon land by mortgage or otherwise. Only such arrears of rent as have accrued within 6 years before bringing an action for them can be recovered. Actions of trespass to goods, of assault, battery, wounding or imprisonment, must be brought within 4 years of the time when the injury was committed; actions for slander being limited to 2 years. Actions on penal statutes, if brought by the party aggrieved, are limited to 2 years; if brought by a common informer, are limited to 1 year. The lapse of 60 years bars actions for the recovery of real property, when brought by the Crown against a subject. The remedy in all the above cases may be lost by the lapse of time, but the right survives and may sometimes be made available in other ways than by action. Formal acknowledgment of a right by the person to whom it is adverse will render of no effect any lapse of time which has taken place, but time will run afresh from the acknowledgment. The law upon this subject is very complex and difficult.

LLOYD'S.

This world-famous institution takes its name and derives its origin from a coffee-house established in Tower Street by one Edward Lloyd towards the end of the 17th century, and removed in 1692 to the corner of Lombard Street and Abchurch Lane. Besides being a shipping news centre, Lloyd's began to be used as the centre of Marine insurance, and this business rapidly increased. In 1773 the brokers and underwriters frequenting the house, to the number of 79, took rooms on the north-west side of the Royal Exchange, where ever since this great institution has been established. In 1870 an Act of Incorporation was applied for, and obtained in '71, notwithstanding considerable opposition. The objects were described as being (1) the carrying on of the business of marine insurance by members of the society, (2) the protection of the interests of members of the society in respect of shipping and cargoes and freight, and (3) the collection, publication, and diffusion of intelligence and information. To carry out the third object Lloyd's has a staff of about 1500 agents in all parts of the world constantly reporting to headquarters, where clerks are employed both day and night.

Lloyd's also maintains an extensive system of signal stations for reporting vessels, etc., which is of great benefit to the shipping community. An inquiry office is also maintained, where the relations of crew or passengers may obtain, without cost, information concerning the movements of the vessel in which they are interested. In addition to "Lloyd's List," various works are now published by the Corporation for the benefit of the mercantile and shipping communities, such as "Lloyd's Weekly Shipping Index" (a record of the movements of shipping throughout the world, published every Thursday), "Lloyd's Calendar" (an annual publication containing information of value to officers of the mercantile marine, yachtsmen, and others), and "Lloyd's Book of House Flags and Funnels" of the principal steamship lines of the world, etc. Then a "Captains' Register" is kept, consisting of a biographical dictionary of all the certificated commanders of the British mercantile marine, about 24,000 in all. The record of losses is kept in the "Loss Book."

The medal of the Society is presented by the Corporation of Lloyd's, as an honorary acknowledgment, to those who have, by extraordinary exertions, contributed to the saving of life at sea; and the Medal for Meritorious Services is granted to officers and others who, by extraordinary exertions, have contributed to the preservation of vessels or cargoes. In 1803 "Lloyd's Patriotic Fund" was established for the relief of sailors and soldiers, their relatives and dependants, who suffered in the great war. This fund is still administered by trustees, the majority of whom are members of Lloyd's, the chairman being Mr. Herbert de Rougemont, a member of the Committee of Lloyd's.

Lloyd's is, of course, open only to members and subscribers. Members of Lloyd's may be either underwriting or non-underwriting members. There are also annual subscribers and associates. Underwriters are required to deposit with the Committee in respect of liabilities incurred on account of marine and transport risks at least £5000 in approved securities, the dividends on which are received by the depositor. The aggregate amount thus placed at the disposal of the Committee of Lloyd's is very large, but in no way represents the total capital possessed by the underwriting members of Lloyd's. The Committee have also recently adopted a system under which a separate guarantee, applicable only to claims on fire policies, and other policies not covering marine and transport risks, is required from members on their admission, and members who engage in such business, and who were elected before the adoption of this system, have generally furnished similar guarantees. They are also required to pay an entrance fee and an annual subscription of £21. But those members elected prior to Dec. 31st, '92, only pay an annual subscription of £16 16s. Non-underwriting members are exempted from the deposit, but pay an entrance fee, and an annual subscription of £7 7s. Subscribers pay an annual subscription of £7 7s. and associates one of £5 5s. See MERCANTILE MARINE.

Secretary, Captain Edward Fitzmaurice Inglefield, R.A.

LLOYD'S REGISTER OF BRITISH AND FOREIGN SHIPPING.

This is a Society voluntarily maintained by the shipping community with the primary object of the classification of vessels. It is the recognised authority on such matters all over the world. The Society's affairs are managed by a committee of 59 members, composed of merchants, shipowners, and underwriters, elected at the principal shipping centres of the country. In technical matters affecting the Society's rules for the construction of vessels and machinery, the Committee has the advantage of the co-operation of a body of experts, 14 in number, selected by the principal institutions of the United Kingdom associated with naval architecture, engineering, and the iron and steel industry. Branch Committees of the Society are established on the Mersey and on the Clyde. Rules are published annually embodying the best current practice, and are kept abreast of the latest developments and improvements in the construction of ships and engines. In the case of new vessels, after the plans have been submitted to and approved by the Committee, the building of the vessels proceeds under the supervision of the Society's surveyors, who, when the vessels are completed, send a detailed report to the Committee, by whom the class is assigned. The highest class for iron and steel vessels is represented by the character 100A1, and for wooden vessels by A1. It is from the latter character that the phrase "A1 at Lloyd's" is derived, which is used to express a state of perfection.

In addition to the classification of vessels other duties have from time to time been entrusted to the Society. Under the authority of Government it controls the testing of anchors and chains at all the public proving-houses in the country. During the year ended June 30th, 1906, over 471 miles of chain cable and 8664 anchors were tested. Lloyd's Register has, moreover, been entrusted by Parliament with the duty of assigning freeboards to vessels under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, and the load lines of 13,585 vessels have been dealt with by the Committee. The Society also conducts the testing of steel used in the construction of vessels and machinery. During the above-stated period 981,920 tons of steel were submitted to the tests required by the Rules.

It is a distinctive characteristic of Lloyd's Register that it is in no sense carried on with any purpose of pecuniary profit, all fees being exclusively devoted to the operations of the Society for the public advantage. To indicate the extent of these operations, and also the confidence of the shipping community at home and abroad in the Society's classification, it may be stated that, although application for a class is entirely a voluntary matter, at the end of June 1906, 10,065 vessels of 19,059,362 tons were classed in the Society's Register Book, and 510 vessels of 1,191,912 tons were building at home and abroad under the supervision of a surveying staff which includes at present nearly 300 officers stationed at all the principal shipping centres of the world. During the last 8 years, ending June 30th, 1906, 10,302,089 tons of new vessels have been classed by the Society.

Lloyd's Register was established in 1824 by the amalgamation of the two rival registers of shipping which then existed—viz., the "Green Book," founded in 1760 by a Committee of Underwriters, and the "Red Book," founded in 1798 by a Committee of Shipowners. Lloyd's Register issues annually to its subscribers a very bulky Register Book, containing full particulars of not only vessels classed with the Society, but also of all seagoing vessels and steel and iron vessels trading on the Great Lakes of North America. The 1906-7 edition of the Register Book contains 30,094 vessels of 100 tons and upwards. A Register of Yachts is also published annually, giving detailed particulars of about 7100 yachts of all nationalities, including about 500 classed with the Society. Another Register is also issued yearly by the Society in New York, giving similar particulars of about 3400 yachts belonging to the United States and Canada. The Society publishes very complete statistical returns quarterly and annually regarding vessels building and vessels lost all over the world. See MERCANTILE MARINE. ### LONDON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Incorporated under the Limited Liability Act, Oct. '81. The L. C. of C. takes cognisance of, and action in regard to, all questions affecting the good of the community at large, which from time to time occupy the attention of the mercantile world. The affairs of the Chamber are governed by a Council. From its first formation the Chamber has adopted the principle of dividing itself into sections, each dealing with subjects of interest to particular classes of business men, and 44 trades have already been organised in this way. The Chamber has on its premises a good commercial library, and through its Statistical and Information Department inquiries on an immense variety of matters connected with commerce, etc., are conducted. The Chamber issues certificates of origin for goods exported to Russia, Italy, France, Turkey, Canada and Spain, both to members and non-members; special certificates on trade customs and usages as required; also commercial travellers' certificates for Switzerland, Spain, Roumania and Russia. Under the scheme of Commercial Education, on which the Chamber has been engaged for 16 years past, the sixteenth examination for junior commercial certificates, and the twelfth examination for senior commercial education certificates took place during 1905, when 5118 candidates presented themselves, of whom about 50 per cent. were successful. There is an Employment Department. The Chamber of Commerce Journal is issued monthly, price 6d. President, Thomas F. Blackwell, Esq. Office, Oxford Court, Cannon Street, E.C. Secretary and Editor, Mr. Kenric B. Murray.

I. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL.

The Council was constituted by the Local Government Act, 1888, and is the authority for the administration of the County of London, which has an area of 116'93 miles. The Council consists of 19 Aldermen and 118 Councillors (but in Oct. 1906 the Council adopted a recommendation in favour of the increase of the membership from 137 to 200). The aldermen sit for six and the councillors for three years. Under the London County Council Electors' Qualification Act, 1900, every parochial elector is entitled to vote at the election of a London County Councillor. No elector can legally vote more than once in the county.

The last election, the sixth, took place on Saturday, March 5th, 1904. There were elected, 83 Progressives, 34 Conservatives and Unionists members, and 1 Independent. As compared with the state of parties before the election, the Progressives lost 1 seat, the Conservatives and Unionists gained 3 seats and the Independents lost 2 seats. There were elected in 1901, 84 Progressives, 32 Conservatives and Unionists (as the Moderates were renamed), and 2 Independents, as against 70 Progressives and 48 Moderates in '98, 59 Progressives and 50 Moderates in '95, 84 Progressives and 34 Moderates in '92, and 71 Progressives and 47 Moderates in '89.

There were 66 contested elections, and 2 uncontested, the latter being at Deptford and Greenwich. Out of a total of 699,363 voters on the register in the 56 contested divisions, 319,631, or 45·7 per cent., voted, as compared with 40·8 per cent. who voted in 1901.

The members elected on March 5th, 1904, or since that date, to represent the various electoral divisions are given below. An asterisk denotes that the member was also in the former Council. ### The New County Hall.

On April 18th, 1905, the Council approved a scheme for securing a site on the south side of Westminster Bridge for the purposes of new offices, at an estimated cost of £1,700,000, being £600,000 for the site of about 5½ acres, or 248,776 sq. feet, £1,056,000 for the building, and £44,000 for the necessary embankment. The voting was 83 in favour of the scheme and 21 against it. The site is bounded on the west by the river, on the south by the approach to Westminster Bridge, on the east by Belvedere Road, and on the north by the premises occupied by the Council's Works Department. Together with the land occupied by the Works Department, the site covers an area of about 7½ acres. The Establishment Committee reported that the existing offices of the Council comprised 529 rooms, occupied by 1665 officers (Dec. 1904)—excluding the staff engaged at the Education Stores, Clerkenwell Close, 404 located in the main building and 1261 in out-offices. The estimated rent of the Council's existing offices was £38,765. The charge on the county, which an expenditure of £1,700,000 would involve, was estimated at £84,000 a year, decreasing by about £935 a year as the debt was paid off. The London County Building Act, 1906, empowered the Council to acquire such of the necessary property on the site as may not be purchased by agreement. The Council on July 26th, 1906, decided to have a competition for obtaining designs for the new building, and that the competition should be open to architects of any nationality.

The Council's Work.

The Council meets weekly, but the greater part of its real administrative work is done by its Committees. Included in the work, besides the duties imposed upon it by the Local Government Acts, are the control of the Hanwell, Colney Hatch, Canehill, Claybury, Heath, Manor, and Horton Lunatic Asylums, and villa colony for epileptics at Ewell (the number of insane persons for whose care the Council was responsible was 18,540 in 1906); the great Housing Schemes for the people displaced by the clearance of insanitary areas and street improvements, the control of the Tramway Systems purchased by the Council, the direction of the London Fire Brigade, of the Parks and Open Spaces of London; and under the 1903 Education Act the Council is the authority for all public education in the county.

The net capital expenditure on the Council Tramways in South London up to March 31st, 1906, was £3,070,828. During 1905-6 the receipts were £782,210 and the expenditure £561,755, showing a surplus revenue on working of £220,455. After paying £175,133 for interest and sinking fund charges, £8000 on account of income tax, and carrying £35,000 to the renewals reserve fund, a net surplus of £2319 was carried to the appropriation account. The number of passengers carried was 164,818,560, an increase of 31,679,475 as compared with the previous year.

The net capital expended on the Northern System to March 31st, 1906, was £1,118,166. In regard to the lines leased to the North Metropolitan Tramways Co. and the Metropolitan Electric Tramways, Ltd., the net revenue was £60,952, out of which debt charges of £35,695 were paid, leaving £25,256 net profit.

The Aldwych-Angel line was opened on Feb. 24th, 1906, and the surplus on working for the five weeks to March 31st was £317; the proportion of debt charges was £1060, leaving a deficiency of £742.

The General Tramways Revenue Account showed a deficiency balance of £25,573 carried to the Appropriation Account, which opened with a surplus balance from 1904-5 of £29,088, and closed with a surplus balance of £31,249.

In 1904 the Council obtained Parliamentary powers to establish a steamboat service on the Thames, and 30 steamboats were placed on the river by the time the service was formally opened by the Prince of Wales on June 17th, 1905. The net aggregate estimated expenditure to March 31st, 1906, was £293,136. The revenue to March 31st, 1906, was £41,315, and the working expenses were £72,466. To the deficiency £31,150, must be added the debt charges of £18,945, giving a total deficiency of £59,095. The number of passengers carried from June 24th, 1905, to March 31st, 1906, was 3,683,792, and the number of circular tickets used on tramcars was 178,798. In May 1906 the Council entered into an arrangement with the Thames Steamboat Co. (97), Ltd., that during the summer the Council should run on the section of the river between Chelsea (Cadogan) and Greenwich, and the Company on the section above Chelsea. The Council's service was suspended for the winter on Oct. 2nd, 1906.

London Fire Brigade.

Since its establishment in 1866 the strength and appliances of the Brigade have been more than quadrupled, and many alterations have been made in the constitution of the force, which now consists of 79 land stations, 16 street stations, 3 floating stations, and 1 floating repairing depot, 1 hose-cart station, 1 hose-and-ladder-truck station, 18 fire-escape stations, 5 steam fire engines on barges, 81 land steam fire engines (including 4 motor steam fire engines), 12 manual engines, 73 horsed escapes, 48 miles of hose, 90 hose carts, 4 hose-and-ladder trucks, 7 hose tenders, 1 first-aid motor, 1 motor tractor, 2 fire floats, 4 steam tugs, 9 barges, 7 skiffs, 112 manual fire escapes, 26 watch boxes, 1079 officers and men, 36 men under instruction, 12 pilots, 189 coachmen, and 318 horses (hired). The area protected by the Brigade is about 117½ square miles, including the City and County of London, and extends roughly from Highgate in the North to Sydenham in the South, and from Roehampton in the West to Plumstead in the East. Each station is connected by telephone with at least one other station of the brigade, and each superintendent's police station is in telephonic communication with a fire station. In addition several fire stations are connected with exchanges of the National Telephone Company and the General Post Office, and a large number of public buildings and business premises have by the Council's permission been placed in direct telephonic communication with the nearest fire station in each case. Every land station has a system of fire alarms fixed in the public thoroughfares, and the total number of these alarms is about 1180. The cost of maintaining the brigade during the financial year 1905-6 (including pensions) was £247,691 12s. 11d. Of this sum the fire insurance companies contributed £34,606 5s. 6d., the Government £10,000, and miscellaneous receipts amounted to £9681 15s. 5d. The balance, £193,403 12s., was raised from the ratepayers. The report of the chief officer of the brigade for the year 1905 shows a decrease in the number of fires of 105 as compared with those in 1904. The number of calls for fires, or supposed fires, received during the year was 5676. Of these 880 were false alarms, and 1285 were calls for chimneys on fire. Chief Officer, Captain J. De C. Hamilton, R.N. (Retd.); Divisional Officers, Mr. Sidney G. Gamble, C.E., and Lieut. S. Sladen, R.N.; Assistant Divisional Officer, Mr. A. R. Dyer. Headquarters, Southwark Bridge Road, S.E.

Statistics.

The area of the administrative county is 77,518.6 acres; the population 4,536,429. In 1901 there were 571,768 inhabited houses, 24,093 occupied only during the day, and 15,971 empty, giving a total number of houses, 611,837.

The gross debt was £74,513,000 on March 31st, 1906; but deducting loans due, Council properties and other assets, the net debt was £45,234,000, including Education debt of £11,691,768.

II. LONDON EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

The Elementary Education Act of 1870 specially provided that a school board should be formed for London. The first board was accordingly elected only a few months after the passing of the Act (Nov. '70).

By the London Education Act, 1903, the Education Act 1902 was, with some modifications, applied to London; and the control of all education, primary and secondary, passed into the hands of the London County Council as the Education authority on May 1st, 1904. The scheme drawn up by the Council, approved by it Jan. 26th, 1904, and approved by the Board of Education March 14th, provided for the appointment of an Education Committee, consisting of 43 members, and including (a) the chairman, vice-chairman, and deputy-chairman for the time being of the Council; (b) 35 members of the Council; and (c) five women selected by the Council. In addition to the said 43 members, the Council appointed, as members of the first Committee, 5 members of the London School Board.

Members of the Committee.

The Education Committee is constituted as follows:—

Members of the Council (38)—

Evan Spicer (Chairman of the Council).	Harris, H. P.
Hy. Ward (Vice-Chairman of the Council).	Harvey, T. E.
E. B. Forman (Deputy-Chairman of the Council).	Jones, Rev. L. J.
Allen, A. A.	Lampard, G.
Barnes, E.	Lancaster, W. J.
Bayley, E.	Leon, A. L.
Beaton, Dr. R. M.	Lidgett, Rev. J. Scott.
Bray, R.	Mitchell, I.
Cobb, C. H.	Mullins, W. E.
Collins, E.	Pope, W.
Collins, Sir W. J.	Radford, G. H.
Dawes, J. A.	Russell, Arthur B.
Dew, G.	Sanders, W. S.
Dickinson, W. H.	Shepherd, A. J.
Gautrey, T.	Stuart, James
Goldsmith, F.	Sturge, C. Y.
Guinness, Hon. R.	Taylor, J. T.
	Thomas, A. A.
	Thompson, W. W.
	Wallas, G.
	Webb, Sidney.

Women (5)—

Adler, Miss N.	Homan, Mrs..
Bryant, Dr. Sophie.	Lawrence, Miss Susan.
Eve, Miss Margaret.

In Nov. 1906 the General Purposes and Education Committees of the Council recommended a considerable delegation of the Council's powers of educational administration to the Education Committee, and the Council adopted the recommendations (Nov. 13th). The Council will accordingly retain for its own decision questions of expenditure, of building new schools, taking over non-provided schools, the settlement of curricula, and generally all matters involving new principles, and will delegate to the Council administrative action as to the staffing, curricula, and management of schools, colleges, etc.; the award of scholarships; the appointment and control of teachers; and the enforcement of educational bye-laws. The Council also decided that the meetings of the Education Committee, which had been private hitherto, should be open to the Press and the public as from Nov. 21st, 1906.

London's Educational Progress.

The educational progress of London since '70 will be seen by the following table, and also the "rate" at the end of each triennial period:—

Subjects of Instruction.

The general subjects of instruction in all schools include :

(a) English language—correct pronunciation, reading aloud, recitation, writing, oral and written composition, and grammar.

(b) Arithmetic—oral and written.

(c) Knowledge of the common phenomena of the external world—formation of the habit of intelligent and accurate observation, and its application, with simple experiments, to the daily life and surroundings of the scholars.

(d) *Geography—physical features of the earth, and specially of the British Isles and the British Dominions.

(e) *History—great persons and events in English history, and the growth of the British Empire.

(f) Drawing—from actual objects, memory and brush drawing, and hand and eye training.

(g) Singing—by note, with proper breathing.

(h) Physical exercises—according to an approved system.

(i) Plain needlework—for girls.

For older scholars.—For boys: manual instruction in woodwork and metalwork. For girls: cookery, laundry-work, household management, and cutting out garments.

One or two subjects, other than those named above, are in many cases taught to older scholars. As a rule, these extra subjects are one or more of the following: algebra, Euclid, mensuration, mechanics, chemistry, animal physiology, hygiene, botany, Latin, French, German, bookkeeping, and shorthand.

Part of the instruction for infants is given by means of appropriate and varied occupations. Bible instruction also is given.

Teachers, Defective Children, Evening Schools, etc.

Taking advantage of the Elementary Education Act, '91, which came into operation on Sept. 1st, '91, all the day-schools under the control of the School Board were made free. The number of teachers employed in L.C.C. schools at Lady-day 1906 was 12,749. The number of teachers (excluding pupil teachers and probationers) in non-provided schools at Lady Day 1906, was 4651. Efficient instruction is provided for blind and deaf children; and under the powers of the Elementary Education (Blind and Deaf Children) Act, '93, arrangement have been made, where necessary, for the admission of such children into suitable homes or institutions. There are also special arrangements for the instruction of physically and mentally defective children, and for the physically defective in separate centres. The number of teachers employed in the L.C.C. schools for blind, deaf, and mentally and physically defective children at Lady-day, 1906, was 402.

Advantage has been taken of the provisions of the Industrial Schools Acts and the Education Acts relating to children wandering or not under proper control, or begging or not under proper guardianship, or persistently truanting from school, or charged with felony, etc., to send such cases to industrial schools (a) under voluntary management, or (b) under public management. There are 51 of the former schools and 8 of the latter: (1) two industrial schools for boys, one at Feltham and one at Mayford; (2) an industrial school for girls at Isleworth; (3) a home for little boys at Clapham Park; (4) two truant schools for boys, one at Homerton and the other at Highbury; and (5) day industrial schools (mixed) in Drury Lane, Brunswick Road, Poplar, and Ponton Road, Nine Elms.

Evening schools are held in every part of the Metropolis. The total number of pupils admitted in the session 1905-6 was 153,379; number enrolled first week of session 1906-7, 77,806. The subjects taught are classed under the following heads: Elementary English, commercial, languages, science and art; Euclid, etc.; vocal music; cookery, laundry-work, etc.; manual training, wood-carving and metalwork. Instruction in some form of physical exercises is given in every school; in the summer months swimming is taught; and the libraries of the schools are open for the free use of the students. A small sessional fee is charged.

The expenditure on maintenance account in the financial year 1905-6 was £4,683,982, and the revenue from Government grants, etc., amounted to £1,638,979.

Higher Education.

The Technical Education Board of the London County Council, to which the London County Council delegated its powers under the Technical Instruction Acts, was formed in '83, and consisted of 20 members of the Council, 3 of the London School Board, 3 of the City and Guilds of London Institute, 3 of the London Trades Council, 2 of the London Parochial Charities, 1 each of the Incorporated Association of Head Masters and of the National Union of Teachers, and 2 members appointed by the Council—total, 35. The work of this Board is now entrusted to the Education Committee.

The total maintenance expenditure for the year in respect of technical institutions, polytechnics, evening schools, etc., amounted to £656,113. Of this expenditure the sums of £63,542 and £115,260 were granted in aid of secondary schools and polytechnics and technical institutions respectively. Against this expenditure receipts must be set as follows:—

* Not required in infants' schools.

	£	s.	d.
Exchequer contributions	184,711	12	6
Parliamentary grants, secondary schools, etc.	118,129	0	0
Students' fees . . .	10,369	14	6
Miscellaneous . . .	6,489	11	7
	£319,699	18	7

The net expenditure on higher education, therefore, amounted to £336,413 2s. 2d.

The work of the Council in regard to Higher Education may also be stated by giving a list of the institutions aided or conducted by the Council: viz., 5 University Schools; 10 Polytechnics; 12 Institutions conducted by the Council; 8 Technical Institutes conducted by separate governing bodies; 6 Schools of Art; 4 Evening Classes in Science, Art, and Technology; 28 Secondary Boys' Schools; 29 ditto Girls' Schools; 8 Mixed Schools; and 22 Domestic Economy Schools and Classes.

III. CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

The Corporation of the City of London consists of the whole body of the citizens or freemen, under the style of "the Mayor, Commonalty, and Citizens." The small portion of this great Metropolis which is comprised within the City and its liberties is divided into 27 wards, including Bridge Without. There is an alderman for this ward, but no freemen and no common councillors. Each of the other wards, with the exception of the two wards of Cripplegate Within and Without (which return an alderman jointly), elects one alderman and a number of common councillors varying from 4 to 16, but amounting in all to a total of 232; or, in other words, 26 aldermen and 206 commoners. An alderman is elected when a vacancy occurs, and holds office for life; the councilmen are elected on St. Thomas's Day, and hold office for one year, but are of course eligible for re-election. The electors must in each case be rated householders before they can vote at a ward-mote, as a meeting of the ward is termed. A liveryman is a freeman who, by payment of a fee, has entered the livery of one of the City companies or guilds (see p. 297), and was first so called because he was entitled to wear the livery of his company. He has the right to vote at the elections of Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, Chamberlain, and other Corporation officers, and also for M.P.'s for the City.

The Lord Mayor is elected on Sept. 20th by the liverymen of the several companies assembled together at the Guildhall, and as it is termed in Common Hall; to be eligible he must have served as Sheriff of London. The Livery may select any alderman thus qualified, but they almost invariably accept the names of the two senior aldermen who have not passed the civic chair. A poll, to be taken by ballot, may however be demanded, if necessary. The names of the two selected aldermen are then submitted to the general body of the aldermen, who choose usually the first, but sometimes, for a special reason, prefer the second. The Lord Mayor elect is presented to the Lord Chancellor to receive the assent of the Crown to the election; he is sworn before the retiring Lord Mayor and aldermen on Nov. 8th, and on Nov. 9th he is escorted by the citizens in procession to the Royal Courts of Justice to be presented to the Lord Chief Justice and again sworn. The mayoralty thus commenced lasts a year, but the same alderman has in rare instances been re-elected for a second, and in ancient times for even a third period of service. His public duties absorb every moment of the Lord Mayor's time, and the £10,000 annually voted by the Corporation does not half cover his expenses while in office. He is expected to preside during the day over meetings for public or benevolent objects, and to take part in many important ceremonies: to open schools, distribute prizes, initiate subscriptions for relief of distress; and by night to entertain eminent and distinguished personages at his official residence, or to preside at Charity Festivals. As head of the Corporation he presides at Common Hall, the Court of Aldermen, and the Court of Common Council; he presides at the justice-room of the Mansion House, and is first commissioner of the Central Criminal Court; he is a trustee of St. Paul's and a governor of the Royal Hospitals and other institutions, and of several charities. He is head of the City Lieutenancy. He is styled "right honourable," and, although not actually of the Privy Council, he attends when, on the demise of the Crown, the new sovereign is proclaimed; and at the Coronation he is present as chief butler, receiving therefor a golden cup and cover.

The present Lord Mayor is Alderman Sir William Treloar (q.v.). The Lord Mayor's private secretary is Sir W. J. Soulsby, C.B., C.I.E., Mansion House.

The Sheriffs are Alderman Thomas Boor Crosby, M.D., and Mr. W. H. Dunn.

The alderman of the ward, or (in his absence) the Lord Mayor, presides over the annual ward-mote for the election of common councilmen. At a bye-election during the year the deputy may preside in the absence of the alderman. Each alderman is a justice of the peace, and may preside at the Guildhall or Mansion House justice rooms. Each is a commissioner of the Central Criminal Court, for which a new home is being provided in the new Sessions House on the site of the Old Bailey.

The Aldermen are the bench of magistrates for the City, the visiting justices to the prisons; they admit freemen, and decide disputes at ward elections. When a vacancy in the aldermanic representation of the ward of Bridge Without occurs, they choose one of their number, usually the senior alderman, to fill it, whose successor in the ward he retires from is elected in the usual manner. They sit in the Court of Common Council, the full title of which is "Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons of the City of London in Common Council assembled," and no business can be done unless some of each body be present.

The Common Council manages the financial and general affairs of the Corporation, has charge of its own police, lets its lands, has full power over its funds, and has charge of certain of the Thames bridges. The work until then done by the Commission of Sewers was given to the Corporation in '98, the Commission being dissolved. To cope with this new work a Public Health Department was formed by the Corporation.

The Recorder (Sir Forrest Fulton, K.C., salary £4000, and £57 as steward of Southwark) presents the Lord Mayor elect to the Lord Chancellor and to the Lord Chief Justice, is principal adviser of the Lord Mayor, and attends him on all occasions of State ceremony. He tries cases in the Lord Mayor's Court, is one of the judges in the Central Criminal Court, and is chairman of quarter sessions for the City. This officer is appointed for life by the Court of Aldermen, but he may not exercise any judicial functions unless he is appointed by His Majesty to exercise such functions. The necessary confirmation was of course given by the Crown in the case of Sir F. Fulton, who was appointed in 1900.

The Chamberlain (the Right Hon. Sir J. C. Dimsdale, Bart., K.C.V.O., M.P., who was Lord Mayor in 1902, salary £2500) is elected by the Livery on Midsummer Day, and comes up annually for re-election. He receives the revenues of the Corporation or City cash, pays all salaries, charges, and outgoings, and has the custody of accounts, admits all duly qualified persons to the freedom, and is custodian of the records relating to freemen. He has also jurisdiction to punish refractory City apprentices, whom he sometimes commits to Bridewell.

The Common Serjeant (Mr. Bosanquet, K.C., salary £2500) is now appointed by the Crown; he attends the Lord Mayor on all state occasions, and is present at meetings of the Courts of Aldermen and Common Council; he is a legal adviser of the Corporation, one of the commissioners at the Central Criminal Court, a judge of the Mayor's Court, and acts on certain occasions as Deputy Recorder.

The Town Clerk or Common Clerk (Mr. James Bell, salary £2000) keeps the charters and records of the City, and attends all courts held before the Lord Mayor and Aldermen. He has the special privilege of signing documents with his surname only.

The Remembrancer (Mr. Adrian Pollock, salary £1500) is the Ceremonial Officer of the Corporation, attends the Parliament House during session, and watches the interests of the Corporation in all legislative matters.

The Sword Bearer (Mr. Winzar) carries the sword, being the emblem of justice, before the Lord Mayor. The last three are appointed by the Common Council. There are a number of other officers—legal, ceremonial, and official.

London Livery Companies.

There have been 109 companies founded, but the latest return of the liverymen entitled to vote in elections in Common-hall only gives a total of 77. The liverymen of the Guilds who reside within twenty-five miles of the City borders have a vote in the parliamentary elections for the City. An asterisk is prefixed to the names of the twelve principal companies. In '80 it was estimated that the trust and corporate income of the companies was between £750,000 and £800,000, and the capital value of their property £15,000,000. The value of their plate and furniture was returned at about £300,000. The total rent of the real property is about £600,000, and there is a further source of income exceeding £100,000 a year from investments.

On May 28th, '84, a Royal Commission, appointed to inquire into the foundations and objects of the companies, issued a report, in which it recommended that the companies should be placed by Act of Parliament under such restrictions as regards the alienation of their real and personal estate as would remove all danger of the loss of any portion of their property; that the accounts of the companies should be open to public inspection; that no future admission to the livery of a company should confer the parliamentary franchise; the appointment of commission which should undertake the allocation of a portion of the corporate incomes of the companies to objects of acknowledged public utility, the better application of the trust incomes, and, should it prove practicable, the reorganisation of the constitution of the companies. A dissenting report was, however, issued by three members of the Commission. No action has since been taken on this report.

The following is a list of the Companies, with the number of members, income where it is known, Clerk and Hall or Office:—

City of London Police.

This force is under the control of a Commissioner, who is appointed by the Mayor, Aldermen and Common Council, subject to the approval of His Majesty the King. The total strength of the force in 1905 was 1056, consisting of 1 Assistant-Commissioner, 1 superintendent Executive Department, 1 superintendent Detective Department, 3 chief inspectors of districts, 1 chief detective inspector, 15 district inspectors, 20 station inspectors, 9 detective inspectors, 74 sergeants, 12 detective sergeants, and 865 constables.

The detective department consists of 1 superintendent, 1 chief inspector, 9 inspectors, 12 sergeants, 33 constables, and 24 plain-clothes patrols. In addition to the above, 50 constables and 1 sergeant are employed on private service duty at the expense of persons engaging their services, the charge being at the rate of £135 per annum for each man. The force has also a surgeon, receiver, chief clerk, and several assistant clerks.

The Police area is divided into three districts, each containing two divisions (exclusive of the chief and detective offices) and under the immediate charge of a chief inspector, assisted by five district inspectors and six station inspectors.

The total cost of the force is about £155,000 per annum, one-fourth of which is paid from the City's cash, the remainder by a rate of 6d. on the assessable rental of the City. The City Police, unlike the Metropolitan Police Force, is supported entirely by the citizens, without Imperial aid. The pay of the force is considerably in advance of any other similar body in the United Kingdom.

Chief Clerk and Superintendent, Mr. Frank Francis.

Headquarters, Old Jewry, Cheapside.

IV. LONDON BOROUGH COUNCILS.

The London Government Act, '99, divided the administrative county of London (with the exception of the City), which had formerly been under the rule of over 120 local authorities, including Vestries, District Boards, Burial Boards, etc., into 28 Municipal Boroughs, each under a Municipal Council.

The following is a list of the boroughs, with the number of aldermen and councillors assigned to each:—

Boroughs.	Alder- men.	Coun- cillors.
Battersea . . . . .	9	54
Bermondsey . . . . .	9	54
Bethnal Green . . . . .	5	30
Camberwell . . . . .	10	60
Chelsea . . . . .	6	36
Deptford . . . . .	6	36
Finsbury . . . . .	9	54
Fulham . . . . .	6	36
Greenwich . . . . .	5	30
Hackney . . . . .	10	60
Hammersmith . . . . .	6	36
Hampstead . . . . .	7	42
Holborn . . . . .	7	42
Islington . . . . .	10	60
Kensington . . . . .	10	60
Lambeth . . . . .	10	60
Lewisham . . . . .	7	42
Paddington . . . . .	10	60
Poplar . . . . .	7	42
St. Marylebone . . . . .	10	60
St. Pancras . . . . .	10	60
Shoreditch . . . . .	7	42
Southwark . . . . .	10	60
Stepney . . . . .	10	60
Stoke Newington . . . . .	5	30
Wandsworth . . . . .	10	60
Westminster . . . . .	10	60
Woolwich . . . . .	6	36

The first election of councillors took place on Nov. 1st, 1900; the second on Nov. 2nd, 1903; and the third on Nov. 1st, 1906.

The changes in the constitution of the Councils are shown in the following table:—

Majority.	Nov. 1st, 1900.	Nov. 1st, 1903.	Nov. 1st, 1906.
Moderate (or Con- servative) . . . . .	17	12	23*
Progressive . . . . .	8	13	3†
Non-Party . . . . .	3	2‡	2†
Labour . . . . .	—	1	—

* Municipal Reform majorities.

† Hackney (22 Progressives, 20 Independents, 18 Municipal Reformers), and Stoke Newington (30 Independents).

‡ Battersea, Bethnal Green, Hammersmith.

§ Hampstead and Stoke Newington.

The strength of parties on the Councils elected in 1903 and 1906 was as follows:—

	1903.	1906.
Moderates or Municipal Reformers . . . . .	594	959
Progressives . . . . .	616	272
Independents . . . . .	103	97
Independent Conserva- tives . . . . .	9	—
Labour . . . . .	40	34

In 1903 47·3 per cent. of the electors voted, and in 1906 48·62 per cent.

Qualifications of Electors.

The elections of borough councillors in London are conducted by ballot in the same way as Parliamentary elections, and are regulated by rules issued by the Local Government Board. The persons qualified to vote at the election of Borough Councils are the "parochial electors," that is to say, the persons on the register "for the purpose of borough elections." All persons qualified to vote at a Parliamentary and County Council election in London can vote at an election of borough councillors, with certain "separate list" voters in addition. Women, if otherwise qualified, may vote. This franchise is the same as that in the case of the elections of guardians and vestries since '94. A woman is not eligible for the office of councillor. The Mayor of a London Borough is by virtue of his office a justice of the peace for the County of London; he is not disqualified by reason of being a solicitor practising or carrying on business in the County of London or the City, but he is not to practise as a solicitor before any justices of the County of London.

Rates and Accounts.

One important change effected by the '99 Act was the abolition of overseers of the poor throughout the whole of London except the City. The Council of each borough are the overseers of every parish within their borough (sect. 11), and their powers and duties are exercised by the borough councils. The principal duties of overseers related to the making and collection of the poor rates and the preparation of the valuation lists, and these duties are now performed by the councils. The town clerks have the powers and duties of the overseers as regards the preparation of lists of voters and jury lists. The Council levy but one rate to meet all central and local expenses—the general rate—but this is likely to vary in every parish within a borough, by reason of the parish remaining the final unit of rating. The general rate includes the poor rate, and is assessed, collected, and levied as if it were the poor rate. Precepts for money issued by any authority in London must be sent to the borough council at their office. The rates collected in a London borough are levied in one demand note, which is to show the rateable value of the premises, the rate in the pound, the period for which the rate is made, the purposes for which it is levied, and the amount required for each purpose. The accounts of every borough council, and of any committee appointed by them, and of their officers, are audited by district auditors appointed by the Local Government Board. The auditor has power to disallow items in the accounts, or make a surcharge on the councillors who authorised any illegal payment. Sums disallowed or surcharged must be paid over to the borough treasurer, unless an appeal be made to the Local Government Board against the auditor's decision. The Board has power to remit any disallowance or surcharge. The accounts are audited yearly for the period ended March 31st. The form in which the various accounts of the council are kept is prescribed by the Local Government Board. Where the whole of a Poor Law Union is within one borough, or where the borough comprises the whole of two or more unions, the council appoints the Assessment Committee, and the town clerk is the clerk to that committee.

V. METROPOLITAN POLICE FORCE.

Established by Act of Parliament (1829), and the protection of the district by watchmen was discontinued by that statute and entirely intrusted to the then newly appointed force. The Metropolitan police area is 699·42 sq. miles, and embraces all places within a radius of fifteen miles of Charing Cross, except the City of London, which has its own police. The Metropolitan police have jurisdiction on the river Thames. The Thames police are selected from sailors, and patrol in boats and steam launches. The Metropolitan police are also employed in H.M. dockyards, and in the principal military stations of the War Department.

The strength of the force for the year ending Dec. 31st, 1905 (latest returns) is 17,210, consisting of 31 superintendents, 546 inspectors, 2239 sergeants, and 14,394 constables.

The supreme government of the Metropolitan police is vested in the Commissioner appointed by and acting under the control of the Home Secretary.

Commissioner, Sir E. R. Henry, K.C.V.O., C.S.I. Assistant Commissioners, Sir A. C. Bruce, Major E. F. Wodehouse, and M. L. Macnaghten, Esq.; and five Chief Constables.

The Metropolitan Police Force is divided into two groups. The uniform branch is responsible for the general policing of the Metropolis, the preservation of order, and the prevention of crime. The Criminal Investigation Department is more immediately responsible for the detection of crime.

The staff of the latter is distributed between a central office at New Scotland Yard and the divisions, where the work is carried on under the charge of a local inspector immediately responsible to the divisional superintendent.

The Convict Supervision Office registers the names and particulars of discharged convicts on licence, and other criminals under police supervision in England, and retains photographs and marks of these persons, under the provisions of the Prevention of Crimes Act of '71. This office is in a position to do much practical good by assisting, in co-operation with various recognised private organisations, for the benefit of discharged prisoners who are desirous of leading an honest life.

The Criminal Identification Department maintains registers, available to all police forces, containing information as to the antecedents of all the more troublesome criminals released from prison. The means of identification adopted is the Finger Print system, which in July 1902 superseded the less accurate Bertillon method of identifying by corporal measurements. The Finger Print system of identification has answered every expectation, and it is being rapidly adopted on the Continent, in America, and in the Colonies.

Among other departments of the Metropolitan police are the Executive Branch, and the Public Carriage and Lost Property Branch.

The financial administration is under the control of the Receiver for the Metropolitan Police District, A. R. Pennefather, Esq., C.B., who is appointed by the Crown, and has the direction of contracts of every description, the management of all police buildings, buys the sites of and erects new buildings, and all the property of the police force is vested in him. He is also the receiver for the Metropolitan police courts, and the police court buildings are vested in him. The income of the force for the year 1905-6 was £2,278,971, and of the pension fund £256,808.

The rateable value of the Metropolitan area for 1905-6 was £50,959,879. The police rate is now fixed at 9d. in the £, of which 4d. in the £ is payable out of the Local Taxation Account under the Local Government Act of '88. The pay of the Metropolitan Police force for 1905-6 was £1,483,676.

A Royal Commission.

A Royal Commission was appointed (July 1906) to inquire into the duties of the force. It is constituted thus: Sir D. Brynmor Jones, K.C., M.P. (Chairman), Messrs. C. A. Whitmore, Rufus Isaacs, K.C., M.P., and W. H. Dickinson, M.P.; Secretary, Mr. J. S. T. Leslie.

VI. METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD.

The Metropolis Water Act, 1902, constituted a Water Board, called the "Metropolitan Water Board," for the purpose of purchasing and carrying on the undertakings of the eight Metropolitan water companies—viz., the New River, East London, Southwark and Vauxhall, West Middlesex, Lambeth, Chelsea, Grand Junction, and Kent.

The Water Board consists of 66 members appointed by the county councils and other authorities within the water area, as follows: London County Council, 14; City of London, 2; Westminster, 2; the other Metropolitan boroughs (27), one each; West Ham, 2; the county councils of Essex, Herts, Kent, Middlesex and Surrey, 1 each; the urban districts of East Ham (now a borough), Leyton, and Walthamstow, 1 each; the combined urban districts of Buckhurst Hill, Chingford, Loughton, Waltham Holy Cross, Wanstead and Woodford, 1; the combined urban districts of Beckenham, Bromley, Chislehurst, Penge, Bexley, Dartford, Erith, and Footscray, 1; the urban districts of Tottenham and Willesden, 1 each; the borough of Ealing and the urban districts of Acton and Chiswick, 1; the urban districts of Brentford, Hampton, Hampton Wick, Hanwell, Heston and Isleworth, Sunbury, Teddington, and Twickenham, 1; the urban districts of Edmon-ton, Enfield, and Southgate, 1; the urban districts of Hornsey and Wood Green, 1; the boroughs of Kingston and Wimbledon, and the urban districts of East and West Molesey, Esher and the Dittons, Ham, Surbiton, Barnes, the Maldens and Coombe, 1; the Thames Conservators and the Lea Conservancy Board, 1 each. The chairman and vice-chairman are elected by the Water Board, either from the members, or from outside the Board, and are unpaid.

The first election of the Water Board took place early in 1903, under regulations issued by the Local Government Board, and the members then elected held office till June, 1907.

Chairman, Sir R. Melville Beachcroft.

Vice-Chairman, Mr. John Glass.

Clerk, Mr. A. B. Pilling.

Comptroller, Mr. F. E. Harris.

Chief Engineer, Mr. W. B. Bryan, M.Inst.C.E.

Director of Water Examinations, A. C. Houston, M.B., D.Sc., Chemical and Bacteriological Laboratories, 20, Nottingham Place, W.

Central Office: Savoy Court, Strand, W.C.

Middlesex Receiving Office, 19, Marylebone Road, N.W.

On June 24th, 1904, the undertakings of the Companies, with the exception of the New River Company, passed to and vested in the Water Board, who also took over all the debts and liabilities of the Companies, including their debenture stock. The appointed day in regard to the New River Company was postponed until July 25th, 1904, by the Local Government Board.

A Court of Arbitration to decide the amount of the purchase-money and various other questions arising between the Water Board and the Companies, was appointed by the Act, and consisted of the Rt. Hon. Sir Edward Fry, Sir Hugh Owen, G.C.B., and Sir John Wolfe Barry, K.C.B. The Court commenced their sittings for hearing the claims of the Water Companies in October 1903. The Companies claimed sums amounting to about £60,000,000, including the debenture stocks transferred.

The awards to the several companies were :

East London . . . . .	£3,900,000
New River . . . . .	5,967,123
Grand Junction . . . . .	3,349,500
West Middlesex . . . . .	3,524,000
Lambeth . . . . .	4,301,000
Southwark and Vauxhall . . . . .	3,603,000
Chelsea . . . . .	3,305,700
Kent . . . . .	2,712,000
Staines Reservoirs Joint Committee . . . . .	—

£30,662,323

The Arbitration Committee of the Board reported, Dec. 9th, 1904, that the total of the award in cash payable to the Companies under the awards of the Court of Arbitration would amount to £30,662,323, representing, on the respective bases on which the stock had been issued, £33,564,281 in 3 per cent. water stock.

The Capital Debt of the Board on March 31st, 1906, was :—

Metropolitan Water (A) Stock . . . . .	£6,060,165
(B) . . . . .	34,118,849
Redeemable Debenture Stocks . . . . .	7,217,838
Mortgage Loans . . . . .	37,500

£47,434,352

The Finance Committee estimated the revenue for the year ending March 31st, 1907, at £2,814,510; and the expenditure at £2,765,017.

The total quantity of water supplied in 1905-6 was 79,572,570,244 gallons; in 1904-5 it was 80,201,618,919 gallons. The average daily supply was in 1905-6 218,007,041 gallons; in 1904-5 219,730,463 gallons. The average estimated population supplied in 1905-6 was 6,747,196, and the supply per head per day was 32·31 gallons.

LONDON CITY AND GUILDS INSTITUTE.

The City and Guilds of London Institute was established in 1878 by the Corporation and Livery Companies of the City of London to promote the applications of science and art to productive industry, and received the grant of a Royal Charter from H.M. the late Queen Victoria. The Institute consists of Members elected by the contributing bodies in proportion to their subscriptions, a Council, and an Executive Committee. Patron and Visitor, H.M. the King; Chairman of Council,

Lord Halsbury; Chairman of the Executive Committee, Sir John Wolfe Barry, K.C.B.; Treasurer, S. S. Gladstone, Esq.; Hon. Sec., Sir John Watney; Assist. Sec., Mr. A. L. Soper. Head Office, Gresham College, E.C. The total income amounts to about £45,000 a year. The operations of the Institute are divided under the following heads :—

(1) The City and Guilds' Central Technical College at South Kensington, a college for higher technical education in which advanced instruction is provided in those kinds of knowledge which bear upon the different branches of industry. It is a "School of the University of London," and qualifies students to become mechanical, civil, electrical and chemical engineers, technical teachers, principals, superintendents, and managers of chemical and other manufacturing works. The building and equipment cost £140,000, and it was opened in '84.

(2) The City and Guilds' Technical College, Finsbury, is an intermediate college, with which have been incorporated the provisional classes started in the Cowper Street Schools in '79, and the City School of Art. The college includes day classes and evening classes. It fulfils the functions of a finishing technical school for those entering industrial life at a comparatively early age; of a supplementary school for those who are already engaged in workshops; and of a preparatory school for the City and Guilds' Central Technical College. It was opened in '83; the building and equipment has cost about £65,000.

(3) The South London School of Technical Art, Kennington Park Road, provides instruction in modelling, drawing and painting from the life, and house decoration.

(4) The Department of Technology, the object of which is to encourage the formation of technical classes throughout the country, and, by the publication of carefully prepared syllabuses for the guidance of the committees and teachers of these classes, by annual examinations, and also by an organised system of inspection, to place the teaching on a sound educational basis. The examinations are held during the month of May in over sixty different subjects.

(5) The Leather Trades' School, in Bethnal Green Road, is entirely an evening school for apprentices and others engaged in boot and shoe manufacture, conducted by a joint committee of the Institute, the Leathersellers' and Cordwainers' Companies, and the Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' Association.

London Court of Arbitration. for the settlement of trade and commercial difficulties (established '92.) The procedure is as follows :—An agreement of reference is signed, on payment of a fee of £1 is. at the London Chamber of Commerce by those wishing to settle any commercial dispute. Option is then given to the parties either to refer the case to a single arbitrator, to three arbitrators with a majority vote, or to two arbitrators and an umpire; or, if desired, the Court of Arbitration will nominate an arbitrator, or arbitrators, to deal with the question in dispute. The arbitrator, or arbitrators, or umpire, has power to examine witnesses on oath, and to call for any documents necessary. Any party to an arbitration who so desires may be represented by a barrister or solicitor. The Court has prepared a model clause for insertion in trade contracts providing for the submission of disputes arising in connection with such contracts to the Chamber. A moderate scale of fees to be charged for arbitrators and umpires is arranged, yet high enough to secure the services of the best experts in the City. In ordinary cases the minimum is put at £2 2s. for the first hour and £1 1s. per hour subsequently. The Office of the Court, where all information can be obtained, is at the London Chamber of Commerce (Incorporated), Oxford Court, Cannon Street, E.C.

LONDON ELECTRIC LINES.

Among the features in the electric railway development of 1906 was an announcement by the chairman of the London & North-Western Railway Co. (Lord Stalbridge), at the meeting of Aug. 10th, that, in order to meet the problem of suburban traffic, the Company had determined to construct an electric railway from Euston to Watford and neighbourhood, partly alongside of and partly under the present main line, with a loop and local station under Euston Station, to serve not only the existing suburban stations, but several additional stations along the proposed route. He said that by going under Euston Station with a loop they would decrease rather than increase the suburban traffic passing through the present Euston Station, and be able to afford communication with the City and South London, and Charing Cross, Euston, and Hampstead Railways. This was not a competitive scheme in any way, but was an endeavour to meet existing difficulties.

During the session the London Outer Circle Railway Bill, which was for an electric line 32½ miles long through the suburbs on the north of London, from Feltham to West Ham, with a capital of £6,000,000, occupied a Commons Committee for several days, but was rejected on June 21st. Another Commons Committee granted an extension of time for the completion of the Cricklewood, Marble Arch, and Victoria line. The promoters of the Hammersmith, City and North-East London Railway Bill were permitted to suspend the measure until next session. Some details of the "tube" railways now working and in course of construction are given below.

Baker Street and Waterloo.—This line, when completed, will have 12 stations, and extend from Paddington in the north to the Elephant and Castle in the south. On March 10th the portion lying between Baker Street and Kennington Road was opened to traffic (8 stations). The equipment is quite modern, there being up and down tunnels and lifts for passengers. In the total length of between 5 and 6 miles communications have been, or will be, made with many other lines, particularly with the Waterloo terminus. A further portion to the Elephant and Castle was opened on Aug. 5th. Speaking at the half-yearly meeting on Aug. 8th, the chairman (Mr. T. J. Hare) said the average receipts per passenger worked out at 1'85*d.*, and during the period under review they had carried 3,006,276, of whom 430,283 were workmen. The directors (who had begun with a 2*d.* ordinary fare throughout) had determined to adopt the system of varying fares. It was expected that the Edgware Road section would be opened by the end of the year.

Central London.—The line is 5½ miles long, starting at Shepherd's Bush, and proceeding under Uxbridge Road, Oxford Street, Holborn, and Cheapside, to the Bank. The fare is 2*d.* any distance, and 2*d.* return for workmen in the early morning. There are 13 stations on the route. At the half-yearly meeting of the company on Feb. 7th, 1906, Sir Henry Oakley, chairman, presiding, dividends were declared at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum. There were losses of working-class and Sunday traffic in the half-year, and the accounts showed a decrease of £1760 in revenue from all sources, and a decrease of £1269 in working expenses. The average receipt per passenger was 1'85*d.* against 1'86*d.* Similar dividends were declared for the half-year ending June, when the accounts showed another falling off in passengers, there having been 22,336,489 carried, against 23,037,435 for the corresponding half of 1905. The receipts per head averaged 1'86*d.*, as before. At the meeting on Aug. 1st, Sir H. Oakley said that the backbone of their traffic had not been affected, and the Board had not thought it expedient to reduce their fares to meet either District Railway or motor competition. They were watching the effects of the experiment on the Baker Street line.

City and South London.—At the meeting on Feb. 6th, 1906, the dividend declared for the half-year was at the rate of 1½ per cent. per annum, as previous year. For the half-year ending June the dividend was at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum, against 2; and the chairman (Mr. Stuart Wortley, M.P.), in congratulating the shareholders on the increase at the meeting on July 30th, said the extension to Euston was being carried out satisfactorily. £1561 more money had been earned, but there was a decrease of £910 from season tickets.

Great Northern and City.—This line, which was opened on Feb. 14th, 1904, is 3½ miles in length, and runs from Finsbury Park to Moorgate Street, with intermediate stations at Drayton Park, Highbury, Essex Road, and Old Street. The tunnels differ from the usual electric railway tunnel in that they are about 16 ft. in diameter, large enough to take the heaviest G.N. suburban trains, and of course widen out at the stations, where there are lifts. The whole-distance fare is 2*d.*, with intermediate 1*d.* fares. During the half-year ending December 1905 there were 7,383,383 passengers (all told), against 5,920,641 in the corresponding half. In the half-year ending June 1906 the number was 8,087,740, against 7,527,634 (all told), and at the meeting on Aug. 31d it was stated that the working cost was between 49 and 50 per cent., including the payment of rates and taxes.

Great Northern, Piccadilly, and Brompton.—This line is one of the undertakings of the United Electric Railways Company of London. The others are the Metropolitan District, the Baker Street and Waterloo, and the Charing Cross, Euston and Hampstead (which it is expected will be opened in the spring of 1907). The new railway, which it was announced would be opened by the end of 1906 or beginning of 1907, is 9 miles long. When the Charing Cross "tube" is completed, it will connect with it at Leicester Square and with the "Bakerloo" at Piccadilly Circus.

Metropolitan.—For the half-year ending Dec. 1905 the dividend on the ordinary stock was at the rate of 2½ per cent. per annum, against 3 per cent. for the corresponding period; while that for the six months ending June 1906 was at the rate of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. against  $2\frac{1}{2}$ . At the meeting on July 26th, Sir C. McLaren, M.P. (chairman) said the electrification of the line was not quite finished; he also referred to motor-bus competition. An increase in the fares for the interchange traffic with the District line (see below) was announced in August.

Metropolitan District.—The electrification was not completed till Dec. 1905, and the dislocation during the half-year resulted in a large increase of expenditure, although 2,220,631 more passengers were carried. In order to pay the fixed charges, and £1 2s. 6d. per cent. per annum on the Four-per-Cent. Guaranteed Stock, £26,613 was charged to capital. For the six months ending June 1906 the net revenue account showed a deficiency of £39,984, this sum, together with £9375 dividend at the rate of £1 10s. per cent. per annum on the Four-per-Cent. Guaranteed Stock, being charged to capital account. The report foreshadowed an increase of fares, which was emphasised at the meeting of Aug. 16th by the new chairman (Sir G. Gibb), who made the following remarkable statements: "In the first half of 1899 the number of passengers carried was 23,107,266. In the last half of the present year the number was 32,759,662, being an increase of 41.8 per cent. In the same period the gross passenger receipts have fallen from £212,433 to £205,694. In other words the Company have carried more than 9,500,000 passengers in six months for nothing. The average receipt per passenger has declined from 2.19d. to 1.49d." Several revisions were made, and caused some commotion.

Waterloo and City.—The length of the line is 1 mile 4 furlongs 6.80 chains. The South-Western Company guaranteed a 3-per-cent. dividend. For the half-year ending Dec. 1905 a dividend at the rate of  $\frac{3}{4}$  per cent. per annum (as before) was declared. For the half-year ending June 1906 the dividend was at the rate of 3 per cent., the same as for the corresponding period. During the session an Act was passed transferring the line to the South-Western Co., which offered in exchange for each £100 Waterloo and City ordinary stock either £67 South-Western ordinary, £105 Three-and-a-half-per-Cent. Preference, or £110 Three-per-Cent. Debenture Stock.

London Reform Union. Inaugurated Oct. '92. A non-party organisation having branches in many of the Metropolitan parliamentary constituencies. Its object is to improve the municipal government of London, the administration of its public affairs, and the collective organisation of its civic life. The Union is in general agreement with the progressive policy of the London County Council. It has instituted an annual "Citizen Sunday" in London, and does much educational work. Chairman Mr. F. W. Maude, J.P.; Treasurer Mr. Sydney Buxton, M.P.; Sec. Mr. F. W. Galton. Offices, Trafalgar Buildings, Northumberland Avenue, Charing Cross, W.C.

London Salvage Corps. This corps was first established in 1866 by the Fire Insurance Companies on the transfer of the London Fire Establishment to the Metropolitan Board of Works, when the Metropolitan Fire Brigade was organised. The Corps is maintained by contributions from the principal Insurance Companies. There are five stations, all in connection by telephone, and also in communication with the Fire Brigade, in various parts of the Metropolis, and the men and plant are highly efficient. The number of fires attended by the Corps during 1904 was as follows: Inside the Metropolitan area, 2777; outside, 139; total, 2916. At nearly all of these, services of a valuable character were rendered on behalf of the Offices interested. The staff of the Corps consists of 1 chief officer, 5 superintendents, 11 foremen, 20 1st-class men, 21 2nd-class men, 50 3rd-class men, and 8 coachmen. Only men of the Royal Navy are taken. The following is a list of the stations: Commercial Road, E., Supt. Pennock; Southwark Bridge Road, S.E., Supt. Cahill; Shaftesbury Avenue, W., Supt. Allen; Upper Street, Islington, Supt. Paskins; and Watling Street, City. The Headquarters of the Corps are (during the rebuilding of the Watling Street station) at 34, Queen Street, E.C., Supt. Allison being in charge, and the Commanding Officer, Lieut.-Col. Fox, resides there.

Lord Chamberlain. The Lord Chamberlain of England has the control of the establishment attached to the chapels royal; of officers and servants attached to the royal chambers, except of those of the bedchamber; and over the medical men of the Household. The royal tradesmen are appointed by him. He directs all great royal ceremonies, receives all applications to attend levees and drawing-rooms, superintends the royal wardrobe and the jewel house at the Tower, and licenses theatres and plays, his power extending to the cities of London and Westminster, and certain other parts of the Metropolis, as well as to those places within which the sovereign may reside occasionally. The power of licensing theatres elsewhere belongs to the justices. Theatres licensed by letters patent from the Crown do not, even in the foregoing places, require the Lord Chamberlain's licence. One copy of every new play, prologue, or epilogue,—or new addition to an old play, prologue, or epilogue,—intended to be produced at any theatre in Great Britain, must be sent to the Lord Chamberlain at least seven days before it is first acted or produced. An account of the theatre where, and the time when, it is to be acted or produced, must be signed by the manager. In the event of its being disallowed by the Lord Chamberlain, either before or after the expiry of the seven days, it must not be presented. It is lawful for the Lord Chamberlain to disallow it, if he considers it fitting for him so to do, "for the preservation of good manners, decorum, or the public peace." A fine of £50 may be levied on any person who presents a piece either before it has been allowed, or subsequent to its being disallowed, while the licence of the theatre where it was presented becomes void. The Examiner of Stage Plays is Mr. George Alexander Redford.

Lord Great Chamberlain. A State office of great antiquity entirely distinct from that of Lord Chamberlain of the Household. The Lord Great Chamberlain assists, with the Earl Marshal, at the ceremony of the introduction of new peers; he issues tickets for the opening and prorogation of Parliament, and orders of admission for viewing the House of Lords when Parliament is not sitting. He arranges the preparation of Westminster Hall for a coronation, the trial of a peer, or for any other ceremony taking place therein. He walks on the right of His Majesty when he opens Parliament in person. The office is hereditary, and at present is held by Lord Cholmondeley.

Lord's Day Observance Society, 20 Bedford Street, W.C. Sec., Rev. Frederic Peake, LL.D.

Loubet, Emile, ex-President of France, was born at Marsanne, in the department of the Drôme, where his father was a farmer, on Dec. 31st, 1838. He became a barrister, practising at Montélimar, and steadily rose step by step from the Municipal Council of Montélimar to the Presidency of the Republic, passing through the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate en route, and having held the offices of Mayor of Montélimar ('70), President of the Consul-General of the Drôme ('83), Minister for Public Works ('87), Prime Minister (Feb. to Dec. '92) and President of the Senate '92. It was the Panama affair which caused the fall of his Ministry, but he was in no way implicated. As President of the Senate he was kept more or less outside of parties, though he was known to be a Moderate with Radical tendencies. On the sudden death of President Faure, in Feb. '99, he was elected (18th) by a large majority to succeed him, and held office till 1906. His uprightness, patriotism, and simplicity of demeanour made him the most popular President France has ever had. He was visited at Paris by the King of Sweden, the Queen-Dowager and Queen of Holland, the King of Belgium, the King of Greece, the Czar and Czarina, the King of Portugal, the King and Queen of Italy, the King of Spain, and King Edward VII.; and himself paid visits to the Czar at St. Petersburg, to King Edward VII. at Windsor, and to the Kings of Italy, Spain, and Portugal. He married in '69, his wife being the daughter of an ironmonger of Montélimar. There are three children.

LUNACY STATISTICS, UNITED KINGDOM.

The figures given below are taken from the last published reports of His Majesty's Commissioners in Lunacy for England and Wales, and for Scotland, and His Majesty's Inspectors of Lunatics in Ireland.

The number of lunatics, and the proportion per 10,000 of the population in the three kingdoms, were as shown in the following table on Jan. 1st in each of the years named:

Year.	England and Wales.	Scotland.	Ireland.
1859	36,762 18'67	6,015 19'8	—
1869	53,177 23'93	*6,975 *21'5	—
1879	69,885 27'54	†8,878 †24'8	‡12,982 ‡25'0
1889	84,340 29'65	11,664 29'5	16,026 33'7
1899	105,086 32'96	14,979 34'5	20,863 46'3
1904	117,199 34'71	16,415 35'9	22,794 51'6
1905	119,829 35'09	17,241 36'3	22,996 52'2
1906	121,979 35'31	17,450 36'3	—

* Average 1866-70. † Average 1876-80. ‡ 1880.

In regard to Ireland, the Census Commissioners for 1901 estimated that there were then 3868 lunatics and idiots at large, besides those under care. This would make the total on Jan. 1st, 1905, 26,864.

As to sex, the figures are as follows:

	England and Wales.	Scotland.	Ireland.
Males ..	56,264	8,458	11,900
Females	65,715	8,992	11,096
	121,979	17,450	22,996

There are three classes into which the insane may be divided, particulars of which are given on the next page.

	England and Wales.	Scotland.	Ireland.
Private	9,802	2,549	902
Pauper	111,256	14,850	21,935
Criminal	921	51	159
	121,979	17,450	22,996

As to forms of insanity, the statistics (in England and Wales) of institutions other than idiot establishments, show that on the average of the five years 1900-4 there were of the total admissions—

5.4 per cent.	suffering from congenital insanity,
40.7 " "	" " mania (all forms),
30.5 " "	" " melancholia
	(all forms),
4.1 " "	" " delusional insanity,
6.6 " "	" " general paralysis,
12.7 " "	" " dementia (all forms).

The Commissioners attributed to hereditary influence and congenital defects a large proportion (19.2 amongst males and 25.0 amongst females) of the cases coming before them; and 22.5 per cent. of the cases amongst males, and 9.2 per cent. amongst females were put down to alcoholic intemperance.

A Royal Commission was appointed in August 1904 to consider the existing methods of dealing with idiots and epileptics, and with imbecile, feeble-minded, or defective persons not certified under the Lunacy Laws; and, in view of the hardship or danger resulting to such persons and the community from insufficient provision for their care, training, and control, to report as to the amendments in the law or other measures which should be adopted in the matter. In Nov. 1906 the Commission were directed also to consider the working of the Commission in Lunacy, the Masters in Lunacy, and the Lord Chancellor's Visitors in Lunacy, and report if any amendments in the system were needed. The Commission consists of the Marquis of Bath (Chairman), Mr. W. P. Byrne, C.B., Mr. Charles Hobhouse, M.P., Mr. Fredk. Needham, M.D., Mr. H. D. Greene, K.C., M.P., Mr. C. E. H. Chadwyck-Healey, K.C., the Rev. H. N. Burden, Mr. W. H. Dickinson, Mr. C. S. Loch, and Mrs. Pinsent.

In England and Wales the total cost of the buildings and land for County, District and County Borough Asylums up to Jan. 1st, 1904, amounted to £19,167,418. The total average weekly cost per head for the year 1903 was 14s. 2d., including 10s. 2d. maintenance and 4s. in respect of interest on loans, etc. The money was provided thus: Rates, £1,592,232; patients' payments, £289,163; Parliamentary grants, etc., £745,802.

In Scotland the land and buildings up to May 15th, 1903, cost £2,276,318. The average weekly cost per head for the year ended May 15th, 1903, was 15s. 10d., being 9s. 11d. maintenance and 5s. 11d. interest, etc. Of the receipts, Government grants amounted to £63,165; patients' contributions, £13,100; rates, £231,496.

In Ireland the land and buildings up to Jan. 1st, 1904, cost £2,998,631. The average weekly cost per head for the year ended March 31st, 1903, was 11s. 13d., being 8s. 10d. for maintenance and 2s. 3½d. for interest. The receipts included Parliamentary grants, £171,603; patients' payments, £9229; rates, £363,798.

LUXEMBURG.

The reigning Grand Duke is Wilhelm, b. April 22nd, 1852, who married in '93 Marie Anne, daughter of Miguel, Duke of Braganza, and succeeded Nov. 19th, 1905. He has six daughters but no son. By the Treaty of London, '67, Luxemburg is declared neutral territory, and since '73 forms a Catholic Bishoprict. For commercial purposes the Grand Duchy is included in the German Zollverein. The Chamber of Deputies consists of 51 members, elected directly by the cantons for six years (half retiring every three years). Area, 998 sq. m.; pop. 246,455 (with the exception of about 3500 individuals all Roman Catholic). Capital, Luxemburg, pop. 21,000. Revenue, 1905, £571,688; expenditure, £569,884; public debt, 1906, £426,048; industries, chiefly mining (iron and steel) and agriculture. There is also a province of Luxemburg, belonging to Belgium, of which it forms the south-eastern corner; capital, Arlon.

Minister of State, P. Eyschen.

British Minister, Sir Henry Howard, K.C.M.G., C.B. (residing at the British Legation at The Hague, Netherlands).

Luzzatti, Signor, is a politician who has long held a prominent position in the Italian Parliament. He was Minister of the Treasury in 1891 in the first Rudini Cabinet, and again in '96, and held the same portfolio from Nov. 2nd, 1903, till March 28th, 1905. In 1906 his great debt conversion scheme was carried. He is an admirer of the English school in economics, and has written largely on economic subjects in the Italian press; while his contributions to the reviews have made his name known far and wide as an authority on financial and economic subjects. He was the founder in '66 of the "People's Bank of Milan," which originated that great movement in Italy (see p. 36). Signor Luzzatti is a member of the Right. See ITALY.

Lyttelton, General the Hon. Sir Neville Gerald, K.C.B., Chief of the General Staff and First Military Member of the Army Council, was b. in 1845, educated at Eton, entered the Rifle Brigade in '65, and served with it in the repulse of the Fenian raid on Canada in '66, in the Jowaki campaign in India, and as A.D.C. to General Sir John Aylmer in the Egyptian campaign of '82. He was A.D.C. to Lord Spencer in Ireland, '68-73; Military Secretary to Sir J. Aylmer at Gibraltar, and to Lord Reay at Bombay, '83-90; Assistant Adjutant-Gen., '95-7, and Assistant Military Secretary at the War Office, '97-8. He commanded the 2nd British Brigade in the Sudan campaign of '98, and was promoted to the rank of major-general for his distinguished service. After a short interval at Aldershot, he went out to South Africa, and took a prominent part in the operations in Natal, first as brigadier and subsequently as General commanding a Division. In February and March 1901 he organised the pursuit of De Wet in Cape Colony and the Orange River Colony, and then took over the command of the forces in Natal and South-Eastern Transvaal. When Lord Kitchener left South Africa on the conclusion of peace he was appointed to succeed him, and in Feb. 1904 he was given his present appointment. 12, Manchester Square, W.

M

MacDonald, Sir Claude M., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., K.C.B., British Ambassador to Japan, is the son of Major-Gen. J. O. Macdonald, and was b. in 1852. He was ed. at Uppingham and Sandhurst. Entering the 74th Highlanders in '72, he served through the Egyptian campaign of '82, and in the Soudan of '84, attaining the rank of major. His first active diplomatic work was done at Zanzibar as Agent and Consul-General there in '87. In '88 he was appointed H.M. Commissioner on the West Coast of Africa, and afterwards became Commissioner and Consul-General in the Oil Rivers Protectorate. In Jan. '96 he was appointed H.M. Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary at Peking, and in 1900 had to undergo a terrible siege during the Boxer outbreak, after which he was transferred to Japan. The Legation at Tokio was made an Embassy in Nov. 1905.

Mackenzie, Sir Alexander Campbell, Mus.D. St. Andrews, Cambridge and Edinburgh, LL.D. Glasgow, and D.C.L. McGill Univ. Canada, was b. at Edinburgh 1847. He studied as violinist in Germany from '57 to '62, and then became King's Scholar at the Royal Academy of Music, London. His compositions are numerous. Of his works for the violin perhaps the best known are his "Pibroch," composed for Sarasate, his "Benedictus," a set of Scottish pieces entitled "From the North," and a violin concerto, brought out at the Birmingham festival of '85. Among his other compositions may be mentioned three operas, "Colomba," "The Troubadour," and "His Majesty"; three cantatas, "The Story of Sayid," "Jason," and "The Dream of Jubal"; two oratorios, "The Rose of Sharon," and "Bethlehem; "Veni, Creator Spiritus," first given at Birmingham in '91; a "Scottish Concerto" for the pianoforte; an opera, "The Cricket on the Hearth"; "London Day by Day," an orchestral suite for the Norwich Festival of 1902, and the "Coronation March." Sir A. C. Mackenzie was elected Principal of the Royal Academy of Music in Feb. '88, and in '92 was appointed conductor of the Philharmonic Society's concerts. Knighted '95. Clubs: Athenæum, Garrick, Arts. Address: R.A.M., 4, Tenterden Street, Hanover Square, W.

Maeterlinck, Maurice, the Belgian author, was b. in 1862. The following is a list of his works, some of which have been translated into English and have attracted considerable attention in this country:—"La Princesse Maleine," published in '92; "Pelléas et Mélisande" (which has been dramatised and represented in London), '94; "Alladine et Palomides," '94; "Aglavaine et Selysette," '97; "Douze Chansons," '96; "Le Tresor des Humbles," '97; "La Mort de Tintagiles"; "La Intruse," and "La Sagesse et la Destinée" (all '98). M. Maeterlinck has published translations of other authors' works and written prefaces to them. He is also the author of the dramas "Ariane und Barbebleue" and "Sœur Béatrice," published in German in '90, "Monna Vanna" (prohibited in 1902, but the London Maeterlinck Society gave private performances of it), and of "Joyzelle," produced at Paris in 1903.

Manchester College, founded in Manchester 1786, now at Oxford, "exists for the purpose of promoting the study of Philosophy, Theology, and Religion, without insisting upon the adoption of particular doctrines." No subscription or doctrinal statement is required either of trustees, professors, or students. Exhibitions and free admission to lectures and classes are given to students for the ministry, without restriction as to the sect in which they will minister. The lectures are open to all members of Oxford University without payment of fees. The new buildings at Oxford, which have cost £55,000 in all, were opened by the President, Mr. H. R. Greg, in Oct. '93. Principal, Rev. J. Estlin Carpenter, M.A., D.Litt. (Oxon.), D.D. (Tufts).

Marconi, Guglielmo, LL.D., D.Sc., electrical engineer and pioneer of wireless telegraphy, was b. at Griffone, near Bologna, in '74. His father was an Italian, his mother an Irishwoman. He was ed. at Leghorn and Bologna Univ. It was at Bologna that his system of wireless telegraphy first attracted attention. In '96 he visited England, and with his invention sent messages across the Bristol Channel from Penarth, near Cardiff, to Weston-super-Mare. He afterwards set up installations of wireless telegraphy between the South Foreland and the East Goodwin light-vessel, the South Foreland and Wimerex in France, Harwich and Chelmsford. His system was definitely adopted by the Admiralty in 1900. In Dec. 1901 Mr. Marconi succeeded in communicating across the Atlantic Ocean. In 1902 he set up a station at Glace Bay, Nova Scotia, and on Dec. 21st succeeded in sending through messages to King Edward VII., the King of Italy, and the Times. He received the Cross of the Italian Order of the Crown from the King of Italy in Sept. 1902, the thanks of the Italian Chamber of Deputies in Jan. 1903, and the freedom of the City of Rome in the following May. Hon. D.Sc. Oxford and Hon. LL.D. Glasgow. See WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY.

MARRIAGE LAW AND REGULATIONS.

To make a marriage valid, it must not be bigamous; nor may the parties be within the prohibited degrees of relationship. Their genuine consent is necessary; and likewise absence of insanity and of incurable impotence. The due formalities in connection with the ceremony have also to be observed. On either of these grounds the Court may nullify a marriage, if application is made within a reasonable time. If either party is a minor, the consent of a parent or guardian is, by English Law, required as a preliminary; but a marriage would not be nullified simply because such consent had not been obtained.

Marriage Regulations.

In Great Britain marriage can be had in four ways—by special licence, by common licence, by publication of banns, and before a registrar or some other "authorised person." In the case of a licence, one of the parties must have resided at least fifteen days in the parish or district where the ceremony is to be performed.

(1) The common licence can be obtained at the registry office of the bishop of the diocese, or from any surrogate of such bishop, or at the Faculty Office, or the Vicar-General's Office, Doctors' Commons, London, E.C. One of the parties must personally apply for the licence, and make affidavit that there is no legal impediment to the marriage. The fees amount to from £2 2s. 6d. to £3 3s. The common licence fixes the time and place of the ceremony.

(2) The special licence can only be obtained by one of the parties attending at the Faculty Office, Doctors' Commons. The granting of special licences rests solely with the Archbishop of Canterbury, who considers each application on its merits. On an average about 40 per annum are issued. The fees amount to about £30, and the licence empowers the parties to be married at any time, in any place, and without previous residence in that place.

(3) In the case of banns, they must be published in the church of the parish in which both parties or each of them reside for three separate Sundays, and the ceremony must be performed within three months of the final publication in one of the two churches, a certificate of the publication in the other church being given to the minister performing the ceremony. After three months the banns become useless. Marriages can also be solemnised in church within three months of the issue of a registrar's certificate, as explained below.

(4) If the marriage is to be before a registrar, or some other authorised person, one of the parties must give notice to the registrar of the district, in which he must have dwelt for seven days. If the parties are in two districts, notice must be given to the registrar of each district. Notice will then be placed on the notice board of the office for twenty-one days, after which the certificate issues and the marriage may be celebrated (a) at the superintendent registrar's office without a religious ceremony, or (b) in any building registered for marriage in presence of the district registrar. The fees for the marriage are 2s. to the superintendent registrar, and 5s. to the registrar before whom the marriage is solemnised, and 2s. 7d. is charged for each certificate of marriage. If desired, the presence of the registrar may be dispensed with in registered buildings, other than Church of England churches, certified to the Registrar-General as places of religious worship, and for him may be substituted any "authorised person." In such a case a fee of 4s. is to be paid to the superintendent registrar on the issue of a certificate for a marriage, or if the marriage is by licence an additional fee of 6s. 6d. The registrar may also issue a licence which dispenses with some of the above formalities. The fees are, for the licence, £2 4s. 6d. to the superintendent registrar, and 10s. to the registrar.

All marriages, except those by special licence, must be performed between the hours of 8 a.m. and 3 p.m. All marriages must be registered, if performed by a clergyman of the Church of England, by the clergyman, who transmits a copy to the superintendent registrar; in other cases by the district registrar, or the registering officer of the Friends, or the secretary of the synagogue among the Jews.

In Scotland the regulations for a Regular Marriage are very much the same as in England. Banns are proclaimed in the parish church (Established) or the Episcopal church, and the certificate of such proclamation being produced is sufficient authority to a minister to celebrate the marriage. Application to a registrar can also be made, and a certificate of publication of notice of marriage is equivalent to a certificate of banns. The verbal or written expression, in the presence of two witnesses, of mutual consent to take each other for husband and wife also constitutes marriage, if one of the parties has been resident in Scotland for 21 days immediately preceding.

A marriage between British subjects may legally be solemnised on an English man-of-war at a foreign station by a clergyman of the Established Church, though no banns be published, or any licence or certificate obtained. The Foreign Marriage Act, 1892, provides that all marriages abroad, where a British Embassy, Legation, or Consulate exists, between parties one of whom is a British subject, solemnised in the way prescribed by the Act, shall be valid. Marriages in England between British and Foreign subjects may be declared invalid abroad, although valid in England, unless all the legal requirements of the foreign country have been complied with, and inquiry as to these should be made of a consul of the country in question.

Marriage with a Deceased Wife's Sister.

Before 1533 marriages of consanguinity and affinity were wholly governed by Canon Law. Such marriages were voidable (1533-1835). In the latter year Lord Lyndhurst's Act made past marriages of affinity valid, future marriages void. The House of Commons rejected the prohibitory clause as regards marriage with a deceased wife's sister, but afterwards were persuaded to accept it. In 1847 a Royal Commission was appointed to examine the marriage laws; and from '49 up to the present day, a period of more than fifty years, attempts have been made, both in the Lords and the Commons, to carry the Bill making marriage with a deceased wife's sister legal, but eventually have always failed. As a rule, the Commons have carried the Bill by a large majority, but it has been thrown out in the Lords. In '06, however, the Bill was carried by the Lords, but went no further. The Colonial Bill, often passed in the House of Commons and in the House of Lords, to make marriages of this class lawfully contracted in the Colonies valid also in England, became law in 1906 (see Session). The Scotch Bill, having a similar object, has never been carried, though there are not wanting high authorities who pronounce such marriages legal in Scotland even now, without further enactment.

The headquarters of those opposed to the existing law are the offices of the Marriage Reform Association (Secretary, Mr. T. Paynter Allen), 2, Dean's Yard, Westminster.

Defending the law as it stands is the Marriage Law Defence Union (Secretary, Mr. E. H. Blackett-Ord), Church House, Westminster.

Marine Engineers, Institute of, 58, Romford Road, Stratford, E. President, Lord Pirrie. Hon. Sec., James Adamson.

Master and Servant, Law as to. In the case of domestic servants the hiring is subject to a month's notice (from any date), or the payment of an extra month's wages (not board wages). A governess or tutor is usually entitled to three months' notice. It may generally be taken that if a servant is paid by the day, week, or month, he is entitled to a days, week's, or month's notice. A servant may, however, be dismissed without notice or compensation for (1) being absent without leave, (2) utter incompetency, (3) wilful disobedience to reasonable orders, or (4) gross moral misconduct. The death of the master puts an end to the hiring. A master is not bound to give a character to a servant, but if given it must be truthful, and if given bonâ fide it is privileged, and not actionable. A master is liable for the acts of his servant, as, for instance, where a coachman, through careless driving, causes damage to another person or their property, though he would not be liable if the servant were acting without his knowledge or authority. Apart from special arrangement, a servant cannot be compelled to pay for accidental breakages. A master is not liable for any medical attendance unless he actually authorises it.

Matsugata, Count, Japanese statesman, was b. in 1835, and springs from the Satsuma clan. After the revolution of '68 he was appointed Governor of the province of Tosa, and then became Assistant Minister of Finance. He was appointed as the representative of Japan at the Paris Exhibition of '78, and on his return home took successively the portfolios of Home Affairs and Finance ('81). He at once entered on the arduous task of restoring the currency of the country to a healthy condition. Paper currency to an enormous amount was in circulation at a discount of over 80 per cent. as compared with the silver currency; but his vigorous measures saved the situation, and in three years the paper currency was reduced in quantity and put on a par with silver. He has twice been Prime Minister, and visited England in 1902.

Maxim, Sir Hiram S., who was knighted on Jan. 1st, 1901, is the well-known chief engineer and director of Messrs. Vickers, Sons & Maxim, Ltd. He was born at Sangersville, Maine, U.S.A., in 1840, and educated at the ordinary public schools there, but principally by himself all through his strenuous and successful career. He was early employed in machine works, and became a draughtsman at Boston and New York. His inventions in regard to electric lighting and machinery are numerous, but his fame rests chiefly on the automatic system of firearms which bear his name. He has also largely interested himself in the production of smokeless powder; and some few years back his attempts to solve the problem of aerial navigation attracted much attention. Address: Thurlow Park, Norwood Road, West Norwood.

MEDICAL SCHOOLS (LONDON).

The following list comprises most of the Medical Schools in London. Particulars will be found of the number of beds, in- and out-patients treated, fees payable, etc.

Charing Cross, Chandos Street, W.C.: beds 300, in-patients 2500, out-patients 20,500; fees, 115 guineas in one sum, or 126 guineas in sessional payments; for dental students 55 guineas, or 61 guineas payable in two instalments of 31 guineas and 30 guineas respectively. Dean, Dr. Christopher Addison.

Guy's, London Bridge, S.E.: beds 602, in-patients 8626, out-patients 137,792; fee, 30 guineas per annum; and an entrance fee of 20 guineas to first-year students, 10 guineas to third-year students; term, 5 years. School Secretary: S. H. Croucher.

King's College Hospital, Lincoln's Inn Fields, W.C. Beds, 220. Students have all the facilities of the extensive laboratories of King's College. There are special medical, surgical, and gynaecological tutors, who hold classes regularly prior to the various examinations. Particulars as to scholarships, fees, courses of study, etc., post free on application to the Dean, Peyton T. B. Beale, F.R.C.S., or the Secretary, King's College, Strand, W.C.

London Hospital, Whitechapel Road, E.: 927 beds, 13,536 in-patients, 206,386 out-patients; major operations, 2796; fee, 120 guineas for the full curriculum. All resident officers are provided with free board and rooms. Secretary: Munro Scott.

London School of Clinical Medicine, in connection with the Dreadnought Hospital, Greenwich. Secretary, P. Michelli.

London School of Dental Surgery, attached to the Royal Dental Hospital, 32, Leicester Square, W.C. Fees for two years' hospital practice and lectures, £53 3s. in one instalment, or £57 13s. in two yearly instalments; for complete curriculum, including mechanical pupillage, £150, or 150 guineas if paid in three yearly instalments of £52 10s. Full particulars of the Dean.

London (Royal Free Hospital) School of Medicine for Women, 8, Hunter Street, Brunswick Square, W.C.: beds (at the Royal Free Hospital, Gray's Inn Road, W.C.), 165 beds; in-patients, 2329; out-patients, 42,720; maternity cases, 431. Fees for University of London students: Preliminary Science, £25; Medical course (4 years), £135 in one sum or £145 in four instalments. Fees for other students, £140 in one sum or £150 in four instalments. Secretary: Miss Douie, M.B., M.A.

London School of Tropical Medicine (University of London) is connected with the Seamen's Hospital, Royal Albert Docks, and is under Government auspices. Secretary, P. Michelli.

Middlesex Hospital, Berners Street, Oxford Street, W.: beds, 340. The composition fee is 135 guineas for students taking the Conjoint diploma, 145 guineas for students taking the London University degree. There are 2 entrance scholarships of £100 and £75, and one of £50 open to students of Oxford and Cambridge Universities. Dean: J. Murray, F.R.C.S.

St. Bartholomew's, Smithfield, E.C.: 670 beds, 7279 in-patients, 129,877 out-patients. Fees, 30 guineas entrance, and 30 guineas annually for five years. Of the 670 beds, 231 are allotted to medical cases, 335 to surgical, 25 to diseases of the eye, 32 to diseases of women, and 47 to general and isolation cases. Warden: Mr. G. E. Gask, F.R.C.S.

St. Mary's, Paddington, W.: beds 281, in-patients 4298, out-patients 24,456. Fees: Complete course, £140; clinical course, £63. Secretary, B. E. Matthews, B.A.

St. Thomas, Albert Embankment, S.E.: beds 602, in-patients 6653, out-patients 20,705; attendances 185,424; annual composition fee, 30 guineas; term 5 years. Secretary: G. Q. Roberts, M.A. Oxon.

University College Hospital, Gower Street, W.C.: beds 277, in-patients 2897, out-patients 62,854, attendances 219,989; fees, 80 guineas; term 5 years. Dean: Sidney Martin, M.D., F.R.S., F.R.C.P. Sec.: F. H. M. Parker, M.A.

MEDICAL SOCIETIES.

General Medical Council. The Council deals with all matters affecting the education and registration of the medical and dental professions. There are separate Registrars for England—H. E. Allen, LL.B.; Scotland—J. Robertson, 54, George Square, Edinburgh; and Ireland—R. J. E. Roe, 35, Dawson Street, Dublin. President, Donald MacAlister, M.D. Office, 209, Oxford Street, W.

British Medical Association. The Association numbers more than 20,000 members, and expends upwards of £1500 a year in scientific investigation, scholarships, and committees,—such as examination of the action of chloroform; and a committee on therapeutics, which recently issued a valuable report. The Association in the United Kingdom is divided into 38 branches, and there are also 29 Colonial branches, the Association extending its influence throughout Greater Britain. The annual subscription is 25s. per annum. The organ of the Association is the British Medical Journal. General Secretary, Guy Elliston. Offices, 429, Strand, London, W.C.

Dental Association, British, 19, Hanover Square, W. Hon. Sec., W. H. Dolamore.

Royal College of Physicians, Pall Mall East. It confers the F.R.C.P., M.R.C.P. and L.R.C.P. The President is Sir R. Douglas Powell, Bart., K.C.V.O., M.D.; and the Treasurer, Sir Dyce Duckworth, M.D. Registrar, E. Liveing, M.D. Assistant Registrar, Oswald Browne, M.D. Secretary, W. Fleming.

Medical Education and Registration, General Council of, 209, Oxford Street. President, Donald MacAlister, M.D.; Registrar, Henry E. Allen, LL.B.

Medical Officers of Health, Society (Incorporated) of, 1, Upper Montague Street, Russell Square, W.C. Secretary, William A. Lawton.

Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society, 20, Hanover Square, W. President, J. Warrington Haward, F.R.C.S.; Sec., J. Y. W. MacAlister, F.S.A.

Royal College of Surgeons of England. Established 1800; charter granted in '43. The nucleus of the present Museum (Conservator, Prof. C. Stewart, F.R.S.) was the celebrated Hunterian collection; this was purchased by the Government after John Hunter's death, and, under certain conditions, handed over to the College. The Library (Librarian, V. G. Plarr), which is kept up for the use of Fellows and members of the College, contains about 54,000 volumes. The examination for the L.R.C.P. and M.R.C.S. is held conjointly with the Royal College of Physicians at the Examination Hall, on the Victoria Embankment. That for the F.R.C.S. is held by the College of Surgeons in the same building. Full particulars of all the examinations will be found in the College Calendar. Secretary, S. Forrest Cowell, 40, Lincoln's Inn Fields, London, W.C.

See WOMEN, HIGHER EDUCATION OF, as to the medical training of women.

MEDICAL SUMMARY, 1906.

The year did not present, from a medical point of view, any striking features. Steady work went on along lines already laid down, but there was no striking discovery.

The Royal Commission on Vivisection (q.v.) held its first sitting on Oct. 24th.

The Fifteenth International Medical Congress was opened at Lisbon by the King of Portugal on April 10th, and lasted a week.

Prof. Elie Metschnikoff delivered the Harben Lectures at the Royal Sanitary Institute on May 25th, 28th, and 30th, on "The Hygiene of the Tissues," "The Hygiene of the Alimentary Canal," and "Syphilis."

The annual meeting of the British Medical Association was held at Toronto from August 21st to August 25th.

On the whole the Plague in India was less virulent during the year than for many years past. The total number of deaths for the last week of 1905 was 3282; at the end of March the figures rose to 11,823, whilst for the last week in April the deaths were 15,000 as compared with 56,000 in the corresponding period of 1905. For the last week in June the mortality had sunk to 769, rising at the end of September to 5625. Plague occurred in Persia during the year, and in some places gave rise to riots. As in previous years, the disease remained endemic in Mauritius, and a few cases were also reported from South Africa and Australia. Cases also occurred at Hong Kong, but clean bills of health were issued at the end of August.

Sleeping sickness increased to an alarming extent in Africa, 40,000 to 50,000 natives having died in Uganda, whilst it is estimated that as many as 400,000 to 600,000 perished on the Congo (Brit. Med. Journ., May 12th, 1906).

The chief event in the campaign against Tuberculosis during the year was the opening of the King Edward VII. Sanatorium at Midhurst by the King and Queen on June 13th. A praiseworthy feature in the building scheme is an open-air chapel. See CONSUMPTION SANATORIA.

From an important paper by Drs. Newsholm and Stevenson, read before the Royal Statistical Society, on the decline of the birth rate in civilised countries, and abstracted in the British Medical Journal of Feb. 3rd, 1906, the following quotations are taken: "The decline of birth rate is not due to increased poverty. It is associated with a general raising of the standard of comfort, and is an expression of the determination of the people to secure this greater comfort. The 'gospel of comfort' has been widely adopted, and is becoming the practical ethical standard of a rapidly increasing number of civilised communities, both in this country and abroad. We have no hope that any nation—in the absence of strong and overwhelming moral influences to the contrary—will be permanently left behind in this race to decimate the race. We must look—failing the possibility indicated in the last sentence—for an increasing practice of the artificial prevention of child-bearing, which, whatever may be said for exceptional instances, is at least unjustified when used merely as a supposed means towards increased social comfort. And with this we must look for a lower standard of moral outlook, a lowering of the ideal of married life, and a consequent deterioration of the moral, if not also of the physical, nature of mankind. France has anticipated the rest of the world, and has thus come near the consummation of its social felo-de-se. But it is only a question of decades, in the absence of a great change in the moral standpoint of the majority of the people, before others follow in the same direction, possibly even at the same pace."

Mr. Sidney Webb had two articles in the Times on the same subject on Oct. 11th and Oct. 16th, 1906. He came to a similar conclusion as to the deliberate regulation of the marriage state being the principal if not the sole cause of the present continuous decline in the birth-rate in Great Britain, Australia and elsewhere. His conclusion, however, was that it was "indispensable and urgent to alter the economic incidence of child-bearing" in favour of the child-producing family.

Imperial Cancer Research Fund.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales is the President of the Fund. The investigations have led to the discovery that the disease occurs in uncivilised races of men and in the lower vertebrate animals. Extensive statistical and experimental researches are being carried out, and all reputed remedies are scientifically treated. Three reports on the investigations have been published: viz., "The Zoological Distribution, the Limitations to the Transmissibility, and Comparative Cytological Characters of Malignant New Growths" (1904); "The Statistical Investigation of Cancer" (1905); and "The Growth of Cancer under Natural and Experimental Conditions" (1905), published by Taylor & Francis, Red Lion Court, Fleet Street. Dr. E. F. Bashford is General Superintendent of Cancer Research and Director of the Laboratory. The General Secretary is Mr. F. G. Hallett. Office, Examination Hall, Victoria Embankment.

In the matter of cancer research the experimental method of investigation is now finally established, and continuous work on the mouse has shown that the lesions of cancer can be reproduced experimentally, and mice can be rendered insusceptible to inoculation (Brit. Med. Journ., Oct. 13th, 1906). At the annual meeting of the Imperial Cancer Research Fund, held on July 25th, the General Superintendent, Dr. E. F. Bashford, reported that experiments had been made on the question of the hereditary occurrence of cancer in mice: "it had required four years and the examination of 100,000 mice to discover the occurrence of 28 cases of spontaneous carcinoma of the mamma (breast)—i.e., a proportion of one case in 3500 mice." Experiments point strongly to the existence of individual variations in the suitability of mice for the transplantation of malignant growths. "Four years ago there seemed little hope of acquiring new knowledge of cancer. In the interval it has been made the object of systematic experimental study, and the advance of our knowledge now enables us to reproduce at will all the features of spontaneous cancer in mice, and to protect healthy mice from all the consequences of inoculating them with experimental cancer. This having been achieved, it is not too much to hope that the further development of the experimental study of cancer will ultimately yield results having a direct bearing on the nature and treatment of the disease."

On Sept. 24th an International Congress on Cancer was held at Heidelberg, when also a new Institute for the study and treatment of the disease was opened.

Melba, Madame, operatic vocalist, b. in Australia, May 19th, 1865. At six sang ballads to her own accompaniment at a charitable concert. Studying under Madame Marchesi in Paris, she made her stage début Oct. 15th, '87, in "Rigoletto," at the Théâtre de la Monnaie, Brussels. Next year appeared as Lucia at Covent Garden. In '89 played Ophelia at Paris Grand Opera. For her Bemberg specially wrote "Elaine," produced in London in '92. She has taken a prominent part in recent opera seasons in London and New York.

Méline, Félix Jules, was b. at Remiremont, in the Vosges, 1838. After completing his studies he joined the Paris bar, and entered the Chamber in '72, being appointed Under Secretary of State for Justice in '76. He took office under M. Jules Ferry in '83 as Minister of Agriculture, and became President of the Chamber in '88. After that he was chosen chairman of the Tariff Commission, on which his strong protective opinions had great weight. He is a member of the Moderate Republican party, and after the fall of M. Bourgeois successfully undertook the task of forming a "Conciliation Cabinet" (April 28th, '06), which held together for more than two years, but fell in '08. He was an unsuccessful candidate for the Presidency on the death of President Faure in Feb. '09, and has since been one of the Opposition leaders in the Chamber.

Meredith, George, poet and novelist, is a native of Hampshire, and was b. 1828. After studying for some time in Germany he commenced his literary career with the publication of a volume of poems in '51. This was followed by the "Shaving of Shagpat, an Arabian Entertainment" ('55), "Farina, a Legend of Cologne" ('57), "The Ordeal of Richard Feveril" ('59), "Modern Love: Poems and Ballads" ('62), "Emilia in England" ('64), "Rhoda Fleming" ('65), "Vittoria" ('66), "The Adventures of Harry Richmond" ('71), "The Egoist" ('79), "The Tragic Comedians" ('81), "Poems and Lyrics of the Joy of Earth" ('83), "Diana of the Crossways" ('85), "One of our Conquerors" ('91), "Lord Ormont and his Aminta" ('94), "The Amazing Marriage" and a volume of short stories ('95). A selection from his poems was published in '97, and "Odes in Commemoration of the History of France" ('98). In later years his genius has received more of the appreciation which it deserves. Appointed to the Order of Merit 1905. Address: Boxhill, Surrey.

† In the absence of satisfactory information, the records of numerous small sailing-vessels (belonging chiefly to Greece, Turkey, Southern Russia, and the Dutch East Indies) are omitted from the Register Book.

‡ Japanese sailing-vessels of under 300 tons net are not recorded in Lloyd's Register Book.

* Of the mercantile tonnage of the U.S.A., the largest portion (43 vessels of 195,459 tons) was built for service on the Great Lakes.

The World's Totals may be summarised thus:—

	Merchant Vessels.		Warships.		Grand Total.
	No.	Tons.	No.	Tons.	No.	Tons.
British . . .	840	1,633,966	28	129,801	868	1,763,767

Total . . .	1576	2,514,922	118	363,211	1694	2,878,133

The largest steamers launched during 1905 were the following:—

Tons gross.	Tons gross.
Kaiserin Auguste . . .	Nieuw Amsterdam 17,100
Victoria . . . 24,581	La Provence . . . 14,744

Of the total output of the United Kingdom in 1905—viz. 795 ships of 1,623,168 tons (excluding warships),—1,261,316 steam tons and 12,415 sailing tons, or 1,273,731 tons in all (nearly 78½ per cent.) were built for registration in the United Kingdom. In this connection it should be noted that the United Kingdom vessels lost, broken up, etc., during 1905 amount to about 267,000 tons (217,000 steam, 50,000 sail).

Sales to foreign and colonial owners for the twelve months ended Nov. 1905 reached 546,000 tons (457,000 steam, 89,000 sail), and 12 steamers of 42,779 tons were lost through capture in the late war by the Japanese and Russian navies (11 steamers of 39,038 tons by Japan and one of 3741 tons by Russia). On the other hand, 3700 tons (3400 steam, 300 sail) were built abroad for United Kingdom owners, and purchases from foreign and colonial owners during the same period amounted to 18,500 tons (15,500 steam, 3000 sail). The sailing tonnage of the United Kingdom thus decreased by about 123,000 tons, and the steam tonnage increased by 563,000 tons. The net increase of United Kingdom tonnage during 1905 was therefore about 440,000 tons.

In 1905, 21½ per cent. of the total output was acquired by foreign and colonial shipowners, as compared with 18½ per cent. in 1904, 18 per cent. in 1903 and 1902, 23 per cent. in 1901 and 1900, 19 per cent. in '99, 22 per cent. in '98, and 25 per cent. in '97. Germany provided in 1905 the largest amount of work for the shipbuilders of the United Kingdom—viz. 15 vessels of 85,020 tons (nearly 5½ per cent. of the total output). Next comes Norway, with 50,655 tons. The British Colonies occupy the next place, with 38,082 tons, and are closely followed by Austria-Hungary (33,623 tons), Sweden (33,097 tons), and Holland (32,761 tons).

The total output of the world during 1905 (exclusive of warships) appears to have been 2,514,922 tons (2,406,501 steam, 108,421 sail). Lloyd's Register Wreck Returns for 1905 show that the tonnage of all nationalities totally lost, broken up, etc., in the course of twelve months amounts to about 793,000 tons (528,000 steam, 265,000 sail). The net increase of the world's mercantile tonnage during 1905 was thus about 1,722,000 tons. Sailing tonnage was reduced by 157,000 tons, while steam tonnage increased by 1,878,000 tons.

Compared with the net increase for the world, the net increase of 440,000 tons, as stated above, for the United Kingdom is equivalent to over 25½ per cent. In the net increase of the world's steam tonnage—viz. 1,878,000 tons, the United Kingdom has shared to the extent of 563,000 tons, or 30 per cent. Of the tonnage launched during 1905, the United Kingdom has acquired nearly 51 per cent., and of the new steam tonnage over 52½ per cent.

Vessels Classed by Lloyd's Register.

Of the vessels launched during 1905, 664 of 1,354,954 tons (including 49 vessels of 110,008 tons built abroad), have been built under the Society's inspection with a view to classification in Lloyd's Register Book.

Shipbuilding Returns, 1906.

At the close of the quarter ended Sept. 30th, 1906, there were 512 vessels, of 1,264,767 tons gross under construction in the United Kingdom, and 47 war-ships of 203,345 tons displacement. The details were:—

Steam, 478 ships; tonnage, 1,253,531.

Sail, 34 " " " 11,236.

War, 47 " " " 203,345.

Of the merchant ships, 361 of 985,394 tons were for British owners; of the war-ships, 40 with 180,325 tonnage were British.

New Ships Launched, 1906.

The Cunard Co. launched the two new turbine steamers which they had agreed with H.M. Government to build—the Lusitania, built by Messrs. John Brown & Co., on June 7th, 1906, at Clydebank, and the Mauretania, built by Messrs. Swan, Hunter and Wigham Richardson, on Sept. 20th, 1906, at Wallsend, on the Tyne. The dimensions, etc., of the ships are:—

Length, 790 ft.	Tons displacement,
Breadth, 88 ft.	45,000 tons.
Depth, 60 ft.	Load draught, 37 ft. 6 in.
Gross tonnage, 32,500 tons.	Engine h. p., 72,000.
	Speed, 25 knots.

These two ships promise to restore to the British flag the supremacy in speed on the Transatlantic service which passed to the German flag in '97. The speed of the Kaiser Wilhelm II. of the North German Lloyd is 23½ knots. Both vessels are available as auxiliary cruisers.

The White Star Line launched the new Atlantic liner, Adriatic, of approximately 25,000 tons gross register, built by Messrs. Harland & Wolff, at Queen's Island, Belfast, Sept. 20th, 1906.

Messrs. Apcar & Co.'s steamer Japan, over 6000 tons gross, was launched at Messrs. Workman, Clark, & Co.'s wharf at Belfast, Sept. 20th, 1906.

The Anchor Line launched at the yard of Messrs. Barclay, Curle, & Co., Ltd., Whiteinch, the Castalia, a screw steamer of 6200 tons gross on Aug. 23rd, 1906, for the Indian service.

The Austrian Lloyd's Co. launched the Vorwärts, 436 ft. by 53 by 30; 9000 tons.

The P. & O. Co. launched three new ships of 6700 tons gross register, fitted with twin screws and quadruple expansion engines—the Namur, Nile, and Nyanza, intended for their Intermediate services.

The Royal Mail Steam Packet Co.'s new mail steamers Amazon and Uruguay made their maiden voyages in 1906. They are between 10,000 and 11,000 tons, and are luxuriously equipped.

The C. P. R. Co.'s Empress of Ireland, built by the Fairfield Shipbuilding and Engineering Co., Ltd., Glasgow, 570 ft. by 65 ft. 6 in. by 48 ft., 14,155 tons gross, ran her trials in June, and exceeded 20 knots.

The Hamburg-Amerika Line launched 11 ships, including the Belgravia of 10,100 tons, the Brasil of 9995 tons, and 7 others over 7000 tons.

Ships Lost, Condemned, etc., in 1905.

Steam and sailing vessels totally lost, condemned, etc., during 1905, of 100 tons register and upwards.

Of the 693 ships lost, 51 were abandoned at sea; 32 were broken up and condemned; 22 were burnt; 61 foundered; 77 were missing; 65 were lost by collision; and 366 were wrecked. Besides these, 190 vessels of 169,799 tons were broken up, dismantled, etc., in consequence of old age or on account of their not being deemed fit for profitable navigation.

Numbers of Seamen.

The number of persons employed in vessels (registered under Part I. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894) belonging to the United Kingdom, which were returned as employed in the home and foreign shipping trade, exclusive of vessels employed on rivers and in inland navigation, was:—

	1890.	1900.	1903.	1905.

Total . . . . .	236,108	247,448	257,937	263,686

The number employed in registered sailing vessels under 300 tons was in 1890, 42,721; in 1900, 25,056; in 1903, 21,452; and in 1905, 20,263.

The number of British seamen in British ships reached its maximum in '93, when it was 186,628. From '93 to 1901 the number steadily declined to 172,912; then it began to rise again, and reached 180,492 in 1905.

A Committee, with Mr. Hudson E. Kearley, M.P., as Chairman, and Mr. R. W. Matthew of the Board of Trade as secretary, was appointed by the President of the Board of Trade in July 1906, to consider and report on the most practicable scheme for the supply and training of boy seamen of British nationality for the Mercantile Marine.

Shipping and the Foreign Trade of the United Kingdom.

The World's Big Merchant Steamers.

The following table, compiled from the Appendix to Lloyd's Register Book, gives a good idea of the great increase which has taken place during recent years in the size of large steamers. The steamers flying the British flag are in a great majority, comprising 58½ per cent. of the total number of ocean-going vessels of 5000 tons and above.

In addition to the above vessels there were under construction at the end of Sept. 1906, five other steamers of 20,000 tons and above.

Fast Merchant Steamers.

From the Appendix to the 1906-7 edition of Lloyd's Register Book, where detailed particulars are given of all steamers of 12 knots and above, it appears that 46 British and 29 foreign merchant steamers are capable of maintaining at sea a speed of 20 knots and above, 15 of which are of 10,000 tons gross and upwards.

From the following table, which only takes into account ocean-going steamers of 4000 tons and above, the great superiority of the United Kingdom as regards fast merchant steamers is well shown.

Routes, Developments, etc., 1906.

The C. P. R. Co. completed a contract with the British Post Office to carry the mails to Japan and China via Canada. The time occupied from London to Hong-Kong is 29½ days, to Shanghai 27½ days, and to Yokohama 22½ days, saving 9½ days, 8½ days, and 8½ days respectively.

The White Star Line put the Celtic and the Cedric into its New York and Mediterranean service; and in 1905 carried the largest number of 1st-class passengers to New York from any European port.

The Austrian Lloyd's Co. are running a new fortnightly express service between Trieste and Bombay; weekly services between Trieste and Alexandria, and Trieste and Constantinople; a monthly passenger service from Trieste to Calcutta, and an accelerated passenger and cargo service from Trieste to China and Japan.

The Royal Mail Steam Packet Co. took over the "Pacific" interest in the "Orient Pacific" line with the following steamers: Ortona, Oroya, Orotava, and Oruba, and acquired a half-interest in the Mail Service to Australia, Tasmania, and New Zealand, which is now run as the "Orient-Royal Mail Line." It now runs a passenger and cargo service via Spanish ports to Cuba, Mexico, and New Orleans.

The Hamburg-Amerika Line started a fast monthly service from Genoa to La Plata; a new monthly service from Hamburg to the ports of the Persian Gulf, calling at Antwerp, Marseilles, Port Soudan, Jibuti, and Aden; a regular Egyptian service from Genoa to Alexandria; and introduced a West Indian Intercolonial Service giving a regular connection between different points in the West Indies.

Marine Steam Turbines.

The turbine engine was invented by the Hon. C. A. Parsons, and first made at his works at Newcastle-on-Tyne. His Turbinia was the first boat fitted with turbine engines, and in 1901 the system was tried with destroyers and passenger steamers. The results, as to speed and economy of coal consumption, were found to be so favourable that the system was tried in ocean-going steamers with similar success.

In 1905 the following steamers fitted with turbines were launched:

War Risks of Shipping.

A Committee was appointed by the Treasury in 1906 to investigate the question of National Indemnity or Insurance of Shipping against loss from capture by the enemy at sea in time of war. The members are Mr. Austen Chamberlain, M.P. (Chairman), Sir R. B. Finlay, K.C., Sir T. Glen Coats, M.P., Sir J. L. Mackay, Sir G. S. Clarke, Sir G. H. Murray, Mr. H. Llewellyn Smith, Captain C. L. Outley, R.N., Mr. E. Beauchamp, M.P., Mr. H. N. Gladstone, Mr. F. H. Jackson, and Mr. A. Lindley, with Mr. G. H. Duckworth (Secretary). The Committee is to report: (1) Whether it is desirable that the State should undertake to make good to ship-owners and traders losses incurred through the capture of shipping by the enemy in time of war; (2) If so, whether such indemnity should be granted gratuitously, or should be coupled with the payment of premiums calculated to recoup the State—either wholly or in part—for the cost to be incurred; (3) What conditions should be attached to the grant of the indemnity, and what arrangements should be made for the proper working of the scheme.

For Merchant Shipping Acts Amendment Bill, 1906, see SESSION.

Societies, etc.

The Baltic Mercantile and Shipping Exchange. This building was opened in April 1903. It is an amalgamation of the old Baltic in Threadneedle Street and the Shipping Exchange in Billiter Street, and consists of nearly 2500 members. Merchants, shipowners and brokers meet here daily, and large transactions in grain, seed, oil, timber and coal are carried through. Chairman, Mr. W. Bridges Webb; Secretary, Mr. J. A. Findlay; Offices, St. Mary Axe, E.C.

The Chamber of Shipping of the United Kingdom. This consists of 30 Shipowners' Associations located in London and the chief ports of the United Kingdom. Its work is largely parliamentary, and it communicates with the chief Government Departments on all matters affecting the interests of British Merchant Shipping. The affairs of the Chamber are managed by an executive council, to which each affiliated association elects one member. This Council is presided over by a president and vice-president, who are elected annually at a meeting held in London in February. President, Mr. Oswald Sanderson, Hull; Vice-President, Sir J. R. Ellerman, Bart., London; Secretary, Mr. W. H. Cooke, B.A., Barrister-at-law. Offices, 5, Whittington Avenue, Leadenhall Street, E.C.

Merry del Val, Raphael, Pontifical Secretary of State, was born in London of Spanish parents on Oct. 10th, 1865, and educated in England, where he has resided for some length of time at different periods in his career. He was at first attached to the diocese of Westminster, acted for many years as Cameriere Partecipante of Pope Leo XIII., and was appointed President of the Accademia Pontificia in '99, and Italian Archbishop of Nicosia in 1900. He visited England as Papal Envoy on the occasions of Queen Victoria's Jubilee and King Edward's Coronation, and was sent to Canada on an educational mission. In July 1903, on the death of Leo XIII., he was nominated Consistorial Secretary, and in October succeeded Cardinal Rampolla as Secretary of State, being afterwards created a Cardinal.

METEOROLOGICAL OFFICE.

The Meteorological Office was established in 1854, and is under the management of a Committee, appointed by the Treasury, constituted as follows:—Director, Mr. W. N. Shaw, Sc.D., F.R.S.; Rear-Admiral A. M. Field, R.N., Hydrographer to the Navy; Capt. A. J. G. Chalmers, of the Marine Department, Board of Trade; Mr. W. Somerville, Sc.D., of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries; Mr. G. L. Barstow, of the Treasury, and Sir G. H. Darwin, K.C.B., F.R.S., and Prof. A. Schuster, F.R.S., nominated by the Royal Society. The members of the Committee hold office for five years, and are eligible for reappointment. Except the Director, who receives £1000 per annum, the members do not receive remuneration for their services. The office is charged with the duty of collecting meteorological reports by telegraph from stations in the British Isles and their immediate neighbourhood, with a view to the issue of storm warnings and forecasts of weather; of collecting for public use statistics about the weather from land stations in the British Isles and elsewhere, as well as from ships of the Royal Navy and the merchant service; and of promoting the practical applications of the science of meteorology by special researches.

Daily Weather Reports, including forecasts of the weather for the next 24 hours, are issued, and can be had on payment of a subscription of £1 per annum, or £2 if delivered to the subscribers by hand. Information by telegraph as to the weather in various parts of the United Kingdom or the Continent, and forecasts for one day in advance, can be supplied by the office. Harvest Forecasts are issued daily at 3.30 p.m. from June 1st to Sept. 30th, and can be sent by telegraph on prepayment of the cost. The Storm Warnings are notified by the hoisting at the station warned of a black canvas cone, or three lanterns on a triangular frame. There are also issued Weekly Weather Reports, published on Thursdays, giving, for the week ended the previous Saturday, a summary of temperature, rainfall, and duration of bright sunshine in the United Kingdom, for agricultural and sanitary purposes; and other publications. See WEATHER of 1905.

The report for the year ended Mar. 31st, 1905, showed that 57 per cent. of the daily forecasts during the year were a complete success, 31 per cent. a partial success, 10 per cent. a partial failure, and only 2 per cent. a complete failure.

The Office is at 63, Victoria Street, London, S.W., and is open for general inquiries from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on weekdays (Saturdays 1 p.m.), and for telegraphic inquiries from 8.30 a.m. to 8 p.m. on weekdays, and 6 to 8 p.m. on Sundays.

Metric System, The. The compulsory adoption throughout the British Empire of the Metric Weights and Measures is advocated by the Decimal Association. At present the use of the metric system is legalised for all purposes. The Weights and Measures Act, '97, declares that, "notwithstanding anything in the Weights and Measures Act, '78, the use in trade of a weight or measure of the metric system shall be lawful, and nothing in sect. 19 of that Act shall make void any contract, bargain, sale, or dealing, by reason only of its being made or had according to weights or measures of the metric system; and a person using or having in his possession a weight or measure of the metric system shall not by reason thereof be liable to any fine." The movement has warm support in the Colonies and amongst British Consuls abroad, and a similar movement in the United States has made great progress. A Weights and Measures (Metric System) Bill was passed by the House of Lords, May 17th, 1904. Secretary of the Decimal Association, Mr. Edward Johnson, Offices, Oxford Court, Cannon Street, E.C.—The British Weights and Measures Association was established in 1904 for the purpose of opposing the introduction of the metre or any of its derivatives into the British Empire, and for so adjusting and simplifying British Imperial Weights and Measures as to obtain all the advantages the metric system gives and some others not given by it. Secretary, Mr. Geo. Moores, F.S.S. Offices, 25, Victoria Street, London, S.W.

Metropolitan Asylums Board. This body is charged with the control of various asylums for imbeciles, fever and small-pox hospitals, schools and homes for certain classes of children, a training-ship for boys, and land and river ambulance services, etc. Clerk to the Board, T. Duncombe Mann. Office, Victoria Embankment, E.C.

Metropolitan Discharged Prisoners' Aid Society, 10, Freegrove Road, Caledonian Road, N. Sec., C. H. Chadwick.

Metropolitan Public Gardens Association. The acquisition and laying-out of open spaces, disused burial grounds, churchyards, squares, and other vacant sites, the provision of seats and the planting of trees both in gardens and thoroughfares, the formation of public gymnasias and children's playgrounds, opposing threatened encroachments upon commons, open spaces, etc., are part of the work of this society. Income in 1905, £2790; expenditure £2600. Chairman and Hon. Treasurer, The Earl of Meath; Secretary, Basil Holmes, 83, Lancaster Gate, W.

MEXICO.

President.

General D. Porfirio Diaz was b. in 1828, and has governed the country ever since '75, when he assumed office as a military dictator. Since '76 he has been the legally elected President, except for the period '80-84. The original constitution of '57 laid it down that the President should be elected for only four years, so during that period a nominee of his was President; but he was elected again in '84, and in '87 an amendment ad hoc provided that the President might be elected for consecutive terms. His sixth term of office expired Nov. 30th, 1904, but he was again elected. In 1906 he was appointed an Hon. G.C.B. His powers of organisation are shown by the wonderful advance made by the country under his rule, although that rule is decidedly autocratic. He has been greatly aided by the financial ability of Señor Limantour, who is spoken of as his probable successor.

Government and Army.

Mexico is a country forming the southern extremity of North America, and stretching into Central America. Bounded on the north by the United States; on the south by Guatemala and British Honduras. The country, by the constitution of 1857 with subsequent modifications, is divided into twenty-seven states, two territories, and the Federal district, and governed as a Republic by a President, elected by the people for a term of six years. There is a Senate of 56 members, each state electing two members, and a House of Representatives elected for two years by universal suffrage, one member for every 40,000 inhabitants. Members of both Houses are paid $3000 per annum. Each state has its own popularly elected governor and legislature, and manages its own local affairs. There is a small fleet, which is being strengthened.

An increase of the military establishment is being made. The army at present consists, in peace, of 3500 officers and 31,000 men, but under the reorganisation now in progress it is intended to create a force capable of easy mobilisation of about 7000 officers and 186,000 men. In case of need this total can be increased to 250,000. On a peace footing the infantry consists of 28 battalions, the cavalry of 14 regiments, and the artillery of 8 field batteries, 4 mountain batteries, 4 batteries of horse artillery, 1 machine-gun company, and 1 squadron of 16 quick-firing guns of small calibre. The engineers consist of 6 companies, the transport squadron of 2 companies, and a medical service of 1 company. The army is recruited by voluntary enlistments, the maximum term being five years, with extra inducements to those who re-enlist for an additional period of four years.

Prevailing religion Roman Catholic; but there is no State establishment, and all sects are tolerated. Primary education free and compulsory, but the country has been very backward in this respect, though progress is now being made. There were in 1903 9546 Government primary schools, with 631,515 pupils, besides private schools. Industries comprise mining and smelting of silver and other metals (which employs about 100,000), agriculture, cotton factories, and cattle-herding. The mineral wealth is great, comprising gold, silver, mercury, iron, tin, zinc, lead, antimony, arsenic, and sodic carbonate. Mexico is one of the two largest silver-producing countries in the world. The other chief products are copper, gold, and fibres; coffee and tobacco are now cultivated to some extent. There were in 1905 13,507 miles of railway. The Tehuantepec Railway, now in progress, will actively compete with the Panama Railway.

Diplomatic and Statistics.

Area, 767,060 sq. m.; pop. (1901) 13,605,919, of whom about 38 per cent. are Indians and about 43 per cent. of mixed race, only 19 per cent. being white. There are about 2,000,000 educated whites. Capital, Mexico, pop. 400,000. Revenue, 1901-2, £6,614,700; 1902-3, £7,602,341; 1903-4, £8,647,380; 1904-5, £9,266,645; expenditure, 1901-2, £6,308,150; 1902-3, £6,822,252; 1903-4, £7,638,164; 1904-5, £7,915,281. Imports, 1903-4, £15,661,688; 1904-5, £17,820,476; 1905-6, £22,065,107; exports, 1903-4, £19,669,051; 1904-5, £20,852,045; 1905-6, £27,113,881. Public debt, 1905, £31,323,735 (gold debt), £12,955,000 (internal silver debt), £90,272 (floating debt).

MINES AND QUARRIES OF THE WORLD AND THEIR PRODUCE.

I. COAL STATISTICS.

Coal Areas of the World.

Mr. Ed. Loze, the author of one of the latest contributions on the coal question, in his book "Les Charbons Britanniques et leur Epousement," has published a table giving an estimate of the coal areas of the world, which is mentioned below:—

	sq. miles.
China .. .. .	over 250,000
United States .. .. .	200,000
Canada (East of Rocky Mountains)	65,000
British India .. .. .	35,488
New South Wales .. .. .	24,000
European Russia .. .. .	20,000
United Kingdom .. .. .	12,352
Spain .. .. .	5,498
Japan .. .. .	4,718
France .. .. .	2,079
Austria-Hungary .. .. .	1,789
Germany .. .. .	1,769
Belgium .. .. .	509

No mention is here made of the coalfields of New Zealand, Victoria, South Africa, or Tasmania, but it is estimated that the colonies could supply us with coal for many hundreds of years

Coal Production of the World.

The world's supply of coal in 1904, or in the latest year for which the figures are available, was:—

Country.	Year.	Production in Metric Tons.
United Kingdom .. .. .	1905	236,128,936
Australia .. .. .	1904	7,252,785
New Zealand .. .. .	1904	1,562,517
Austria-Hungary .. .. .	1905	13,530,000
Belgium .. .. .	1905	21,506,000
Borneo .. .. .	1904	58,362
Bosnia .. .. .	1904	483,617
Canada .. .. .	1904	7,634,679
Cape Colony .. .. .	1904	156,748
Chili .. .. .	1903	827,112
China .. .. .	1904	1,103,291
France .. .. .	1905	34,778,000
Germany .. .. .	1905	119,349,000
Greece .. .. .	1904	10,000
Holland .. .. .	1904	466,997
India .. .. .	1904	8,348,561
Italy, Lignite .. .. .	1904	362,151

Country.	Year.	Production in Metric Tons.
Japan .. .. .	1905	11,630,000
Natal .. .. .	1904	872,072
Peru .. .. .	1904	59,920
Portugal, Anthracite .. .. .	1904	12,805
Roumania, Lignite .. .. .	1903	110,000
Russia .. .. .	1905	16,957,000
Servia .. .. .	1904	183,204
Spain .. .. .	1905	3,152,000
Sumatra .. .. .	1904	211,362
Transvaal .. .. .	1904	2,447,692
Turkey .. .. .	1903	300,000
United States .. .. .	1905	350,821,000

The total annual production of coal in the world in 1904 was estimated at about 886,500,000 tons. The value was estimated at more than £295,000,000.

Consumption of Coal.

The consumption of coal in some of the chief consuming countries is shown in the following statement:—

	1903	1904	1905
United States	314,114,000	307,610,000	343,280,000
United Kingdom	166,532,000	166,609,000	169,017,000
Germany	100,164,000	104,094,000	106,715,000
France	46,571,000	45,433,000	46,046,000
Russia	20,882,000	22,724,000	20,890,000
Belgium	20,682,000	19,726,000	19,661,000
Austria-Hungary	17,987,000	18,421,000	19,390,000

Coal Resources of Great Britain.

The Royal Commission on Coal Supplies of the United Kingdom, appointed in Dec. 1901, reported in 1905. The Commissioners estimated, after making the necessary deductions, the available quantity of coal in the proved coalfields of the United Kingdom to be 100,914,668,167 tons. The 1871 Commission's estimate was 90,207,285,398 tons. The statistics show that, though between Jan. 1st, 1870, and Dec. 31st, 1903, 5,694,928,507 tons of coal have been raised, the present estimates of available coal are nevertheless 10,707,382,769 tons in excess of those of the '71 Commission. This excess is accounted for partly by the difference in the areas regarded as productive by the two Commissions, and partly by discoveries due to recent borings, sinkings, and workings, and more accurate knowledge of the coal seams. In addition, the Commission estimated that there were 5,239,433,980 tons of coal in the proved coalfields lying at greater depths than 4000 ft. below the surface. From the concealed and unproved coalfields the Geological Committee appointed by the Commission estimated there might be expected 39,483,000,000 tons at depths less than 4000 ft. and over 1,000,000,000 tons beyond high-water mark in the Cumberland coalfield, and in St. Bride's and Carmarthen Bays. The Commissioners held that it was highly improbable, owing to physical considerations, that the average increase in the output for the last 30 years (viz. 2½ per cent. per annum) would continue. They said: "In view of this opinion and of the exhaustion of the shallower collieries, we look forward to a time, not far distant, when the rate of increase of output will be slower, to be followed by a period of stationary output, and then a gradual decline."

The Report emphasised the necessity of greater care in the cleaning, sizing, and sorting of coal for sale, in which many Continental collieries adopt better methods than are in general use in this country. The Commission also received evidence pointing to a future extension of central power stations, and the generation and transmission of power upon a large scale. If such stations were established in close proximity to the collieries, there would be nothing to pay on the coal in the way of railway rates; and the question would then be, not the cost of transport of coal, but the cost of transmission of power. As regards economy in use, the Report gave the following estimate for 1903 as to the coal consumption in the various industries of the country:

	Tons.
Railways (all purposes) . . . . .	13,000,000
Coasting Steamers (bunkers) . . . . .	2,000,000
Factories . . . . .	53,000,000
Mines . . . . .	18,000,000
Iron and Steel Industries . . . . .	28,000,000
Other Metals and Minerals . . . . .	100,000,000
Brick Works, Potteries, Glass, and Chemical Works } . . . . .	5,000,000
Gas Works . . . . .	15,000,000
Domestic . . . . .	32,000,000
Total . . . . .	167,000,000

Mr. Beilby and other witnesses calculated that out of an annual consumption of from 143,000,000 to 168,000,000 tons of coal in this country there was a possible saving of from 40,000,000 to 60,000,000 tons. The Commission anticipated that as the cost of mining increased the advantage of using fuel with greater care would become more apparent, and considerable economies would naturally follow.

The witnesses generally expressed the opinion that the maintenance of a large coal export trade is of supreme importance to the country and essential to the prosperity of the coal-producing districts. The larger output rendered possible by the export trade enables the collieries to be worked regularly and to the fullest capacity, and, the general and fixed charges being spread over a larger tonnage, the average cost of working and consequently the selling price to the British consumer can be kept lower than would be the case if the collieries were worked for home consumption only. It was pointed out by some of the witnesses that coal is so essential an element of outward cargoes that any diminution of our coal export must cause a rise in the import freights on goods, etc. The evidence shows that a large quantity of the coal exported to foreign countries is destined for the use of British ships coaling abroad.

Coal Production of the United Kingdom, 1905.

The output of coal in Great Britain and Ireland in 1905 was 236,128,936 tons, as compared with 232,428,272 tons in 1904.

The value of the output at the mines was £82,038,553, as compared with £83,851,784 in 1904 and £88,227,547 in 1903. The average price of coal fell from 7s. 2½d. per ton in 1904 to 6s. 11½d. in 1905.

Imports and Exports of Coal.

The quantity of coal exported (exclusive of coke and patent fuel, and of coal shipped for the use of steamers engaged in foreign trade) was 47,476,707 tons, an increase of nearly one and a quarter million tons on the exports for 1904. Germany received over 7,500,000 tons, France and Italy each received over 6,000,000 tons, Sweden over 3,000,000 tons, and Russia, Spain, Denmark, and Egypt each over 2,000,000 tons. Adding the 2,287,792 tons exported in the form of coke and patent fuel, and the 17,396,146 tons shipped for the use of British and foreign steamers engaged in foreign trade, the total quantity of coal which left the country was 67,160,645 tons.

The amount of coal remaining for home consumption was 168,968,291 tons, or 3½ tons per head of the population; 19,255,555 tons were used in blast furnaces for the manufacture of pig-iron, as against 17,535,337 tons in the previous year.

Royal Commission.

A Royal Commission was appointed in May 1906 to inquire into and report on certain questions relating to the health and safety of miners and the administration of the Mines Acts. The Commission was constituted as follows: Lord Monkswell (Chairman), Mr. W. Abraham, M.P., Mr. H. H. Cunynghame, C.B., Mr. F. L. Davis (Chairman of the South Wales Conciliation Board), Mr. E. Edwards, M.P., Mr. T. Ratcliffe Ellis (Sec. Mining Association of Great Britain), Mr. J. S. Haldane, F.R.S., Mr. Robert Smillie (Pres. Lanarkshire Miners' Union), and Sir Lindsay Wood, Bart.; Sec., Mr. G. W. Harris, Home Office. The terms of reference included the advisability of watering roads in dry and dusty mines, the form of the safety lamp, the prevention of accidents, ventilation in mines, the prevention of ankylostomiasis, the system of special rules, the administration of the Mines Acts, and the advisability of examining managers as to competency.

The Home Secretary in July 1906 appointed a Committee to inquire into the probable economic effect of a limit of eight hours to the working day of coal miners. The Committee are authorised to extend their inquiry to metal-liferous mines if they should think it necessary. The Committee consists of Mr. W. Russell Rea, M.P. (Chairman), Sir Andrew Agnew, Mr. S. H. Cox, Professor of Mining, Royal College of Science, Mr. J. W. Crombie, M.P., Sir Robert Giffen, K.C.B., F.R.S., Lord Glantawe, and Mr. R. A. S. Redmayne, Professor of Mining, Birmingham University. Sec., Mr. John J. Wills, Commercial Labour and Statistical Department, Board of Trade.

II. STATISTICS OF OTHER MINERALS, ETC.

Output of Minerals other than Coal.

In the "Colonial and Foreign Statistics of Mines and Quarries for 1904," latest returns, the quantities of certain minerals and metals raised in the world are stated in a summary of the output of such materials, and also for Great Britain and Ireland. These minerals, exclusive of coal, are copper, fine gold, iron, lead, petroleum, salt, fine silver, tin, and zinc.

It may be stated that of the total world's supply the British Empire produces rather less than one-third of the coal, one-tenth of the copper, three-fifths of the gold, one-ninth of the iron, one-fifth of the lead, one-sixty-fifth of the petroleum, over one-quarter of the salt, one-tenth of the silver, two-thirds of the tin, one-twenty-fourth of the zinc.

Copper.

The total quantity of copper raised in the world amounted to 705,378 metric tons, which includes 64,395 tons from the British Empire and 640,983 tons from foreign countries.

The main sources of supply were :—

British Empire :	Metric tons.
United Kingdom . . . . .	501
Australia* . . . . .	29,765
Canada . . . . .	19,491

Peru . . . . .	9,504
Portugal* . . . . .	6,976
Norway* . . . . .	5,701
Italy . . . . .	5,503

Gold.

The output of fine gold in the world was 516,127 kilos (or 16,593,856 ozs., the value being put at over £67,000,000), of which 306,133 were raised in the British Empire and 209,994 in foreign countries.

Iron.

The output for the world of metric tons of iron was 44,136,486, of which 5,075,346 tons were raised in the British Empire and 39,061,140 were raised in foreign countries. The quantities are those which are considered obtainable from the ores raised in the various countries, and must not be taken as a measure of their metallurgical industries. See also IRON AND STEEL TRADE.

The main sources of supply were :—

Lead.

The output of lead in the world amounted to 922,249 tons, of which 223,194 tons were raised in the British Empire and 699,055 in foreign countries.

The main sources of supply were :—

British Empire :	Metric tons.

III. PERSONS EMPLOYED IN MINING, ETC.

The number of persons employed at mines, quarries, and other mineral workings throughout the world was returned as 4,699,495 in 1902, 4,867,996 in 1903, and 4,968,465 in 1904. Some of the chief figures are given below :—

	1902.	1903.	1904.
United Kingdom . . . . .	952,711	970,044	974,634

* Coal miners and only ore miners of Michigan (Houghton Co.), Missouri, and Montana.

† Including quarry employes.

The totals given above are undoubtedly considerably below the real totals, owing to the absence of full returns from some countries, and of any returns at all from others. More than half of the total number were employed in coal mining.

The figures for 1905 are available in the case of the United Kingdom, as follows :—

There were employed at 3,252 coal mines—

Males under ground . . . . .	691,112
Females " " . . . . .	59,229

Miniature Painters. The years 1896 and '97 witnessed an important revival of the art of miniature painting, and the foundation of two societies devoted to the Art. The Royal Society of Miniature Painters is composed wholly of artists, Sir William B. Richmond, K.C.B., R.A., being its President, Mr. Quinell, R.B.A., its Hon. Secretary, and Mr. Edward Freeman its Secretary. An exhibition is held annually at the Modern Gallery, 61, New Bond Street, W., where also it has a permanent collection of members' miniatures always on view. The Society of Miniaturists has its offices at the Galleries of the Royal Institute of Painters in Water Colours, Piccadilly, and holds its exhibitions concurrently with that body throughout the spring and summer. Its President is Alfred Praga, Esq., and its Secretary Mr. Edgar Blackmore. It differs from its sister society in possessing on its council certain experts, collectors, and art critics who have given special attention to miniatures. It also occasionally unites with its exhibitions a show of old miniatures, and aims at training the modern worker by a study of the work of the old masters.

Mint, The Royal. The existence of a mint in this country is of very ancient date, regulations concerning it having been made as early as 928, by Athelstan. The present building was erected between 1806 and 1810, at a cost of over £250,000. It was somewhat injured by fire in '15, but repaired. By an Act passed April 4th, '70, the mastership of the Mint was absorbed in the office of Chancellor of the Exchequer, and the duties were devolved upon the Deputy Master of the Mint. There are branches of the Royal Mint at Sydney, Melbourne, and Perth. The last report shows that the gold issued in 1905 amounted to £6,500,000, the silver to £510,491, and the bronze to £100,325. In 1905 the nominal value of the light gold coin withdrawn was £2,700,000, and of light silver £451,884. The total number of pieces struck in 1905 was 95,787,730, of which the Colonies took 45,187,370. The Medal Department produced 45,578 medals. The present Deputy Master is the Rt. Hon. W. Ellison Macartney.

Moltke, General Ludwig von, chief of the General Staff of the German army. A nephew of the great Moltke. B. at Gerstoff in 1848, he entered the army in '69, took part as lieutenant in the Franco-Prussian war, and received the Iron Cross of the second class. From '76-9 he was attached to the War Academy. In '81 he was promoted captain and placed on the General Staff, in '82 he became aide-de-camp to his uncle, in '88 he was promoted major, and subsequently nominated aide-de-camp to the Emperor; lieutenant-colonel '93, colonel '96, brigadier-general '99, general of division 1902, quartermaster-general 1904, and chief of the General Staff 1906. For many years General von Moltke has enjoyed the special confidence of the Emperor.

MONACO.

Monaco is a principality, surrounded on all sides by the French department of Alpes Maritimes, except to the south, where it borders on the sea. Area, 8 sq. m.; pop. 15,180. Consists mainly of the towns of Monte Carlo, pop. 3794; Monaco, 3292; and Condamine, 6218. Italian in language and traditions, but virtually under French control. The present ruler of the principality is Prince Albert of Monaco, b. Nov. 13th, 1848. He has a son by his first wife, Lady Mary Douglas Hamilton, Prince Louis, b. July 12th, '70. There is a Governor-General and a Council of State. The Roman Catholic is the only Church allowed in the Principality. The first stone of the Casino at Monte Carlo was laid in '58. The Société Anonyme des Bains de Mer et du Cercle des Etrangers de Monaco, whose capital is £1,200,000 in 60,000 shares, holds a contract which will expire at the end of 1947. It has practically to bear the cost of spiritual and temporal government for the Principality, and in addition pays £50,000 annually to the Prince for the concession. From 1907 the amount is to be £70,000, increasing every ten years by £10,000.

Consul-General in London, Mr. T. Lumley, 37, Conduit Street, W.

Monod, Gabriel, French writer and politician, was b. at Havre, March 7th, 1844. He followed the usual French University course, but has also made some important studies in Italy and Germany. He served in the war of '70-71 on the ambulance staff. He was one of the principal defenders of Dreyfus. In '82 he founded the Cercle St. Simon, a society for the study of history, and was one of the founders of the Ecole Alsacienne. In '76 he established the important Revue Historique, which he still conducts. He is a member of the French Institut, and of the Academy of Munich. His first publication was "Allemands et Français" ('71); it was followed by "Les Maîtres de l'Histoire" (Renan, Taine, Michelet), and by "Grégoire de Tours." His most recent publication is "Les Annales Cartésiennes." Having married a daughter of Alexander Herzen, he is in contact with the Russian Reformers.

MONTENEGRO.

Montenegro is a principality, lying between Northern Albania on the south and Herzegovina on the north, under the rule of H.R.H. Prince Nicholas I. (who in Dec. 1900 assumed the title of Royal Highness), b. Oct. 7th, 1841. After an educational course at Trieste and Paris, he succeeded his uncle, who had been assassinated, Aug. '60. He married, in the same year, Princess Milena, the daughter of the Voyvod Peter Voucotich, and has three sons and six daughters. The heir-apparent is Prince Danilo, b. June 20th, '71, who married the Duchess Jutta of Mecklenburg-Strelitz in July '99. During '96 the bicentenary of the foundation of the dynasty was celebrated. Queen Victoria gave H.R.H. the Grand Cross of the Royal Victorian Order in March '97. His daughter, Princess Helena, is married to King Victor Emmanuel III. of Italy.

The executive vests in the Prince, and the legislative authority in a Council of State (consisting of the Crown Prince, the Metropolitan Bishop, all Ministers and Councillors appointed by the Prince), and a Skupschina created by an edict of Nov. 1905, and consisting of 60 members, 56 elected by the military districts and 4 by the towns. The members are elected for 4 years. The country is divided into 5 districts, under governors; the districts are subdivided in 57 "capitanats," which are again divided into communes. All the inhabitants are trained as soldiers, and the effective fighting strength is put at about 36,000. For 400 years the principality maintained its independence against Turkey, and in '78 this independence was recognised by the Treaty of Berlin. The waters of Montenegro are by the Treaty closed to the ships of war of all nations, Austria administering the maritime and sanitary police on the Montenegrin coast. Russian financial help is given in regard to military and educational matters. The Montenegrins belong to the Serbian branch of the Slav race. Prevailing religion, Greek Church. Education compulsory and free. A large portion of the principality is uncultivable, consisting of forest and mountain pasture, and bare limestone. Large herds of cattle are reared, and some small crops are grown.

Area (including town and district of Dulcigno, ceded by Turkey in 1880), 3630 sq.m.; pop. 225,000. Capital, Cetinje (pop. 4300). Other towns are Podgoritz, pop. 6534; Dulcigno, pop. 5000; and Antivari, pop. 2514. Revenue and expenditure, 1905, about £124,000; public debt, 1905, £70,000. Imports, 1905, £194,000; exports, £71,000.

Council of State: A vote of want of confidence was carried (Nov. 19th, 1906), and the Council resigned, the Skupschina adjourning till a new Ministry should be formed. See OCCURRENCES.

British Chargé d'Affaires, C. des Graz, Esq.

Morant, R. L., C.B., Secretary to the Board of Education, is the only son of the late Robert Morant, and was born April 7th, 1863, and ed. at Winchester College and New College, Oxon. For some years he did various kinds of educational work in England and in Siam. He entered the Education Department, Whitehall, in '95, and attained to the rank of Senior Examiner at South Kensington. He was Private Secretary to Sir John Gorst, M.P., and to the Duke of Devonshire, and during the progress of the Education Bill, 1902, rendered invaluable aid to Mr. Balfour while the Bill was passing through the House of Commons. He received his C.B. as a Coronation honour. Mr. Morant was appointed Acting Secretary to the Board of Education on Nov. 1st, 1902, and Permanent Secretary on April 1st, 1903. Address: 15, Queen Anne's Gate, Westminster.

Moret, Sigismundo, Spanish statesman, was b. at Cadiz, June 2nd, 1838. The son of a tradesman who suffered reverses, his indomitable energy alone enabled him to persist from '53 to '58 in following the lectures at Madrid University. In '59 he obtained a post as assistant teacher, and afterwards, by competitive examination, the Chair of Political Economy and Finance. In '63 he was elected Deputy for Almaden as a Liberal and Free Trader, and in '69 he became Under-Secretary of State for the Interior under Rivero. Prim gave him the portfolio of the Colonies, in which position he was instrumental in passing a measure for the abolition of slavery, and in making Free Trade modifications in the tariffs of the Philippines, Porto Rico, etc. King Amadeus gave him the portfolio of Finance, and at a later stage he represented his country in London. On the abdication of King Amadeus he retired from public life, but returned with Alfonso XII. as Minister of the Interior. In that position he ably seconded the regency of Queen Maria Christina, and held various portfolios in various Ministries. He was Prime Minister for a short term in 1906. See SPAIN.

Morgan, J. Pierpont, was b. at Hartford, Conn., on April 17th, 1837; ed. at the English High School, Boston, and at Göttingen University. His father was a banker in New York and London, and Mr. Morgan is a member of the great banking firms of J. S. Morgan & Co., London, T. P. Morgan & Co., New York (which he established in '95), and other firms. His financial genius has brought and kept his name before the public of both continents for years past, particularly since the formation of the great Steel Trust and the Atlantic Shipping Combine. He is interested in American railroads, and is said to control lines representing more than £600,000,000 of share capital, in banks and other financial corporations representing about £400,000,000 more, and in all kinds of industrial enterprises in this country and in America. He is a yachtsman, and an art connoisseur with a magnificent collection of great paintings, books, etc. His benefactions have been generous. Address in London: 13, Prince's Gate, S.W.; in New York, Madison Avenue.

Mormons. Consult "The Story of the Mormons," by W. A. Linn (Macmillan).

MOROCCO.

Morocco is the westernmost of the Barbary States, occupying the N.W. corner of Africa. An empire consisting of the kingdoms of Fez and Morocco, and the territories of Sus, Draha, and Tafilet. There are three capitals: Fez (pop. 140,000), Morocco (pop. 50,000), Mequinez (pop. 56,000). Chief ports are Mogador, Dar-al-beida (or Casablanca), Mazagan, and Tangier, on the Atlantic; Tetuan (Port Marteen) and some smaller places on the Mediterranean. Tangier has a pop. of about 40,000. Tafilet is the point of arrival and departure for the caravans through the Sahara.

Morocco is ruled by a Sultan, Mulai Abdul Aziz. He was b. Feb. 24th, '78, and succeeded his father, Mulai Hassan, on June 7th, '04, a rising in favour of his elder brother, Mulai Mohammed, being suppressed. A son, Prince Hassan, was b. in July '99. The Sultan began with strong progressive tendencies, but at the end of 1904 he had relapsed into the worst barbarities of former times. He is absolute, but the tribes beyond the mountains scarcely acknowledge his authority, which over a large part of his dominions is that of a titular chief rather than that of a ruler. The Sultan is head of religion (the Malekite sect of the Sunnite Mahomedans) as well as of the state. He has six ministers, from whom he receives advice, and through whom he carries on the government. The Sultan's forces comprise about 30,000 men of all arms. The mounted troops are the most valuable. There are said to be 17 batteries, of which 10 are provided with modern guns. The infantry arm is the Martini.

By the Anglo-French Agreement, April 8th, 1904, the French Government declared that they had no intention of altering the political status of Morocco, and the British Government recognised that it appertained to France to preserve order in that country, and to provide assistance for the purpose of all administrative, economic, financial, and military reforms which it may require, provided that the treaty rights of Great Britain, including the right of coasting trade between the ports of Morocco enjoyed by British vessels since 1901, were left intact; and that British commerce, including goods in transit through French territory and destined for the Moorish market, were treated on a footing of absolute equality with that of France. In order to secure the free passage of the Straits of Gibraltar, the two Governments agreed not to permit, nor to undertake, the construction of fortifications on the Moorish coast between Melilla and the River Sebou, excepting the places occupied by Spain. The two Governments took into special consideration the interests of Spain in Morocco, and the French Government undertook to come to an understanding with the Spanish Government in regard to them, and to communicate such agreement to the British Government. The Agreement was made binding for 30 years, with provision for the extension of the period for 5 years at a time. Spain concluded a similar Agreement with France in Oct. 1904. In March 1905 it became known that the German Government had informed the Sultan that Germany was not a party to these agreements. The Sultan soon afterwards, in May 1905, rejected the French proposals for internal reforms, and proposed that the Powers should hold a Conference on the Morocco question, a proposal that had been previously made by Germany. After an exchange of views between France and Germany the two Powers agreed (July 8th, 1905), to take part in the Conference, and Algeiras in Spain was arranged as the place of meeting. See History below.

Trade is carried on chiefly with Great Britain, France, and Germany (see details below), but is much hampered by the political situation. Morocco is a fine wheat-growing country, ridged with many ranges of mountains, and rich in minerals; but the barbarous form of government prevents the development of the country's resources. The chief exports are cereals, eggs, skins, almonds, olive oil, wool, cattle, etc.

Area estimated at about 220,000 sq. miles. Population now estimated at about 8,000,000, including Berbers, Tuaregs, and Arabs. There were 1017 British, 784 French, 169 Germans, and 6813 Spanish subjects in the country in 1906. Imperial revenue about £400,000 per annum. Imports, 1902, £2,140,626; 1903, £2,844,752; 1904, £2,670,787; exports, 1902, £1,559,823; 1903, £1,972,441; 1904, £1,722,570. Great Britain sent 55.3 per cent. of the imports in 1901, 57.7 per cent. in 1902, 51 per cent. in 1903, and 50.8 per cent. in 1904. The share of France is about 31 per cent., and of Germany was 4.75 per cent. in 1903 and 7.37 per cent. in 1904.

Ministry: Grand Vizier, Sid Fadoul Gharnit; Foreign Affairs, Ben Sliman; War, Sid Mohammed Guebbas; Commerce, Abdurrahman Tazei; Finance, El Mokri.

British Minister at Tangier, and Consul-General for Morocco, Mr. Gerard A. Lowther, C.B.

British Consuls, H. E. White, C.M.G. (Tangier), F. E. Drummond Hay (Dar-al-Baida). Vice-Consul at Fez, J. MacLeod.

French Minister to Morocco, M. E. Regnault.

History, 1906.

The French Yellow Book on Morocco (see FRANCE), published Dec. 14th, 1905, gave a crushing exposé of German methods, which was by no means effectively met by the publication of the German White Book (see GERMANY) on Jan. 8th. The delegates to the International Conference met at Algeiras (Jan. 16th), and the Spanish representative, the Duke of Almodovar, was elected President. The delegates present were:

Great Britain—Sir Arthur Nicolson, G.C.V.O., Ambassador in Madrid; Mr. T. C. Vaughan and the Hon. L. St. Aubyn.

France—M. Révoil, with a numerous diplomatic and military mission.

Germany—Herr von Radowicz and Count Tattenbach.

Morocco—Haj Mohammed el Torres, Sid Mohammed el Mokri, and three others.

Austria—Count Welsersheimb and Count Roziebrodzki.

Belgium—Baron Jooseus and Count Buisseret.

United States—Mr. Henry White and Mr. Gummeré.

Italy—The Marquis Visconti Venosta and Signor Malmusi.

Holland—Baron Testa.

Portugal—Count Tovar and Count Martens Ferrão.

Russia—Count Cassini and M. de Bacheracht.

Sweden—M. Sager.

In his opening speech the President declared that the Powers represented were at one in recognising the need for reforms in Morocco, based on the threefold principle of the sovereignty of the Sultan, the integrity of his state, and equality of treatment, i.e. the open door in commercial matters. The negotiations proceeded slowly, and while agreement was reached without difficulty on other subjects, the questions of the police organisation in Morocco and of the State Bank saw the French and German representatives strongly opposed to one another. It was not till towards the end of March that there appeared to be any prospect of agreement; but then the German delegates modified their demands considerably, and ceased to insist on the principle of internationalisation, by which they sought to place France on the same level as other Powers, and so to deprive her of her predominant position and influence in Morocco. France in turn agreed that the definition of the functions of the Inspector-General appointed to control the police force should give ample guarantees for the exercise of international control, and so an agreement was reached. The State Bank question in turn was soon disposed of, and the Agreement was signed (April 7th).

It included—(1) a declaration relating to the organisation of a police force of 2000 to 2500, which is to be recruited by the Maghzen from among Moorish Mussulmans, commanded by Kaid, and distributed among the eight ports; Spanish and French instructors, officers and non-commissioned officers are to assist the Sultan in the organisation for five years, subject to the control of an Inspector-General selected from the Swiss Army by the Swiss Federal Government. The instructors and officers are to be Spanish at Tetuan and Larache, mixed at Tangier and Casablanca, and French at Rabat and the other ports. (2) A declaration as to the suppression of the contraband trade in arms; (3) a concession for a State Bank for 40 years, worked by censors appointed by the Banks of France, England and Spain, and the Imperial Bank of Germany; (4) a scheme for improved collection of taxes and the creation of new sources of revenue by means of specified duties; (5) regulations as to Customs duties, etc., with a proviso that on the frontier of Algeria the regulation should be the exclusive affair of France and Morocco, and similarly of Spain and Morocco in the Riff country; (6) a recognition of the principle of economic freedom and the non-alienation of public services and public works. The Agreement comes into force Dec. 31st, 1903.

A mission under Signor Malmusi was sent to the Sultan at Fez, bearing the protocol of the Conference, and arrived there (June 3rd), the Sultan issuing an edict of ratification (19th).

Throughout the year the Pretender maintained his position, and in March his cavalry even approached Fez. The distress in the country increased greatly during the year, and prices rose enormously. In the neighbourhood of Tangier the brigand chief Raisuli exercised practically sovereign power, the Sultan being unable to do anything.

Morrison, George E., M.D., the famous Times correspondent at Peking, was b. at Geelong, Victoria, where his father was principal of the College, in 1862. After two years at Melbourne University, in '82 he shipped as an ordinary seaman to the South Sea Islands to study the Kanaka labour question, and his articles in the Melbourne Age on the subject had a marked effect in improving the conditions of the traffic. Then he walked across Australia, from Normanston in the north to Geelong, a distance of 2043 miles, in 123 days. He was wounded and left for dead in a pioneer expedition which he led to New Guinea, but recovered, and in '87 he took the M.B. and C.M. degrees at Edinburgh University. After more wanderings in America, the West Indies, Spain, and Morocco (where he was Court physician for a time), he returned to Australia and became resident surgeon of the hospital at Ballarat '90-2. Then he went to the East, and walked across China from Shanghai to the Burmese frontier, afterwards writing an account of his amazing feat in "An Australian in China." In '95 he went as Times correspondent to Siam, and in '97 he was appointed as resident correspondent at Peking. His great successes there, and "his intelligent anticipation of events" have been universally acknowledged. To crown his strange and adventurous career, he was believed to have perished with all the other Europeans in Peking, in the falsely reported massacre of 1900, and the Times published an obituary notice of him.

MOTOR VEHICLES AND MOTOR BOATS.

The automobile movement made great strides in 1906, the use of motor vehicles being very largely extended in every direction. The pleasure or touring car found its way into the most remote corners of the kingdom, brought new life to the main roads throughout the country, and resulted in restoring a measure of prosperity to many roadside and provincial hostleries not enjoyed since the days of the stage coach. A noteworthy feature of the year was the great number of laudalette, limousine, and other covered-in cars in use, necessitating the employment of longer wheel-bases and ample strength, both in engine and frame, to carry the additional weight. The prices of high-class cars were consequently well maintained, £1000 being commonly paid for a luxuriously appointed high-powered vehicle of this type. The six-cylinder engine increased in popularity, though the increased first cost constitutes it a luxury from the average point of view, and in many cases the fuel consumption was found to be out of proportion to the results achieved.

The four-cylinder car remains for the present the universally adopted type, and there was a slight lowering of prices in this class, the average car of 18 to 20 horse-power being obtainable for between £500 and £550. The various types of magneto ignition continue to increase in favour, but few care to rely upon this system by itself, the high-tension type with accumulators being frequently also fitted, to ensure easy starting and for alternate use with the magneto. The general type of touring car may now be said to have settled down into standard lines, and the purchaser of a modern car need have little fear now of his vehicle rapidly growing out of date, either in regard to general appearance or mechanical design.

The long-sought-for £100 car did not see the light in 1906, and though the demand for light single-cylinder cars witnessed no diminution, prices rather tended to increase than otherwise, £125 being probably the lowest price at which such a car with any reasonable claim to reliability may now be had. There is undoubtedly an enormous field yet waiting the cheap small car. The two-cylinder car hardly held its own in view of the tendency to lower the price of four-cylinder models; still it has many adherents, and a car of this type selling for about £250 must always command a large market which the four-cylinder car cannot supply.

The feature of the year's motor cycles was the steady advance of the two- and four-cylinder engine as applied to these machines, and the generally increased horse-power, even of single-cylinder motors. The smooth running obtainable with the two- and more noticeably still with the four-cylindered motor won many adherents to these types, and a great number were seen on the road. The popularity of the tri-car was hardly maintained, these machines finding it hard to compete with the cheaper examples of four-wheeled light cars. Two- and three-speed gears largely came into use on motor cycles. Under the auspices of the Auto Cycle Club a long-distance trial for motor cycles was held in June, the 889 miles between Land's End and John o' Groats being covered by no less than 36 competitors out of 74, of the former number 30 being motor bicycles and 6 tri-cars.

The electric carriage maintains its position as a touring vehicle, though the high cost of running and the limitations of weight and speed, as well as the difficulty of recharging, militate against the type for ordinary touring. Electrically propelled cars obtained the highest awards in each class at a special competition for town motor carriages held by the Automobile Club in October.

Steam cars, though they do not hold their own against those propelled by internal-combustion motors, nevertheless retain many firm adherents, and the few up-to-date types on the market undoubtedly embody many features which it is yet the ambition of designers of petrol cars to attain. In the town carriage competition referred to above, a well-known type of steam car obtained second highest award.

The number of cars and motor cycles registered in England to July 1906 was 41,974 cars and 39,663 motor cycles. In Wales the cars registered amounted to 1167 and the motor cycles to 1475. In Scotland the respective figures were 3513 and 3096, while Ireland was responsible for 1534 cars and 2340 motor cycles. These figures bring the total number of motors in use to 91,762, of which 46,574 are motor cycles.

The Motor Bus.

It is hardly remarkable that in London, where the registrations of pleasure cars or motor cycles exceed 20,000, the public should have patronised the motor omnibus to such an extent that the supply was totally inadequate. Besides the principal owners of horse-drawn omnibuses, the London General Omnibus Co., Ltd., and the London Road Car Co., Ltd., which are rapidly displacing the older vehicles for the self-propelled type, the London Motor Omnibus Co., Messrs. Tilling, and a number of other companies inaugurated for the purpose, placed motor omnibuses upon the streets as fast as they could be obtained from both home and foreign makers. Nearly 600 of these vehicles were licensed in London, the majority being propelled by petrol engines. It is estimated that the average daily mileage of each vehicle is from 100 to 120 miles, and that they carry upwards of 400,000 passengers daily. Considerable criticism was levelled at them on account of the noise, smoke caused by using an excess of lubricating oil, and their skidding propensities when the thoroughfares are wet and slippery. It is probable, however, that as a result of closer supervision these difficulties will be speedily overcome. British manufacturers now produce 'buses which fall little, if at all, short of the best Continental makes, though the resources of the industry in the matter of supplying sufficient numbers are not likely to overtake the demand for a long time. The motor omnibus is also largely used by the leading railway companies in the provinces, to act as a feeder to branch lines, and for opening up country districts and bringing them into touch with the railways. Tramway companies are also using them in the same manner; though, generally speaking, the motor 'bus is likely to prove a factor in arresting the development and extension of electric tramway systems in some cases.

Motor cabs were introduced into the Metropolis during 1906 by several companies, about 50 being licensed up till June. One company claims to have 500 on order, fitted with taximeters on the system adopted in Paris for automatically calculating the distances and fares.

Motor Vehicles for Heavy Traffic.

Steam lorries continue to find most favour with users of commercial vehicles where heavy loads are concerned, though the petrol engine is increasingly applied to the work. The mechanical transport trains of the Army Service Corps are most efficiently equipped and organised. Users have found that a steam lorry and trailer can transport 7 tons at a cost of less than 2d. per ton-mile as opposed to the figure of 4d. per ton-mile for a horse lorry with a load of 30 cwt. only. Delivery vans are a class of commercial vehicle whose use has increased by leaps and bounds, loads of from 1 to 3 tons being successfully dealt with by vehicles engined with internal combustion motors. There is an enormous future before the lighter types of these vans, especially for the express delivery of parcels and of goods in the large cities.

Royal Commission Report.

The report of the Royal Commission on motor cars was promulgated at the end of July. A majority of the Commissioners recommended the abolition of the 20-mile speed limit. The establishment of a Central Department administering a national fund for the improvement of the roads, such fund to receive the money derived from taxes on motor cars; a relaxation of the law requiring endorsement of drivers' licenses for trivial and technical offences; the requirement that the police should give notice of intention to prosecute a motorist within at most 21 days of the alleged offence; the provision of larger identification plates; the giving of power to local authorities to impose 12-mile limits in their own areas; and a proposal to charge £1 for the first registration of a car and 5s. per annum for re-registration, constitute the principal additional recommendations of the Commission, which are considered satisfactory by the majority of automobilists. Parliament deferred dealing with the matter until 1908, the existing legislation on the subject being meanwhile kept in force under the Expiring Laws Continuation Act.

A Select Committee was appointed in March by the House of Commons to inquire into certain questions connected with the cabs and omnibuses of the Metropolis. The Committee was presided over by Mr. (now Sir) Henry Norman, M.P., and a great deal of evidence was taken in respect of these vehicles. Its report was issued in August, and the recommendations included the adoption of the taximeter system for cabs, and, in the case of motor cabs, of a slightly higher scale of fares. The recommendations with regard to motor 'buses are chiefly in the direction of greater police supervision, and the requirement of stricter observation of existing regulations.

The Dust Nuisance.

Public authorities in all directions are experimenting with those preparations which are offered as palliative measures, since the prohibitive cost, combined with the absence of a thoroughly suitable material, defers the reconstruction of the roads. "Westrumite," "Hahnite," "Akonia," "Taafelt," and similar preparations were used with varying success in 1906, together with calcium chloride and the application of tar. Tar presents perhaps the best solution of the problem of waterproofing the surface, and may be applied at a cost of about 1½d. per square yard for two coats during the first year and 1d. each succeeding year; but the want of an efficient machine for distributing restricts its use, and an objection is that in winter it is inclined to become spongy. It cannot, therefore, be said that a complete solution of the dust problem has yet been found.

Motor Racing and Trials.

Contests between pure speed machines have probably had their day, and several firms which had hitherto taken a prominent part in racing were content to stand aloof during 1906. Nevertheless a large section of the trade continued to foster the development of the racing machine; but the limit of possible speed has in all probability been now nearly obtained.

Early in the year, in January, at the Ormond-Daytona Meeting in Florida, a Stanley steam car and a 200-h.p. Danacq both covered 2 miles within a minute, the petrol car's record being 58½ sec. The Stanley steam car made 1 mile in 28½ sec., equal to 127 miles per hour. In June the French Grand Prix was held over the Sarthe circuit in place of the Gordon Bennett race, Sizs being the winner on a 105-h.p. Renault car. He covered the distance of 769 miles in 12 hrs. 14 min. 7 sec., at an average speed of 62¾ miles per hour. In October, Wagner, driving a 100-h.p. Darracq, won the Vanderbilt Cup Race in America, his time for the 297 miles being 4 hrs. 50 min. 10½ sec., giving an average speed of 61½ miles per hour. The Tourist Trophy Race, held in the Isle of Man in September, attracted more interest amongst British motorists. It was won by the Hon. C. S. Rolls on a 20-h.p. Rolls-Royce car, the time for the 161 miles being 4 hrs. 6 min. 0½ sec., or 39½ miles per hour. P. Bablot was second, on a 22-h.p. Berliet; and A. Lee Guinness third, on a 15-h.p. Darracq. Nearly 80 cars participated in the arduous Scottish Reliability Trials, promoted by the Scottish Automobile Club in June, and a large number of them emerged with gratifying success.

The Home Industry.

The output of British cars has increased enormously, the British-made vehicle being now considered equal to any of the foreign productions. Some of the larger home concerns are enjoying a period of unprecedented prosperity, and the continued increase of foreign importations is largely due to the inability of home manufacturers to keep pace with the demand. It was estimated by Lord Montagu that over £5,000,000 is now paid annually in wages to motor drivers alone in this country, and that a year's wages to men employed in the manufacture of cars and accessories amounts to nearly £10,000,000, the number of drivers and other employees of the industry approaching 230,000.

The Board of Trade returns for the nine months ending Sept. 30th, 1906, show that 4821 motor cars valued at £2,009,533, and 1593 motor cycles, valued at £46,056, were imported, with parts of cars and cycles valued at no less than £1,451,938. Out of these, 466 cars valued at £209,241, and 44 cycles valued at £1499, and parts of both valued at £349,064, were re-shipped to other foreign countries and the Colonies. The exports during the nine months in question were 819 cars, valued at £294,821; 543 cycles, valued at £16,859; and parts of cars and cycles to the value of £237,344, the total figures for all classes amounting to £548,981. For the same period of nine months the grand totals for the last three years were as follows:—

	£	£	£
Imports . .	2,077,956	2,760,525	3,597,527
Re-exports .	157,378	242,018	282,756
Exports . .	244,561	321,114	548,981

Motor Boats.

The Motor Boat has come to the front to a certain extent, but at present it must be regarded more as a sporting or pleasure craft than as a type likely to prove of material use. This, however, is largely due to the fact that more attention has been given to racing boats than to those designed for more commercial purposes. The petrol motor boat is in its infancy, but it gives considerable promise of becoming a useful type for many purposes. Fishing smacks and pilot boats with auxiliary motor power are used successfully in many ports, both in England and on the Continent.

Clubs and Societies.

The principal organisations are:—

Auto-Cycle Club, 18, Down Street, Piccadilly (F. Straight, Secretary), is an offshoot of The Automobile Club, and in it are vested such powers of government over motor-cycle contests as were held by the Automobile Club under an agreement with the National Cyclists' Union.

Automobile Association (Office, 18, Fleet Street, London, E.C.). Its main object is the enforcement of the various clauses of the Highways Act, more particularly with reference to unattended horses, obstruction, and similar matters. It also has a system of patrols by means of which motorists are warned when they are exceeding the legal limit. The membership is about 2000. Subscription, £2 2s. per annum.

Automobile Club (119, Piccadilly, London). It issues a Club Journal and an Automobile Handbook giving information as to hotels, repairers, etc.; gives instruction in driving to members and their servants, and issues driving certificates for driving and mechanical efficiency. Including 80 affiliated clubs, its membership is close on 14,000.

Motor Cycling Club. There are 250 members. Subscription, £1 1s. per annum. Hon. Sec., 1, Lime Grove, Shepherd's Bush, W.

Motor Union of Great Britain and Ireland (1, Albemarle St., Piccadilly, London, W.) gives legal information and advice free of charge in connection with the use of motor vehicles, and financial support in cases of general interest. Members of the Automobile Club and affiliated clubs are ipso facto members of the Union.

Motor Van, Wagon, and Omnibus Users' Association (1, Albemarle Street, Piccadilly, W.; Sec., W. Rees Jeffreys) is the organisation for users of and persons interested in commercial vehicles of every type. Subscription, £1 1s.

Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders (Offices: Maxwell House, Arundel St., Strand), a trade society representing all branches of the motor industry; organises the principal Motor Shows held annually. The Society's fifth International Motor Exhibition was opened at Olympia on Nov. 15th, 1906.

Muromtseff, Professor, President of the first Russian Duma, was b. 1850. After a university training he became Professor of Roman Law at Moscow University, but was deprived of his chair in '84 by virtue of a Government order. He thereupon qualified for the bar, and founded a law paper, which was suppressed in 1902. Both by pen and speech he gained a great reputation, as a consequence of which he played a prominent part in the Constitutional movement of 1904-5. When the first Duma was elected, Professor Muromtseff was returned for Moscow at the head of the poll. He belongs to the "Cadet," or Constitutional Democrat party. He presided at the sittings of the Duma with great dignity.

Murray, Major-Gen. Sir James Wolfe, K.C.B., fourth Military Member of the Army Council and Master-General of the Ordnance, was b. in '53, and entered the Royal Artillery '72. He served in the Ashanti campaign in '95, and in the South African war '99-1901. In 1901 he was appointed to the command of a 2nd-class district in India, and in 1903 was appointed Quartermaster-General of the Forces there. He was given his present appointment on Feb. 13th, 1904.

Mushir-ed-Dowleh, Mirza Nazrullah Khan, Persian Grand Vizier or Prime Minister. He has never been out of his native country, is more than sixty years of age, has had a long official career, and is regarded as one of the ablest statesmen of Persia. Entering the Foreign Office at an early age, he occupied various posts until he eventually became first Minister of War and then Minister of Foreign Affairs. In this last capacity he was the trusted adviser of three successive Grand Viziers, and initiated several important reforms in the Persian diplomatic service. He is known to be a keen admirer of European administrative methods.

MUSIC, 1906.

Nothing sensational occurred in the musical world during 1906. Numerous compositions by native musicians were performed, and won, in many instances, well-deserved praise, the most important being Edward Elgar's oratorio "The Kingdom." The growing number of agents led to a remarkable increase in the concerts and recitals during the spring and autumn seasons, but the artists brought forward, including several "prodigies," did not always exhibit conspicuous ability.

The Important Festivals.

There were several important festivals. That at Kendal, April 25th to 28th, was conducted by Henry Wood, and the works performed comprised Goring Thomas's "The Sun Worshippers," Cliffe's "Ode to the North-East Wind," Bach's "O Light Everlasting," and "Messiah."

The Lincoln triennial festival was held June 20th and 21st, and the programme, directed by G. J. Bennett, included Hubert Parry's "Voces Clamantium," Brahms's "Requiem," Dvorak's "Te Deum," and "Israel in Egypt."

The Three Choirs festival at Hereford, the 183rd meeting, opened Sept. 9th. The principal novelty was Hubert Parry's sacred symphony "The Soul's Ransom," an impressive composition with very effective choruses; the solos were rendered by Albani and Plunket Greene. Another new work, which unfortunately failed to quite realise expectations, was "Lift up your hearts," by Walford Davies; this also was described as a sacred symphony. "Elijah," "The Dream of Gerontius," "The Apostles," Bach's Mass in B minor, Berlioz's "Te Deum," "Hymn of Praise," and "Messiah" were given during the festival, which was conducted by George Sinclair.

The Birmingham festival, Oct. 2nd to 5th, was notable for the first performance of the new oratorio "The Kingdom," by Edward Elgar; this proved to be a fine work, and was received with great enthusiasm both by the audience and by the critics. The composer conducted, and the solos were entrusted to Agnes Nicholls, Muriel Foster, John Coates, and William Higley. A spirited setting for chorus and orchestra of Poe's poem "The Bells," by Joseph Holbrooke, aroused considerable interest; and Granville Bantock's cantata, based on the Omar Khayyam quatrains, was warmly applauded. Christian Ritter's alto cantata "O amantissime sponse Jesu," which had never previously been heard in England, was a welcome feature, and Percy Pitt's clever Sinfonietta in G minor was the orchestral novelty. "Elijah," "The Apostles" (conducted by the composer), "Messiah," Beethoven's Mass in D, Bach's motet for double chorus "Sing ye to the Lord," and "The Revenge," were also given. The conductor-in-chief was Hans Richter.

On Oct. 24th a festival, directed by Henry Coward, was opened at Southport; the principal works were Hubert Parry's "Pied Piper of Hamelin," "The Ode to the North-East Wind," and "Elijah."

The Handel festival at the Crystal Palace was an artistic success, thanks to the splendid chorus-singing and the admirable conducting of Frederic Cowen. June 23rd was "Rehearsal

Day. "Messiah" was on the 26th, the soloists being Albani, Ada Crossley, Ben Davies, and Charles Santley (who has sung at every festival since 1865). The 28th was "Selection Day," when the programme included several numbers from "Israel in Egypt" and vocal contributions by Ada Crossley, Kirkby Lunn, Agnes Nicholls, Watkin Mills, Charles Saunders, and Kennerley Rumford. The proceedings closed on June 30th with a spirited interpretation of "Judah Maccabæus."
